Negro Aviators

The Pittsburgh Courier Pittsburgh Pennsylvania

Now that the country is at peace and the reorganization of the Armed Forces is in process, Negroes note with considerable apprehension that the Army is planning to move all Negro aviators and enlisted Air Force personnel to the Tuskegee Army Air Field.

It is reported that President F. D. Patterson of Tuskegee is pressing this change upon the War Department, although the Negro Newspaper Publishers have recently passed a resolution condemning the proposed change.

9-29-45

If these reports are true and the Army plans to concentrate the Negroes in the Air Force at Tuskegee, it would indicate that the Army has either learned nothing from the recent war for democracy, or that it is determined to perpetuate the system of segregation which gnaws at the very vitals of democracy and tends to hamper that sense of unity so necessary in this country if it is to retain its position as the leading nation on earth.

The bulk of our white people are not demanding any such step and have never demanded it, while the Negroes are unalterably opposed to any such perpetuation of the jim-crow military system.

The Negro aviators are one hundred per cent opposed to the proposed change, especially those who are not stationed at Tuskegee, and we feel that they have earned the right to protest.

During the war, both the Army and Navy top officials contended that they could not establish mixed units because they were engaged in fighting a war and not in solving the race problem; but now the war is over, they can go a long way towards solving the race problem in the Armed Forces without any delay if they are sincere about wanting to establish a sense of national homogeneity.

The Negroes in the Air Forces should be distributed throughout the Air Force just like other Americans.

All separate Negro units should be disbanded forthwith and their personnel transferred to so-called white units, or whites placed in the "Negro" units, both officers and enlisted men.

If the Brazilians can do this, then the North Americans can also do it.

There is no real opposition to it except from top officials and a few professional Nordics.

In order to retain its position as the greatest world power the United States is now dependent upon all of the peoples of the Western Hemisphere. Doing away with the color line in the Armed Forces would be more effective than any other measure in reassuring colored Americans on both continents of the Western World that the United States is sincere in its profession of full equality and opportunity for all.

AIR CORPS TO KEEP 3 SQUADRONS IN SERVICE

9-29-45

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The Army Air Forces will retain separate Negro combat units in the post-war army, the War Department announces this week. The number of such units will be reduced in the same proportion as whites. The present proposal, set forth by the Air Force and approved by the War Department, waits only for the final decision by Congress as to the strength of the Army and the size of the air forces.

This announcement is in sharp contrast with recent forecasts that mixed air units were being considered by the War Department, following the close of the Tuskegee contract for the preliminary training of Negro pilots.

TWO COMBAT UNITS

A strict mathematical reduction of the Negro units in proportion to the whites would mean that there would be more than one and less than two Negro squadrons. To implement this the Army Air Force recommends that there should be kept a Negro Group Headquarters, one Fighter Squadron, one Bomber Squadron, and one Air Service Squadron.

The present Negro units in the Air Force include the 332nd Fighter Group, which recently received a Presidential Citation for its work in the Mediterranean theatre, and which, originally composed of four squadrons, now has only two; the 477th Composite Group, composed of one fighter squadron, the re-organized famed Ninety-ninth, and two bomber squadrons. Both groups have their attendant headquarters and service units. There is also a replacement squadron—the 553rd, at Walterboro, S. C.—and the units in training at the Tuskegee Army Air Field.

ARMY WILL CLOSE TUSKEGEE PROGRAM

The entrance of Negroes into the

Aviators

Army Air Force occurred as a result of pressure by various Negro groups, particularly the Negro press, in 1940, which brought about the opening of the civilian aeronautics program and training at Tuskegee. In 1942 the Ninety-ninth Fighter Squadron was activated, which marked the actual entrance of Negroes into the Army Air Forces.

The closing of the Tuskegee contract for primary training has resulted in dangerous overloading of the Tuskegee Army Air Field, which must now conduct all four phases of training—basic, advanced, tactical and liaison — at one field, contrary to Army policy. It was this fact that led to speculation that the Army would end its segregated policy in order to permit the training of Negro pilots at the various air fields throughout the Nation.

John H. Young, in an article in last week's Courier, pointed out, however, that "narrow-minded and impractical officers of the air staff are advancing the theory that no cost in safety, efficiency and money is too high to pay for the maintenance of segregation." It is this group that has apparently won out.

REDUCTIONS MUST AWAIT CONGRESSIONAL ACTION

Attendant upon the announcement that the Army's intention of retaining its segregated policy are rumors that the 477th Composite Group will be moved from Godman Field, Ky., to Selfridge Field in Michigan. Basis of this rumor is the overcrowding at the Tuskegee Field which will force the Army to use Godman as a training field.

The extent of reductions of personnel in the existing units will be influenced by the availability of trained men desiring to remain in the Air Force. The last notable reduction was the deactivation of the 302nd Fighter Squadron which produced such heroes as Capt. Luke Weathers and Major Edward Gleed during the midst of the Italian campaign.

The reason given for the reduction at that time was that the table of organization for the 332nd Group called for three squadrons instead of the four it had.

Connected with the full story of the Negro in the Air Force is the name of Col. B. O. Davis Jr., who commanded the Ninety-ninth at its activation and took it overseas, went on to head the 332nd Fighter Group and now commands the 477th Composite Group and Godman Field.

Negro Air Force Cut To One Unit

The Chicago Defender Chicago, Illinois

Combine 99th, 477th; 332nd Eliminated

9-29-45

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The Army Air Force has recommended that Negro combat units be reduced to a single composite group to be composed of one fighter and one bomber squadron.

Dr. Patterson

As reported exclusively by the Defender, two weeks ago, the 332nd Fighter Group will go by the board. The 99th Pursuit and the 477th Bomber Squadrons will make up the new group. The group designation will probably continue as the 477th Composite Group.

The future base location for the unit has not yet been determined. It is understood that Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, is exerting tremendous pressure to have it installed at the Tuskegee Army Air Field. However, equally strong pressure is coming from the men presently attached to these squadrons who do not want to go to Tuskegee. It is known that racial tensions in Macon County, in which Tuskegee is located, are high.

Negro Nurse Beaten

A year ago when a Defender representative visited the installation it was learned that the town of Tuskegee approximately twelve miles from the base, and Montgomery some 52 miles away, had been temporarily declared out of bounds for the men. Being barred from these towns imposed a decided restriction.

One Negro nurse had just prior to that time been severely beaten by a bus driver in Montgomery and more than one other serious incident had occurred in the same town in which Negro service men were involved.

This much is known, when the group is designated it will not operate from Godman Field in Kentucky.

Army Air Forces has further recommended that existing Negro Combat personnel be retained at Group Headquarters, and that a supporting Air Service Squadron be maintained. The establishment of Group Headquarters will make possible the retention of overhead Negro executive personnel in high rank. Without this provision, there would be an elimination of high ranking Negro Army Air Force officers, since the squadron could be officered by men of less rank and still conform with AAF regulations.

Congress To Act

The maintenance of an Air Service Squadron will provide for Negro repairmen and mechanics continuing in the service.

The extent of the reduction of the personnel in these units, according to AAF, will be influenced by the availability of trained men desiring to remain in the Army Air Force.

The whole program as recommended has not been finally acted on. In the last analysis the ultimate decision must await the determination as to the strength of the Army and the size of the Air Forces. This determination will be made after Congress has acted.

Shuns Segregation Plan Of Air Corps After NAACP Blast

By VENICE T. SPRAGGS
(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—In a telegram to Gen. George C. Marshall this week, F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee institute, withdrew his previous suggestion that a proposed jim-crow U. S. Air Corps "composite group" of Negro peacetime fliers be based at Tuskegee Army Air field.

F. D. Patterson

The Patterson wire came after a steady barrage of criticism had been leveled at him by the National Association for Advancement of Colored People and other outstanding Negro and liberal white groups for suggesting that the War Department's jim-crow plan be co-operated with "until such time as the army develops a policy of integration."

In his message to Gen. Marshall, the Tuskegee president stated that he did not believe that it would be to the best interests of the Negro in the Army Air Forces to station such a group in the Alabama community if the personnel of said group was displeased with the location. Negro airmen to be included in the setup had previously protested when they learned that they might be assigned to the Tuskegee base.

The Tuskegee Air Base is located in the heart of one of the most prejudiced areas of the south. Macon county, Ala. From the time of its inception, the whole project has met almost continued opposition from numerous Negro groups. Stemming mainly from an averseness to a segregated facility in the first place, the opposition was further heightened by the fact that Negro airmen from all over the United States were subjected to gross indignations which many believed was taking unfair advantage of their initial opportunity in the Army Air Forces.

Foolhardy Bias Hit

With the war ended, there is widespread opinion that it would be foolhardy for the War department to continue in peacetime the mistake it made during the war. Moreover, it is felt that Negro airmen should not be compelled again to face the indignities which they bore as a war sacrifice.

The Army Air Force has recommended for the peacetime Army a single Negro composite group comprised of 1 fighter squadron, 1 bomber squadron, a service squadron, and a group headquarters. With a comparable reduction in the entire Air Force a large number of A-1 fields will be maintained where it is advocated that Negro airmen should be installed on a completely non-segregated basis. Aside from this fact, the Tuskegee field is reportedly in bad condition. According to reports, only this past week one of the runways was completely submerged.

While it is known that the 447th Composite Group presently stationed at Godman Field, Ky., must vacate shortly, many feel that there is no justification for any support that these men should be moved to Tuskegee.

Lashing out against the Tuskegee proposal, Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People told Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson: "We are unalterably opposed to segregation in the postwar Air Force or Army. The United States has an excellent example of successful integration in the experience of the 332nd Fighter Group, and particularly of the 99th Pursuit Squadron in North Africa and Italy which served without friction or difficulty with white fighters, many of them from the deep south.

(2) The racial atmosphere of Alabama is such that no self-respecting Negro member of the Air Force could serve there without the risk of clashes with the dominant community pattern of anti-Negroism. In the reduction of the Air Force there will be many excellent fields far better equipped and suited for bomber and fighter training than is the field at Tuskegee, which fields are located in areas where Negro fliers would not be subjected to constant humiliation. Tuskegee Field does not at present have adequate housing and other facilities for officers and enlisted personnel. We realize that such facilities can be created by the expenditure of considerable money. But fields already created could be used and thus avoid uneconomical spending of money for the erection of additional facilities at Tuskegee."

"Composite" Called Alibi

Hitting at the Army Air Force proposal to dump all Negro squadrons into a composite group, White declared: "We understand that the proposed establishment of a composite group for the training of Negro fighters and bombers applies only to Negroes, being a device to combine the two merely to segregate Negroes in one group."

The subject of reactionary policies and discriminating practices of the Army Air Forces precipitated the resignation of Judge William H. Hastie as civilian aide to the Secretary of War.

Expressing himself on the collaboration which Tuskegee institute gave to the establishment of the jim crow army air field in the first place, Hastie had this to say: "When we find Tuskegee institute working hand in glove with the Army Air Command to establish, intrench, and extend a jim crow air training program at Tuskegee, such conduct should be exposed and condemned. It is an object lesson of selfish and shortsighted scheming for immediate personal advantage with cynical disregard for the larger interests of the Negro and the nation."

10-6-45

Hastie said that early in the history of the Tuskegee project a Negro sentry guarding a warehouse was disarmed and arrested by civilian authorities because he had challenged a white civilian. Because the commanding officer opposed such outrageous interference, he was removed. His successor, catering to local prejudices, disarmed Negro military policemen assigned to patrol duty in the town of Tuskegee. When a Defender representative visited the installation a year ago MPs were still prohibited from carrying arms, although it meant that often their own lives were endangered.

When one of the Negro nurses from the air base was badly beaten by a policeman in Montgomery, Ala., because she insisted upon riding a bus when there were enough white passengers waiting to fill the entire vehicle, "the only concern of the post commander was to keep the incident quiet," Hastie said.

Hospital Also Jim Crow

With the recent voting case filed on behalf of William P. Mitchell against the local registrars of Macon county, in which Judge "Speed" Callaghan who presided in the Scottsboro trials is serving as counsel for the registrars, those close to the heart of the problem feel that even the personal safety of Negro airmen would be jeopardized by their retention at Tuskegee.

Nor has Dr. Patterson confined himself to recommending the retention of the segregated Tuskegee air field. It is known that the Tuskegee prexy is supporting the construction of a jim crow 300-bed veterans hospital at Hobson City, an all Negro community adjacent to Anniston, Ala.

Proposed by the local chamber of commerce, the project has the support of Harry M. Ayers, editor of the Anniston Star.

When a similar proposal was made for an all-Negro veterans hospital by two Mississippi congressmen to be located at Mound Bayou, Miss., the Negro citizenry expressed themselves as unequivocally opposed to such a segregated facility in Mississippi or elsewhere throughout the United States.

NAACP Lays Down 3 Point Opposition To Secretary Of War

New Orleans, Louisiana
10-6-45
Louisiana Weekly

New York, Oct. 3.—Unqualified opposition to the proposed Army Air Force plan to establish a "composite group" of Negro bombers and fighters as a segregated unit at the Tuskegee Air Field was voiced today to Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, by the NAACP.

The Association's stand is based upon three points, Walter White, secretary, informed the Secretary of War.

"(1) We are unalterably opposed to segregation in the postwar Air Force or Army. The United States has an excellent example of successful integration in the experience of the 332nd Fighter Group, and particularly of the 99th Pursuit Squadron in North Africa and Italy which served without friction or difficulty with white fighters, many of them from the Deep South.

"(2) The racial atmosphere of Alabama is such that no self-respecting Negro member of the Air Force could serve there without the risk of clashes with the dominant community pattern of anti-Negroism. In the reduction of the Air Force there will be many excellent fields far better equipped and suited for bomber and fighter training than is the field at Tuskegee, which fields are located in areas where Negro fliers would not be subjected to constant humiliation. Tuskegee Field does not at present have adequate facilities for training command or tactical units. Nor does it have adequate housing and other facilities for officers and enlisted personnel. We realize that such facilities can be created by the expenditure of considerable money. But fields already created could be used and thus avoid uneconomical spending of money for the erection of additional facilities at Tuskegee.

"(3) We understand that the proposed establishment of a composite group for the training of Negro fighters and bombers applies only to Negroes, being a device to combine all training of Negro fliers in one place. White fighter units will be assigned to one field and white bomber units to another under different commands. We do not believe that the same excellence and efficiency can be attained by attempting to combine the two merely to segregate Negroes in one composite group."

Already skilled as aerial gunners, the graduates are real triple-threat members of the deadly aerial combat teams. In their study and practice of dead-reckoning navigation they have learned its application to the problem of bombing enemy targets and how it can aid in making evasive action more effective. They have become as familiar with aerial reconnaissance photographs of enemy installations as with the road map of Texas. They have learned camouflage and how to detect it; they have studied the weak points of enemy ships; they have learned to identify enemy aircraft. They are bombardment experts. . . . Now these young bombardier-navigators are ready for the final phase of their combat training in which they will take their places as key men in the aerial combat teams of the Army Air Forces.

CINCINNATI, Ohio — Tewenty- four hours after 101 Negro flying officers were ordered released from confinement at Godman Field, Kentuck, the 477th Bombardment group, a Negro medium bomber outfit, had been ordered away from Freeman Field at Seymour, Indiana, it was announced this week by Theodore M. Berry of the Cincinnati NAACP. The destination of the bombardment group is unknown. The order took effect at noon April 26.

The release of the 101 officers who were being held because they refused to sign a statement segregating them in a jim crow officers' club house after protests had flooded the war department, including a wire from Congresswoman Helen G. Douglas of California Representative Douglas wired Secretary Stimson urging immediate release of the men.

The mass release leaves only three men still under arrest, Lieutenants Shirley B Clinton, Roger C. Terry and Marsden A. Thomason. The NAACP, thru its Washington bureau, its Cincinnati and Indianapolis branches and its national headquarters in New York, is pressing for the release of the three men and indicated that if they are brought to trial legal counsel will be supplied by the association. Judge William H. Hastie will be chief counsel for the men and Theodore Berry of the Cincinnati NAACP will be associate counsel.

7 Killed In Bomber Crash In Alabama

The Chicago Defender
Chicago - ILL

GUNTER FIELD, Ala. — Two Chicago pilots were among seven Negro fliers killed Tuesday night when their B-25 training bomber crashed 3½ miles east of this field while on a routine flight from Godman Field, Ky.

The dead were:

Cpl. Henry H. Valentine, 323 Walnut street, Rockford, Ill.

Cpl. Luther A. Cox, Detroit, Mich.

Pvt. James H. Ewing, Springfield, Ohio. 6-16-45

Sole survivor of the crash was Cpl. Selvin J. Wilson, whose home city was not immediately available. He is in serious condition at the army base hospital here.

The crash, one of the first for a crew of the 477th Bombardment Squadron based at the air base near Ft. Knox, Ky., occurred after the big B-25 had gassed up at Gunter Field for a return flight to the Kentucky airfield. The plane crashed in a swamp near here shortly after the takeoff.

Cause of the crackup was not determined and an investigating board was named by Col. Raymond L. Winn, commanding officer here.

Moton Field, Tuskegee Institute, Ala.—Outstanding Cadet for Class 45-E, which graduated from Primary flight training at the 2164th AAF Base Unit, Tuskegee Institute, Ala., this week, was A-C George M. Wharton, son of Mrs. Cordella H. Wharton, 1924 11th St., N. W., Washington, D. C.

A-C Wharton was awarded a $25.00 War Bond as Outstanding Cadet, a rating based on military bearing, leadership ability, PT ability, general attitude, etc. He was also awarded a $10.00 GI War Bond, for having attained the highest Ground School average for the class. His average, one of the highest ever made at this school, was 92.5. The Ground School average is based on average grades made in all subjects contained in the Ground School course. 4-6-45

A-C Wharton is a graduate of Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H., and also attended Temple University at Philadelphia. His wife, Mrs. Dorothy E. Wharton, lives at 236 W. 150th St., New York City.

Difficulty In Getting Cadets For Air Is Told

Atlanta World 3-30-45

Atlanta Ga.

Barely Enough To Compose A Class Is Found

CHICAGO — (ANP) — It is almost impossible at present to find colored youth capable of qualifying for training as army aviators in the country. Reports from recent efforts to secure enough young colored men to fill the quota for the current class at Tuskegee almost met with failure.

After routine recruiting methods had failed, army air forces which have 67,000 Negroes in their ranks still in the United States, ordered every commander to screen his men for qualified students or for volunteers. 3-30-45

Later an effort was made in the ground forces among the men still in this country. Out of all this effort barely 20 men were secured not enough to fill the quota but enough to compose a class.

Because of the need for replacements in the 332d squadron, now in Italy, the TAAF training program has been kept going at full speed. A large number of the veterans in Italy have been returned to this country and are now being used to train the new classes at Tuskegee.

The school, at Tuskegee is barely able to keep up with the necessary flow of replacements. Some 20 veterans have returned recently to take places as instructors at the Alabama airfield. 3-30-45

The general air training program for white fliers has been reduced 90 percent. A year and a half ago white fliers were being trained at the rate of 100,000 per year. This has been reduced until only 10,000 a year are being trained now.

The output from Tuskegee averages roughly, 10 percent of the total flying program now being conducted by the Army. Youthful volunteers who can make the grade can apply at their recruiting stations or can write Tuskegee Army Air Field.

56A. Memphis World - Tenn. 5-22-45

TUSKEGEE — (ANP) — Brown Americans will continue to engage brown Japs in the air, but in greater numbers, it was learned this week as swift upon the heels of the war department's announcement that cadet training at army air bases would be discontinued, came news that Negroes will still receive training as cadets at Tuskegee Army Air field. It is highly probable that Tuskegee will be the only installation of its type in the country giving this kind or training.

In a statement to assembled personnel at TAAF on V-E day, Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer, said that presumably Tuskegee would be the only primary field in the eastern flying training command that would continue in their training of pilots.

The field, which is famous as being the starting point of 13 colored pilots, later known as the 99th Pursuit squadron, graduated its 36th class May 15.

AIR FORCE STILL WANTS NEGROES 5-22-45

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — In spite of cutbacks in the army air forces' aviation cadet program, announced last week, the problem of Negro replacements in the AAF is still "acute," an informed source has disclosed.

The cutback announcement affects pre-aviation cadets and students known collectively as pre-air crew trainees, and members of the air corps enlisted reserve who are on inactive status as civilians until eligible for call to active duty within the six month period following their 18th birthday.

However, Negroes will not fall into this category. Anybody who can qualify for service in the air forces should continue to apply, it was said unofficially.

Change Welcomed By Men; Cases Watched, However

By HARRY McALPIN

GOODMAN FIELD, Ky. — With impressive ceremonies, Col. B. O. Davis Thursday assumed command of 477th Composite group, composed of units of the 477th Bombardment Group and the 332nd Fighter Group at Godman Field Ky. He replaced Col. Robert Selway as commander.

The ceremonies were presided over by Lt. Gen. Ira Eaker, acting chief of the Army Air Force, under whom Col. Davis served for a time in the Italian Theatre while part of the 12th Fighter Command.

When the troops at the base were reviewed Wednesday in honor of Gen. Eaker and Col. Davis, the reviewing party included Negroes for the first time since before 477th Bombardment Group was activated. The troops were led in parade by Negro officers, also for the first time. Col. Selway, the removed commander, issued an order Wednesday after 5:00 o'clock that all troops on parade would be led by Negro officers.

Included in the reiewing party beside Gen. Eaker and Col. Davis were Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis, father of the new group commander, and Truman Gibson, civilian aide to the Secretary of War.

Col. Davis is expected to become Post Commander as well as Group Commander, but this change has not been made yet. Col. Selway is on the post and is still Post Commander. This arrangement, it was reported at the base from where I left by plane Thursday afternoon, will last until Selway can properly turn over all material and equipment to Col. Davis.

Many of the problems of the base are still unsettled. The three officers arrested for entering the white officers' club at Freeman Field are still under technical arrest. While welcoming the change of command to a Negro officer the men at the post are reluctant about becoming too jubilant or satisfied until they know what is to be the outcome of this long pending case. No indication was given Thursday of its disposition.

The group was told Thursday by Gen. Eaker, they definitely will be assigned to fight in the Pacific and that Gen. MacArthur has stated that he wants every unit that has been properly trained.

Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., of New York, son of Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, the only Negro general officer in the U. S. Army, has made an enviable record in the war. As commander of the 332d Mustang Fighter Group, Col. Davis ran his flying string up to 60 combat missions in the European war. Last Apr. 16, he led a strafing attack on railway targets in Austria, remaining in the danger area for an hour to destroy locomotives and rolling stock. The action won him the Silver Star for gallantry—the first time it has been awarded to a Negro fighter pilot in the Army. Davis, who also holds the Legion of Merit, took over last week as commander of the 477th Composite Air Group at Godman Field, Ky.

Col. Benjamin O. Davis To Head 477th Group

Richmond Times Dispatch

WASHINGTON, June 21—(AP)—Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, former commander of the 332nd Fighter Squadron in Italy, has been assigned to command the newly organized 477th Composite Group, an all-Negro outfit, the War Department announced today.

Colonel Davis has arrived at Godman Field, Ky., to take over command of the new fighter-bomber unit, presently equipped with B-25 medium bombers and P-47 fighters, Under-Secretary of War Patterson said. The 477th is destined for Pacific service.

Ace Negro Flier Takes Command Of 477th Group At Godman Field

Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., outstanding Negro flier and winner of four medals in Italy, yesterday took command of the 477th Composite Group at Godman Field, adjacent to Fort Knox, replacing Col. Robert R. Selway, Jr., who was the center of a recent racial controversy at Freeman Field, near Seymour, Ind.

A Washington Associated Press dispatch said the War Department announced that Selway retains command of Godman Field, but it was reported in the Capitol that Davis eventually will take over that post, too.

In ceremonies attended by high-ranking Army officers, the 33-year-old Davis, former commander of the famed 332d Fighter Group in Italy, was presented to his new command by Lt. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, acting commanding general of the Army Air Forces.

The 477th is an all-Negro command recommissioned from the 477th Bombardment Group and contains two B-25 medium bomber squadrons and a fighter squadron. Godman Field at one time was the home base of the former 477th Bombardment Group.

Won Wings In Alabama.

Davis, it was reported at Godman Field yesterday, plans to name as key staff officers men who served under him in Italy.

A native of Washington, D. C., and a 1936 U. S. Military Academy graduate, Davis won his pilot wings at Tuskegee, Ala., air field in 1942 and went overseas in 1943 in command of the 99th Fighter Squadron. He took command of the 332d fighter group in October, 1943. He has won the Legion of Merit, Silver Star Medal, Distinguished Flying Cross, and Air Medal with four Oak Leaf Clusters. 6-22-45

Investigation Continues.

In an address to the men of the 477th, General Eaker told them that Colonel Davis will choose his own staff and "those among you who are ambitious, can go as far as your ability and performance will take you."

The racial dispute in which Selway was involved flared up at Freeman Field early in April after Negro officer students sought to visit a club which Selway had planned to set aside for the post's white instructors and administrative personnel. A separate club was maintained for the Negro officers. 6-22-45

The dispute spread over several days and 101 officers were confined to quarters, but all subsequently were released except three. The trio was charged with jostling a military policeman. The disturbance still is under investigation, according to the War Department.

Selway and the 477th later were transferred to Godman Field.

Col. Davis Gets Godman Field Post, Replaces Jimcrow Officer

Daily Worker 6-22-45

N.Y.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., commander of the 332nd Fighter Group in Italy until his return home a few weeks ago, today became commander of the 477th Composite Group at Godman Field, Ky.

Col. Davis is reliably reported in line for promotion to brigadier general, with ceremonies scheduled for next Thursday. 6-22-45

Col. Selway, whom Davis succeeds, is the white officer reportedly responsible for a series of incidents involving Negro officers under his command. The latest was the arrest of 101 Air Force officers who had refused to accept a jimcrow setup in an officer's club at Freeman Field, Ind. He had earlier been accused of "abusing" Negro officers at Selfridge Field, Mich., and at Godman Field.

Col. Davis, holder of the Legion of Merit, the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal, was awarded the Silver Star just before his departure from Italy for gallantry in action as pilot and leader of a group of P51 aircraft on a mission strafing enemy rail targets April 15.

ONLY 33 YEARS OLD

Col. Davis' promotion would mean two Negro brigadier generals in the United States Army in the same family. His father, Benjamin O. Davis, Sr., is the only Negro at present holding that rank. Col. Davis, Jr., will be 33 years old next December. 6-22-45

He was graduated from West Point in 1936 and was promoted three years later to first lieutenant. He became a captain in 1940. On the same day, March 1, 1942, he was successively promoted to major and lieutenant colonel. He was promoted to colonel last June, while commanding the 332nd Fighter Group on the Italian Front.

His first assignment was with the famous Negro outfit, the 24th Infantry, at Ft. Benning, Ga. He later served as professor of military science at Tuskegee Institute, Ala. Davis was assigned to the Air Corps graduating at the Tuskegee Army Air Field in the first class of Negro pilots.

Col. Davis was told by Air Corps Commander Lt. Gen. Ira Eaker, who flew with him today from Washington to Godman Field, to choose his own staff. 6-22-45

Col. Davis Gets Post Command

Heads Mixed Group After Jim Crow Protest

By United Press

WASHINGTON, June 22.—A recent conflict between white and Negro Army Air Force officers over use of an Officers' Club at Freeman Field, Seymour, Ind., prompted the War Dept. to place Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., a Negro, in command of the 477th Composite Group, it has been disclosed here.

Largely composed of Negroes, the 477th formerly was commanded by Col. Robert B. Selway, Jr., and other white staff officers. It had been stationed at Freeman Field until its recent transfer to Godman Field, Ky.

Davis, accompanied by Lt. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, flew from here to take over his new assignment.

He formerly commanded the 332nd Fighter Group in Italy, which flew as part of the 12th Fighter Command under the overall command of Eaker. A West Point graduate, he is 32 and the son of Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, Sr., the only Negro officer of star rank in the Army.

The Freeman Field incident arose when the Officers' Club was reserved for use of the base staff and instructors. This, in effect, restricted it for white officers and barred Negro officer trainees.

Three trainees who attempted to enter the club were arrested for jostling a provost marshal, and 101 of the trainees were confined to quarters for a short time—tantamount to technical arrest.

Negro trainees who attempted to visit the club pointed out that Army regulations require that any such quarters maintained on Army property must be available for all officer personnel on the post.

Eaker instructed Davis to choose his own staff. He will take command of Godwin after a brief transition interval.

Negro Colonel Gets Command Of Air Group

While the War Department said that Colonel Selway retains command of Godman Field, it was expected that Colonel Davis also eventually will take over that post, too.

The racial dispute in which Colonel Selway was involved flared up at Freeman Field in April after Negro-officer students sought to visit a club which Colonel Selway had set aside for the use of the post's white instructors and administrative personnel. A separate club was maintained for the Negro officers.

A War Department spokesman said at the time of the disturbance that separate clubs for instructors and for trainees is customary in the training command whether or not there is any racial difference between the two groups. The idea, he said, is to discourage social contacts between instructors and trainees and prevent any possible favoritism toward students.

As the result of the dispute, which spread over several days, 101 officers were confined to quarters, bu all were released, with the exception of three. These were charged with jostling a military policeman at the door of the instructors' club.

Colonel Selway and the 477th, formerly known as the 477th Bombardment Group, subsequently were transferred from Freeman Field to Godman. Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, who announced Colonel Davis's appointment today, said the disturbance still is under investigation.

The thirty-three-year-old Colonel Davis, son of Brigadier General B. O. Davis, highest ranking Negro in the Army, formerly commanded the 332d Fighter Group in Italy. Lieutenant General Ira C. Eaker, deputy chief of the Army Air Forces and former commander of the Mediterranean Allied Air Forces, was at Godman Field today to install Colonel Davis in his new command. The 477th, as reconstituted, will include two medium bombe rskuadrons and one fighter squadron.

In an address to the men of the 477th, General Eaker told them that Colonel Davis will choose his own staff and therefore "those among you who are ambitious, can go as far as your ability and performance will take you."

Remove Colonel Who Backed 'Jim Crow' For Negro Pilots

By OLIVER PILAT
Post Staff Correspondent

Washington, June 21—Col. Robert B. Selway Jr., white commander of the all-Negro 477th Composite (bomber and fighter) Group, whose racial policy aroused a national controversy 2 months ago, was replaced today by a Negro officer.

News of the change of command in the 477th Composite Group, which wil soon leave the U. S. to join in the all-out bombing of Japan, came out today during the joint press conference here of Undersecretary of War Patterson and Lt. Gen. Doolittle, commander of the 8th Air Force.

No new assignment has been given Col. Selway as yet, Patterson said, revealing that Lt. Gen. Eaker, deputy commander of the Army Air Forces, was making a visit today to Godman Field, near Louisville, Ky., to install Col. Davis and address the Negro aerial warriors.

Asked about reports that three Negro officers arrested by Col. Selway on Apr. 6 after they protested segregation of facilities for white instructors and Negro trainees at Freeman Field, Ind., would be restored shortly to active duty, Patterson said: "The whole matter is still under study."

[Conditions at Freeman Field which resulted in the arrest of the three and the temporary detention of nearly 100 other officers were revealed exclusively by The Post.]

Doolittle on Japan

Gen. Doolittle, who will visit several airplane plants in the U. S. before leaving for the Pacific to take over the all-out Japanese bombing of the 8th Air Force, said he expected Japan to bow more easily to air blows than Germany.

"Japan has a greater concentration of industry, it is more highly inflammable, it has not as much recuperative power as Germany and it will not have time to get underground as Germany was rapidly doing," he said.

Japan has been bombed effectively only three months, he pointed out, whereas effective bombing of Germany lasted fully five years, Gen. Doolittle said, refusing to specify how long the aerial job would take with Japan.

B-29s and "such other ships as are necessary" will carry out the 8th Air Force missions in the Pacific, he said.

Making up the revised 8th Air Force, said Gen. Doolittle, will be three groups, veterans from Europe, parts of the 20th Air Force with B-29 experience, and men without previous combat experience.

Gen. Doolittle led the first U. S. bombing attack on Tokyo on Apr. 18, 1942. He would like to repeat the performance, but his superiors have ruled that his possible capture would be too dangerous in view of his knowledge of long-range plans, he said today.

Finished West Point in 1936

Colonel Davis, who was graduated from West Point in 1936, was promoted to first lieutenant in 1939, elevated to captain in 1940, to major in March 1, 1942, and to lieutenant colonel the same day, received his promotion to colonel last June 1, while serving overseas with the 332nd.

His first assignment was at Fort Benning, Ga., with the 24th Infantry, where he served until 1937. Later he served as professor of military science and tactics at Tuskegee, remaining in that capacity until February, 1941, when he was assigned as aide to his father at Fort Riley, Kans.

With Air Corps 4 Years

In May, 1941, he was assigned to the Air Corps, graduating in the first class of colored pilots from Tuskegee Army Air Field, March, 1942. He assumed command of the 99th Fighter Squadron in August of the same year.

Colonel Davis led the 99th through the Tunisian campaign, and was recalled to the States in September, 1943, to take command of the 332nd Fighter Group at Selfridge Field, Mich.

The 332nd went overseas under his command in Jan. 1944, and he has been its commanding officer througohut the Italian campaign in which the group registered 105 victories over German aircraft, destroyed over 300 more on the ground, and won high praise as an escort group for the bombers of the 15th Air Force.

His parting words when he left the group in Italy ten days ago ot return for his new assignment were, "Our mission here has been completed. We have fought the war and I think the group has done very well." 6-25-45

Dad a Washingtonian

Brigadier General Davis Sr., a Washingtonian by birth, was educated in the District public schools and Howard University. His military career began in 1899, when he joined the Ninth Cavalry, in which he rose from private to the rank of second lieutenant in three years.

In 1902, he was promoted to first lieutenant, elevated to captain in 1915, and to major in 1917, the latter a temporary rank. In 1920, he was promoted to lieutenant colonel and in 1930 made a full colonel in the U.S. Army.

Made General in 1940

In 1940, he was promoted to the rank of brigadier general, the first colored person to receive the high Army rank.

Prior to his present position in the Inspector Genreal's office, General Davis, who will celebrate his sixty-eighth birthday on July 1, served as commander officer of the 369th Infantry, N.Y. National Guard.

He formerly served with the Tenth Cavalry in Samar and Panay, was military attache in Monrovia, Liberia in 1911-12; served as military instructor, Ohio National Guard and professor of military sicence and tactics at Wilberforce and Tuskegee, and during 1930-33, accompanied six parties of Gold Star mothers on pilgrimages to the cemeteries of Europe.

Truman, Gibson to Be Present

The Thursday ceremonies, which promise to be impressive, will also throw the spotlight on Lt. Gen. Ira Eaker, commanding general of the Allied Air Forces in the Mediterranean Theatre, hwere the 332nd Fighter Group fought with distinction, and on Truman K. Gibson Jr., civilian aide to the Secretary of War, both of whom will be present.

It was Lt. Gen. Eaker who said of the 332nd: "Put them in P-51's, the last word in power—they belong." He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal "for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service."

Responsibility for many of the advances in the War Department's racial policies is traceable to Mr. Gibson, who besides being a member of the McCloy Committee to eliminate discrimination in the armed forces had a big part in in the preparation of manuals and pamphlets aimed at a better understanding among all soldiers and officers. 6-23-45

Elevation Begins Long String of "Firsts"

(Special to the AFRO)

GODMAN FIELD, Ky.—Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., commander of the 332nd Fighter Group in Italy, will be made a brigadier general at ceremonies to be held here on Thursday.

The AFRO has learned on credible, though unofficial authority that he will also head the 477th Bombardment Group now in training here, replacing Col. Robert Selway, who has been a storm center of protest because of his attitude toward colored personnel.

Long String of "Firsts"

The elevation of Colonel Davis who will not be 33 until December, will set in motion a series of "firsts" in our history. It marks not only the first time a colored officer has held this rank in the Air Corps, but the first time that one on active combat duty has been so advanced.

The promotion also marks the first time in our history that there have been two generals in one family. Gen. B. O. Davis Sr., of the Inspector General's Office, who recently returned from an assignment in Europe, has been, until now, the race's top-ranking officer.

Two Cleared, Third Forfeits $150 Pay

DAVIS EXCUSED

7-14-45

Case Involved Effort to Use 'White' Club

By HERBERT M. FRISBY

AFRO War Correspondent

GODMAN FIELD, Ky.—Two of the three 477th Bombardment Group officers facing Army jim-crow charges here were exonerated Monday by an all-colored court martial.

The third officer, 2nd Lt. Roger C. Terry of Los Angeles, was exonerated on Tuesday of a charge of refusing to obey a superior officer's command, but convicted of using violence by pushing aside 1st Lt. Joseph D. Rogers, white military police officer.

Lieutenant Terry's penalty was forfeiture of $50 pay for three months.

Cleared at Monday's session were 2nd Lts. Marsden Thompson of Los Angeles and Shirley Clinton of Camden, N.J.

They were charged with "jostling" an officer, in alleged violation of the 64th Article of War, in an attempt to enter "white" officers' club at Freeman Field, Ind., on April 5, and with refusing to submit to arrest in violation of the 67th Article of War.

Col. B. O. Davis Jr., who last week was installed as commander of the group, and Capt. Charles R. Stanton were excused from participation in the court-martial through peremptory challenges by the defense and prosecution, respectively.

The prosecution contended that the defendants willfully disobeyed an order of a superior officer not to enter the club, used violence in entering, and acted disorderly.

Defense's Stand

The defense maintained that the evidence did not substantiate the second charge, and that the order ment regulation and hence the was inviolation of a War Departmen could not be found guilty on the first count.

7-14-45

Col. Robert Selway, then commander of the group, under whose orders the officers' club segregation policy was invoked, appeared evasive in answering questions of the defense counsel aimed at establishing his responsibility for the practice.

Knew About Anti-Bias Order

Under cross-examination by Theodore Berry, civilian associate defense counsel on Tuesday, Colonel Selway finally admitted that he was aware of the War Department order against discrimination in officers' clubs but added that his orders were "never negative but always positive."

He said that there was nothing in them to restrict the use of the club to any particular group of officers but that the enforcement of the orders by his subordinates was restrictive.

"Hostile Witness"

The colonel was forced to testify after a court ruling that he was a "hostile witness." This ruling was requested by Mr. Berry when the officer told the court that he would object to any questions asked by the defense counsel.

Under direct examination, Lieutenant Terry testified that he was already in the club when the alleged order of the MP officer for him not to enter was given.

When asked by the prosecutor if he knew that disobeying an order of a superior officer not to enter the building carried a penalty, the lieutenant replied in the negative.

Lieutenants Thompson and Clinton were among the original group of 63 officers arrested for attempting to use the "white" club.

They testified that they sought entrance in accordance with provisions of a War Department circular, Regulation 210-10, Paragraph 19, which prohibits discrimination in recreational facilities at Army posts.

When they were denied entrance by a military police officer on the ground that the facilities were reserved for base personnel, they were arrested and placed under restriction.

Colonel Selway's contention had been that the "white" club was for instructors and the club set aside for the colored officers was for trainees.

Under cross-examination, however, the MP officer admitted that only colored officers had been denied entrance to the "white" club.

All witnesses, prior to being sworn, saluted the court as per Army regulations, except Colonel Selway, who confined his salute to the flag.

When called to testify the second day of the trial, Colonel Selway saluted the court only after ordered to do so by Capt. George L. Knox, president of the court.

477th Bomb Group Not Likely To Be Sent To Pacific Now

Journal & Guide Va.

Norfolk, Va.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—While an official decision and announcement on the future disposition of the 477th Composite Fighter-Bombardment Group will continue to be considered a military secret until after the Japanese surrender becomes official, advises from high government sources in Washington indicate that it is a fairly safe conjecture that the medium bombardment group, now commanded by Col. B. O. Davis Jr., will not be sent to the Pacific in event the war ends this week.

8-18-45

Originally scheduled to be committed to action in the Pacific by October at the latest, the sudden end of the war, which was expected momentarily as we went to press, is expected to cancel shipment plans for this air group.

8-18-45

Lt. General Ira C. Eaker, deputy commanding general of the Army Air Forces, revealed in late June that the 477th would complete its training and embark for bases on Okinawa by October.

Efforts made by the Guide Tuesday morning to get an official decision on the disposition of this unit were stymied by the fact that the War Department still considered itself at war with Japan and information regarding plans for disposition of troops was still veiled in military security.

However, reliable sources in the War Department regard it as fairly safe to speculate that the 477th will not be committed to a foreign assignment in view of the expected end of hostilities in the Pacific.

"Transfers" Are Not Enough

AFRO-AMERICAN - Balt., Md.

It is ironical, to say the least, that some of the news from the home front these days is considerably more disturbing than some of the reports from overseas.

We are thinking particularly of the attempt of high Army officials at Freeman Field in Indiana to impose a pattern of rank segregation upon the officers of the 477th Bombardment Group. 4-28-45

According to allegations, yet undenied, these officers not only have been denied command posts in their unit but they have been barred from the "white" officers' club by an order which is a direct violation of the War Department's stated regulations and policies.

An immediate, thorough-going investigation — not a whitewash — of these reported attempts at segregation is certainly in order in view of the mass protest against existing conditions. Not only are the rights of more than one hundred men affected, but the rights and privileges of countless others if such conditions are permitted to continue.

Accused of creating these conditions are Col. Robert R. Selway, Jr., and Major General Frank O. P. Hunter, who, if found guilty as charged, should be subjected to appropriate disciplinary action.

Fear of a whitewash in the Freeman Field case is heightened by the knowledge of the manner in which the Army recently handled the case of Col. Walter M. Crandall, commander of Lovell General Hospital at Fort Devens, Mass.

Col. Crandall had been accused of telling colored Wacs at Devens that he did not want "any black Wacs" as hospital technicians or in the motor pool at Devens. These charges were made under oath during the court martial proceedings against four of the one hundred Wacs who staged a sit-down strike in protest against the assignment of a disproportionate share of "dirty" work at the hospital.

While the Wacs were later cleared of charges and reinstated, the only thing that happened to Col. Crandall was his transfer from the post. A War Department spokesman says that "the incident is now considered closed."

It seems rather clear that if the War Department is at all serious in its avowal to enforce a non-discrimination policy where there is credible evidence of violation at its disposal, it should act in the case of Col. Crandall and in the case of the two officers at Freeman Field. 4-28-45

If it isn't serious, then its directives are mere platitudes not worth the paper on which they are written.

An inter-organizational conference, scheduled for this week-end at Butler, N.J., is expected to take some action toward eliminating bias in the Army and Navy. It may well address itself to the proposition of seeing that disciplinary action is taken upon the perpetrators of segregation and discrimination as well as upon those who rebel against it.

The reported transfer last week of Commander J. P. MacBean of the 34th Seabee Battalion in California, the transfer of Col. Crandall and the possible transfer of Col. Selway offer but temporary relief for the persons subjected to their abuse. Such action is not corrective or punitive as far as these officers are concerned. Unless more drastic disciplinary action is taken in their cases there is always reason to believe that these officers will bob up again somewhere in the same roles.

We demand an end to this type of "investigation" and to these face-saving transfers.

Still Bone Of Contention

477th Wants Selway Removed; New Order Limits Promotions

Pittsburgh Courier 6-2-45

Pgh. Pa.

NEW YORK—Realizing that they are behind the proverbial "eight ball," officers of the 477th Bombardment Group, currently stationed at Godman Field, Ky., last week voiced their demands, through The Pittsburgh Courier, to the War Department to "remove Colonel Selway from his present position as commanding officer of the group and release of three officers who are being held for court-martial."

They know, too, that their position is a precarious one and being "clamped down by Army Regulation" they cannot openly demand an investigation by Congress which they believe is the only way that the unhappy affair, now existing at Godman, can be "satisfactorily ironed out."

SECRET LETTER

The officer, acting as spokesman for the group, said they had been moved to Godman Field with the understanding that the unit was to be commanded by Negroes, but a few days ago they seized an official secret letter dated April 27, addressed to Colonel Selway, "Subject: Authorized White Officer Personnel." 6-2-45

The letter stated that there would be no white officers below the rank of major and no Negro officer above that rank, which means, the men said, that the group commander and squadron commanders and all key operation positions will be held by white officers, automatically eliminating the possibility of any Negro officer being in a position to give orders.

The young officers also stated that Colonel Selway is responsible for the rumor that Negroes would man the group, despite the fact that he and several other officers (white) are known to have issued the unjustifiable statement that Negroes were unprepared and incapable of handling the command of a bomber group.

Although there have been no accidents during the regular period of operational training he (Selway) continues to maintain this view. He draws the conclusion, that there have been no accidents in the group, because it is being commanded by white officers.

All the men in the group are agreed on three demands, which are:

That the three officers now being held be released.

That Selway be relieved of his duties.

That the War Department eliminate discrimination.

"We all want to know," one of the officers declared, "will the War Department decide whether we are first-rate or second-rate soldiers—or if there is going to be any differentiation, come clean and assert themselves."

What of Col. Selway--Courier . . . "Be Patient with Us!"--Patterson

WASHINGTON—When told by The Courier that it was believed to be general Army policy that whenever a superior lost the respect and cooperation of his subordinates, the superior was removed from command, and asked why Colonel Selway was still in command of the 477th Bombardment Group at Freeman Field, Under-Secretary of War Patterson, in his regular Thursday press conference said that this was the same question he had been asked in a different form last week.

Referring to the report, still withheld, of the Inspector General's department, he said that nothing had been decided in the Freeman Field case.

"You will just have to be patient with us," he added.

Protests made to Stimson over mistreatment of 447th

Los Angeles Tribune - Calif.

NEW YORK—Despite the fact that it has been activated for more than a year and a quarter, that its Negro officers each have on a average more than 700 flying hours to their credit, that the group has been alerted for overseas duty, the 447th Bombardment Group's Negro officers are still being kept without any command fuctions, and deliberately so, it was charged this week by the NAACP in a letter to Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson.

No Negro officer exercises any command function, all positions requiring such authority in each of the four squadrons have been filled by white personnel, the letter stated. Complaints from men in the group and the wholesale arrest of 101 Negro officers for 'trespassing' on a 'white only' officers' club on the post touched off the NAACP investigation of conditions at Freeman Field, Seymour, Ind., where the 447th is stationed at present. 4-30-45

The investigation was made by Leslie Perry, NAACP, Washington bureau, and his report was the basis of the letter of protest. According to Perry, the 447th has boiled with dissatisfaction almost since the beginning. For more than a year it has tried diligently for an investigation of the manner in which it has been commanded. In particular, most of the 447's bitterness has stemmed from the unending, humiliating policy of keeping "Negroes in their place," constantly enforced by commanding officers Col. Robt. R. Selway and Maj. Gen. Frank O. P. Hunter. 4-30-45

The cup of bitterness overran last week with the arrest of 101 of the 447th's Negro officers and the contemplated arrest of more for entering Freeman Field's 'white' officers' club against the specific orders of the C.O.'s.

NAACP's letter of protest demanded immediate, straight-forward, and thorough-going investigation of Col. Selway and Maj. Gen. Hunter, their discriminatory policies which conflict with the recent War Department directive banning post segregation, the obviously unfair denial of command positions for Negro officers, the release of the arrested officers, and dismissal of contemplated charges against others.

The letter was signed by NAACP secretary Walter White, who in closing stated that "for violation of regulations and policies . . ." the commanding officers should be subjected to appropriate disciplinary action.

Two Of Three Accused Godman Field Officers Freed By Court-Martial In One Day; Terry's Trial Tuesday

Journal and Guide, Norfolk, Va.

Special to Journal and Guide

GODMAN FIELD, Ky.—2nd Lt. Shirley R. Clinton, of Camden, N. J., and 2nd Lt. Marsden Thompson, of Los Angeles, two of the three accused 477th Composite Group officers in the "infamous" Freeman Field officers's club incident, were acquitted of all charges and specifications in a court martial trial here at Godman Field on Monday.

The third officer, 2nd Lt. Roger Terry of Los Angeles, was not tried Monday and was to be tried when the court reconvened on Tuesday, at 1 p. m. 7-7-45

The general court convened at 8 a. m. Monday with Col. B. O. Davis Jr., new commanding officer of the 477th Composite Fighter-Bomber Group, as the president of the court. The defense preemptorily challenged Col. Davis and he was excused from the court. Captain George L. Knox, the senior officer, became president. 7-7-45

Also challenged by the trial judge advocate was the presence of Captain Charles R. Stanton on the court. He was excused by Col. Davis.

CIVILIAN COUNSEL

The two officers, who had been confined to quarters for 88 days following their arrest April 5, along with 160 other Negro officers for attempting to enter an officers club which the white command had tried to set aside for the exclusive use of white officers, were defended by two civilian attorneys in addition to their own Army defense counsel. The civilian lawyers were: Theodore Berry, of Cincinnati, and Harold Tyler of Chicago.

The hearings for these two men on charges of violating the 64th and 68th articles of war were held in open court with a packed courtroom and representatives of the press on hand.

SEPERATE TRIAL

Lt. Terry was charged with of war and is to be tried separ- of war and is to be tried seperately. A bomber pilot, he is not actually an officer of the 477th. He is a replacement pilot undergoing training in the combat crew training squadron which was Squadron "E" of the 118th Base Service unit. This unit was transferred to Walterboro Air Field in South Carolina immediately after Col. Davis assumed command at Godman.

The charges against all three men had been instituted by Col. Robert R. Selway Jr., who was commanding officer of the 477th and Godman Field before Col. Davis took over both commands.

The first witness called was 1st Lt. Joseph E. Rogers, white, who was acting as assistant provost marshal at Freman Field on April 5 with orders to prevent the entrance of trainee personnel and non-members to the officers club. This order was issued by Col. Selway in violation of a specific War Department directive, signed by Major General Ulio, Army adjutant general which provided that no discrimination should be shown in the use of recreational facilities on an Army post.

Lt. Rogers' testimony was followed by that of Major Andrew M. White, also white, who was club officer at the time of the incident at Freeman.

His testimony was followed by Captain Anthony Chiappe, commanding officer of "E" squadron and a witness to the alleged incident. 7-7-45

MOVE FOR DISMISSAL

At the conclusion of the testimony by the prosecution witnesses, the defense moved for a dismissal of the charges alleging that the trial judge advocate had failed to prove, by his witnesses, the charges as set forth. The motion for dismissal was denied and the defense proceeded with its case.

The defense called as its first witnesses 1st Lt. William F. Parks Jr., and Lt. Col. John B. Pattison Jr., deputy group commander at the time of the alleged offense.

A noon recess was taken and the court reconvened at 1 p. m. Lt. Col. Pattison was recalled first. He was followed by Col. Selway. Lt. Col. Pattison was recalled again.

FELLOW OFFICERS TAKE STAND

Following his testimony, fellow officers of the accused testified as to the happenings of the day of the incident.

Lts. Clinton and Thompson testified in their own behalf. The court took the evidence under advisement at 4:48 p. m.

The court's verdict acquitted the two officers of all charges and specifications.

BULLETIN!

FORT KNOX, Ky.—(Special)—Two of the men under charges have been acquitted by the all-Negro Court Martial, over which Col. Benj. O. Davis Jr., presided. They are: Lieuts. Marsden Thompson and Rodger Terry, both of Los Angeles, Calif.

7-6-45

GODMAN FIELD, Ky.—Lieutenants Marsden Thompson, Shirley Clinton and Roger Terry, the three Negro officers of the 477th Bombardment Group being held here for entering a white officers' club will be represented by the NAACP in a court martial trial, Monday, July 2. Attorney Theodore M. Berry, president of the Cincinnati branch NAACP will defend the men who are charged on the following four counts with violation of the 64th Article of war:

(1) Disobeying lawful command of the superior officer who ordered them not to enter the Officers' Club.

(2) Offering violence to a superior officer by the use of physical force when such officer was carrying out his duties.

(3) Disobeying a lawful command by a superior officer to leave the club.

The officers were originally confined with 98 others at Freeman Field, Seymour, Indiana. Release of the latter group however, was effected after investigation at the field and vigorous protests to the War Department on the part of the NAACP and other groups.

First Lieutenant William Robert Ming, JAG, of Chicago, Illinois, a former Assistant Attorney General for the State of Illinois, will be the law member of the court.

A graduate of the University of Chicago Law School, and a member of the Order of Crof. National Honorary Legal Society, Lieutenant Ming was designated as Base Legal Officer for Godman Field on June 23. 7-6-45

Verdict Clears Negro Officer

P.M. N.Y. 7-5-45

Lt. Roger Terry, of Los Angeles, last of Negro officers to be tried on charges of disobedience in connection with their attempt to enter a white officers' club at Freeman Field, Ind., last April, has been cleared by court-martial at Goodman Field, Fort Knox, Ky.

The all-Negro courtmartial at the same time found Terry guilty of "offering violence to a military police officer." He faces a $150 fine on this charge.

Two other lieutenants were acquitted earlier in the week in a similar trial and 98 others, detained after the incident, were released earlier after a protest to the War Dept. by the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People which assisted in the defense at the Louisville trials. 7-5-45

Third Officer Convicted in Negro Court Martial

Chicago Daily Tribune

Fort Knox, Ky., July 4—Second Lt. Roger Terry, Los Angeles, Cal., the last of three Negro army air force officers tried before a general court martial at Goodman field, was found guilty of offering violence to a military policeman and was fined $150. He was acquitted of a second charge of disobedience of a direct order. The two other Negro officers, 2d Lt. Marsden Thompson, Los Angeles, Cal., and Shirley Clinton, Camden, N. J., yesterday were acquitted of charges of disobeying a direct order. 7-5-45

Morale Of 447th Revealed As Low

Atlanta World 4-28-45

Atlanta, Ga.

SEYMOUR, Ind. — (ANP)—High officers of the U. S. Army air force were charged with sponsoring race hatred that has resulted in the arrest of 162 Negro flyers here at Freedman field. Negro pilots, members of the 477th Bombardment group, who have signed pledges that they will not again try to enter white officers clubs, statements said to have been prepared by white supremacy proponents, are regretting they were not among the 162 that refused "to accept Nazism here" and point a finger of contempt at Col. Robert Selway for permitting such an undemocratic practice against American soldiers.

FORCED PLEDGES

Statements on the forced pledges read, "I understand what I am doing." One Negro officer attempted to amend it to read, "I do not understand what I am doing." He was prevailed upon to sign another unaltered pledge instead.

General Arnold, the men charge, is aware of the whole situation. Some say the head of America's air forces condones jimcrow principles by pointing out that he had taken no definite stand against "the outrageous situation."

Meanwhile, the Negro airmen who refused to sign the prepared pledges are to enter white officers clubs are being detained. Some will be castigated as "leaders" on a frame-up mutiny charge, the men here predict. The bulk of them will be freed. That is the system of intimidation employed against Negroes in the armed forces when they defy jimcrow, they say.

CLUB NOW CLOSED

The white officers' club, the superficial bone of contention that led up to the publicized mass arrest is now closed pending a decision in an investigation by the war department. Newspapermen are barred but it was learned that a party of officers from Washington, including a general, has already visited the field. 4-28-45

The 477th Bombardment group may now be considered veterans in the fight against army jimcrow. They faced the same anti-Negro situation at Selfridge Field, Mich., and were ousted to Goodman Field, Ky., and Walterboro, S. C., reputed to be the two worst jimcrow spots in the country.

"That was the army's race haters way of teaching us not to protest racial discrimination and segregation," one of the pilots observed.

The morale of the men is decidedly low. Some of them are said to have been in training for as long as three years and are rated as accomplished pilots, navigators and bombardiers. But their depressed morale is keeping them from overseas duty. 4-28-45

TENSION MISSING

The high racial tensions that fill the air around Freedman field here is totally missing in the civilian section where whites and Negroes live peacably together in the huge government Ridgeview housing project. Negroes occupy 22 of the 50 one-story apartment buildings. The buildings are together. Whites occupy their own chester. The whites are composed of army families and civilian workers while the bulk of the Negro residents are officers and their families.

They share the project's recreational facilities but there is a tendency for the races not to mix. There has been no trouble, according to the residents and housing officials.

Journal & Guide 6-23-45

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Shortly after taking off from Gunter Field, Ala., Wednesday morning of last week seven members of the 477th Bombardment Group were killed near here when their B-25 training plane crashed in a swamp.

Members of the group were on a return flight to their base at Godman Field, Ky., when the crash occurred. It was the first 477th fatal accident for the group.

The dead included four flight officers and three enlisted men. They are:

F/O Denny C. Jefferson, North Little Rock, Ark.; F/O Edward Glover, Chicago, Ill.; F/O Raymond F. Noches, Junction City, Kans.; F/O Charles E. Wilson, Chicago; Cpl. Henry H. Valentine, Kansas City, Mo.; Cpl. Luther A. Cox, Jackson, Ga., and Pvt. James R. Ewing, Springfield, Ohio. 6-23-45

The lone survivor of the crash, Cpl. Selwyn Wilson was said to be in serious condition at the Gunter Field Hospital but he is expected to recover.

The victims were all members of the 619th Bombardment Squadron except F/O Jefferson and Pvt. Ewing who are attached to 118th Base Unit of E.W. Squadron.

New York, N.Y. age 7-24-45

FORT KNOX, Ky. — Three Negro Army flyers were killed Sunday and two others were injured when the B-25 Mitchell bomber they were flying crashed into the Ohio River near Madison, Ind., Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., commanding officer of the 477th Composite Group, announced.

The dead were identified as Lieutenant Samuel A. Black, of Plainfield, N. J., pilot; Second Lieut. Stephen Hotsec, of New York City, co-pilot; and Flight Officer Glen W. Bullien, of Los Angeles, Calif., navigator.

Three officers of the all-Negro 477th Composite Group, Godman Field, were killed and two crewmen were injured when the B-25 Mitchell bomber in which they were flying crashed into the Ohio River at 10:05 a.m. yesterday approximately five miles west of Vevay, Ind., near Madison, Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., base commanding officer, announced.

The dead were First Lt. Samuel A. Black, Plainfield, N. J., pilot; Second Lt. Stephen Hotesse, New York, N. Y., copilot, and F/O Glen W. Pulliam, Los Angeles, Cal., navigator.

One Swims to Shore. Norfolk, Va

The two airmen who were thrown clear of the plane when it crashed were Cpl. Isaiah Grice, Jacksonville, Fla., engineer-gunner, and Pvt. Napoleon Gibbon, Chattanooga, Tenn. One of the fliers swam to shore where he was able to obtain assistance, Godman Field authorities reported. Both survivors, now under treatment at Godman Field hospital, were too dazed from shock last night to give details of the accident.

Colonel Davis said the crew was on a combat training flight when the crash occurred. A board of Army officers will be named to investigate and determine the cause of the crash, he said.

2 Bodies Recovered.

Joe Brady, a diver from Mark-and Dam, recovered two of the bodies. He said the third was still in the plane which could not be entered becaused of its wrecked condition. Parts of the wrecked plane floated away.

Members of the Coast Guard and Indiana State Police, and some U. S. engineers and workers at the Jefferson Proving Ground went to the scene of the wreck to aid in the rescue and salvage work.

3 Godman Field Officers Meet Death In Crash

Philadelphia Phil. Pa. Bulletin

GODMAN FIELD, Ky.—(ANP)— Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., commanding officer of Godman field, announced Sunday that an army twin-engine Mitchell bomber crashed killing three officers, members of the five-man crew. The plane was on a combat training flight and crashed while flying over the Ohio river approximately five miles west of Vevay, Ind., near Madison, Ky.

Two crew members were thrown clear of the wreckage and escaped with minor injuries. 7-21-45

A board of qualified army officers will investigate and determine the exact cause.

The dead were 1st Lt. Samuel A. Black, pilot, Plainfield, N. J., 2nd Lt. Stephen Hotesse, co-pilot, New York, and F/O Glen W. Pulliam, navigator, Los Angeles. Phil. Pa

Bomber Pilots Headed For Pacific

Chicago Defender. 6-30-45

By JAMES APPERSON
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

GODMAN FIELD, Ky.—The promise of a chance to blast Japan's key cities from B-25 bombers under a Negro commander skyrocketed morale throughout the 477th Bombardment Group here this week.

The 477th fliers, previously excluded from combat service, despite 300 flying hours, were placed under the command of Col. B. O. Davis Jr., in an impressive ceremony here last Thursday. At that time Lt. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, acting air corps commander and principal speaker at the installation ceremony, told the men that they would be sent to the Pacific air base closest to the Japanese homeland late this summer or early in the fall. Others present as Davis assumed command were Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis Sr., of the Inspector General's Department, father of the 477th's new C.O.; Brig. Gen. Edgar Glenn, chief of staff, 1st Air Force; Col. Robert Selway Jr., whom Davis succeeded and Truman Gibson Jr., civilian aide to Secretary of War.

According to Gen. Eaker, the 477th will be merged with part of Col. Davis' old overseas command, the 332nd Mustang Fighter Group, to form the 477th Composite Group, flying B-25 bombers. Slated to make the Pacific trip with the group is the all-Negro 387th Air Service Group, also stationed at Godman, which will handle the supply, administration and maintenance end of the assignment.

It is expected that Col. Davis will draw heavily on 332nd personnel for his staff officers. A report that the 32-year-old Davis will take over as base commander in July has not been confirmed. Col. Selway, who, as commander of the 477th, consistently opposed the fight waged by its Negro officers and men against discrimination not only here but also at Freeman Field, Ind., is the present base commander.

The appointment of Davis, Gen. Eaker's "personal choice in whom he has every confidence," was a definite shot in the arm for the group's morale. The men, their nerves frayed by the "overseer" methods of Selway, have a great deal of faith in the determined-visaged Davis who personally led his 332nd fighters on 20 missions in the Mediterranean.

Even the 101 officers, who had their military records needlessly stained with arrest for entering a "white" officers' club at Freeman Field, were optimistic about the future of the group now that the War Department's action seems to indicate "soldierly" treatment. The cases of three of the officers, still held in arrest because of the Freeman Field incident, are expected to be passed upon some time this week by the new commander.

Throughout the Kentucky camp, the 477th pilots, held so long in combat check, even though they have more practice flying time than most combat fliers, welcomed the opportunity to meet the enemy so long denied them because of their color.

Father and son hold high ranks together

Los Angeles Tribune - Calif.

(Exclusive to the Tribune)

GODMAN FIELD, Ky.—In ceremonies held here Thursday, Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., former commander of the 332nd Fighter group in Italy, was promoted to brigadier general, to become the second Negro in the history of the Army to attain so high a rank.

Earlier in the week, General Davis had assumed command of the 477th Bombardment group, in training here, replacing Colonel Robert Selway, white, whose policies had precipitated the scandalous arrest of 110 flying officers who refused to submit to jim crow treatment at the 447th's previous base, Freeman Field, Ind.

West Point trained General Davis is the son of Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, Sr., 69-year-old regular Army man who rose through the ranks to become the nation's highest ranking Negro officer. The two form the only father-son brigadier general team in the Army.

Returned from Europe to command the 477th which will shortly be shipped to the Pacific theatre, General Davis, it is reported in reliable circles, may soon hold the position of highest ranking active Negro Army officer by himself. There are rumors current that his father, serving now in the inspector general's office, will retire a second time, this time making the retirement stick. He was recalled into active service early in the war after he had previously withdrawn.

REARED ON ARMY POSTS

Young General Davis, reared on Army posts and trained in Army traditions by his father, was graduated from West Point in 1936 and promoted to first lieutenant in 1939. He was elevated to captain in 1940, to major in 1942 and to lieutenant colonel the same day. He was promoted to colonel June 1, 1944, while leading the 332nd overseas.

Chicago, Ill.

His first assignment following graduation was at Fort Benning, Ga., where he served with the 24th Infantry until 1937. Later he was professor of military science and tactics at Tuskegee, remaining there until 1941 when he was made an aide to his father at Fort Riley, Kas.

In May, 1941, he was assigned to the Air Corps and graduated with the first class of Negro pilots from Tuskegee Army Air Field. He took command of the 99th Fighter squadron that same year, 1942.

7-6-45

Colonel Davis led the 99th through the Tunisian campaign before being recalled to the United States in 1943 to take command of the 332nd Fighter group at Selfridge Field, Mich. Under his command, the 332nd went overseas in 1944 and he commanded it throughout the Italian campaign, during which the group registered 105 victories over German aircraft, destroying over 300 more on the ground, and winning high praise as an escort group for bombers of the 15th Air Force.

Three Negro Flyers Killed in Plane Crash

New York, N.Y.

People Voice

Special

FORT KNOX, Ky.—The first stunning tragedy since Col. Benjamin O. Davis took over command of the 477th Bombardment Group at Godman Field occurred Sunday when three of his flyers—one of them from New York—were killed, and two others injured when the B-25 Mitchell Bomber they were flying crashed into the Ohio River near Madison, Ind.

The news that Lt. Samuel A. Black of Plainfield, N. J., pilot, Second Lt. Stephen Hotesse of New York City, co-pilot, and Flight Officer Glen W. Bullien of Los Angeles, navigator, met their deaths in a test flight Sunday, threw a pall over the field when Col. Davis made the announcement. The commanding officer, himself a crack flyer who had often flown with his men, was visibly moved when he announced the tragedy.

Although the outfit is not all-Negro—some of its higher ranking officers being white—it is expected that white officers will gradually be replaced by Negroes in keeping with the Army jimcro policy of not allowing white officers to serve under Negroes.

The appointment of Col. Davis, however, was looked upon among progressive circles throughout the country, as a healthy sign, since he was given more authority than any other Negro appointee in the Army Air Force.

His appointment come upon the heels of the conflict between Col. Selway and Negro flyers at Freeman Field in Seymour, Ind., in April, when 101 officers of the 477th Group were arrested and later released, for refusing to sign a paper, issued by Selway, stating that they would not attempt to use an officers' club, which, they contended, had been set aside for white officer personnel, in violation of War Department regulation. The last of the three officers where cleared last week by an all-Negro tribunal.

These officers were members of the court at the beginning of general court-martial proceedings against 2nd Lts. Marsden A. Thompson of Los Angeles and Shirley R. Clinton of Camden, N.J., at Godman Field, Ky., last week. Col. B. O. Davis, Jr. (third from right), commanding officer of of the 477th Composite Group and of the field, was excused on a challenge, as was Capt. Charles R. Stanton (not shown), and Capt. George L. Knox (on Colonel Davis's right) served as president of the court. Also shown are 1st Lt. James Y. Carter, Capt. Fitzroy Newsom, Capt. James T. Wiley, 1st Lt. William R. Ming, Jr., law member, and Capt. John H. Duren. Lieutenants Thompson and Clinton were exonerated of charges growing out of their refusal to obey an order not to enter an officers' club at Freeman Field, Ind., illegally reserved for white officers. So was 2nd Lt. Roger C. Terry of Los Angeles, tried later, but he was fined$$150 for alegedly shoving the white military police officer who sought to bar them.

AFRO-AMERICAN 7-14-45 Balt., Md.

By HERBERT M. FRISBY

AFRO War Correspondent

GODMAN FIELD, Ky. — The case of the government vs Second Lts. Marsden A. Thompson of Los Angeles, and Shirley R. Clinton of Camden, N.J., members of the 477th Composite Group and tried jointly for violations of the 64th and 68th Articles of War, presented several interesting aspects, namely:

1. The charges were preferred by a former commanding officer of the Composite Group, Col. Robert R. Selway Jr., (white), now succeeded by Col. Benjamin O Davis Jr.
2. This historic meeting of the court occurred on the second day of Colonel Davis's actual command of the 477th.

Issues Clearly Defined

3. The issues were clearly defined—the prosecution contending that an order of a superior officer must be obeyed and that's all; with the defense charging that obedience to an order is justified only if same is legal, basing its arguments on the interpretation by the codefendants of a War Department circular (210-10) which prohibits racial discrimination in officers' clubs and recreational facilities at Army posts.

Personnel of the Court

THE COURT — This included Capt. George L. Knox as president, James T. Wiley, John H. Duren, William T. Yates, Elmore M. Kennedy, Fitzroy Newsum and First Lts. William R. Ming as law member and James Y. Carter.

Colonel Davis, commanding officer of the 477th and Capt. Charles R. Stanton were excused by peremptory challenges from defense and prosecution council, respectively. 7-14-45

Capt. James W. Redden and First Lt. Charles R. Hall served as trial judge advocates, while defense counsel included Lts. William T. Coleman and Edward Nichols, military representatives, and Theodore M. Berry, Cincinnati, and M. Tyler of Chicago, attorney.

History of the Case

THE CASE—The incident referred to occured on the night of April 5, 1945, when a group of colored officers sought and were denied entrance to an officers' club at Freeman Field, Semour, Ind.

The prosecution first presented First Lt. Joseph D. Rogers, who testified that he was assigned as assistant provost marshall to guard the entrance of the club to keep non-members and trainees from entering.

He said that when the accused men and 17 others attempted to enter, he gave them direct order not to enter the club; that Lieutenant Thompson asked why he could not enter.

He told Lieutenant Thompson to step outside and he would tell him, he said, adding, that his explanation was that he was under orders to keep trainees out and that Lieutenant Thompson then pushed him aside and entered the club along with the others.

2nd Prosecution Witness

Major Andrew M. White, second witness for the prosecution, testified that he ordered the group of officers (colored) to leave the club and upon their refusal, placed them in arrest and ordered them confined to their quarters.

Therefore, he said, the other men quietly left the club. On cross-examination he denied saying to the group, including Lieutenants Thompson and Clinton, "Let's be frank fellows, the club isn't open to colored officers."

Charge Bias Planned

THE DEFENSE—Defense counsel announced in their opening statement that they would show through the testimony of their witnesses that there was a plan emanating from the former commanding officer of this unit to exclude certain officers from certain facilities of the post in direct violation of:

1. War Department Order 210-10, paragraph 19, which prohibits discrimination in officers' clubs on account of race.
2. A. G. letter 353.8, March 5, 1943, to the effect that all personnel, regardless of race, shall enjoy equal facilities at all Army posts.
3. That contrary to Army regulations, certain officers were refused service at certain mess halls and clubs at Freeman Field.
4. That the accused would testify that they acted under the assumption they were base personnel and entitled to all facilities.
5. That the orders given by Lt. Rogers and Captain White were illegal.

Protest Letter Cited

First Lt. William J. Parks, Asbury Park, testified that on March 9, 1945, he addressed a letter to Colonel Selway, protesting against the exclusion of colored officers from the officers' club, and asked for clarification of the policy with respect to its use by officer personnel at the post.

He added that he was later ordered to attend a meeting for all-colored officers at Freeman Field; that Lt. Col. John B. Patterson, former deputy commander of the 477th, presided and discussed certain memorando alleged to have been made in reply to Lieutenant Park's letter of request for clarification.

Selway Insults Court

Colonel Selway, former commanding officer, when called before the court, avoided saluting the court as required by Army Regulations. He saluted the flag. His testimony was characterized by evasiveness and frequent exceptions to the defense's questioning procedures.

He admitted that he had ordered his subordinate officers to enforce all standing orders; that he was aware of Order 210-10; that his orders relative to the use of buildings were positive and carried no negative restrictions.

Colonel Patterson, recalled and questioned as to how "trainee" is defined, left the impression that "a trainee is anybody called a trainee."

The testimony of the other witnesses for the defense was generally that:

Summary of Testimony

1. The colored officers were ordered not to enter the club.
2. They did enter the club.
3. They interpreted the denial of entrance as discrimination and a violation of W. D. Order 210-10.
4. The officers left the club after being ordered under arrest.
5. There was no violence on the part of the officers accused.
6. The officers did not resist arrest.

Under Arrest for 89 Days

Those testifying to the above were Second Lts. Robert S. Payton, Coleman A. Young, Clifford C. Jarrett, F/O Harold Storey, the accused, Second Lts. Clinton and Thompson.

The accused testified that they had been in arrest and confined to quarters for 89 days before trial and that they were notified of trial June 25.

The defense rested its case; the prosecution waived opening argument. The defense then announced waiver of closing argument, thereby preventing any closing argument by the prosecution.

The verdict of the court: That Second Lts. Thompson and Clinton are acquitted of all charges and specifications.

GODMAN FIELD, Ky.—(ANP)—The last of the three flying officers, involved in a racial incident that grew out of a jim-crow officers' club at Freeman Field, Seymour, Ind., last spring, was found guilty of "offering violence" by a general court-martial here last week and fined $150.

The officer, Second Lieut. Roger Terry of Los Angeles, Calif., was acquitted on the first specification and found guilty on the second. On the guilty charge, he is to forfeit $50 a month for three months, beginning July and ending in September.

"SMOOTH TESTIMONY"

His pals, Second Lieuts. Marsden Thompson, Los Angeles, Calif., and Shirley Clinton, Camden, N. J., have already been cleared of charges of disobeying a direct order. According to John H. Foranfle, white court reporter, who took the testimony at the trials, the proceedings were the "smoothest conducted" in his memory.

Other courts had more experienced men, he said, but this one had "a good legal officer" in Lieut. William Robert Ming of Chicago, which is "a great help in any trial."

The three officers, attached to the 477th bombardment group, were among those who attempted to visit a club the commanding officer had set aside for white officers.

Both Col. B. O. Davis Jr., present commanding officer of the 477th composite group, and Capt. Charles R. Stanton, were excused from the all-Negro board of officers.

DAY LONG TESTIMONY

Lieuts. Marsden Thompson and Shirley Clinton, the defendants, were charged with violating the fifty-fourth Article of War by inciting a melee through jostling the provost marshal in an attempt to enter the officers club. In addition, there were two violations of the sixty-eighth Article of War ~~[illegible]~~ against them, which included refusal to obey a direct order of the superior officer and refusal to go under arrest when ordered.

The board reached its verdicts after an hour and forty-five minutes of deliberation following a day of testimony by Lieut. William J. Parks Jr., Lieut. Col. John B. Pattison Jr., deputy group commander at the time of the alleged offense, and Lieut. Col. Robert R. Selway Jr., former group and base commander of Godman Field, Ky. and Freeman Field, Ind., who has since been replaced by Colonel Davis.

Others who testified beside the accused were Maj. Andrew M. White, club officer at the time of the incident; Capt. Anthony Chiappe, commanding officer of the "L" squadron, and a witness to the alleged incident, and Lieut. Joseph E. Rogers, who was acting as assistant provost marshal, with orders to prevent the entrance of trainee personne; and non- members to the officer's club.

CAPTAIN KNOX PRESIDENT

Defense of the jim-crow officers club was based on the army policy to keep students and instructors apart while off duty. All Negro officers were classed as students.

Capt. George L. Knox was president of the court.

Colonel Davis later was dismissed as a member of the court, after a challenge, and Captain Knox succeeded him as president. Thompson and Clinton were acquitted of all charges and specifications growing out of a controversy over use of certain officers' club facilities at Freeman Field, Seymour, Ind. The third officer tried by the court was fined $150. He is 2nd Lieut. Roger C. Terry, Los Angeles.—Army Air Forces Photo.

Colored Pilot Has Now Completed 50 Missions!

LUCKY LANDING SAVES LIFE—

Veteran of more than 300 hours of operational flying in Italy and 50 missions as a bomber escort, Lt. John H. Leahr, Cincinnati's first Negro fighter pilot to return home, smilingly asserted Monday he felt he was living "on borrowed time."

"My closest call came right over our own field in Italy," said Lt. Leahr 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Leahr, 5409 Ward Street, Madisonville.

2-8-45

"I was coming back from an escort mission when my P-39 ran out of gas and the engine conked out 400 feet over the field," Lt. Leahr stated. "It sounds fantastic, but I made a turn, came in and landed. Ten times out of ten when your engine quits at that height your plane goes straight down and if you try to turn you fall off in a spin. I was lucky that day."

Lt. Leahr, who is with the Fifteenth Air Force, enlisted in November, 1942, won his wings at Tuskegee, Ala., and got fighter pilot training at Selfridge Field, Mich. He went overseas early in 1944 and was first attached to the Twelfth Air Force. He flew costal and harbor patrols, strafing missions at Anzio and Cassino, and escort for ship convoys. After a few months he and his squadron were attached to the Fifteenth Air Force and began their escort work.

2-8-45

(Lt. William T. Gilbert, Hyde Park, bomber pilot in the Fifteenth, whose story appeared in Friday's Times-Star, said the All-Negro squadron to which Lt. Leahr was attached, flew escort for him on many missions and did a wonderful job.)

July 25 stands out vividly in Lt. Leahr's memory.

"Eight of us were attacked by 50 ME-109's. We had been watching the vapor trails of enemy planes above us and keeping them off the bombers when the next thing we knew 20 m. m. bullets were bursting in our formation. They came from planes which had sneaked in below us and we had failed to see them because they were not leaving vapor trails," Lt. Leahr said.

"The formation split up," Lt. Leahr continued, "and I found myself with another man right in the middle. He shot down one and hit another, but my guns froze and an enemy plane got on my tail. I turned into him and he broke off, but my guns were still frozen and by that time the formation was out of sight. I fought my way out by bluffing, climbing to 33,000 feet and opened that Mustang up."

Lt. Leahr has been over Bucharest, Greece, Rumania, Hungary, Poland, Austria, Germany, Yugoslavia and the Ploesti oil fields six times.

"That flak is really tough around Ploesti," he said. 2-8-45

On one occasion Lt. Leahr and even of his squadron mates encountered a German jet-propelled plane.

"We were above it and all eight of us made a pass at it, but never got near enough for a shot," he said, adding that he thought the jet-propelled plane could do approximately 00 miles an hour.

Wearer of the Air Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters and the European theatre ribbon with three battle stars, Lt. Leahr is a graduate of Withrow High School and had attended Wilberforce University for a year and the University of Cincinnati for a year before enlsting in the Air Force. Followng his furlough, he will report to Atlantic City for reassignment.—Times Star. 2-8-45

Father of Pilot Who Died Answers Negro-Baiter

Daily Worker N.Y.

2-8-45

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 7.—Earl C. Knowlton, Anniston, Ala., businessman who demanded that the War Department ground all Negro pilots because his son died in a midair collision with a plane piloted by a Negro, has been answered by the Negro flyer's father.

Knowlton, in a bitter letter to the War Department, expressed resentment of the government's "apparent determination to raise colored men overnight to a place in civilization to which he is as yet unprepared to assume."

2-8-45

The War Department announced just last week the promotion of 17 officers of the all-Negro fighter group in Italy, one to the rank of captain and the others to first lieutenant. One of the lieutenants, Purnell J. Goodenough, is from Knowlton's state of Alabama. Their squadron is headed by Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., West Pointer and one of the youngest of that rank in the Army.

The answer to Knowlton was written by Luther M. Johnson, of 1900 Centre Ave., Pittsburgh, whose son, Flight Officer Robert M. Johnson, piloted the plane which crashed into young Knowlton's over South Carolina Dec. 5.

"Did the tragic death of your son mean more to you than an excuse to give voice to your prejudice against colored people?" Johnson asked in his letter to Knowlton. He added:

"It was unfortunate that your son was killed in that fateful crash. My son was killed, too. Your sorrow and your anguish cannot possibly be greater than mine. And while my heart goes out to you as one sorrowful father to another, I deeply resent any statement that you may make that atempts to cast reflection on my people.

"During the past three years airplanes crashed and collisions have occurred in various parts of this country almost every week, with no colored fliers involved. A collision in South Carolina with one colored flier could not possibly change the picture.

"What right have you to intimate that either of the pilots involved in the fatal crash at Waterboro, S. C. on Dec. 5, was more to blame than the other? Has anyone accused your son of being responsible? Do you think that he stands accused to the extent that his father needs to create an alibi for him?"

JOHNSON ENLISTED

Johnson recounted that his son was graduated from high school at 16 and that, as soon as he was old enough, he enlisted in and was accepted for training as a cadet by the Air Corps, "not because he was colored but because he had the physical, mental and educational qualifications to make a pilot."

Johnson admitted that his son's death caused a sorrow "almost too much to bear," but declared:

"If his death helps to focus the attention of the world on the biased and prejudiced bigots who avail themselves of every opportunity to undermine the foundation of our democratic government by their injection of race discrimination, and if these race haters are eliminated or the effects of their venom lessened by this war, then I shall feel that the death of my son was not in vain." 2-8-45

The letter concluded:

"Mr. Knowlton, I doubt if the War Department would give a second thought to your leter, except for the fact that it smells very strongly of an attempt to sabotage the war effort by raising a ridiculous race issue during a critical stage of the war and supplying Herr Hitler and his gang with more material for propaganda about strife in the democratic countries.

"We loyal Americans can thank God that you belong to a group as sure to vanish from American soil as America is to win this war."

Georgian routs German planes with nerve only

Tribune Calif. Los Angeles 2-26-45

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—Two Jerry fighter pilots will have a lot of explaining to do if word ever gets back to Luftwaffe headquarters of how Captain Henry B. Perry of Thomasville, Ga., won his Distinguished Flying Cross over Udine, Northern Italy.

The P-51 pilot, operations officer of the 99th Fighter Squadron, was returning from a bomber escort mission, his guns inoperative and useless.

Down below, he spied two crippled Liberators, readying for an attack by two FW-190's, which were hovering overhead.

In he roared, right between the two FW-90's. He turned on them, lining up his useless .50's on them.

They did what he'd frevently prayed they'd do, turned tail and ran. 2-26-45

HOME—Capt. Charles E. McGee, P-51 Flight Leader in the 332nd Fighter Squadron, spent Christmas in Chicago with his wife, after 12 months in the Italian Theatre where he completed 7 combat missions, totaling over 300 hours. Three other members of his family are in the armed services. His father, Chaplain Louis A. McGee is with the 95th Engineer Regiment in Belgium. His brother, 1st Lt. Louis McGee, Jr., was recently honorably discharged after serving in the South Pacific, and his sister, Sgt. Ruth Parker, is a WAC recruiter. 2-26-45

Smith, a fighter pilot from Hungary, when his group got Philadelphia, destroyed fifteen credit for erasing eighty-three Nazi fighters on the ground during fighter planes before they could take to the air, explained Smith, who is here awaiting reassigning 111 combat missions.

A former Temple University student, Lieutenant Smith flew most of his sorties escorting 15th Air Force heavy bombers on raids over enemy territory. It was on one of them that he had his closest call with enemy fire.

Decide to Strafe

"Coming back from a demolition job in South Germany," he said, "we left the bombers over Lake Balaton, Hungary. Starting out to patrol, our squadron leader, noticing a Nazi airfield directly below, decided we would give them a fast strafing. 2-10-45

"We ran into a terrific anti-aircraft barrage. About 25 chunks of steel tore into my plane. One piece of flak went into my engine. By the time I got out, my fighter looked like a sieve."

Marines On Iwo Jima Threaten Second Air Strip

WASHINGTON — (NNPA) — Negro fighter pilots were reported here Monday to have taken part in Sunday's massive 15th Air Force blows against German rail traffic east and north of Munich.

A Negro squadron, led by Captain Edward C. Gleed, of Lawrence, Kansas, shot up two locomotives and destroyed a power station. Sunday's attack, brought the 15th Air Force Fighter Command's total of locomotives this year to 138 destroyed and 140 damaged.

FIRST PLUNGES FORWARD

Meanwhile, U. S. First Army Infantry and armor plunged to within 12 miles of Cologne under drizzling skies Monday and the entire German system defending the Rhine was threatened with collapse.

Lt. General Courtney Hodges wheeled his big guns toward Cologne, while Lt. General George S. Patton's Third Army battled scant and disorganized opposition in the Bitburg vicinity after a surge forward that was reminiscent of the race across France last summer. Long lines of miserable looking gray-clad Germans marched to the rear and enemy captives' quarters. The U. S. Ninth and First Armies swept up 25 or more towns in the drive. The American Third Army raced seven miles forward and reached the Nims river near Bitburg.

NEW RUSSIAN DRIVE

A German military spokesman said Monday that Marshal Constantin Rokossovsky's Second White Russion Army had reached the areas of Hommerstein, 51 miles from the Baltic. The thrust threatened to bisect a 225-mile-long coastal corridor the Germans hold from below Stettin to Elbing, in East Prussia. 2-27-45

Capture of Iwo Jima's second airfield, in the center of the strategic little island, was imminent Monday as three Marine Divisions drove north with considerable air support in an intensified push. The Americans grimly held almost half of the island and were making progress northward.

The Japaneses reported that waves of carrier planes struck Honshu Island Sunday morning and hit metropolitan Tokyo and the Kobe section.

2 Veteran Pilots Hurt in Auto Crash

AFRO-AMERICAN Balt., Md. 2-3-45

RICHMOND, Va.—Veteran of 138 missions as a fighter pilot in Europe without a scratch and winner of the DFC, First Lt. Lee Archer, 25, of NYC, is now in the Richmond Army Air Base Hospital with a broken leg, suffered in an automobile accident.

His friend and fellow fighter pilot, First Lt. Walter Palmer, also of NYC, who has flown more than 100 sorties, is in McGuire General Hospital with a fractured skull, received in the same mishap.

Both were en route from NYC to Tuskegee for resumption of duties with the Army Air Force when the car, driven by Lieutenant Archer, several days ago skidded off the highway, twenty-two miles north of Richmond, and crashed.

Both Members of 332nd

Both were members of the 332nd Fighter Group, commanded by Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., and Lieutenant Archer claims credit for having destroyed four and one-half Nazi planes in the air, with two more unconfirmed and six on the ground.

He attributed the accident to treacherous driving conditions and said he apparently lost control of his vehicle and it left the highway.

They were aided by a white sailor and civilian who were passing the scene and carried them to a nearby house where occupants summoned an ambulance from Richmond.

Brought to St. Philip Hospital, they were later transferred to the two Army hospitals for treatment.

Having participated in some of the hottest engagements of the 332nd, Lieutenant Archer is plainly disgusted about the accident.

"Everything in the world happened to me in Europe," he said, "yet I didn't receive a single scratch. Not even a shrapnel wound. Then I come home and become a victim of an automobile accident."

He recalled that he took part in the mission, led by Colonel Davis, on which eighty-three German planes were destroyed at a Romanian airfield. His squadron discovered this prey, he said.

Won DFC over Hungary

With Capt. Wendell O. Pruitt, of E. St. Louis, Ill., he jumped twelve jerries in the air over Hungary and accounted for three planes in the dog fight. This feat won him the coveted DFC.

In addition to that decoration, Lieutenant Archer holds the air medal and nine oak clusters. He had been assigned to Tuskegee as a flight instructor prior to his injury. He is married.

Holder of the air medal and five oak leaf clusters, Lt. Palmer has been responsible for the destruction of one enemy aircraft. He is also married and father of a four-month-old baby.

The flyers returned to the States in December.

Southern White Asks Ban On Negroes Now Serving In U. S. Army Air Corps

Northwest Herald Seattle Wash. 1-2-45

ANNISTON, Ala. — The South has had enough! Now they want a color line in the sky.

The "sudden elevation" of Negro fighter pilots over Dixie was target for a bitter burst of race hate here this week.

The War Department was asked to bring down the Negro birds by an Anniston business executive whose son was killed in an air collision involving a plane piloted by a colored flier. 1-2-45

Saying that the "percentage" against his son's life was higher with a Negro in the air, the father of the white pilot pleaded with the War Department to end the use of Negro pilots on the grounds that they "are not qualified."

The heartsore but hate-ridden letter, written by Earl C. Knowlton, head of the Anniston water works and circulated by the Associated Press came after Lt. Earl C. Knowlton Jr., pilot of a B-24, and 11 others were killed in addition to the Negro pilot of a pursuit plane in a recent accident near Charleston, S. C.

"With all my heart," Knowlton stated, "I resent our government's apparent determination to raise the Negro overnight, as it were, to a place in the civilization which he is as yet unprepared to assume." 1-2-45

Knowlton said he had no prejudice against Negroes and that Negroes were among the first to come to his home to offer sympathy for his boy's death. He said he was not writing a letter of hate.

"I knew that my boy might have to give his life for his country," Knowlton continued, "but I expected it to accomplish some useful purpose, and not to be sacrificed to the fanatical idea that all men must be allowed to perform on the same level regardless of background qualification."

Knowlton, who has a daughter, Capt. Louise Knowlton, on duty in France with the WAC, said his forefathers fought on opposite sides of the Civil War and added:

"I hold no blame against the Negro who flew a fighter plane into a bomber, killing my boy and 11 others. He flew that plane because he was ordered to do so."

Not Yet Qualified 1-2-45

"It is the expression of the very deep resentment I feel toward the fetishism of our government in its attitude toward an unnatural and impossible sudden elevation of the Negro to duties he is not yet qualified to perform," Knowlton wrote.

"With rare exceptions, his mind is not prepared to make the split-second decisions which mean life and death in the operation of so swift and so complicated and so deadly a mechanism as an airplane," he continued.

"Some will say that the accident might have happened if a white man had been piloting the fighter plane. That is true. But the percentage against it would have been in my boy's favor," he added.

Ripping the Knowlton letter as a "underhand cut at the whole Negro race," Roy Wilkins, acting secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, quoted the record of Negro pilots.

"We can understand the grief and disappointment of a father who expected that if his son should lose his life in serving his country, it would not be in an accident," Wilkins said.

Records Disprove Racism

"But the record of Negro combatpilots to date in actual combat . . . would seem to prove that Negroes are capable of handling a combat airplane and making split-second decisions at more than 400 miles an hour.

"Mr. Knowlton says his letter is not one of hatred and we believe him so far as his feeling for this one Negro pilot is concerned, but his main thesis, which is that the Negro is still a kind of uncivilized lower animal incapable of adjusting himself to civilization, is an underhand cut at the whole Negro race. 1-2-45

"From the very beginning in 1940, Negro Americans have spent most of their energies struggling to get a chance to fight the enemies of our country, and this incident is just one more of the many that have been used to discourage him and to relegate him to strictly menial and service work in uniform," Wilkins stated.

Courts Martial Held At South Carolina Base

Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

All Involved Had Overseas Service Records

10-19-45

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA) —Sentences imposed.. on three officers by courts martial at the Walterboro Army Air Field, Walterboro, S. C., have been reduced by higher authority.

5 10-12-45

The three officers, who served overseas, are Second Lieuts. Benjamin W. Alston and LeRoy Gilead and First Lieut. Robert O'Neil.

DISOBEDIENCE "CRIME"

Alston was convicted on August 10 of wilful disobedience of a lawful command from his superior officer and absence without leave. He was sentenced to be dismissed from the Army, to forfeit all pay and allowances, and to be confined at hard labor for three years.

The authority which convened the court martial reduced the period of confinement to one year. Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson remitted the forfeitures and suspended the execution of the modified sentence during good behavior.

Gilead was convicted on August 14 of being absent without leave on July 17, violating a standing order by not signing out in the officers' register before leaving the post, and making a false official statement to his superior officer.

TO REPRIMAND 10-19-45

He was sentenced to be dismissed from the Army and to forfeit all pay and allowances. Judge Patterson commuted the sentence to a reprimand and forfeiture of $50 a month of his pay for six months.

O'Neil pleaded guilty to a charge of being absent without leave from July 19 to July 23. He was sentenced to be dismissed from the Army and to forfeit all pay and allowances. The commanding general of the First Air Force at Mitchell, New York, approved only so much of the sentence as provided for a forfeiture of $75 a month for six months. 10-19-45

O'Neil, who was a member of the 332d Fighter Group, wears the Air Medal. He was decorated for meritorious achievement in aerial flight while participating in sustained operational activites against the enemy from July 15 to 24, 1944. He was reported missing in action over France on August 14, 1944, but returned to duty twelve days later and was returned to the United States in September, 1944. His home is in Detroit.

'Eager' Pilot Goes On Bombing Mission Just For Fun Of It, Correspondent Suspects 12-29-45

By THOMAS W. YOUNG

In war men do their duty, most of them without "bitching." It doesn't matter that the job is hazardous, sometimes fatal. A few in every bunch take extra risks because they obey an impulse to do just a little more than is required of them, of because, . . . well, just for the hell of it. In the Army Air Forces such guys are called "eager." The encomium, when applied by a fellow pilot, is more likely to impute ridicule than admiration. "Eager" pilots are not famous for their habit of growing old.

My only clear recollection of an "eager" pilot in the 99th Fighter Squadron during its first three months in combat is the bombing mission that Louis R. Pernell of Germantown, Pa., went on when he had no business to.

FOLLOWS FLIGHT TO TARGET

Purnell, a lieutenant then but a captain now, was a "spare" on the mission assigned the task of bombing and strafing enemy activity reported in the area from Capo Calava to the Straits of Messina, in northeastern Sicily during the waning days of that campaign. A "spare" is an extra pilot who takes off with and trails the formation for five or ten minutes, just in case any of the planes develops mechanical difficulties or for any other reason the pilot drops out and returns to his base. In that event the "spare" or substitute moves into the formation and carries out the mission. 12-29-45

Dutifully, Purnell trailed the 12-plane formation for the accustomed time. Nobody fell out, and it was Purnell's cue to beat it back to his airfield near the southern coast town of Licata. But the former Lincoln (Pa.) University student disappeared in the misty blue yonder as the P-40 Warhawks roared on to their target.

When the formation landed after successfully carrying out the mission, Lt. Purnell landed with them. Quickly the pilots assembled in the operations tent to make their intelligence report. The Old Man—that was Col. B. O. Davis Jr.—was salty as could be as he pounced on Purnell for an explanation.

HAS GOOD EXCUSE

Davis demanded to know why he had continued with the flight despite the fact none of the assigned planes dropped out. Such conduct was in direct violation of Army regulations, established combat practices and, what's more, the C. O.'s own orders—unless there was a good reason for it. Purnell proceeded to supply the reason.

Well, first, the Philadelphian explained, he had noticed that the sway braces were apparently out of adjustment and were not holding the bomb rigidly under the wing. His crew chief, Purnell said, had called this to his attention before the take-off.

When it came time for him to turn back, Purnell stated, he remembered the inadequately suspended 500-pound lethal pellet under his seat and thought it would be a most dangerous thing, for himself and all the others on the field, to try to land the plane in that condition. 12-29-45

GAVE IT TO GERMANS

"Why, then," Col. Davis wanted to know, "didn't you jettison the bomb in the hills, where it would do no harm and then come on back here?" But Purnell was ready, for that one.

"I was afraid, sir, it just might fall among some of our own soldiers or equipment, so I took it over where it would do the most good and dropped it on the Germans."

Col. Davis was plenty sore at Purnell and you could see he wanted to "chew him out," but it was a pretty airtight excuse. So, for the record, he fixed it up so it would not help Purnell get home any quicker. Davis dictated to the intelligence officer that part of the report or headquarters which tallied up the score:

"Thirteen ships completed mission. Twelve sorties claimed." 12-29-45

A respectable number of men present suspected that Purnell continued on the mission just for the hell of it; just to have a little fun dropping a bomb on the retreating Nazis. But, Purnell never has admitted that.

Nor has he ever denied it, either.

Highest Ranking Pilot Says Present Plan 'Inefficient'

Pittsburg Courier, Pa.

By JOHN H. YOUNG III, Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(Exclusive)—Col. B. O. Davis Jr., West Point graduate and highest-ranking Negro officer in the Air Forces, last week branded the theory of a racially-segregated air force as being "inefficient in operation and in some instances impossible in application."

12-15-45

Colonel Davis, commanding officer of Godman Field in Kentucky, where the composite 477th Bombardment Group is stationed, made this statement to The Courier when he was advised that a wave of unrest was brewing among the junior officers of his command. When advised that junior officers at Godman had contacted The Courier and had expressed a fear that senior officers there were advocating a peacetime segregated air force for their own exploitation, Colonel Davis made this unequivocal statement: 12-15-45

"I would like to see a colored pilot or administrative officer treated the same as any white officer. I am certainly not making a stand for any segregated setup.

TESTIFIED BEFORE ARMY BOARD

"In appearing before the Gillem Board, I stood against the theory of a racially segregated air force and army on the grounds that such segregation is inefficient in operation and in some instances, impossible in application."

Editor's Note—The Gillem Board, composed of high ranking Army officers, recently convened at War Department headquarters and heard testimony on the issue of segregation and the peace-time Army.)

Commenting further on his stand against a segregated air force, Colonel Davis pointed out that as an army officer he had been placed in charge of Godman Field and that he was bound by oath to carry out his orders. He emphasized that this personal belief and stand against segregation had nothing to do with his intention to carry out the orders of his superiors.

OPPOSE SEGREGATION

"I am put here, and of course will do everything in my power to carry out my orders, but I am not taking any stand for segregation," Colonel Davis declared.

According to the junior officers who contacted this correspondent, they wanted all the world to know that they stood unalterably opposed to a segregated air force; they wanted the Nation to rise at this time to say for them the things that they could not say publicly. They were forced to take this action, they said, because they believed that the future air force policy on segregation was now under consideration and they wanted to make sure that their opinion in the matter was clearly understood.

Colonel Davis' public stand on a segregated air force is deemed highly significant because of his complete knowledge of the application of segregation in the war just closed. 12-15-45

COMMANDED EVERY SEGREGATED UNIT

He was among the first to be graduated from the jim-crow Tuskegee Army Air Field in Alabama. After graduation he moved with the Ninety-ninth Pursuit Squadron to its overseas destination and was that squadron's commanding officer throughout its early days of combat. He was later placed in charge of the 332nd Fighter Group that distinguished itself in action in the European Theatre of Operations.

Returning to this country, Colonel Davis was placed in charge of the 477th Bombardment Group. Since Colonel Davis has been in command of every all-Negro air unit in combat, it is felt that his stand is an irrefragable condemnation of the maladroit segregation of Negroes in the air force.

BULLETIN! WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Courier has learned from a highly authoritative source that the War Department has already completed plans for the training of Negro pilots on an integrated basis at its largest Central Instructors' School, now in process of being moved from Randolph Field to Barksdale Field in Louisiana. The usually reliable source also told The Courier that this means the early closing of the Tuskegee Army Air Field, since the same integration will exist at all other Central Instructors' Schools and Tuskegee Army Air Force is not and will not be listed as a base for a tactical unit.

The source revealed that training of Negro pilots at Barksdale would await an overall announcement which would be epoch-making in that it would announce the scattering of all Negro pilots now in the Air Force to fields throughout the country on an integrated basis.

Col. B. O. Davis Jr.

Materialization of complete integration in the Air Force would mean the successful conclusion of The Pittsburgh Courier's long fight to get Negroes into the Air Forces of the United States, and more lately to wipe out segregation.

Plane Crash in S. Carolina No Reflection on Colored Flyers

General

HFRO: American Balt., Md.

1-20-45

EDITOR'S NOTE—When a colored flyer's plane crashed with a bomber piloted by a white airman, recently, the father of the latter wrote a letter to the War Department saying that all colored aviators should be grounded.

Here is the answer of the dad of the colored flyer, who was also killed in the crash.

The War Department has not laid the blame for the accident on either pilot.

Earl C. Knowlton, Anniston, Ala.—Dear Sir: I have read your letter written to the War Department and published in the Anniston Star, in which you voice your resentment against colored men being allowed to fly planes.

I am surprised to learn that a man, intelligent and courageous enough to learn how to operate and fly a B-24 bomber, could have a father cursed with such an inferiority complex, that he would dare to make such a complaint as you have written to our government.

Sorrow No Greater

It was unfortunate that your son was killed in that fateful crash. My son was killed, too. Your sorrow and your anguish cannot possibly be greater than mine. And while my heart goes out to you as one sorrowful father to another, I deeply resent any statement that you may make that attempts to cast a reflection on my people.

During the past three years, airplane crashes and collisions have occurred in various parts of this country almost every week, with no colored flyers involved. A collision in South Carolina with one colored flyer could not possibly change the picture.

What right have you to intimate that either of the pilots involved in the fatal crash at Walterboro, S.C., on December 5, was more to blame than the other? Has anyone accused your son of being responsible?

Do you think that he stands accused to the extent that his father needs to create an alibi for him? Or, did the tragic death of your son mean no more to you than an excuse to give voice to your prejudice against colored people?

In your letter, you state that you "resent our government's apparent determination to raise the colored man overnight to a place in civilization to which he is as yet unprepared to assume."

But you must realize that every consideration the colored man receives from his government has been earned.

No Special Privileges

Our government has given us no special privileges during this war. It has only recognized the fact that it is the right of every citizen to fight for the defense of his country—to serve in any branch of the armed forces where he is needed and qualified to serve.

That they have served well and with distinction in every branch of the armed forces to which they have been assigned is an attested and recorded fact.

The Air Corps is no exception. The brilliant, heroic deeds of our soldiers during this war have not been surpassed by any group. Their patriotism has not been questioned.

A Qualified Pilot

My son, Flight Officer Robert M. Johnson, was graduated from high school when he was sixteen years old. Knowing that he would soon have to go to the war, he stayed out of college and worked as a photographer until he was old enough for military service.

He enlisted in the Air Corps and was accepted for training as a cadet, not because he was colored, but because he had the physical, mental and educational qualifications to make a pilot.

He earned his commission after he had received the necessary training and passed the required test. That he was a qualified pilot is without question.

His racial background had nothing to do with his qualifications for the job to which he was assigned. He was a man doing his duty. He was willing to give his life that democracy might become a reality, and that the world might become a better place for you and everyone else to live in; not as whites or as blacks, but as men.

Adopt His Creed

He had no complexes. The creed by which he lived was one that you might well adopt. "First to thine own self be true, thou canst not then be false to any man."

He made no excuses for himself, and I shall make none for him. He always did what he believed to be right. He had much to live for; his death was untimely, and my sorrow is almost too much to bear.

But, if his death helps to focus the attention of the world on the biased and prejudiced bigots who avail themselves of every opportunity to undermine the foundation of our democratic government by their injection of race discrimination, and if these race haters are eliminated or the effects of their venom lessened by this war, then I shall feel that the death of my son was not in vain. The purpose for which he was willing to give his life has been accomplished.

1-20-45

You Need to Pray

Mr. Knowlton, I doubt if the War Department would give a second thought to your letter, except for the fact that it smells very strongly of an attempt to sabotage the war effort, by raising a ridiculous race issue, during a critical stage of the war, and supplying Herr Hitler and his gang with more material for propaganda about strife in the democratic countries.

We loyal Americans can thank God that you belong to a group as sure to vanish from American soil as America is to win this war. God would not have it otherwise.

Mr. Knowlton, you and your kind are being weighed in the balance of justice and you have been found wanting. You need to pray.

Yours truly, Luther H. Johnson, 1900 Centre Avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Col. Davis Loses 3 Flying Officers

N.Y. Amsterdam News

One of the first duties of Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., post commander at Godman Field, Ky., was to announce a grave tragedy.

Three Negro Army flyers were killed early this week, and two others were injured when the B-25 Mitchell bomber they were flying crashed into the Ohio River near Madison, Ind.

No details of the plane plunge were reported.

The dead were identified by Col. Davis as Lieutenant Samuel A. Black, of Plainfield, N. J., pilot; Second Lieutenant Stephen Hotesse of New York City, co-pilot, and Flight Officer Glen W. Bullien, of Los Angeles, navigator.

Efforts to contact the parents of 2nd Lt. Hotesse of New York City were unsuccessful.

Sentences Imposed On Airmen Reduced By War Department

The Chicago Defender 10-20-45

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—Stiff sentences imposed on three Negro army air force officers stationed at Walterboro field near Charleston, S. C., were this week reduced by the War Department.

The men, Second Lt. Benjamin W. Alston, First Lt. Robert O'Neil, and Second Lt. Leroy F. Gaillard were all dismissed from the service and to forfeit all pay and allowance for having been absent without leave from July 19 through July 23. O'Neil pleaded guilty.

It should be pointed out that this officer had been overseas and had several combat missions to his credit.

The First Air Force approved only so much of the sentence as provided for a forfeiture of $75 a month for six months.

Alston drawing a three-year sentence to serve hard labor.

The sentences, handed down by a special court-martial appointed by Col. Guy Kirksey, commanding officer, were all reviewed by the War Department, and in every case considerably reduced.

Second Lt. Alston, who was found guilty of willful disobedience of a lawful command and absent without leave, had been sentenced by the court-martial to be dismissed from the army, forfeit all pay and allowances, and to be confined at hard labor for three years.

In the first review of his case, the period of confinement was reduced to one year. But, when it came before the Secretary of War for final review, he confirmed the sentence, but remitted the forfeitures and suspended the execution of the sentence during good behavior.

Second Lt. Leroy F. Gaillard was sentenced to be dismissed from the service and to forfeit all pay and allowances for having been absent without leave, for having made a false official statement to his superior officer, and for having violated a base regulation requiring an officer to sign out before leaving the base to travel more than 25 miles.

The Secretary of War confirmed the sentence but commuted it to a reprimand and forfeiture of $50 of his pay for six months.

First Lt. Robert O'Neil was sentenced to be dismissed from the service and to forfeit all pay and

First Race Aviator to Fly Atlantic Visits City

Los Angeles Sentinel — Cal.

Lieut. Fred Hutcherson, Jr., ace flyer who was the first Negro to fly the Atlantic and the first to fly in the Royal Canadian Ferry Command at a salary of $1,000 a month, visited his mother, Mrs. Wendell Albright, here last week.

Lieut. Hutcherson was here for two days, together with plane which was a gift from his father, Fred Hutcherson Sr.

The airman, it is learned, was denied admittance at that time in the U. S. air force because of his color. He then went to Canada, and volunteered in the Royal Canadian Air Force. 6-14-45

In the Canadian service, he made many trips to England transporting materials of war to the mother country. In recognition of his ability, the RCAF promoted him to the rank of captain, increasing his salary to $1,000 a month. He also piloted many bomber planes to England.

Later he transferred to the Royal Air Force, where he likewise was given the rank of captain.

six other officers. During his stay he was entertained at dinner, and at a luncheon given by his cousin, Izora Peak, at the Clark Hotel.

The noted aviator expected to become an instructor at the Tuskegee Army Air Field following a refresher course at Moton Field.

At the present time a lieutenant, the ace flyer was a captain while he was connected with the Royal Canadian Air Force and later with the Royal Air Force. When he joined the U. S. Air Forces, however, he was given the rank of lieutenant.

Expect 99th And 477th To Be Retained As Strategic Reserves

9-15-45

By VENICE T. SPRAGGS
(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON.—The future of Negro Army Air Corp units will be blueprinted soon at the War Department here, it was reliably learned by the Defender.

The famed 332nd Fighter Group, which chalked-up a highly creditable record in the Mediterranean theater, will go by the board.

The 99th Pursuit squadron, presently a part of that group, will be retained as a unit, as will the 477th, now stationed at Godman Field, under the command of Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr. Both units —the 99th, composed of single-engine craft, and the 477th, multi-engine bombers—will become a part of the AAF strategic reserves to be on hand for any type of activity for which they may be chosen.

It is anticipated that the units will be comprised largely of veterans of the Italian campaign. While members of each of the units may volunteer for overseas duty, it is not immediately foreseeable that the army will send them over.

Fate of Tuskegee

It is expected that a part of the projected picture will deal with the future of the Tuskegee Army Air Field. While it is not known what that future will be, it seems fairly certain that Tuskegee AAF will be retained longer than Godman.

Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., has been in Washington this week where he has made some inquiry into the final disposition of flying facilities at Tuskegee, including the institution's own Moton Field, which has been under contract to the army.

As the contract on the Moton Field installation was for the duration only, it has been cancelled by the army, as has been contracts on all other fields so acquired. In fact, Moton Field, which was the only Negro field in the group, was the last to be cancelled.

It seems probable that private flying, which has been carried on at Tuskegee's Field No. 1, will be moved to Moton Field.

Deal With Fisk

Tuskegee is presently serving a unit of Fisk university under a plan initiated by the state of Tennessee whereby 20 Negro aviation students have been given scholarships. These students are channeled through Fisk. Having no equipment or instructional staff, Fisk has entered into an agreement with Tuskegee, through which a sub-base has been set up at a city airport turned over to Fisk. Tuskegee is conducting the training, using her instructors and equipment.

It may well be that Tuskegee will expand this type of service to other institutions in other states as such institutions choose to participate.

A good deal of concern has been manifested in a possible future for Negro pilots in the Army Transport Command. At present this future seems obscure. For one reason, ATC flyers cover the world. The policy of the top personnel in the Army Air Force has not been one which would permit Negro flyers to ramble around on their own. Another reason is Negro flyers are still new in the game. Barred by army policy from the flying field until World War II, Negroes have not acquired the necessary experience which ATC jobs require.

Efforts made to get Negro flyers integrated into the army as ATC ferry pilots were blocked.

Priority for Whites

Army Transport services presently under the army will eventually be turned back to private commercial companies. It had been hoped that Negro flyers might have gotten in on the ground floor while the army had the service, but this did not pan out.

It should be pointed out that the Army Air Force must cut its strength to approximately 2,500,000 from a war-time strength of approximately 8,000,000. This will leave a lot of white pilots looking for air jobs. Having more experience made available to them by virtue of a more prolonged opportunity in the AAF, they will have priority over Negro pilots for commercial jobs.

More than 1,240 Negro Air Force units were assigned to the North African-Middle East theater in time of war. These men have had at least nine months of schooling and can qualify for all of the technical phases of flying from the bottom up. They can instruct, maintain their craft and fly, but it appears that they will be barred from ATC, the aristocracy of the Air Force, because their white fellows have the greater experience.

Negro flyers have been restricted to single and twin engine craft, flying largely fighter planes such as P-40s, P-47s, P-51s and P-38s. Members of the 477th Composite Group fly twin engine medium bombers, such as the B-25s.

To Try Arrested Officers At Once

Journal and Guide

6-30-45 Norfolk, Va.

Staff Correspondence

GODMAN FIELD, Ky.—Nearly three months have passed since three officers of the 477th Bombardment Group were placed under arrest by order of Col. Robert Selway at Freeman Field, near Seymour, Ind. They are still being confined to their barracks although they have not yet been tried by court-martial. Journal Guide

A Washington source revealed early this week that the trials have been set for Saturday at Godman Field.

Arrested along with a total of 163 officers for entering an officers club which the white command had set aside for the exclusive use of white officers—in contradiction to a specific War Department directive prohibiting racial discrimination in the use of post recreational facilities—and for declining to sign a discriminatory circular which set aside buildings and areas which were to be used by these men, the three men were held after the others were hastily released.

They are charged with "jostling" a military police officer who sought to refrain them from entering the club and have been confined to their barracks for almost three months.

HUMILIATED DAILY

Army regulations require that men held for court martial be tried within eight days, if possible, and that their trial be expedited as quickly as possible if it is not practicable to try them within the eight day limitation. These men remain untried and are constantly subjected to the embarrassment of being accompanied by armed guards to such nearby facilities as the barber shop and theatre, located within 50 yards of their barracks.

Meanwhile, these three officers, accompanied as they are by armed guards, are daily treated to the demoralizing spectacle of seeing German prisoners of war, walking around Fort Knox and Godman Field without any guard whatever.

The three officers still being held are: 2nd Lt. Roger Terry, of Los Angeles, bomber pilot of a combat crew training squadron; who has lost his flying pay for three months as a result of his unusually long confinement; Marsden Thompson, adjutant; and Shirley R. Clinton, intelligence officer.

MOVES FOR TRIAL

Taking immediate cognizance of the influence this confinement would have on his entire command, Col. B. O. Davis Jr., new commanding officer of the 477th Composite Group, took immediate steps to find out why the men were being held. On his first day in command, Col. Davis sent a tracer through on the charges to find out where they were and what was to be done next.

He was told that the charges had gone up through 1st Air Force to Washington. He immediately contacted Washington concerning the charges.

Two days later, Col. Davis appointed the court which will hear the case against these men in the near future. Col. Davis, himself, is president of the court. Lt. James Y. Carter, of Winston-Salem, former law instructor at North Carolina College, is one of the members of the court. The court will be advised in its hearing by Lt. Robert Ming, formerly a noted Washington lawyer and instructor at the Howard law school, and now a member of the Army's judge advocate's department.

William H. Hastie, former judge of the Virgin Islands and former civilian aide to the Secretary of War who is now head of the Howard law school, has previously expressed interest in defending the three officers and will be asked by Lts. Clinton, Terry, and Thompson, to defend them at the forthcoming trial.

Col. Davis has pledged that the trial will be conducted in an atmosphere of complete fairness. He believes that speedy disposition of this case is important to improving the morale of his new command even further.

VETERANS IGNORED

Col. Selway declined to discuss the case with reporters during the last week. It was generally believed that the white command made a deliberate attempt to humiliate the three men and kept them in confinement much longer than was necessary.

An interesting sidelight to the episode concerning use of the "white" officers club is the fact that the command studiously refrained from arresting officers with overseas combat records. Captain James T. Wiley, Pittsburgh; Capt. Clarence Jamison, Cleveland; Capt. Jack Rodgers, Chicago; Lt. Robert O'Neil, Detroit; and other returned combat pilots were not arrested although they attempted to enter the club during the Freeman Field row.

Negro Air Units Face Reduction

GODMAN FIELD, Ky.—(ANP)—More than 100 men were discharged from the air force from Godman Field last month. Of these 45 were officers and 75 enlisted men, all of them being sent to separation centers.

Col. B. O. Davis Jr., commanding officer, announced that reorganization of combat units was proceeding according to plan, that training of replacements for the 477th composite group which he heads has ceased and that both discharging and recruiting programs are being accelerated.

Several combat units have been inactivated and assigned to the base unit.

Two squadrons of the 387th Air Service group have been inactivated. Remaining are the 99th Fighter Squadron (P-47), commanded by Maj. Bill Campbell of Tuskegee; the 617th Bombardment squadron, headed by Capt. Charles L. Williams of Lima, O., and the 602nd Air Engineering squadron which Capt. Herbert E. Carter of Amory, Miss., commands.

Shift Walterboro Trainees

Training of combat replacements for the 477th Composite group at hated Walterboro field, S. C., has been halted. The 375 trainees, officers and men have arrived at Goodman field.

Just what the future holds is not certain. Col. Davis states that no word concerning a move from Godman field has been received but he admits that the facilities here are inadequate to house the large numbers of men being transferred here. 10-20-45

May Abandon Tuskegee Field

At one time it was assumed that the $5,000,000 field at Tuskegee would be used to house the group providing some plan was not developed to integrate the men into white units. Protests on the part of some of the men who did not wish to go to Tuskegee because of its southern location, an opinion which Col. Davis is said to have shared, may have eliminated Tuskegee from future plans.

Gen. Arnold, top air force commander, has said however, that he wants 6,500 planes and 600,000 men retained during the transition period and many men here are hoping that will mean a sizeable Negro force. Col. Davis has appointed a recruiting officer who is accepting applications for regular army duty. A surprising number of officers and men who formerly declared themselves as anxious to leave the service at the earliest moment are said to be applying f[illegible] an opportunity to reenlist.

COLONEL DAVIS HAS A HASTY CHANGE OF HEART

Chicago Defender Chicago, Illinois

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON.—Court-martial proceedings against Lt. Thurnell Anderson of Chicago were dropped this week after he had been charged with "conduct unbecoming an officer."

The charge is said to have grown out of Anderson's drinking a cup of coffee in a Greyhound bus station coffee shop in Louisville, generally looked upon as a facility for whites only.

According to reports, Anderson asked for coffee in the shop and was served without any delay. He sat completely undisturbed, until two MPs saw him. They immediately arrested him and turned him over to Col. B. O. Davis Jr., commanding officer of Godman Field, where Anderson is presently based with the 477th Composite Group, of which he is a member. 12-1-45

Colonel Davis ordered Anderson up for court-martial on a charge of "conduct unbecoming an officer." However, on Monday after the Defender made inquiries at Godman Field regarding the case, Col. Davis had a change of heart and dropped all charges.

The air base commander claimed the original charge was made on the basis of "profane language" used by Lt. Anderson when jailed by two white MPs. It was learned that Col. Davis decided to forget the affair because of the "possible racial implications."

Anderson had protested that the proprietor of the shop did not complain, nor did he refuse him service, and he, therefore, failed to see the basis for the charges, since Kentucky has no law against segregation.

Davis is alleged to have informed Anderson, "You should not use your uniform to crusade."

A legal source here said that if the coffee shop were operated in connection with the bus station, which is a public facility, that under a Supreme Court ruling Anderson would not be acting in violation of any law even if Kentucky did have a statute upholding segregation.

LOUISVILLE—In a survey of activities at Godman Field, Ky., Col. B. O. Davis Jr., commanding officer, revealed to-day that re-organization of combat units was proceeding according to the Army Air Forces plan to reduce the Negro section to a peacetime size," and that training of replacements for the 477th Composite Group had ceased, and discharging and recruiting programs are being accelerated.

Several combat units of the command were inactivated recently and attached personnel absorbed into the base unit, Col. Davis said. The 477th Composite group now consists of a group headquarters; the 99th Fighter squadron, commanded by Maj. William A. Campbell of Tuskegee, Ala; and the 617th Bombardment squadron, whose commanding officer is Capt. Charles I. Williams, Lima, Ohio. Two squadrons of the 387th Air Service group also have been inactivated. Only the 602nd Air Engineering squadron remains; Capt. Herbert E. Carter, Amory, Miss., is in command.

Col Davis also said training of combat replacements for the 477th had been halted at Walterboro, S. C., and that approximately 375 officers and men had been returned to Godman Field. These include pilots, bombardier-navigators, gunners, and several n[illegible]ing personnel.

Approximately 4[illegible]s and 75 enlisted personnel [illegible] been released from Godman Field to separation centers during the past month, Col. Davis said.

On the other hand, a recruiting officer has been appointed, and an undisclosed number of men have re-enlisted in the Regular Army, Air Corps branch.

When queried about the possibility of an early move from Godman Field, Col. Davis said no information concerning a move had reached him. However, facilities at Godman Field will be inadequate to house and train the large numbers of men being transferred there, he said, adding that in all probability an official announcement of a change of station would be forthcoming.

DERBY BOWL GAIN of eight yards on an end-run is registered by speedy Halfback Bill Bass (22) of Tennessee State against Godman Field in du Pont Stadium. Tennessee defeated the Godman Bombers 45-24.

Courier-Journal Louisville, Ky. 12-9-45

Tennessee State ran up three touchdowns in the first quarter and then settled down to match Godman Field the rest of the way to notch a 45-24 triumph yesterday at du Pont Stadium in the first Derby Bowl game before a scant crowd of 2,500.

The basketball score is indicative of the bizarre play that produced 11 touchdowns, two of them kickoff returns, and another the result of a double pass.

Four of the Tennessee State tallies came on straight drives of 53, 80, 70 and 44 yards, respectively. Three more were produced by a pass, a blocked kick and a fumble that set the stage.

Strictly air-minded, the Bombers threw 31 passes, completed 15, two of which brought touchdowns. Coach Archie Harris' 98-yard kickoff return and End Jim Holland's 75-yard return completed the Bomber scoring.

OPENS FAST

The Tigers from Nashville opened up quickly, driving 53 yards for a tally on their first offensive effort. Bill Bass, speedy 180-pound halfback, aided the march with sprints of 15 and 17 yards. Fullback Ralph Pulley culminated the surge with a three-yard buck at center. Bass' placement kick gave the Tigers a 7-0 lead.

A Bomber fumbled three minutes later set Tennesse State on the Godman 20. On the first play, Quarterback Nat Taylor pased to End Bill Smith of Louisville for the score, and Bass added his second placement for a 14-0 lead. 12-9-45

REGISTERS

With two minutes left in the quarter, Tackle Bob Drummond blocked Joe Echols' punt on the 20, grabbed the leather and raced over. Bass failed at conversion for the first time, making the count read 20-0.

In the second period a short punt gave Godman a spot on the Tiger 26. The first downs, with a 12-yard jaunt by Dave Lawyer, pushed the collegians to their 3. After three ineffectual tries, Halfback Floyd Brown passed to Halfback Earle Reynolds for the marker. "Chappie" James missed the try, and the halftime score of 20-7 had been made.

Tennessee State took the second half kickoff and plowed straight for the Godman goal, arriving there in eight plays. Pulley registered with a four-yard stab at left guard. Bass missed again, the Tigers led 26-6.

Harris then took the Tennessee kickoff on his two and the former Indiana University star stepped through the entire enemy eleven. James kick was blocked.

Five minutes later, the Bengals took advantage of a fumble and Bass scooted 21 yards to their fifth touchdown. Bass, faking a kick, passed to Smith for the extra point. 12-9-45

A 70-yard offensive late in the third period brought Tennessee State another six-pointer on the first play of the fourth when Louisville's Al Sharp cracked center four yards for a score. Ray Whitman's kick failed.

DOUBLE PASS

The Bombers countered, with the double pass play bringing the pay-off of a 68-yard thrust. Brown faded for an aerial, shot the oval to Harris running laterally to his left, and the Godman mentor fired it to Quarterback Al Barrett in the end zone. James' kick was wide.

With darkness fast blanketing the play, the Tigers chalked up their final touchdown on a 56-yard hike. Henry Gilmore punched across from the five and Bass' last extra point effort was in vain.

All-Negro Air Base Hailed As Tribute to Race in War

Richmond Times Dispatch

Richmond, Va.

By Barney Peysev

FORT KNOX, KY., July 18— A brigadier-general and a colonel, both Negroes, stood at attention, watching Billy Mitchell bombers, flown by Negro pilots, swoop low in close formation over Godman Field. . . .

It was a new day for Godman Field, a new day for the two officers, father and son, and a military precedent.

It was an all-Negro troop review, marking the official installation of the 477th Composite Air Group of the First Air Force at Fort Knox, and the first time a Negro officer had been placed in charge of a United States military base.

7-19-45

Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., was the first Negro base commanding officer. His father, Brigadier-General Benjamin O. Davis, 62, first and only Negro general officer in United States military history, had flown from Washington to attend the review.

"Those boys can really fly," said father to son.

Later General Davis had this to say:

"The performance I witnessed and the establishment of these units at Godman Field are clear evidence to us who have followed the Negro's performance in this war that the War Department feels the Negro soldier is making a distinct contribution to the war effort."

Established at Godman Field with the 477th Composite Group are the 387th Service Group and the newly arrived company of a Negro air Wacs.

General Davis said the War Department had promised that when the units are trained, they will be sent into combat "and I can promise you that they will make a definite contribution to final victory."

The general, born in Washington, D. C., entered military service in July, 1898, during the Spanish-American War as a temporary lieutenant. He re-enlisted as a private in the regular army after the war, served as a corporal and squadron sergeant-major, and in 1901 was commissioned a second lieutenant of cavalry.

He taught military science and tactics at Wilberforce University in Ohio, and at Tuskgee Institute in Alabama. He was promoted to brigadier-general, temporary rank, in 1940, was retired in July, 1941, but recalled to active duty the day after his retirement.

Colonel Davis, a West Point graduate of 1936, was commander of the 332nd Fighter Group in Italy. He won his pilot's wings at the Tuskegee army airfield in 1942 and was assigned to command the Ninety-ninth Air Group in the North African, Sicilian and Italian compaigns.

The Negro flight officer took command of the 332nd Fighter Group in October, 1943, was its chief overseas in bold strafing sorties against the enemy and figured in low-level skip-bombing at Cassino and Anzio.

He wears the Legion of Merit, Silver Star, Distinguishel Flying Cross and the Air Medal with four Oak Leaf clusters.

Colonel Davis said the Negro trainees for his base "are the finest of our race that could be selected for this duty."

GODMAN FIELD, Ky. (ANP)— Amidst a historic setting here last week, Col. Benjamin O. Davis officially became the first Negro officer to be placed in command of a United States military base.

His father, Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis, flew from Washington to attend the dramatic installation of his son. Father and son, who have become the army's most famous combination as well as the highest Negro military leaders in the history of the U. S. armed forces, stood at attention together as Mitchell bombers, flown by Negro pilots, swooped low in close formation over this air base.

They also watched an all-Negro troop review in the ceremonies that marked the official installation of the 477th composite air group of the 1st air force at Fort Knox. The newly arrived Co. A group of Negro air WAC's will be stationed here with the 387th service group.

7-28-45

"The performance I witnessed and the establishment of those units at Godman field are clear evidence to us who have followed the Negro's performance in this war that the war department feels the Negro soldier is making a distinct contribution to the war effort," said General Davis.

NEGRO OFFICERS COMMAND ARMY POST AS ARMY SETS MILITARY PRECEDENT

FORT KNOX, Ky.—A brigadier general and a colonel, both Negroes, stood at attention, watching Billy Mitchell bombers, flown by Negro pilots, swoop low in close formation over Godman Field.

It was a new day for Godman Field, a new day for the two officers, father and son, and a military precedent.

It was an all-NeNgro troop review, marking the official installation of the 477th Composite Air Group of the First Air Force at Fort Knox, and the first time a Negro officer had been placed in charge of a United States military base.

First Negro to Command

Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., was the first Negro base commanding officer. His father, Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, 62 years old, first and only Negro general officer in United States military history, had flown from Washington to attend the review.

"These boys can really fly," said father to son.

Later, General Davis had this to say: 7-25-45

"The performance I witnessed and the establishment of these units at Godman Field are clear evidence to us who have followed the Negro's performance in this war that the War Department feels the Negro soldier is making a distinct contribution to the war effort."

Establishment at Godman Field with the 477th Composite Group are the 387th Service Group and the newly arrived Company A of Negro Wacs.

To Be Sent Into Combat

General Davis said the War Department had promised that when the units are trained, they will be sent into combat, "and I can promise you that they will make a definite contribution to final victory."

The general, born in Washington, D. C., entered military service in July, 1898, during the Spanish-American War as a temporary first lieutenant. He reenlisted as a private in the Regular Army after the war, served as a corporal and squadron sergeant-major, and in 1901 was commissioned a second lieutenant of cavalry.

He taught military science and tactics at Wilberforce University in Ohio, and at Tuskegee Institute in Alabama. He was promoted to brigadier general, temporary rank, in 1940, was retired in July, 1941, but recalled to active duty the day after his retirement.

West Point Graduate

Colonel Davis, a West Point graduate of 1936, was commander of the 332nd Fighter Group in Italy. He won his pilot's wings at the Tuskegee Army Air Field in 1942 and was assigned to command the 99th Air Group in the North African, Sicilian and Italian campaigns.

The Negro flight officer took command of the 332nd Fighter Group in October, 1943, was its chief overseas in bold strafing sorties against the enemy and figured in low-level skip-bombing at Cassino and Anzio.

Col. Davis Appoints Major George Webb Godman Field Deputy

N.Y. Age

GODMAN FIELD, Ky. — Col. Benjamin O. Davis announced the recent appointment of Major George W. Webb as Godman Field Deputy for Administration and Services. Major Webb was formerly Provost Marshall of Tuskegee Army Air Base where he established a brilliant and enviable record for military discipline, law and order.

The Major, N.Y. who hales from Washington, is a Howard University graduate, having earned his Army commission there by way of ROOTC in 1928. He served as 1st. Lieut. assigned to the Civilian Conservation Corps at Gettyburg, Pa., for five years, and in 1941 became the first Negro Administrative Officer to be assigned to the Air Corps.

As Deputy of Administration and Services, the Major's duties include all matters relating to personnel and services connected with the ground echelon of Godman Field.

To assist in completion of his 477th Composite Group at Godman Field, Kentucky, Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., Commanding Officer of the Group has requisitioned the services of more than a score of Negro Officers from Tuskegee Army Air Base.

Several of these are high ranking officers and some have seen overseas service, thus bringing to Godman Field a wealth of experience which will eventually make the 477th a formidable Group prepared to help blast the Japs out of Pacific skies in the same commendable manner as the famed 99th Pursuit Squadron and the 332nd Fighter Group.

Major Lee Rayford, Washington, D. C., ace pilot who will serve as Base Operations Officer of Godman.

Major Douglas L. T. Robinson, popular Tuskegee Chaplain and, Major Harold E. Thornell of Buffalo, N. Y., Flight Surgeon for the Group. Also on duty at Godman Field are 1st Lts. Alexander B. Rose, former Tuskegee Personnel Officer, and Robert S. Lawery, TAAF Ass't. Adjutant who is serving as Adjutant of the 387th Air Service Group at Godman.

Bomber Group To Fly From Okinawa Says General Eaker

Davis Replaces Selway, Who Was Blamed For Racial Friction and Arrest of Officers; Group To Pacific In Fall; Whites Removed

GODMAN FIELD, Ky. — Air Corps personnel is not generally given to emotional reactions but emotionalism was thick enough to cut around Godman Field last Thursday morning when tall, slender Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., alighted from a converted B-25 courier in front of base operations and was almost immediately introduced to 4,000 officers and men of the newly reorganized 477th Composite Fighter-Bomber Group, as the unit's new commanding officer. 6-30-45

GRAVES

Fully aware of the special significance of this occasion—probably one of the most significant in the history of the Negro's participation in the armed forces of America—these Negro men looked with intense pride at the commanding figure of their top-ranking Air Corps officer and felt a flood of uninhibited happiness that their branch of service had not only seen fit to correct, in such obvious fashion, a long standing practice of unfairness on the part of the previous command but also in the fact that their race had produced a man who could step into such a command without apology.

In the few minutes it took for this change of command to be accomplished, spirits rose a full 20 per cent and a disgruntled and demoralized air corps group was transformed into an organization of proud and happy men who were bent on making the group one of the best in the Air Forces.

Col. Davis spent his first three days reorganizing the former four-squadron bomber group into a new two-squadron bomber unit, to which a fighter squadron will be added later. (See fuller reorganization story elsewhere on this page).

UNUSUAL CEREMONIES

The unusual aspects of the ceremonies did not escape these men. They knew that the acting commanding general of the Army Air Forces does not usually preside at a routine change of command at the level of a colonelcy. They knew that such a change of command is seldom attended by such a large assemblage of news reporters, cameramen, and advance press notice—all of which was sponsored by the War Department.

They knew that officials of the War Department seldom made special trips to inaugurate a new command of a unit as small as a bombardment group. They knew that this was something special and that the presence of tL. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis Sr., and Truman K. Gibson Jr., civilian aide to the assistant secretary of war, implied something extra special.

Knowing all these things, these men rapidly drew the conclusion that the Air Forces was making an example of the command of Col. Robert R. Selway Jr.

SELWAY STORM CENTER

Col. Selway, the storm center of a bitter controversy over whether or not Negro officers were to be treated as officers of the United States Army appeared chagrined throughout the impressive ceremonies and consistently refused to talk to any of the several representatives of large Negro newspapers and news syndicates who covered the ceremonies.

Col. Davis assumed command of the 477th Composite Group, formerly the 477th Bombardment Group, medium, as soon as he arrived. Col. Selway continued in command of the base until certain transfers of government property can be arranged and other details involving the base units can be worked out. Col. Davis expects to add the command of the base to his functions within a few days.

Present for the ceremonies marking a change in command at Godman Field Thursday were: Lt. General Ira C. Eaker, acting commanding general of the Army Air Forces; Truman K. Gibson Jr., civilian aide to the Secretary of War; Major Homer B. Roberts, chief of the Negro section of the War Department bureau of public relations; and a group of newspapermen.

General Eaker flew out in his personal transport plane, bringing with him Mr. Gibson and other important officers and officials. In another plane with Major Roberts came newspapermen and War Department cameramen and a recording crew.

IMPRESSIVE OCCASION

While 4,000 officers and men of this post stood at attention a B-25 carrying Gen. Eaker, Brig. General B. O. Davis Sr., Col. Davis, and Mr. Gibson, landed at Godman Field and taxied to the formation area in front of the group operations building, where areviewing stand had been set up.

Alighting from the plane in the order of rank, the party went directly to the reviewing stand where Gen. Eaker made his forthright statement (see text on page 2.)

There was a brief parade lasting about ten minutes before the address by Gen. Eaker. Brig. General Davis was introduced by Gen. Eaker and the father of the new commander made an address, a highlight of which was that "the Jap is a tough soldier and in most instances has to be killed."

CONGRATULATIONS

"I want to emphasize the point," Gen. Davis continued, "that it is necessary for you in your training and in your performance to give full support to the officer who commands you. It has been my privilege to know something about our enemy, having visited his country and observed him in training.

"The only people who know how to fight this war to the best advantage are the people who have had actual combat experience with the enemy. I wish to congratulate you on the caliber of officers assigned to you. They have the confidence of the War Department; they have the respect of the men they have fought with and against."

Mr. Gibson, in remarks pointing out the opportunity offered the men of the 477th under its new command, told how the fighter pilots of the 99th and 332nd had "made the Air Forces team in Italy" and had established a precedent of success which the 477th must upnold.

In order to avoid the possibility that a Negro commanding officer would be over white subordinate officers, at 8 o'clock Thursday morning all white officers were replaced by colored officers here, to command positions assigned on a temporary basis.

The men were called in and told "you are now commanding officer of your squadron." The men temporarily given command of the bomber squadrons were: Captain Charles R. Stanton, Portland, Ore., 616th; Captain Fitzroy Newsom, New York City, 617th; Lt. James Y. Carter, Winston-Salem, N. C., 618th; Captain Charles I. Williams, Lima, Ohio, 619th.

GENERAL EAKER MEETS WITH OFFICERS

General Eaker and Gen. Davis met with the 425 officers at 2:00 p.m., EWT in the post theater. He repeated the promise made in his earlier address that they would go to the Pacific in the late summer or early fall, and "will fly from Okinawa aaginst the Japanese mainland."

The persistent reports that Colonel Davis would be made a brigadier general at Thursday's ceremonies here were not confirmed . Promotions to general rank are made by the President and approved by the Senate.

In addition, he must have a "table of organization" outfit calling for a general officer. So far, the 477th command he has just taken does not qualify him for a generalship.

There is a possibility that the group will be enlarged and that perhaps within a year Davis' command will qualify him for a generalship and that he might be promoted. It is known that he is highly thought of in military circles as a competent and inspiring leader.

At the meeting after the change of command, Gen. Eaker further told the men of the group: "I am going to make it my business to give you adequate training, sound leadership and the best equipment available."

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, when asked if he would accept the Negro group in his theatre replied, "I'll take any group that has good training," Gen Eaker revealed in his informal talk to the officers of the bomber and service group.

At the same time that Gen. Eaker announced the change of command here, Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson announced it at a press conference in Washington as the "outstanding information" he had for the press.

Lt. Gen. James Doolittle, who will soon have a Pacific command, was present at the Patterson conference in the capital.

Morale has already improved 100 per cent, according to observers here.

The three officers arrested since the Freeman Field (Ind.) officers' club incident in April are still under confinement here. Disposition of their case was not indicated by inquiries here Thursday.

Pilot Specializes In Ground Work

2-10-45 Ga.

AAF REDISTRIBUTION STATION NO. 1, ATLANTIC CITY — New Jersey — Destroying enemy aircraft on the ground was the specialty of First Lieutenant Edward N. Smith, Negro fighter pilot, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He never met a German plane in the air, but during his 111 combat missions in the European Theater of War, he chalked up a total of 15 Nazis fighters ruined before they had a chance to take off.

Nine of this total were taken care of on the same mission, a fighter sweep over Hungary.

"We sneaked in on a German airfield," Smith said, "and our group got credit for erasing 83 fighter planes before they could take to the air."

Lieutenant Smith flew most of his sorties escorting 15th Air Force heavy bombers on raids over enemy territory. It was on one of these escort missions that he had his closest call with enemy fire.

"Coming back from a demolition job in South Germany," the former Temple University student recalls, "we left the bombers over Lake Balaton, Hungary, as per orders. Starting out to patrol, our squadron leader noted a Nazi airfield directly below us and decided it would be a good idea to go down and give them a fast strafing.

"We dropped out of the clouds and ran into a terrific antiaircraft barrage. About 25 chuncks of steel tore into my plane. One piece of flak went into my engine, missing the cooling jacket by about half an inch. There were flak holes in both of my wings. By the time I got in, did my work and got out, my fighter looked like a sieve.

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

GODMAN FIELD, Ky. — The famous 99th Fighter Squadron, first colored fighter unit to blast the Luftwaffe from the skies, has been reborn here as part of the 477th Composite Group, it was announced Saturday by Col. B. O. Davis Jr.

The crack unit will be commanded by Maj. William A. Campbell and will fly the hard-hitting P-47 Thunderbolt. Many of the pilots will be former members of the original 99th and holders of several combat ribbons and decorations.

Fought with First 99th

Major Campbell of Tuskegee, Ala., is a veteran of 106 aerial combat missions over Europe and holder of the Distinguished Flying Cross with nine Oak Leaf clusters.

He fought with the original 99th and later saw action with the 332nd Fighter Group, the well-known "Red Tails" who were highly praised by the bomber fliers they escorted on raids into the heart of Germany. For eight months he was commanding officer of the 99th in action overseas.

Was Civilian Pilot

A graduate of Tuskegee Institute, Campbell was a civilian pilot instructor before joining the Air Corps. He won his wings July 3, 1942. 12-28-45

The 25-year-old major, wearer of the Air Medal with one cluster, has combat flying experience in the P-40, P-51 and P-47. He is swiftly shaping his new command into a formidable fighting machine for early action in the Pacific.

99th Pursuit Squadron Mechanic Back Home By Way Of 125 Points

N.Y. New York Amsterdam News

One of the original crew chiefs with the famed 99th Pursuit Squadron, first all-Negro Army Air Forces combat unit, Staff Sergeant Marshll H. Thomas, Jr., arrived at LaGuardia Field last week aboard an Air Transport Command trans-Atlantic plane returning him from 25 months of duty in North Africa, Sicily and Italy.

He left LaGuardia Field, after preliminary processing, for Camp Kilmer, N J., where he hopes to receive a discharge on the basis of his 125 points.

Nine Battle Stars

He wears the European Theatre of Operations ribbons and nine battle stars. He also has been awarded the aviation mechanic's badge.

Never able to fly on a combat mission himself because the squadron used only single-seated pursuit planes, he had the honor of maintaining a P-40 Warhawk, credited with downing three Nazi ME-109's in aerial combat.

"Maybe I never physically flew a mission," the soft-speaking colored mechanic drawled, "but I sure 'sweated' plenty of 'em out."

Once their plane took off on a mission, the crew chiefs would wait at the edge of the field for their return.

"Some of the toughest times of all," Thomas recalls, "was waiting out the six-hour Munich and Berlin raids while we were engaged in tactical support missions with the 15th AAF."

Thomas remembers work—"plenty of hard, sweaty work from sun-up to past sun-down."

"Whether we were flying short ground troop support missions or the long range protection flights, there was always more work than there was time to do it," he says.

But there was no monotony for Sergeant Thomas.

Talks About Salerno

Once, when things became a little slow, he left the airbase near Salerno and walked across a field to a nearby bay. On the way back, he hitched a ride on a gas truck. Half-way across the field, the Germans began an air attack, and "without thinking," Thomas jumped to the ground and hid under the body of the truck for protection.

"I was lying there hugging the ground and thankful for the steel truck body between me and the shrapnel and debris flying all around when it dawned on me just what was in that truck body.

"The thought of those 650 gallons of 100 octane aviation gasoline paralyzed my body for a minute, then, I guess, it paralyzed my mind for the next thing I recall, I was tearing out across the field, running like hell. I still don't know which way I ran but I do know I put plenty of distance between me and that truck."

It was seldom, however, that Thomas' station was bothered with air raids.

His unit would stop at a base, stay a week or two or three at the most and then move on. By the time they established a permanent base, the Allied air and ground defenses protected them from all but sneak attacks.

Thomas landed in North Africa in May, 1943, as a fully trained aviation mechanic, assigned to the 99th Pursuit squadron. They saw no combat in North Africa, but moved into Sicily on D-Day plus three and from there on he was in plenty of action.

"I think the moving was worse than the combat at times," Thomas says.

In North Africa his unit made one 1,100 mile move by train and Thomas said he lived in a "40 and 8' car for nine days and nights.

"We had C-rations for so long," he recalls, "that when I got hold of some K-rations it was just like Sunday dinner on the farm," he grins.

He says he enjoyed his stay in Italy, particularaly toward the last when they had some free time for visiting. He took short passes to Venice, Rome, Pompeii and Mt. Vesuvius.

"All the time, though, I sure was wishing for home. There's no place like it," Thomas said as he finishing discussing his sight-seeing.

If he receives his discharge from the service, Thomas plans to attend college under the G. I. Bill of Rights and study aeronautics. He intends to remain in aviation.

99th Fliers Have Highest Point Totals

Journal & Guide 5-26-45

Many Men Have Pre-Pearl Harbor Service Records

Norfolk, Va.

ADVANCED AIR BASE--(By Wireless)—After a survey of the effects of the 85-point discharge formula on Negro soldiers of the Italian sector, I found that the enlisted personnel of the 99th Fighter Squadron have the highest group point total.

A survey of this veteran overseas outfit reveals that there are men with points ranging as high as 140, with a majority of the men of the original complement having point totals above 90.

GRAVES

Many of the men have service records dating back before Pearl Harbor. A large number of the original group had been sent to Chanute Field, Ill., when the aviation program was originally instituted.

BATTLE STARS

Other factors contributing to the high point totals of men of the 99th Squadron include the fact that the unit holds battle stars for seven campaigns: Sicily, Fogga, Naples, Rome, Southern France, Northern France, Germany and the Balkans. Few other outfits can match this star total.

Some of the 99th Squadron men have children, which accounts for another boost in discharge point totals.

The 99th men at first felt elation at the prospect of going home after counting their points, but later their enthusiasm was dampened by certain mitigating circumstances. First the air corps personnel will get last priority on discharge, falling in line behind combat ground soldiers, and service personnel.

Second, the men know that aviation mechanics are skilled workers and few replacements are available with the comparable skills, which they acquired through the pioneer period for the race in aviation.

The 99th men are now beginning to have doubts if Col. B. O. Davis Jr., commander of the 332nd Fighter Group, to which the 99th is attached, will let them go. At least, none are expecting immediate discharge despite their high point totals, and they are putting away their dreams of civilian life.

HIGH POINT MEN

Among the high point men of the 99th are:

M Sgt. Ellsworth Dansby, Decatur, Ill., who in addition to other points, holds the Bronze Star medal for a total of 113; M Sgt. Archer Coronany, who also holds the Bronze Star, 120 points; M Sgt. Alexander Crawford, Dayton, Ohio, Bronze Star winner, 113 points.

S Sgt. Robert Helms, New York City, pre-Pearl Harbor enlistment and two children, 132 points; Cpl. Kermit Brown, New York City, father of two children, 132 points; T Sgt. James O'Neil, Malone, Ala., one child, 114 points; Sgt. Julius A Searles, Washington, D. C., 102 points.

Also Sgt. Rufus C. Mitchell, Boleyok, La., 96 points; Sgt. Leon Duncan, New York City, 99 points; Sgt. Robert Howard, Brooklyn, one child, total 111 points; S/Sgt. P. C. Corbin, Pulaski, Va., Bronze Star winner who can claim a maximum of 55 points for service for a total of 120 points.

OVERSEAS 25 MONTHS

All of the 99th men get 25 points for 25 months of overseas service and most of them have been in the Army at least three years, and many have four years of Army service.

Among other combat units of this theatre with high point totals is the original complement of the 450th anti-aircraft artillery, men of which have many battle stars.

The service units longest overseas include the famed 480th port battalion; the 22nd "Rolling Deuces" trucking group; the 468th trucking battalion; the 92nd Engineers and others.

FEW MATCH 99TH

Few of these men, except the original cadres, have Army time to match the period served by the enlisted men of the 99th Fighter Squadron. In the 743rd Military Police detachment, now guarding installations in Rome, two men qualify for discharge as follows: Sgt. Amos Wamble, Little Rock, Ark., who has two children to bring his total to 105 points; and Pfc. William Johnson, Elizabeth, N. J., with two children and 90 points.

High point men in outfits other than the 99th Squadron usually have children to make the grade in discharge points, but in the 99th there are many men who do not have children but who have amassed high point totals.

Col. Davis' Famed Pursuit Flyers In Resort In Naples

St. Louis Argus 7-21-45

15TH AAF IN ITALY—"Il bello campo di repose vicino al mare, the beautiful rest camp beside the sea." This is where the tired pilots of the P-51 Mustang Fighter Group commanded by Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., go for their well earned rests. Located high on the side of a mountain overlooking the beautiful harbor of Naples, this splendid setting commands a view of some of the more renowned places of interest in this beautiful and ancient Italy. Stretching out as far as the eye can see, the blue waters of the Tyrrhenian Sea afford these men one of the most pleasant scenes one can imagine or expect to see in all of this old and historic country.

A more restful location could hardly be found in this war torn, poverty-stricken Europe. Pilots of the All Negro Fighter Group come here to rest from the strain of constant flying in these tense and dangerous aerial battlefields of World War II. As they arrive at this peaceful Shangri-La, they are received by Captain William M. Womack of Detroit, Michigan, the officer in charge of this beautiful rest camp. A graduate of the University of Michigan, Bill, as he is fondly referred to by his many friends, devotes his entire time to seeing that these fellows have everything that they might desire at their fingertips.

The meals, composed mainly of dehydrated foods, are excellently prepared by a competent kitchen staff. Soft and restful beds, a welcome sight to any soldier, are almost like the beds that one could find in any American home. A beautiful sun-kissed beach, movies, games of all kinds assist these tired young men to relax and forget, for a while, the strain and nerve-wrecking experiences of war.

Overseas 27 Months, All H[illegible] Points for Discharge

Sixteen members of the 99th Pursuit Squadron, the first all-Negro unit to be activated as a combat unit in the 15th Air Force in Italy, arrived yesterday at La Guardia Field on an Air Transport Command plane from Casablanca. All had enough service points for discharge, but none wanted to leave the Army.

The sixteen have had twenty-seven months of overseas service, during which they have accumulated from 118 to 123 points each and have won nine Bronze Stars.

Four of the sixteen live in New York City. They are Sergeant Leonard W. Coles, thirty-four, of 141 West Ninety-eighth Street; Corporal John H. Turner, thirty, of 270 St. Nicholas Avenue; Sergeant Robert T. Howard, twenty-five, of 662 Halsey Street, Brooklyn, and Corporal Leonard R. Brewer, twenty-six, of 107-12 Remson Street, Jamaica, Queens.

Also in the group were three men from Newark, N. J. They are Sergeant Charles Davis, of 56 Wallace Street; Staff Sergeant Charles D. Hensley, of 222 Court Street, and Staff Sergeant Julius C. Lovett, of 72 Montgomery Street.

The Los Angeles Tribune Los Angeles, California 9-17-45

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Paratroopers of the 555th Parachute Infantry batt., the only Negro parachute unit, have been helping to fight forest fires in the Pacific Northwest for several months, the War dept. disclosed last week.

The men were loaned to the United States Forestry Service by the Army because of the Northwest's manpower shortage, a dry season, and one of the worst forest fire years in the section's history.

Protected only by asbestos helmets and eye masks, the paratroopers bail out from Douglas C-47 troop carrier planes at 2,000 feet, or more, into trees 150 to 200 feet tall. They use jump technique learned at Parachute Infantry school, Ft. Benning, Ga., and at a special six-weeks' fire-fighting course with the Forestry Service. 9-17-45

Troop carrier planes are stationed at Walla Walla, Wash.; Chico, Calif., and Pendleton, Ore., from where they police thousands of miles. Report of a fire by the Forestry Service, and the planes are loaded with the paratroopers and hurtled to the scene. A dozen paratroopers can do a job which would ordinarily take hundreds of men on the ground to do, by landing in front of the fire and cutting it off with shovel trenches. Axes, picks, shovels, and other equipment are dropped to them by chutes used to drop food to combat soldiers in enemy territory.

The 555th works in what is probably some of the worst mountain terrain in the world—on mile-high, rugged mountain peaks and in deep, rock valleys. Some of the territory is so rough that it has taken them as long as 10 days to get back to their bases.

Forestry officials estimate that thousands of acres of timberland have been saved by these paratroopers.

Georgian Is Executive Of Army Group

The Atlanta Daily World Atlanta Georgia 9-12-45

PENDLETON, Oregon — The war is over, but American paratroopers are still fighting an enemy in these Pacific Northwest woods, a common ever-present enemy—FIRE.

For months now, Negro paratroopers of the 555th Parachute Infantry Battalion have been jumping from Douglas C-47 Troop Carrier planes to battle big forest fires in one of the worst years in this section's history.

Faced with the manpower shortage, a dry season and more fires than usual, the United States Forestry Service called on the Army—and these paratroopers furnished the answer.

DARING JUMP

In many ways, these jumps are just as daring, hazardous and spectacular, if not more, so than any of the combat parachute jumps made in Europe. With no protection except an asbestos helmet and a mask to protect their eyes, the paratroopers bail out 2,000 feet or more into trees ranging from 150 to 200 feet tall. 9-12-45

They use jump techniques perfected by the Troop Carrier Command and the Parachute Infantry School at Fort Benning, Georgia, plus six weeks of firefighting technique taught them by the Forestry Service.

Directing the project which the Army calls "Firefly' is Captain Fay McDonald, of Indianapolis, Indiana, a veteran Troop Carrier pilot. He and other pilots assigned to unique tasks are always ready and frequently are in the air en route to a big fire by 4.00 o'clock in the morning.

No chemicals at all are used — only their instruments and manual labor.

GEORGIE EXECUTIVE

Commanding the only Negro parachute battalion is Captain James H. Porter, of New York City. The executive officer is a young Negro from Waycross, Georgia, Captain R. W. Williams, a jumper whom the men "swear by." 9-12-45

When given the fire-fighting assignment, they were keenly disappointed but figured it a "snap." But they soon found out it was a man-sized job and vitally important. No wthat the war is over and there is no chance for combat, they are proud of their job.

PENDLETON, ORE., Sept. 9 —(AP)—The shooting war is over but American paratroopers are still fighting an ever-present enemy in the Northwestern States--forest fires.

All Summer long, Negro members of the 555th Parachute Infantry Battalion have been jumping from troop carrier planes into the rough, trackless forest of the western mountain States. Their job is to cut off the fire and, if possible, put it out. 9-10-45

They wanted combat but they found this a man-sized job, plenty tought and vitally important. Forest service men say they have saved thousands of acres of timber, millions of dollars worth of critically needed resources.

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — The 55th Parachute Infantry Battalion, the Army's all-colored paratroop unit has been moved from Pendleton, Oregon, to Camp Mackall, North Carolina, it was learned Friday. 12-1-45

Activated as a Regular Army unit in 1944, the 555th received national notice for its fire fighting activities in the mountain ranges of the far west extending from Southern California to the State of Washington.

Pendleton, Oregon — The war is over, but American paratroopers are still fighting an enemy in these Pacific Northwest woods, a common, ever-present enemy—FIRE.

From Canada to Mexico

They cover an area of not only thousands of acres of forests, but thousands of miles. They fight fires all the way from the Canadian border to Mexico. Principal states are Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana asd California, but if the need arises, there is no boundary.

As soon as the report comes in—giving the location of the fire, the size, wind velocity and other pertinent data—the Troop Carrier planes are loaded with the fire-fighting Negro paratroopers and speeded to the scene of the fire. 9-7-45

Ordinarily, it would take hundrels of men to fight a 600-acre fire. A dozen paratroopers will do the job. The fire-borne" chutists, as they have been dramatically described, land in front of the fire and then cut it off.

They usually bail out in "sticks" of four and five on an exact spot, the plane making several passes to jump them all. Axes, picks, shovels, and other equipment are dropped to earth by chutes ordinarily used to drop food to combat soldiers in enemy territory.

After landing in the tall trees, they free themselves from the chute and let themselves out of the tree with a 150-foot rope which they carry.

Upon hitting the gronnd, they retrieve the shovels and set to work digging trenches ahead of the blaze to keep it from spreading. After this has been done, they make an effort whenever possible to extinguish the blaze. But the emphasis is placed on keeping the fire from spreading.

No Chemicals Used

No chemicals at all are used — only their instruments ano manual labor. 9-7-45

They land in chat s probably some of the worst mountain terrain in the world—on mile-high, rugged mountain peaks and in deep, rocky vallys. Some of the territory is so rough that it has taken them as long as ten days to get back to their home base. Some of the trees are so tall and treacherous that it requires several hours for them to get out.

Newsreel men who watched the drops declared they were "the most spectacular" thing they had ever seen.

Forestry officials estimate that many thousand acres of timber land have been saved by these paratroopers, which also means that millions of dollars worth of the country's national resources have been preserved.

Captain Williams, now serving as acting commander, views their assignment with mixed feelings. He and his men trained for combat duty and wanted combat.

When given the fire-fighting assignment, they were keenly disappointed but figured it a "snap." But they soon found out it was really a man-sized job anl vitally important. Now that the war is over and there is no chance for combat, they are proud of their job.

Negro Paratroopers Fight Forest Fires

COLUMBUS, Ga., Sept. 28.—(AP) The 555th Parachute Infantry Battallion, a Negro paratroop outfit activated here in 1943, is fighting a new kind of warfare now—raging forest fires in the northwest woods.

The 555th, with Capt. R. W. Williams, of Waycross, Ga., as executive officer, answered a call issued by the U. S. Forest Rangers to fight the northwest fires.

The "fire-borne" jumpers hit the silk at about 2,000 feet over the blazing areas with no protection but asbestos helmets and fire masks. No chemicals are used by the air-borne fire fighters—only manual labor with the axes, shovels and picks dropped to them in supply chutes.

The 555th took six weeks training under the Forest Rangers to perfect their techniques of landing in fire areas, cutting themselves free of tree entanglements and methods of fire extinguishing.

West Indians Fight in Burma

P.M. N.Y. 3-10-45

By ERIC WALROND

PW ★ Peoples Victory

LONDON, Eng.—Negro airmen from the West Indies are now serving with a North-West Frontier unit of the R.A.F. on the Burma front. The unit, in which the West Indian element consists mainly of men from Jamaica, has been engaged in "tank-busting" operations in support of the ground troops of the 14th Army.

In a recent engagement, 30 miles west of Mandalay, where British, Indian and Gurkha troops had established a bridgehead over the Irrawaddy, 13 Japanese tanks were knocked out. "It was," according to a special correspondent of the London Times, "probably the biggest single disaster that has ever befallen Japanese armour." 3-10-45

Writing on the day following the action, the correspondent goes on to relate how it happened:—

"A young Jamaican pilot on patrol first located three of the tanks, heavily camouflaged, at about 10 o'clock. He and his section attacked and set two on fire. He reported their whereabouts in the area about five miles from the bridgehead, and thereafter throughout the day section after section of R.A.F. Hurricanes came over and each seemed to discover more tanks. Two were knocked out by rocket-firing Hurricanes and the remainder by Hurricanes firing 40mm. cannon. Some tanks burned for six hours and some are still burning tonight." 3-10-45

By special arrangement with the Air Ministry, Flight-Lieut. P.I.U. Cross, of Trinidad—the top-ranking Negro officer in the R.A.F.—has just been appointed to the Welfare Department of the Colonial Office for duties in connection with the welfare of Colonials in the R.A.F. One of Flight-Lieut. Cross's chief duties will be to visit R.A.F. stations at which there are Colonial airmen. Flight-Lieut. Cross is the first colored West Indian to be awarded the Distinguished Service Order. He has also been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

DIARY OF THE "RED TAILS"

Detailed Account of 332nd Fighters in Guarding Hard-Hitting Bombers Told The Afro American Baltimore, Maryland

11-3-45

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The following accounts from the organizational history of the 332nd Fighter Group, which was composed of the 99th, 100th, 301st and 302nd Fighter Squadrons in the fighting in Italy, show how the Group was able to win the coveted Distinguished Unit Citation for "outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy," and caused Lieutenant General Ira C. Eaker, Deputy Commander, Army Air Forces, to say:

"They carried out the missions assigned to them and they have destroyed enemy aircraft both in the air and on the ground. By their efforts and performance, they have won a place on the great Air Forces team. They came on the hard way."

Providing cover for the hard-hitting bombers of the 12th and 15th Air Forces, the 332nd had completed 311 group missions over Europe up to April 30, 1945.

MISSION No. 3, JUNE 9, 1945

MISSION AND TARGET: To provide penetration escort for the 5th, 57th, 304th, 49th, and 55th Bomber Wings to the Munich Area.

ENEMY AIR-RESISTANCE AND ACTIVITY: As escort approached Udine Area, 4 ME-109's made a diving attack on the formation of B-24's. Lt. Wendell O. Pruitt made a diving turn and came in on one ME-109's tail, gave three bursts and saw the pilot bail out and the plane crash. Lt. Charles Bussey made two short busts on the ME-109 which was then going into a dive. He last saw the ME-109 smoking; the plane later exploded.

Coming out of the clouds Lt. Melvin Jackson sighted an ME-109. A dogfight ensued until Lt. Jackson destroyed the ME-109.

Lt. Frederick D. Funderburg, sighting 2 ME-109's peeled down on one and fired, noticing pieces fly off. Passing under the two ME-109's he made a steep climbing turn and found two ME-109's head on at his level—fired and saw one explode. Pilots of his flight saw two aircraft hit the water and one chute open.

Lt. Robert H. Wiggins, observing one ME-109 at his level, fired burst into him and saw pieces fly off and the plane began to smoke. The aircraft started into a shallow dive, gained speed and pulled away.

VICTORIES AND LOSSES: Destroyed—ME-109, Lt. Wendell O. Pruitt; ME-109, Lt. Melvin T. Jackson; ME-109, Lt. Charles M. Bussey and Lt. William W. Green; two ME-109's, Lt. Frederick D. Funderberg. Damaged: ME-109, Lt. Robert H. Wiggins.

MISSION AND TARGET: To strafe the Airasca-Pinerole Landing Ground, 1¼ mile West of Aircasea, Italy.

Capt. Robert B. Tresville's plane crashed into the sea but he pulled it up losing his wing, tanks and part of his ailerons. Plane fell into water again and tail was last seen protruding out of the water.

Mission No. 12, June 26, 1944

MISSION AND TARGET: To provide penetration escort for all bomber wings to Lake Balaton Area.

OUR LOSSES: Lt. Andrew Maples Jr. bailed out in vicinity of Termoli. Lt. Maurice V. Esters bailed out in vicinity of Vetachandrija.

MISSION AND TARGET: To provide close cover, escort and penetraion, target cover, and withdrawal for B-24's of the 49th Bomber Wing to Nimes, France.

Mission No. 25, July 16, 1945

MISSION AND TARGET: Fighter Sweep of Vienna.

ENEMY AIR-RESISTANCE AND ACTIVITY: Upon departing from Vienna Area, two of our pilots noticed a straggling B-24 being approched by a Macchi 205. A four ship flight of P-51's attacked. The Macchi, trailing black smoke, hit the mountain side bursting into flame.

The leader sighted another Macchi approximately 5,000 feet below. Lt. William W. Green, the wingman, reports having seen the second Macchi crashing.

ENEMY AIRCRAFT SEEN DESTROYED: One enemy aircraft believed to be ME-109 seen to go down in flames after being fired upon by P-38 north of Lake Balaton. Our pilots claim two Macchi 205's in same area.

Mission No. 27, July 17, 1945

MISSION AND TARGET: To furnish pentration, target cover and withdrawal for 306th Bomber Wing to Avignon Marshall Yard and Bridge.

ENEMY AIR-RESISTANCE AND ACTIVITY: As escort approached target area, 19 enemy aircraft were seen and only three encountered. Three ME-109's attempted to attack B-24's in string formation, but broke off as our P-51's approached. No bombers were seen to be hit.

Mission No. 28, July 18, 1945

MISSION AND TARGET: To furnish penetration, target cover and withdrawal for the 5th Bomb Wing to Memmingen airdrome.

ENEMY AIR AND RESISTANCE: As escort approached the Udine and Trevise areas, 30-35 ME-109's prepared to attack bomber formation. Attacks were made.

Enemy aircraft were not aggressive in their attacks — used poor evasive tactics. Our claims in the Udine area were nine ME-109's destroyed and damaged.

VICTORIES: Destroyed, One FW-190, Lt. Harry L. Bailey; 1 FW-190, Lt. Edward N. Toppins; 3 ME-109's, Lt. Clarence D. Lester; 2 ME-109's, Lt. Jack D. Holsclaw; 1 ME-109, Lt. Walter J. Palmer; 1 ME-109, Lt. Lee A. Archer; 1 ME-109, Lt. Roger Romine; 1 ME-109, Lt. Hugh S. Warner. Totals: 9 ME-109's, 2 FW-190's.

LOSSES: Lt. Oscar D. Hutton last heard from at 19,000 feet N. E. of Venice, 25 to 30 miles headed toward base. Lts. Wellington G. Irving and Gene C. Brown were last seen in Kempton Area, in vicinity of emeny aircraft.

COMMENTS: This marks the first mission of the 99th Fighter Squadron as a complete unit in long range escort with the 15th.

Mission No. 303, April 23, 1945

MISSION: The 332nd provided two forces. The first force provided general escort on penetration and target cover for B-24's of Red Force of the 55th and 304th Bomb Wings attacking targets at Padau and Cavazere, Italy.

The second force furnished general escort on penetration and target cover for the Blue Force of B-24's of the 55th and 304th Bomber Wings attacking targets in the Padau and Cavazere area in Italy.

Twenty-four aircraft of first force over target and sixteen aircraft conducted armed reconnaisance. Twenty-one aircraft of second force over target and forty-five aircraft down at base. One aircraft was lost to flak. Pilot flew out, landing safely.

Mission No. 309, April 26, 1945

MISSION: Six P-51's took off from Ramitelli airdrome and rendezvoused with P-38 Reece aircraft Whitehouse 14. Escort was provided to Linz, Prague and Amstettin. Approximately 15 miles east of Prague, five ME-109's were encountered by three P-51's.

Three P-51's provided escort for the Reece on withdrawal to Termoli where they left the Reece. Effective sorties, 6; None effective sorties, nil. All down at base at 1045 hours. Claims are Four ME-109's destroyed and one probably destroyed.

LT. FRED L. BREWER, of Charlotte, N.C., member of the 332nd Fighter Squadron, previously listed as missing in action, is now declared dead, according to word received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Brewer. Lt. Brewer's plane went down over Austria when he was enroute to Germany. He began his Army duty in Nov. 1942, after training at Tuskegee Army Air Field where he graduated with highest honors. He began overseas duty in July 1944. Lt. Brewer was a graduate of Shaw University and a former AFRO agent.

A Typical Mission of 332nd Fighters

The Call

WASHINGTON, D. C.—When the 332nd Fighter Group returned home last week, it had completed 311 group missions over Europe up to April 30, 1945.

The unit won the coveted Distinguished Unit Citation for outstanding performance of duty in armed conflict with the enemy." Lt. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, deputy commander, Army Air Forces, said of the group: "They carried out the missions assigned to them and have destroyed enemy aircraft both in the air and on the ground. By their efforts and performance, they have won a place on the great Air Forces team. They came on the hard way."

Kansas City, Mo.

11-2-45

MISSION NUMBER 3, JUNE 9, 1945
301st and 302nd Fighter Squadrons

MISSION AND TARGET: To provide penetration escort for the 5th and 57th, 304th, 49th, 55th Bomber Wings to the Munich Area.

ENEMY AIR-RESISTANCE AND ACTIVITY: As escort approached Udine Area, 4 ME-109's made a diving attack from 5 o'clock above on the formation of the B-24's. After they passed at the bombers they made a diving turn to the left, Lt. Wendell O. Pruitt made a diving turn and came in on one ME-109's tail, gave one short burst, saw no hit, gave a second long burst and observed hit—pressing the attack close. Lt. Pruitt gave a third burst and saw the left wing burst into flames. Lt. Pruitt's wingman saw the pilot bail out and the plane crash to the ground. Lt. Charles M. Bussey at approximately 1000 hours pulled his formation of eight planes into four ME-109's. Lt. William W. Green made a short burst at one ME-109 which was then on Lt. Melvin T. Jackson's tail. Lt. Bussey made two short bursts on the same ME-109 which was then going into a dive. Giving two short bursts from his gun he saw the tail disintegrate. He last saw the ME-109 smoking and diving with no tail. Lt. Bussey's wingman reported that the pilot bailed out and the plane exploded.

Lieutenant Jackson flying at 27,000 feet heard the call to attack and saw five to six ME-109's at 11 o'clock high. Closing within range he fired one burst—the ME-109 rolled over and started an assimilated spin to the left. Lt. Jackson pulled off to the left with the flight following him down. Losing the flight, Lt. Jackson saw one ME-109 high at 11 o'clock making a pass. He reefed in and while climbing started stalling, and the ME-109 fell in on his tail. Injecting the water boost, he dived and left him and entered the cloud around the mountains.

Coming out of the clouds the ME-109 was sighted again at 11 o'clock. A dog fight ensued until Lt. Jackson destroyed the ME-109, seeing it burst into flames and pilot bailing out.

Lieutenant Frederick D. Funderburg, sighting two ME-109's 500 feet below at 9 o'clock, peeled down on one ME-109 and fired burst into him, noticing pieces fly off. Passing under the two ME-109's he made a steep climbing turn and found two ME-109's head on at his level—fired and saw one explode. Pilots of his flight saw two aircraft hit the water and one chute open.

Lieutenant Robert H. Wiggins, observing one ME-109 at his level about 9 o'clock, turned and fired burst into him and saw pieces fly off and the plane began to smoke. The aircraft started into a shallow dive, gained speed and pulled away.

VICTORIES AND LOSSES: Destroyed

ME-109—Lt. Wendell O. Pruitt
ME-109—Lt. Melvin T. Jackson
ME-109—Lt. Charles M. Bussey and Lt. William W. Green
2 ME-109's—Lt. Frederick D. Funderberg.

Damaged

ME-109—Lt. Robert H. Wiggins

OUR LOSSES: Lieutenant Cornelius G. Rogers last heard from 45N-130E; Captain Lee Rayford and Lieutenant William Hunter had planes shot up by flak.

332nd More Than Held Its Own—War Department

The Afro American
Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON

Official records of operations of the 332nd Fighter Group in the Mediterranean Theater, from February through September, 1944, reveal that the all-colored unit, when compared with other AAF units in Italy, more than held its own. 11-11-45

The above statement was made by the War Department, which based its conclusion on its records of sorties, flying time, combat missions and number of enemy aircraft destroyed.

The 332nd became operational with the 12th Air Force on Feb. 12, 1944, flying P-39s until the end of May. Beginning with the first week of June it was transferred to the 15th Air Force and started transitioning to P-47s.

Made Fourth Squadron Group

On July 1 it was transmitted to P-51s. On July 15 the 99th Squadron, which had been operating as a separate unit of the 12th Air Force, joined the group, making it a four squadron group.

While operating with P-39 aircraft, the sortie rate was one-third higher than that of other Aira Cobra units in this air force.

In that period 73.7% of all sorties dispatched were patrol or reconnaissance missions, whereas of the sorties flown by other P-39 units only 45.6% were of this type mission. 11-11-45

Fewer Combat Flights at First

Thus the 332nd Fighter Group flew at a higher rate but less were of the pure combat type.

However, while operating with P-39 aircraft, the group's sortie rate was only about one-fourth of the average attained by other P-47 units, largely due to the training flights necessary to transition the unit to the Thunderbolt.

Most of its combat flying (81.8%) was on escort missions, while other P-47 units devoted a large share of their flying (82%) to fighter-bombing missions. 11-11-45

When it operated with P-51 aircraft, the group established a sortie rate that was comparable to that of other Mustang units.

Losses Consistently Lower

With regard to the loss rates per sortie, during the period of operation of the 332nd Group as a P-39 group, the losses were one-third as high as those of other units. However, the figures for all P-39 units were extremely low.

While operating as a P-51 Group the loss rate per sortie was approximately the same as that of other units flying the Mustang.

Brought Down Its Jerries

While fighting as a P-47 Thunderbolt group, the 332nd established a box score of 5 to 1 by destroying five enemy fighters in aerial combat, while sustaining a loss of only one plane due to enemy aircraft.

Other P-47 units destroyed two enemy fighters in the air and four on the ground, with no losses due to enemy fighter opposition.

Destroyed Over Half of Total

"In strafing operations on Aug. 30 and 31, P-51s of the 15th Air Force destroyed a total of 157 enemy aircraft on the ground and damaged at least 43 more.

The only opposition offered by the Luftwaffe during the two-day offensive was a force of 20 fighters, none of which were destroyed. 11-11-45

"Top honors went to the P-51s of the 332nd Group, commanded by Col. Benjamin O. Davis, whose pilots destroyed 83 Nazi planes during the attack on Aug. 30, on the Grosswardein (Rumania) airdrome, 130 miles southwest of Budapest.

Lost None

Aircraft destroyed included Messerschmitt 210's and 323's, Junkers 88's and 87's, Gotha Gliders, Heinkel 111's, Dornier 217's, and Focke-Wulf 190's.

"Five P-51s and one P-38 were lost on the two days' operation. None of these were lost by the 332nd Group."

Fighter Group Up With Others in Official Records

WASHINGTON, D. C.— Official records of the 332nd Fighter group in the Mediterranean theater, from February, through September, 1944, reveal that the all-Negro unit, when compared with other AAF units in Italy, more than held its own in sorties, flying time, combat missions and number of enemy aircraft destroyed, the War Department reported today.

The 332nd Fighter group became operational with the 12th Air Force on February 12, 1944. From that date until the end of May the unit flew P-39s, but beginning with the first week of June it was transferred to the 15th Air Force and started transitioning to P-47s which it flew during June.

On July 1 it was transitioned to P-51s. On July 15, the 99th Squadron, which had been operating as a separate unit of the 12th Air Force, joined this group, making it a four-squadron group.

Patrol Missions

During the period the group was operating with P-39 aircraft, the sortie rate was one-third higher than that of other Aira Cobra units in this air force. In this period 73.7 percent of all sorties dispatched were patrol or reconnaissance missions, whereas of the sorties flown by other P-39 units only 45.6 percent were of this type mission. Thus the 332nd Fighter Group flew at a higher rate but less were of the pure combat type.

Most of the combat flying (81.8 percent) in P-47s was on escort missions, while other P-47 units devoted a large share of their flying (82.0 percent) to fighter-bombing missions. When it operated with P-51 aircraft, the group established a sortie rate that was comparable to that of other Mustang units. 11-23-45

Losses Low

With regard to the loss rates per sortie, during the period of operation of the 332nd Group as a P-39 group, the losses were one-third as high as those of other units; however, the figures for all P-39 units were extremely low.

While operating as a P-51 Group the loss rate per sortie was approximately the same as that of other units flying the Mustang.

Pilots Tell Why 332nd Deserves Unit Citation

AFRO War Correspondent with 332nd Fighter Group in Italy

RIMINI, Italy (By Cable)—With nothing to do but say goodbye to departing squadron mates and muse as to when one's name will be posted on the "homeward bound orders list," the men remaining here spend most of their reminiscing over things that have happened to the group while in Italy.

Balt, Md.

With the entire personnel of this group sure to be home by early fall, the big $64 question here now is, "Where is the 332nd's Presidential unit citation?"

Pilots Feel Slight Most

From the lowest KP in the mess hall up through pilots, who actually feel this slight by the War Department more than the rest of the group, the general feeling is that during the Italian campaign the group's record in combat and the results achieved merited this award.

Although the 332nd stands second in aerial victories for this year, and shot down the last four enemy planes destroyed in the Mediterranean Theatre of Operations, the 332nd remains the only fighter group in the 306th Fighter Wing of the 15th Fighter Command that doesn't have a Presidential citation.

Since the award from the War Department is the final seal of approval as to a group's combat excellence, it is believed here that this is the real reason the 332nd hasn't received it. In other words, as the saying goes among the pilots, "They just want us to believe we ain't ready yet."

Was Unit Purposely Ignored?

Another question that puzzles the men still here is: Why did Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., receive so much praise and why was he awarded combat honors throughout the campaign when the high command maintained that the entire group showing was poor?

Pilots, in substantiating their belief that the 332nd was purposely ignored in so far as receiving the award is concerned, always refer to an old Army axiom: "The unit commander is responsible for all that the unit does or fails to do."

Therefore, they say, if the commander merits all these honors, then the rest of the group should have received some recognition.

The Record

A poll of pilots in the group reveals that they think the following missions flown by the group should be worth some sort of recognition from the high command. ere is the record:

1. For bravery in the general escort of the Berlin mission on March 25th. For example, the group flew the 15th Air Forces first and longest escort mission over the German capital in maximum strength through the heaviest flak of the war and encountered 40 jet-propelled enemy fighters, shooting down three jet fighters and escorts, one probable, with no losses among the particular bomber group which the 332nd was assigned to escort.
2. Combination of fighter sweeps and strafing missions over the Munich area, one of Germany's most heavily defended targets on March 31, during which 332nd pilots destroyed 13 enemy aircraft in the air, with one probable, and one damaged.

   The group also destroyed seven locomotives, damaged 13 others, and destroyed or damaged more than 70 pieces of railway equipment.

Mission Wins Leader Silver Star

3. The strafing mission over the same Munich, Linez and Salzburg target area on April 15, for which Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., received the Silver Star Award.

   On this mission, flights from the group destroyed and damaged 35 lomocotives, 8 oil cars and countless rolling stock.
4. The Aug. 12, 1944, strafing mission over Southern France, three days before D-Day, when they knocked out German radar stations on the beaches.

   They flew two separate missions before the landings, and the damage done enabled our landing craft and air cover to invade in an undetected operation.
5. For collective performances in 16 months of overseas action as a colored unit fighting a special "two-front war."

What of the Future?

The group is slowly getting rid of its planes and equipment prior to moving to a port area, and scuttle butt and latrine rumors are the only means of passing away hot Italian days.

Chief among them is: What is going to happen to the group's personnel when they arrive in the United States? With no official confirmation from the high command as to what plans the War Department has in mind for the 332nd, the following list is the consensus among men here as to the disposition of the group.

1. Return to the United States and wait after furloughs the reformation of the group for service in the Pacific, under the command of Maj. George Roberts, who once lead the old 99th here in Italy when Col. B. O. Davis returned to the States to take over command of the 332nd at Selfridge Field. The majority of the pilots here feel that Roberts is now ready for a command of his own.
2. Return to the States to be inactive and personnel of squadrons released from Army or shifted to become replacements for the bomber-fighter group.
3. Return of the squadron to the States to be integrated into bomber-fighter group as fighter squadrons under their old commander.

These same three points also apply to service groups attached to the 332nd.

Already among "I-told-you-so's," nickname of group has been changed from redtails to "the lost squadrons," and most of the men here think they will receive the run-around once they reach the States.

CATTOLICA, Italy (By Cable) —The second post-war training flight crash in a two-week period claimed the life of another 332nd Fighter Group pilot when the P-51 plane of Flight Officer John W. Squires of St. Louis, crashed near the town of Torre Dellago, recently.

A pilot with the 100th Squadron and one of the latest replacement pilots to come overseas before the end of the war, Flight Officer Squires was one of a group of three on a routine training mission over western Italy.

The plane smashed into the ground near the 92nd Division bivouac area in full view of the thousands of the division's soldiers on detail in the area.

Stalled at Low Altitude

Squires, it was learned, was pulling out of a difficult aerial maneuver at a low altitude when his plane stalled and crashed into the side of a farmhouse on the edge of the town.

Nearby 92nd men rushed to pull the flyer from the plane before it caught fire. Death was instantaneous and the plane was completely demolished.

8-4-46

The body was interred in the 92nd Division Military No. 2 at Cadva. Squires is survived by his mother, Mrs. Ida L. Squires, of St. Louis.

638 Officers, Men Of 332nd Fighter Group Due In States

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The 332nd Fighter Group is scheduled to arrive at the Hampton Roads Port of Debarkation this week, the War Department announced.

Although it is expected that the unit will be deactivated, no date has been set.

The 332nd under the command of Lieutenant Colonel George S. Roberts, is comprised of 88 officers and 550 enlisted men.

Arriving on the Levi Woodbury, included in the group will be the 100th Fighter Squadron with 30 officers and 243 enlisted men and the group headquarters with 25 officers and 67 enlisted men. An American Red Cross worker and a war correspondent will complete the shipment. 10-20-45

The 332nd Fighter Group was activated October 13, 1942 and went overseas in January, 1944, landing at Taranto, Italy, February 3, 1944. Providing air cover for bombers of the U. S. 15th Air Force, the 332nd has completed 311 missions by April 30, 1945, destroying many enemy aircraft both in the air and on the ground.

The group began flying with the 15th Air Force in June, 1944. Using P-47 Thunderbolts, the pilots were assigned P-51 Mustangs and completed 200 missions without losing a single heavy bomber to enemy aircraft.

Colonel Benjamin O. Davis Jr., new commanding officer of the 477th Composite Group based at Godman Field, Ky., is the former commanding officer of the group and led it into combat during many of its missions over Europe.

By CARL LAWRENCE

Despite its publicized record abroad, Uncle Sam's famous 332nd Fighter Group was placed on the Army's inactiive list this week and many of the 700 men involved are scouting around in search of jobs as commercial air line pilots.

Led by their 27-year-old commanding officer, Lieut. Col. George S. Roberts, members of the all-Negro outfit arrived here last Wednesday aboard the S. S. Levi Woodbury.

At Camp Kilmer, N. J., 48 hours later, they were told that the 332nd Fighter Group was officially no more; that future orders on the status of some officers would be cleared later by the War Department.

To many of the crack aviators, the news came as a surprise. All of them were so happy to be back, however, they did not bother about studying the angles or going into the reasons why.

Will Study Engineering

"The job business can wait. We've just finished a pretty good one over in Italy and I am not going to hurry about the next one. After I see my folks, I'll probably decide to return to school and take up architectural engineering."

Lieut. Yenwith Whitney, of the Bronx, added:

"My parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Whitney, will most certainly be seeing me not later than Sunday. I have three sisters and plenty of friends. After talking to them a few months, I'll consider something with one of the lines out at LaGuardia Field. You do have the FEPC here in New York, don't you?"

Most members of the 332nd were wholeheartedly in favor of either going back to school, getting jobs in commercial aviation or getting a GI loan for the purpose of starting a business.

"I can't say I'm interested in any of those things," Lieut. Hiram Mann, of Cleveland said. "All I want to do is see my wife, Kathadaza."

Outstanding among the heroes aboard ship was Capt. Roscoe Brown, commander of the 100th Fighter Squadron, who is popular in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington.

Shot Down 2 Nazi Jet Jobs

Capt. Walter Downs, commander of the 301st Fighter Squadron, was also honored as a hero, according to the unit's combat record. Capt. Downs, it was said, flew 63 sorties.

Col. Roberts, one of the youngest group commanders in the Air Corps, flew 98 sorties against enemy installations.

Stocky and stern-looking, Col. Roberts had little to say about the unit's exploits but it was evident that he was extremely proud of the 332nd's record.

From the D-Day invasion of southern France until Hitler's hordes went down to defeat in the battered city of Berlin, the history of the 332nd is packed with both individual and collective feats, the War Department emphasized.

As a group, the 332nd was awarded the Distinguished Unit Citation for outstanding performance of duty.

All Carry Medals They Won

Individually, there was Lieut. Richard Simmons, of White Plains, Lieut. Harry Stewart, of Corona, Lieut. Bertram Wilson, of Brooklyn, and Capt. Robert Friend, of Harlem.

They all sported medals and awards for gallantry in action.

During their 22 months overseas, members of the 332nd served with the 12th and 15th Air Force, Col. Roberts said. Probably the greatest single feat for the group was the sinking of an enemy destroyer with machine gun fire.

Lieut. Col. Nelson S. Brooks, executive officer of the group, was among the few men who expressed a desire to remain in uniform. Like Col. Roberts, he said "I'd be very glad to stay in the Army."

Col. Brooks, a native of Springfield, Ill., joined the outfit at Tuskeegee, he stated.

From a box score standpoint, members of the famed fighting group Silver Star; 95 DFCs, Soldiers Medal received a Legion of Merit and a (2), Bronze Star (14), Air Medal and Clusters (744) and eight Purple Hearts.

332nd Beset by Handicaps, Corps Commander Admits

Afro-American 6-9-45 Baltimore, Md.

Brig. Gen. Dean C. Strother, head of the 15th Air Force Fighter Command, told an AFRO war correspondent this week that while the command at one time lacked faith in the 332nd Fighter Group, he has nothing but the highest praise for Col. B. O. Davis, Jr.

The first opinion was held early during the Italian campaign, but during the later stages, the performance of the 332nd was "very creditable," and the group was a "definite asset to the air forces program" he said.

In an exclusive interview at Rimini, Italy, with the AFRO's Francis Yancey, Gen. Strother said: 6-9-45

No Fair Comparison

"There is no way that the 332nd can be compared with other groups in the command, since it was a separate experiment and never until the later months of the campaign had it faced the same test as others."

As to their combat efficiency, the general declared that Col. Davis's unit lacked experienced leadership and had a poor maintenance record but that on a whole the group is improving.

General Strother, who hails from Austin, Tex., stated that the 332nd, being the newest of the lot, with its lack of seasoned battle-tried flight and operational leaders, would be placed at an unfair disadvantage in any comparison with other groups of its wing.

The general attributed the group's poor maintenance record to its lack of combat-tested line and crew chiefs.

He cited in explanation instances where other groups' personnel included flight leaders, operation officers and crew chiefs who had seen combat tours in the Pacific and European theatres before coming to Italy with their groups.

Although citing poor leadership as one of the 332nd's major detriments. 6-9-45

Speaking of Col. Davis, the general said: "He is a fine soldier and has done wonders with the 332nd. I am positive that no other man in our air corps could have handled this job in the manner he has." Afro-American

Nature of Assignments

In reviewing the 332nd combat history since its arrival overseas to be attached to his command, the general admitted that the group's bad showing on paper could perhaps be traced to many months of non-combat activity in harbor and base installation patrols far from enemy-held territory. 6-9-45

Moreover, he admitted that at the time the flyers were using outmoded P-39 Airacobras, serviced by combat-green ground personnel, then switched over to heavy short-ranged P-47 Thunderbolts which never had the range to get within striking distance of the Nazis' planes.

Better Equipment Given

However, he declared, once the group was equipped with the Air Forces latest plane, the P-51 Mustang, such as used by other groups in the wing, it began to show the spark of life that led them up to the fine accounting the group has been giving itself in the last four months of the war.

In denying my inference that the 332nd's missions may have been hand-picked to keep it out of areas where enemy planes were known to frequent, General Strother said that all groups were rotated as to target penetration.

Says All Given Same Chance

The 332nd always received the same chance at Jerry planes as the rest of the wing, he said, adding that other groups in my wing just seem to have that knack of finding enemy planes in the air.

When asked why the 332nd is the only group in the 15th fighter wing without a unit citation, the general said that his fighter command, realizing the big boost it would be to the group's morale, had given this matter a great deal of consideration. 6-9-45

In concluding the interview, General Strother voiced the opinion that he thought that the colored press had overplayed the part that the 332nd played in the Italian campaign.

Moreover, he said that it hurt the morale of his other groups to see the 332nd get so much publicity for the small number of planes shot down, while they knocked down twice as many, only to get a few paragraphs in their papers.

Less Praise Urged 6-9-45

It was the general opinion that the colored press should follow the same policy as the Air Corps and nurse the 332 along slowly as to the amount of praise given for deeds accomplished.

The general said nothing about the future plans for the 332nd, but expressed hope that it will continue to improve at the same pace it did during the last four months of the campaign.

White Flyers Hug Colored Pilots for Rescuing Them

AFRO-American Md. Baltimore, Md.

CHICAGO — (ANP) — Many a time when a white pilot wakes up to find that a colored flyer has saved them from capture, injury or death, he will grab him and hug him tightly, according to Lt. Felix Kirkpatrick, Jr., bemedaled returned flyer, here to visit his parents. 1-27-45

Yet, in another vein, the lieutenant spoke with disgust of the fact that colored flyers, with their limited facilities, must obtain replacements and have at least seventy missions to their credit, as compared with forty-nine for whites, before a leave is granted.

Lt. Kirkpatrick, a fighter pilot whose Air Medal is weighted down with five oak leaf clusters and two battle stars, is a member of the 332nd Fighter Group, stationed with the 15th Air Force near Foggia, Italy, and has completed 70 misions. 1-27-45

These missions, he revealed, were completed over such hot spots as Greece, Romania, Austria, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Germany and Southern France.

While the 332nd is credited with having shot down 75 enemy planes and destroying more than twice that number on the ground, Lt. Kirkpatrick himself is credited with having brought down nine planes and with having blasted another from the air over Budapest.

CATTOLICA, Italy—(By Cable)—Secont Lt. James Coleman of Detroit, one of the 332nd Fighter Group's latest replacement pilots, was killed near here recently when his P-51 fighter plane disintegrated in midair as he tried to pull it out of a steep dive at a low altitude. Baltimore, Md

A member of the 100th Squadron, Lt. Coleman, who was unmarried, is survived by his mother, Mrs. Wessie Coleman, also of Detroit. His body was interred in the American military cemetery at Sengallia, Italy.

The official report as to the cause of the death was that Lieutenant Coleman was killed as a result of the constructional failure of the plane during the execution of an aerial maneuver, resulting in the complete disintegration of the plane.

Baltimore, Md.

The announcement that Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr. was en route home from Italy for a new assignment aroused speculation in Washington that he might be slated for promotion to the rank of brigadier general, and that he would replace Col. Robert Selway, white, commander, who has been held responsible for a series of abuses heaped upon officers of the 477th Bombardment Group at Selfridge Field, Mich., Godman Field, Ky., and Freeman Field, Ind.

RIMINI, Italy (By Cable)—In a dramatic pledge of faith in his leadership, the cream of the 332nd Fighter Group's key officer and enlisted personnel here have volunteered along with Col. B. O. Davis Jr. for similar duty in another theatre, some time in the near future. Colonel Davis and a hand-picked cadre of former pioneer group officers have left this theatre en route to the States for discussions and, it is hoped, formation of the nucleus of a new bomber-fighter group for service overseas. It is believed here that the new command will be all-colored, in the hope of eliminating the old troubles which have beset the group. Colonel Davis is the obvious choice for complete command of the entire new set-up. It is probable that Maj. William A. Campbell will lead a new 99th Fighter Squadron. Before leaving, Colonel Davis said, "Our mission here has been completed. We have fought the war and I think the group has done very well."

Francis Yancey

Colonel Davis's former outfit as of today exists in name only. Maj. George S. Roberts is now in command of remnants of the group's personnel, which will be returned to the States as soon as shipping space is available.

The feeling is general here among the group that it will be inactivated on its return to the States and very likely the remaining flying and enlisted personnel will not go overseas again. The whole new group would be made up of personnel now stationed in the States and Major Campbell would have to build an entire new 99th Squadron.

The men here were overjoyed to hear that a large percentage of members of the old pioneer squadron now stationed in the States have asked to be included in any new group. The entire cadre would receive a twenty-one-day furlough at home before going to Godman Field, Ky., for transitional training. The big question here is, "Can Colonel Davis achieve the same high standard of combat results with a new group that he did with his former unit?"

Post-War Plans Seen

The entire flying personnel here is anxious to be with Colonel Davis, for they feel that this is really the U.S. Army's post-war colored air force. When the new group returns to the States after its final overseas service, it will be all set up for a peace-time regular army air force, and it is believed that here is the Army Air Force's far-sighted plan as to disposition of colored pilots after the war with Japan terminates.

It is rumored here that the high command is firm in its belief that Colonel Davis is the only one that could handle the job. The first plan was to send out a mixed group but this was vetoed and the pioneer unit personnel now is to be integrated with the 477th Bombardment Group, with pioneer group officers holding key positions.

Missing Nine Months, Vet Pilot Turns Up

7-30-45

Pittsburgh Courier, Pgh., Penn.

FIFTEENTH AAF IN ITALY—First Lieut. Herbert V. (Bud) Clark, Pine Bluff, Ark., veteran combat pilot with the 332nd Mustang Fighter Group, commanded by Col. B. O. Davis Jr., returned to his unit this week after more than nine months of separation.

One of the original members of the Ninety-ninth Pursuit Squadron which came overseas in April, 1943, Lieutenant Clark had completed one tour of duty as combat pilot, had flown ten missions on the second tour, when he was listed as missing in action. He had been forced down in enemy-held territory while on a mission to Northern Italy and no news had been heard of him since, other than a few vague hints that he might be in Partisan hands.

CASUALLY STROLLED IN

It was quite a surprise to all to see Lieutenant Clark alight from an Army Transport and come casually strolling into Group Operations Office. Nothing short of pandemonium would describe the reactions at this advanced Italian airbase when everyone realized that the group's own "Bud Clark" had actually returned after more than nine months of absence. However, it was quite true, this was the same quiet and unassuming pilot who had revolutionized flying habits, when he landed his P-40 Warhawk on one wheel while returning from a dive bombing mission over the Anzio Beachhead last year.

JOINED GUERRILLA BAND

Immediately picked up by Partisan sympathizers upon parachuting to safety in Northern Italy while on his ill-fated mission, Lieutenant Clark was taken to the headquarters of this loyal band of guerrillas who were harassing the enemy lines and supplies in every conceivable manner imaginable. After treatment for a head wound he had received when he struck a tree parachuting to the ground, Lieutenant was absorbed into this band of Partisans and assumed the position of Squadron Commander throughout his stay, which ended last week.

WITH THE 332ND FIGHTER GROUP (Advanced Air Base in Italy) — Slashing far out in front of our fast advancing Fifth Army spearhead, assisting in cutting off the Nazi line fo retreat north, the smooth-flying, quick-trigger pilots of Col. B. O. Davis's red-tailed P-51 group, flying a special escort reconaissance mission over the Prague, Czechoslovakia area, knocked four Nazi ME-109's out of the skies, scoring one probable. Outnumbered five to three, one flight of P-51's, led by First Lt. Jimmy Lanham, 22, of 2013 Ridge Avenue, Philly, heading home from the target area, jumped three Nazi ME-109's which were dodging in and out of low-hanging clouds in the area, dropping their wing tanks of gas, the flight dived out of the sun into the gray-painted Maltese crosses of the Luftwaffe.

Lieutenant Lanham singled out the last plane in the flight of enemy aircraft, closing in on the Jerry's tail to open his attack. Lanham caught his quarry with the first two short bursts of gunfire, saw his kill, vomiting a black stream of smoke, flip over on its back and dive straight into the ground where it exploded. Lanham's victory was verified by his wingman who saw the plane explode against the deck. 5-5-45

Deadly Dogfight Develops

Pulling up from his first kill, Lieutenant Lanham glimpsed two additional ME-109's diving into the dogfight, making a total of five ME-109's pitted against our three P-51'. Jockeying for his favorite position for a kill on the enemy's tail, Lanham again dived in on the in. After that it was carnage.

Hundreds Captured

We dismounted at Fristingen. From one hours 150 supermen came out yelling "kamerad" after four of our guys went in the door. One hundred came out of another house and things weren't going bad at all until we started up the hilsl to clean out the woods.

Our twenty-two man detail had to go through a minefield and we lost some men, but on the hilltop Hitler lost moer. Everyone I saw up there was hit between the eyes.

In a few foxholes were a mass of mangled manhood—this was what was left of the superman who wouldn't come out when the guys told him to.

Fighting Near Munich

Infantry fighting lulled after that and the artillery began to work on Binswangen. While we waited to go there, we had time to think back that we'd just crossed the Daunbe. We hadn't even had time to notice whether it was beautiful or blue.

That's how it went and now it's so far in the past and so many miles behind, it isn't even a good topic for discusion. We've raced to where the snowcapped Bavarian Alps are visible and Hitler's owr road signs say Munich less than fifty kilometers away.

400 Taken in Less Than Hour

In the long haul to where we are now so many prisoners were taken that we've lost count. The Dog Company's third platoon rounded up 400 in less than an hour. Kitchen personnel got lost, drove ahead of the spearhead into an unconquered town, and came back with 115.

During one night while we sat alert to the attack on Schwabmuhhausen, out post guards brought so many to the command post that by daybreak we had more prisoners than men in our own outfit. One tank unit took over 2,500 during the day.

PW's Liberated

We've overrun towns, air fields. Allied prisoner of war camps and a Nazi murder camp, where burning bodies still smoldered.

Liberated Jewish prisoners kiss our hands and feet, while liberated Americans go hog wild when they see us.

One colored Caorlinian of the 614th Tank Destroyer Battalion captured in the Battle of the Bulge, said that he walked every step to this point, nearly 500 miles, into southern Germany. While I talked to him he grabbed and gobbled hardtack like it was cake.

Charred Bodies Seen

In a murder camp near Landsberg piles of bones and charred flesh told the mute story of the atrocious German effort to wipe out the race they considered inferior.

Expressions on the faces of some I saw showed that they must have been alive when tied to logs, saturated with gas, and set afire.

Every man in the Dog Company is working hard! everyone is a hero, and every time we lose one, it just makes the guys that much harder on the ne t Nazis we meet.

Yet, we still have to take prisoners, because they seem to come from everywhere once this mighty armoured column rolls up. They straggle in from woods, or guys dig them out of cellars, out of barns, or from under steps.

N.J., D.C. Soldiers Get Nazis

Sgts. James Adams of Newark, Clarence Johnson of Decatur, Ill., Stan Gordon of Pasadena, and David Green of New Haven; Pvts. Waylon Smith, Alexandria, La., Leo Browder, Dallas, were among those catching 400 Nazis and liberating 80 Allied prisoners of war.

Pvt. Booker Hawkins of Washington killed one and captured two Nazis while searching for a lost kitchen truck. Sgts. Robert Green of New Orleans and Hunter Grice of Mobile were among the kitchen mechanics who liberated a town.

Md. GI Helps Take Town

Sgt. Johnnie Simpson of Monroe, La., took a machine gun and chased a whole battalion of SS troops out of a town. Sgts. Wilbur Gex of Chicago and Calvin Wilson of Baltimore helped bang another town into submission with mortars.

Lieuts. Husid, Clinesmith and Hammond have proved crack leaders and Sgt. Henry Burnett of New York City has proved a master mess boss.

Spring has gone AWOL and there are frigidly cold winds and rains here, but we have one hot meal daily despite the speed of advance.

Resistance Light

Germans fire everything they've got at us. I've ducked airbursts from rockets, bazookas, burp guns, 88's, automatic pistols, flak guns, mortars and small arms, but we move so fast you don't have time to remember how the last sounded before there's another. Resistance isn't strong, but we get some.

We also get all kinds of rumors One says Germany has offered unconditional surrender to America and Britain, but not Russia. Another says Hitler is dead or dying. Both could be true and we wouldn't know. We're just fighting the war, taking prisoners and spearheading the rat race through Germany on what we hope is the last long road on the way home.

Negro Pilots Hit Luftwaffe

P-Post-N-Y 4-3-45

Reuter reports from the Italian front that U. S. Negro fighter pilots are helping the Red Army as it pushes toward Vienna.

In dogfights over Wels, southwest of the Austrian city of Linz, pilots of an all-Negro fighter group, commanded by 29-year-old Capt. Walter M. Downds of New Orleans, destroyed eight Focke-Wulfs and four Messerschmitts.

This action was part of a day's work in which planes of the Middle East Air Force flew more than 2800 sorties, attacking marshalling yards and railway bridges in Austria, Yugoslavia and Italy, cutting rail lines and putting much rolling stock and road transport out of action. 4-3-45

On the ground, strong German raiding parties were smashed back by 8th Army troops.

Negro Pilots Down 3 Nazi Jet Planes In Fights Over Berlin

ROME — The 332nd Fighter Group, consisting of four squadrons of Negro pilots commanded by Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., is making a name for itself as part of the U. S. 15th Air Force. Over 75 enemy planes have been destroyed in the air and more than twice that number on the ground.

On Sunday, rail yards and bridges along lines leading to Vienna were blasted by B-17 Fortresses and B-24 Liberators of the U. S. 15th Air Force operating in close cooperation with the Russian army sweeping into Austria.

Top scorer for the Negro fighter group was Lieut. Robert W. Williams, of Ottumwa, Iowa who shot down two Nazi planes while on fighter-sscort mission.

The distinction of being the first Negro fighter pilot to engage and destroy a German jet plane was won by Lieut. Roscoe C. Brown, husband of Mrs. Laura Jones Brown, of 770 St. Nicholas avenue, New York city.

Lieut. Jones is one of three Negro pilots of the 332nd Fighter Group credited with destruction of jet planes during a forty-minute aerial dogfight over Berlin on March 24th. The other pilots are Flight Officer Charles V. Brantley, of St. Louis, and Lieut. Earl R. Lane, of Wickliffe, Ohio.

15TH AAF BASE IN ITALY.—The fighter group here under the command of Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., scored its first aerial victory of the year Friday when 1st Lt. William Price, 21, of Topeka, Kas., shot down a German ME109 while the group was on a strafing mission in the Munich area.

This formation led by Major George Roberts, deputy group commander, also destroyed five enemy aircraft on the ground, seven locomotives, five box cars and one flat car.

He fired a few short bursts and the German plane partly disintegrated and cartwheeled to the ground. 3-30-45

This was Price's first aerial victory. Continuing his strafing attack with the group, Lt. Price destroyed another enemy plane, a FW190, on the ground.

Fighter pilots see benefits for race as result of war

Los Angeles Tribune 3-5-45

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—In the lounge of the Ritz Carleton hotel, a bunch of fighter pilots were talking. All fliers of the all-Negro 332nd Fighter Group, which operates in Italy with the 15th Air Force, they each contributed an observation on the racial aspect of serving in the Army Air Force.

"At first the Italians were curious about us, not much, but a little. But then they realized we wore the American uniform and as far as they were concerned, after that we were just Americans to them," said Lt. Felix Kirkpatrick, of Chicago, wearer of the Distinguished Flying Cross.

"Other American pilots were much more curious about us," said Lt. Leonard F. Turner, Washington, D. C. "They were always stopping us to ask what unit we were in, what sort of planes we flew, where we were trained, and so on." 3-5-45

"The other American pilots I knew in Italy were swell to me," said Lt. Hubron R. Blackwell, Baltimore. "A couple of boys from Texas turned out to be my best friends."

Lt. Richard W. Hall, Albany, Ga,. felt that what his group was doing was going to help things after the war. "It'll be better, slowly, but eventually better. In what we are doing I see benefits for our children and our children's children".

His idea was seconded by Lt. George M. Rhodes, Brooklyn, who shot down one of the few German fighters encountered on D-Day in Southern France. "I may not be able to enjoy the results of this fighting we are doing, but it's going to do good," he said. 3-5-45

Someone brought up the subject of American soldiers avoiding the salute in combat zones. "It's true that a few do," said Kirkpatrick. "But I'll tell you this. A lot more go out of their way to salute you. And in the field you remember things like that."

With a tour of overseas duty completed, the fliers are here at the Army Air Forces Redistribution Station No. 1 awaiting new assignments in the Air Forces.

332nd FIGHTER GROUP HEADQUARTERS, ITALY (By Cable)—With the surrender of all German forces, the 332nd is expected to be shifted eventually to the Pacific, but will have furloughs in the States first, well-informed circles here indicated today.

Details as to how and when the group will be transferred remains a secret but it is known that it will be co-ordinated with our expanding heavy bomber campaign against Japan. 5-19-45

In extending heartiest congratulations on the manner in which the group conducted its air war to a triumphant conclusion, the commanding general stressed the fact that many men would be required to build our growing air power for the decisive blow against Japan.

It is also reported that certain units of which the 332nd is not a part, will be kept in this theatre as an occupational air force.

Plans have been completed and are now being carried out to move the remainder back to the States as rapidly as troopships and air transportation can complete the shuttle. 5-19-45

Those who have served longest in Africa and this theatre will be returned to their homes when the demobilization phase starts soon.

to Get Brief Respite

Personnel who have had the least service overseas will be returned to the States for leaves or furloughs at home before reassembling for transitional training and departure for the Pacific.

Personnel of the occupational air force will be returned to the States by rotation and replacement, but most likely not until the war against Japan is terminated.

Ten Awarded DFC's

In a mass ceremony at this base Maj. Gen. Nathan Twining, commanding general of the 15th Air Forces, awarded ten Distinguished Flying Crosses.

Pilots receiving the award for extraordinary and meritorious aerial achievements were:

Capts. Robert J. Friend, NYC; Henry R. Peoples, St. Louis; Marion R. Rodgers, Elizabeth, N.J.; Charles L. White, Oakland, Calif.

First Lts. Earl R. Lane, Wickliff, Ohio; Williams Price, Topeka, Kans.; Charles V. Brantley, St. Louis; Roscoe C. Brown, NYC; Hannibal M. Cox, Chicago, and John Mitchel, Mt. Clemens, Mich.

Numerous Awards Made

Individual awards to the fliers have mounted to 80 Distinguished Flying Crosses, 500 Air Medals and Clusters, 1 Legion of Merit, 1 Soldier's Medal and 14 Bronze Stars during the more than 10,000 individual sorties.

During the completion of nearly seven hundred combat missions against the enemy, the group has participated in five campaigns. Personnel are authorized to wear the Silver Battle Star on the theatre ribbon. 5-19-45

Saved After Seven Months

First Lt. Luther H. Smith, a veteran pilot, who was shot down and last seen bailing out of a flaming plane over enemy territory in Yugoslavia on Oct. 12, 1944, was found alive and in good health when Partisans captured Spittel, a German prisoner of war camp in Austria.

Smith, the holder of the DFC, Air Medal with five Clusters, was credited with shooting down two enemy planes and destroying four planes on the ground. 5-19-45

Prior to his entry into the armed forces, Smith was an engineering student at Iowa State University and married to Mrs. Susie I. Smith of Des Moines, Iowa.

AIR ACE INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Savannah Tribune

RICHMOND, Va.—(ANP)—Lt. Lee A. Archer, rated as America's leading Negro pilot, was able to survive 138 air missions without injury during his 14 months overseas only to be injured in an automobile accident after his return to the states. He is recovering here at the Army Air Base hospital.

Lt. Archer, who entered the army air forces while a student at New York university, was a member of Col. B. O. Davis' famous "Red Tail" flying group that holds the record of knocking out 87 planes on the ground in one mission over Lake Balaton, Hungary, between Budapest and Vienna. He has, according to army records, 10 German fighter planes to his credit. 6-21-45

One of his most exciting moments, he recalled, was when he and the late Captain Wendell O. Pruitt, famed St. Louis pilot, recently killed at Tuskegee, battled 13 Messerschmitts. Archer bagged three, Pruitt destroyed two and their group rescued them in time to take care of the rest.

"It's not superstitious, but every time I went on a flight, I always gave my crew chief my hat," Archer said. "Hold this, I'd cay, until I come back and don't worry, I'm coming back. I'm coming back."

He came back from 138 missions including one on Friday the 13th when he was shot down and landed on the Isle of Vis off the Yugoslavian coast. When he returned to his base five days later he found his crew chief wearing his hat "like a proud cock of the walk."

ADVANCED 15TH ARMY AIR FORCE BASE. — The 75 pilots of the fighter group commanded by Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., had their first real "strafing field day" of the year Sunday when they destroyed or seriously damaged nearly 80 various enemy installations and supply trains in southern Germany.

Led by Captain Edward Creston Gleed of Lawrence, Kas., the group's operations officer, the mission furnished close support to Marshal Ivan Koniev's Russian forces driving toward Dresden, knocking out the supplies the Germans were rushing to that area to check the Russian onslaught. 3-9-45

Destroy 10 Locomotives

The final tally of the group's record for the day showed 10 locomotives, two enemy aircraft on the ground and a power station completely destroyed.

Seriously damaged enemy installations included a power station, four locomotives, two aircraft on the ground, 10 passenger cars, 44 supply laden box cars, six oil cars, four loaded trucks, two ore cars.

The mission was the group's 28th since January 1 and the third strafing assignment during this period.

Seven Distinguished Flying Crosses, four Bronze Stars and 13 Air Medals were awarded various members of Col. Davis' group during a colorful ceremony at this base in recognition of their heroic achievements and ability.

Bronze Star winners included S. Sgt. Elliott W. Lucas, of Washington; T. Sgt. Roland L Poindexter of Norfolk, Cpl John T Fields of Renfroe, Ala., M. Sgt. Nathaniel A. Wade of Bellaire, Ohio. 3-9-45

Flight Officers Thomas Hawkins of Glenrock, N. Y.; Charles V. Brantley of St. Louis; Joseph Chineworth of Bloomfield, Iowa; Robert Pillow of Nashville and Vincente Williams of Los Angeles.

S. Sgt. Lucas, brother of Lt. Lucas who received the Aid Medal, won the Bronze Star because acting on his own initiative, he designed a power-driven hydraulic test stand for P-51 aircrafts, allowing the elimination of hand-pump devices formerly used to test the hydraulic systems of these airplanes. This is a great time saver over the former system. 3-9-45

T. Sgt. Poindexter won his star for outstanding services as an aircraft armorer and general "trouble shooter." His speedy analysis of mechanical inefficiences on P-51 planes made it possible for the group to keep a greater number of planes in service.

Cpl. Fields was cited for special meritorious services for so skillfully attending to his guns on the airship assigned him for this maintenance that no malfunction has yet occurred in their operation.

M. Sgt. Wade was awarded his star for services as flight chief during a period of heavy activity. The ships in his section received such thorough maintenance that none was ever forced back before completing their mission due to mechanical deficiencies.

Col. Y. H. Taylor, white commander of the 15th AAF, to which Col. Davis' group is attached, made the presentations and complimented the group for its achievements to date.

I have just had a fighter pilot's eye-view of the terrific havoc and tremendous damage inflicted on the retreating Nazis' supply lines, airfields, bridges, railway yards and military installations by fighters and bombers of the 15th Air Force, action in which Col. B. O. Davis's 332nd Fighter Group played an important role as they paved the way for the collapse of enemy resistance along this front.

Cramped for six hours in the forward special glass cockpit of this speedy little 300-MPH single-seater fighter plane flying over a route it took the 332nd five months to smash out, I viewed the bullet-torn, bomb-strewn wreckage of hundreds of locomotives, railway cars, bridges, and anti-aircraft gun positions, many of which were knocked out by our low-flying, accurate strafing red-tailed fighters.

Delaware Flyers His Pilot

My pilot, First Lt. William R. MacVittie, Wilmington, Del., "buzzed" just about every enemy target the 332nd hit during this last decisive push. Dropping down to the deck, he made simulated strafing runs over such cities as Udine, Ferrara, Salzburg, Linz and Berchtesgaden, Hitler's famed Alpine hideout, all familiar well-remember targets to veteran 332nd pilots.

The war-wrecked terrain we flashed over reminded me of a huge empty stadium after a big game. Below, I could see long dusty strings of victorious returning Allied motorized units streaming southward through the Brenner Pass to Italy and eevntually home, the winning team leaving the scene of a hard-fought, dirty victory. 5-26-45

The famous heavily-defended pass, main supply line from Germany to Italy, nicknamed by our pilots "flak alley," was a scrambled maze of wrecked Nazi equipment, scores of wrecked tank cars.

Pilots Did Work Well

Troop trains lay strewn over bullet-torn roadbeds where our fighters caught them carrying the retreating Nazi troops, fuel and debacle offer mute testimony to the flying prowess of our hard-hitting fighter pilots.

Everywhere along the route, our flight through the pass over Northern Italy and Austria, the scenery below never changed from wrecked anti-aircraft gun positions atop snowy peaks to burnt out Nazi truck convoys strewn alongside the aerial-strafed roadways. Each city was a litter of retreating air-wrecked vehicles parked in the rubble-filled remains of what were once great German war industries. 5-26-45

Throughout all the once German-held terrain, airborne destruction marked out a grim path of death and destruction blazed by our planes.

Dropping down for a tree-skimming runover the road on the Austrian end of the pass, we flew over mile on mile of wreckage of Hitler's famed panzer divisions, now nothing but charred scrap dumped by the side of road to allow Yank quartermaster trucking companies unhindered access to the supply lines of our troops in Austria.

Flyers "Black Devils" to Nazis

On one straight stretch of road outside Udine, I counted more than 75 wrecked tanks, trucks and armoured cars riddled by our pilots' bullets. I wondered if the Nazis who died in this wreckage knew that the red-tailed fighters that blasted them to eternity were flown by the feared "Black Devils," as they called the 322nd pilots. 5-26-45

We buzzed a former German airdrome, now a tangled shambles of charred steel, narrowly missing the top of the hangers, leap-frogging over scattered wreckage, scores of blasted swastika-marked German planes caught on the ground by our pilots as they made strafing runs over the airfield. The smashed planes looked like a child's broken tops scattered over a green carpet.

On the return trip, we flew a course straight south over the Alps at 16,000 feet to clear the snow-capped peaks. With more than 22,000 air miles to my credit as a correspondent for the AFRO, this was my first experience with high altitude oxygen flying. At this height, air so rare that few minutes without an oxygen mask is enough to cash in one's insurance policy.

Climbing at 12,000 without a mask, I could sense the slow logginess to my muscular reactions, but with the first deep breath through my mask everything cleared and I became normal.

On returning to the field I was surrounded by pilots eager to find out the extent of damage done to targets by the 332nd. When these pilots were last over the targets before the surrender, 332nd pilots made their strafing runs at more than 400 MPH through blazing flak and where blending every effort to get in and through the target area, then out safely.

Few ever had a chance to look back to view the extent of damage he had caused, so I had to give a detailed account of the hell they had played on their rampages behind the German lines.

332nd "Out in Front

There is no doubt in my mind that when the final score is added up, the 332nd will be out in front on the list of missions accomplished. Their success can be measured in terms of the rapid advance of our ground forces.

Pilots who have recently received air medal are:

First Lts. Conrad Johnson, 460 W. 147th St., NYC; Robert W. Lawrence, 127 Liberty St., Bloomfield, N.J.; Harry T. Stewart, 10511 34th Ave., Corona, L.I., N.Y.; Charles Hill, 616 W. Grand Blvd., Detroit; Carl Ellis, 529 Oakwood Blvd., Chicago; 5-26-45

Fighter Group Makes Its 150th Mission

Kansas City, Mo.

The Call 1-26-45

ADVANCED 15TH ARMY AIR FORCE BASE IN TALY.—While bad weather continued to restrict their activities, the fighter group commanded by Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr. flew its 150th mission a few days ago.

On this history-making mission, the group provided escort for heavy bombers of the 15th Air Force which struck at strategic targets over Austria. 1-26-45

No enemy aircraft were encountered and all of the group's planes returned to their base.

Included in the group's personnel recently promoted are:

SHOT DOWN OVER NAZI LINES IN V.E. DRIVE, WAS MISSING TWENTY DAYS

St. Louis Argus 5-25-45

First Lt. Hugh White, one of St. Louis' top ranking army pilots, has been found after being reported missing on combat mission over northern Italy during the final days of the war in the West. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh P. White, 4333a West Belle place, who said they had never given up hopes that he was alive, received word of his safety from Maj. Gen. N. F. Twining, Commander of the Fifteenth Air Force. In a message of his disappearance from the Army Air Force received May 9, the following information was conveyed:

"Your son, 1st Lt. Hugh White, has been missing in action since April 23. At that time he was piloting a P-51 on combat mission to Northern Italy. 5-25-45

"In the vicinity of Padova, Hugh's ship was damaged by flak, but remained airborne for sometime thereafter. When it became apparent that the craft would not be able to return to the base, your son bailed out successfully. Since that time, no word has been received concerning his fate."

The message went on to discuss disposal of his personal effects left behind and ended by stating: 5-25-45

"In recognition of the meritorious service he has rendered his country, your son has been awarded the Air Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters. I am proud to have had him in my command. Should there be any change in his status, you will be notified by the War Department."

The joy of the parents over the announcement of discovery of 1st Lt. White alive after the surrender of the Germans was followed shortly thereafter by a cablegram from 1st Lt. White telling his parents not to write as he would be home within 30 days, but he could not inform them at the time of the circumstances surrounding his furlough.

Captured By Germans

Unconfirmed reports are that White was captured by Germans who beat and harassed him in an effort to force information from him concerning the American forces. Only the crushing V-E drive which was on at that time and had the Germans in a panicky state is believed to have saved him from a worse fate.

First Lieutenant White, a product of Sumner high school and Stowe Teachers' college, was in the pursuit squadron that accompanied heavy bombers on the first attack upon a Berlin target by Italy based Army Air Force aircrafts. Flight Officer Charles V. Brantley, whose relatives reside at 4236 Fairfax avenue, was also a member of the Mustang pilots on the Berlin Mission.

MAJOR WILLIAM A. CAMPBELL of Tuskegee, Alabama, is with the 332nd Fighter Group of the 99th Pursuit Squadron. He has been in the service over three years and has been stationed in the Adriatic and Northern Italy. He is here just to pick up his baggage, and be on his way to the Pacific. Athletics are his hobby. He is single and at present is staying at the Theresa Hotel. He is the son of T. M. Campbell, field agent for the Department of Agriculture, who has just recently returned from a tour of Africa, studying African methods of agriculture. Major Campbell, who flew with Col. Benj. O. Davis in the Mediterranean campaign, is expected to serve with him in the Pacific, where Colonel Davis, reported soon to be made a brigadier general, will command the 447th Bomber Group.

Colonel Davis Says Group Has Flown Over 100 Missions and Has Downed 75 Ships

Balt. Md.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — In less than one year the all-colored 332nd Fighter Group in Italy has flown more than 100 missions and has firmly established itself as an efficient, hard-hitting outfit, Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., declared here recently.

"Flying P-51s on bomber escort and strafing missions, we destroyed seventy-five ships in the air and easily twice that number on the ground," the group's commanding officer said at the AAF Redistribution Station.

Job Suited to Group

Col. Davis, who took command of the 332nd shortly before it was sent to Italy in January of this year, pointed out that ying fighter escort on long-range bombing missions was a job well suited to his group.

As an example of the fighting spirit of his men, the 32-year-old West Pointer told of a mission to Budapest last October when the four squadrons composing the 332nd were ordered to strafe river and rail traffic along the Danube River.

West of Budapest, he related, a pilot spotted a low-flying plane and was sent down to investigate. The pilot shot the plane down, then called for the rest of his squadron.

Down 8 on One Mission

"They were over an airfield where fliers were practicing landings and take-offs," said the colonel. "They joined the traffic pattern and shot down four more ME-109s. On their way up to rejoin the group they picked up four Heinkel-111s."

The squadron, headed by the colonel, then proceeded up the Danube and strafed oil barges and railway trains. A third squadron located another airfield and destroyed eighteen ships on the ground, while the fourth came across a motor park and destroyed a fleet of trucks.

"Not bad for one five-hour mission," added the colonel.

First Lieutenant Lee A. Archer of New York, a member of the 332nd Fighter Group in Italy, was named "Yank of the Week" in the Abbott and Costello program, heard over NBC network last Friday. The program cited his recent feats when he downed four enemy planes while in action over Hungary.

In his honor, the sponsors of the program, Camel Cigarettes, sent 400,000 of their product to fighters overseas. 3-3-45

In Spite of Problem, Keep Getting Awards

ADVANCED 15TH AAF BASE, ITALY—Already sixty replacement pilots behind schedule, War Department officials are further jeopardizing the continued high operational standards of the 332nd Fighter Group by their recent refusal to assure the group that its major problem of obtaining replacements will be corrected soon.

Washington officials indicated to Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., group commander, who returned here from a furlough in the States last week, that they would investigate the situation but offered no vide every citizen willing to work with a job in the post-war period." explanation for this laxity which has existed to an extent since the group's arrival overseas a year ago but has now grown to alarming proportions.

This means that Col. Davis, in order to keep the group at full strength, must continue retaining an increasing number of pilots eligible for shipment home as a result of having completed their normal quota of missions.

30 Unable to Leave

Thirty-odd such pilots in the group are so affected. I took a 600-mile trip by plane and truck to the group's base ten days ago and found this condition to be the basis of whatever dissension of major proportions exists among its personnel now.

The fact that some pilots who would be on their way home if due replacements had arrived have since met with serious mishaps on missions, hasn't helped the situation any.

Depend on 2 Schools

The additional fact that Col. Davis's group is the only one of the Army Air Force so affected, because its pilots can come only through the Army's special aviation schools for colored soldiers at Tuskegee and Walterboro, S.C., make it still more disagreeable.

Because airmen are being shipped here in sufficient force and distributed as other groups need replacements, this problem has not been present among them to such an extent.

The group here has the belief still undisputed by the War Department that sufficient colored pilots specially trained for single engine fighter plane duty are being turned out in the States to fulfill its monthly quota.

Requirement Increased

The lack of due replacements makes it necessary for Col. Davis to hold his pilots closed to a 70-mission requirement for relief. This applies, though, only to those physically fit to carry on after 50 missions.

[EDITOR'S NOTE: Many white pilots in other theatres, however, have flown far more than 50 missions before being sent home, so that it cannot be charged that the necessity of flying more than 50 missions is based upon color.]

The actual replacement problem facing the group can be seen in the following information which shows the group has received only 120 of its scheduled 180 replacements since its arrival overseas:

It was scheduled to receive 18 replacements a month, beginning last March. The group first began receiving them May 4, when 15 came, leaving March and April unaccounted for.

Full Quota Reached Once

Others came as follows: 15 on May 12; 14 on June 27; 16 on August 1; 11 on August 14; 16 on September 10; 15 on November 11 and 18 on December 3, which was the only occasion when the actual full replacement quota reached the group as scheduled.

Nevertheless, the group is still ranking and operating on a high par with similar ones of the 15th AAF.

On missions successfully flown as far as weather permits, the pilots are still distinguishing themselves to the extent that they are winning coveted awards for meritorious services.

Capt. Weathers Gets D.F.C.

The latest in this category was the award of the Distinguished Flying Cross on January 5 to Captain Luke J. Weathers, Jr., of Memphis.

Flight commander of one of the group's squadrons, Capt. Weathers holds the Air Medal with five Oak Leaf Clusters, has two victories to his credit and has flown seventy-five missions. A former Xavier University student, he is unmarried. Both of his parents live in Memphis.

332nd Fighters Face 'Collapse' But Morale Still High

Northwest Herald Seattle, Wash. 1-2-45

ROME.—Nineteen months of combat, patrol and reconnaissance flights have taken their toll of Negro pilots, and Col. Benjamin O. Davis' 332nd fighter group "is threatened with possible collapse as a unit."

"Casualties have depleted their ranks," reported PM's Negro correspondent Roi Ottley last week, "And adequate replacements have failed to arrive. The bottom here has been scraped." 1-2-45

"The reason offered by members of the group is that there are insufficient pilots to fly missions," Ottley wrote. "Qet the Negro fighter group has demonstrated a toughness, skill and intelligence which may assure Negroes a place in postwar aviation."

Gen. Montgomery Praised Pilots

"As raw pilots they won commendation from Gen. Montgomery for their part in the Italian campaign. They supported the British 8th Army by dive bombing and strafing enemy machine-gun nests, tanks, transportation and artillery installations. 1-2-45

In their 19 months of combat duty overseas, Negro flyers have seen action over Munich, Vienna, Toulon, Ploesti, Sofia, Belgrade, Friedrichshafen, Budapest and Salerno. The four fighter squadrons have provided cover for heavy bombers, patrolled harbors, convoyed ships, hunted U-boats and made reconnaissance flights. Over the Anzio beachhead they shot down 17 enemy fighters and bombers in one day's operation.

"But the fact is that this is a glorified Jim Crow organization," Ottley continued, "and it is for this very reason, the pilots claim, that the personnel situation is critical. While, as an all-Negro organization, it admittedly provided new opportunities, they say, it also has serious drawbacks. These they describe as follows: 1-2-45

Lack Pilots For Replacements

"The inexperience of Negro officers, pilots and mechanics who do not have the opportunity to associate with veterans before going into action.

"Lack of a steady flow of replacements caused by the pattern of drawing pilots from only the Negro air schools. The number of pilots being trained has been reduced.

"Lack of proper orientation in combat tactics before coming overseas, because their white instructors were without combat experience.

"Unfamiliarity with the type of aircraft pilots will fly in combat.

"Mental strain of competition against the entire corps of white pilots and ground crews.

"Intellectual isolation produced by having all Negroes in one organization away from every other fighter pilot group. 1-2-45

Morale Still High

"These criticisms have not impaired the organization's morale," Ottley added. "The fact is that it is very high." But it is doubtful whether it hinges on the declared objectives of the war. More than likely it is a group loyalty, tied loosely to aspirations for their race. For each man has pride in his part in the common undertaking. He wants Negro pilots to excel. They reason that they have a job to do and cooperation is necessary for success, but they have moments when they feel the whole effort is worthless."

WITH THE 15TH AIR FORCE, Italy—The all-Negro 332nd Mustang fighter group, led by Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., commanding officer, on February 28 chalked up its 200th combat mission with the 15th Army Air Force when it provided close escort for heavy bombers attacking enemy targets on the Benner route in northern Italy. 3-24-45

These Negro pilots have the enviable distinction of not having lost a single heavy bomber to enemy fighters.

The group began flying with the 15th AAF in June, 1944. Using P-47 Thunderbolts soon after their initiation into the 15th, the pilots were assigned P-51 Mustangs.

The pilots have been awarded 63 Distinguished Flying Crosses and completed more than 8,000 individual sorties. Colonel Davis has been awarded the Legion of Merit, the United States' fourth highest award.

The all-Negro group has destroyed more than 200 enemy aircraft in combined aerial and ground strafing assaults and has destroyed or damaged much enemy rolling stock.

brought down two FWs; Second Lieut. Earle Carey of St. Louis got two ME 109s and Second Lieut. John E. Edwards of Steubenville, Ohio, downed two FW 190s.

Other victories were chalked up by Lieut. Harold M. Morris, of Portland, Ore., one FW; Flight Officer James H. Fisher of Stoughton, Mass., ane FW. The twelfth victory was scored by a pilot who failed to return from his mission.

AN AIR BASE IN ITALY —(By Cable)—Scoring their first sensational aerial victory in several months, Col. B. O. Davis' P-51 Mustang fliers, the 332nd Fighter Group, shot down thirteen Nazi planes and destroyed or damaged at least four other enemy craft while on a mission over the general Vienna-Munich area last Saturday.

Colonel Davis' daring fliers were flying over the area with a P-38 Lightning Group when nineteen German planes were sighted. Eager for a real fight, the P-51s and P-38s turned their noses toward the enemy and after the smoke had cleared, the Davis fliers had accounted for seven ME-109s and six FW-190s.

IOWA FLIER GETS TWO

The P-38s brought down two other enemy planes. The four other probables, damaged or destroyed, were claimed by the Mustangs

Only one tan flier shot down two of Hitler's planes. Credit for this twin victory went to 1st Lieut. Robert W. Williams of Ottumwa, Iowa. His blazing guns sent two FW-190s burning and smoking to the earth.

Mustang fliers recording single victories were Maj. William A. Campbell, Tuskegee Institute, Ala., one ME-109; First Lieutenants Daniel Rich, Rutherford, N. J., one ME-109; Roscoe C. Brown, New York City, one FW-190; Earl R. Lane, Wickliffe, Ohio, one ME-109; Bertram W. Wilson, Brooklyn, one ME-109; Second Lieutenants Rual W. Bell, Portland, Ore., one FW-190; Thomas P. Braswell, Buford, Georgia, one FW-190; John W Davis, Kansas City, Kan., one ME 109; James Hall, Washington, D C., one ME-109; Hugh J. White S. Louis, Mo., one ME-109, and Flight Officer John H. Lyle, Chicago, one FW-190.

THIRTY-FIRST BAGS 17

The operation was part of a combined strafing and bomber escort mission of the Fifteenth AAF, marking the first anniversary of the Fifteenth under the command of Brig. Gen. Deanc Strother. The mission also stood out as the most successful day of the year for the Fifteenth.

During the day, the Fifteentl downed a total of thirty-five German planes and destroyed fifty seven locomotives.

Colonel Davis' Group was surpassed however, by the Thirty first Mustang Fighter Group whicl scored seventeen victories for th day.

The victory Saturday set a record for the Davis Fighter Grou for enemy aircraft destroyed in a single day. In addition to the thirteen planes destroyed, the Group added to its list of destruction seven locomotives, one large warehouse and several units of rolling stock.

Lieutenants Lane and Brown, who shared in Saturday victories, knocked out jet-propelled planes the previous week while on escort mission to Berlin.

Colonel Davis accounted for one locomotive, while other locomotives were destroyed by Lieutenants Leroy Roberts Jr., Poccoa, Ga., two; Emile Clifton, San Francisco, one, and William Price, Topeka, Kan., one.

During the week, two squadron commanders of the Group received promotions from captain to major. They were Andrew D. Turner, Washington, D. C., and William Campbell, Tuskegee.

Two other missions during the week were led by Capt. Jack D. Holsclaw, Spokane, Wash., and Maj. Edward C. Gleed, Lawrence, Kansas.

Some Afterthoughts on Warhawk-Raider Game

New York N.Y.

By Nat Low

The Tuskegee Warhawks-New London Sea Raiders game at the Polo Grounds Thanksgiving Day was one of the most enjoyable contests I've ever had the pleasure of witnessing. Not only was it a splendidly played game—as all the writers, coaches and fans who saw it will testify—but it was animated by a friendliness and democracy that was qualitatively different from most other games. 11-24-45

The men of both teams seemed acutely aware that people far and wide were watching their actions, their ability to play hard, smashing football without meanness or friction.

Thus, after nearly every tackle, the men would help each other off the ground. A Negro lad would lend a hand to the southern star Dub Jones, who would in turn pat the Tuskegee player on the shoulder. So it went, even though the tackling was bone-shattering at times.

There were a lot of very, very good gridders on the field Thursday. Jones and Vince Moravec of the Raiders could probably grace most of the pro teams around and Bert Piggott, Jerry Williams and Ira O'Neall of the Warhawks could do likewise. Piggott, who is being discharged from the Army this week and is receiving a scholarship to UCLA, is almost a cinch to become one of the best backs in the country next year. He has everything and then some. I have rarely ever seen a better kicker—he got away punts that traveled 64, 50, 46 and 40 yards, one of them stopping dead on the one foot line.

He couldn't display much of his vaunted passing because of the sloppy condition of the playing field and the mud on the ball, but the few times pass plays were called he was a cool, deadly thrower. Once he let go a bullet jump pass while surrounded by four would-be tacklers. His poise and accuracy brought smiles to the face of Steve Owen, Giant coach, who watched the game from the press box.

Said Steve, "There's a man I'd like to have on my Giants. He and the fullback Jerry Williams. They're football players."

The press box was packed with writers of the met press and almost all were agreed both Piggott and Williams could make the National Football League.

This was the best attended and best played game of the series which dates back to 1941 when the late Wilmeth Sidat-Singh and Bernie Jefferson led another Negro team into action against a pro white eleven which featured Billy DeCorrevant and Special Delivery Jones, Pitt star.

It is to be hoped that by next year the sponsors of the game, Associated Football Charities, will get two mixed teams, with Negro and white players on both sides, instead of the traditional all-Negro and all-white teams. I think that while Thursday's game was important, the time now has come to mix athletes freely—and, of course, there is no question that it will work. 11-24-45

As Al Laney said in his Herald Tribune column yesterday, "All the boys on the New London team were white. It would have been interesting to know how many of them were southern boys. But that doesn't really matter. It was a hard-fought game and about as clear as you would want to see. It was proof, for those who needed proof, that white boys and Negroes can play games together without disagreeable incidents, have fun at it and put on a good show for the spectators.

T.A.A.F.

". . . The crowd probably had a better time than any you will have seen at any football game all season. Such genuine enthusiasm and thorough enjoyment is rare."

2 TAAF Pilots Die in Crash

12-15-45 Pa.

Pittsburgh Courier

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—Aviation Cadets Spencer P. Isabelle and Otis E. Marshall, advanced student pilots in twin-engine training here were killed in a crash Monday, when the B-25 Medium Bomber in which they were flying formation collided in mid-air in a routine flight near Union Springs, Ala.

Details of the crash were not available, and a board of qualified officers has been appointed to determine the cause of the accident. Aviation Cadet Isabelle, 20, was the son of Mrs. Lavenia Isabelle, 6250 Bromley Avenue, Oakland, Calif.

He was graduated from the Oakland High School in 1943 and completed one and a half years of ROTC before entering the service. Aviation Cadet Marshall, 22, of 1439 Lippert Road, N.E., Canton, Ohio, is survived by a brother, Ben H. Marshall, of Fort Madison, Iowa, and his father, a resident of Canton, Ohio. He is a graduate of Canton High School.

Both student pilots have been closely associated during their time in the service, and were to have graduated here in January, 1946.

TAAF Celebrates 4th Anniversary

Pittsburgh Courier Pa

TUSKEGEE, Ala.—The Tuskegee Army Air Field celebrates its fourth anniversary this week. On Thursday, Aug. 9, official ceremonies at the field will mark the observance, while on Sunday, Aug 5, the Army Air Forces broadcast a special program dedicated to the field and the men it has produced. Col. B. O. Davis Jr., commander of the 477th Composite Group at Godman Field, Ky., and the original leader of the famed Ninety-ninth Pursuit Squadron, which got its start at Tuskegee, was the main speaker on the broadcast program.

The fourth anniversary of the Tuskegee field also marks the fourth anniversary of Negroes in the Army Air Forces. The field was activated in July, 1941, and the first thirteen cadets began their training there the next month.

SENT 332nd OVERSEAS 8-11-45

Since that time, the Ninety-ninth, 100th, 301st and 302nd Pursuit Squadrons have been born, trained and sent overseas as the 332nd Fighter Group. Fighting from North Africa, over Sicily, throughout the Italian campaigns on missions over Vienna, Ploesti, and Berlin, these Tuskegee graduates compiled an impressive record.

Eighty-seven of them have paid the highest measure of sacrifice a man can give his country—killed in action; enemy flak has wounde several on combat missions; twe ty were reported missing or pri oners of war; more than sixty-fiv of the 450 who were sent oversea received the Distinguished Flyin Cross; their guns have accounte for at least 100 enemy planes.

MEN NOW FLY BOMBERS

Another outgrowth of the Tuske gee Air Field has been the intro duction of Negro fliers to twin engine medium bombers with whic the 477th is now training at God man Field, Ky., while replacement are being trained at Walterbor S. C.

Commander of TAAF is Col. No F. Parrish, a native of Corpu Christi, Texas, who assumed con mand of the field late in 1942 an who is accredited with developin the field to its present high leve of efficiency.

Other commanders of the fiel in the order of their successio were Major James Ellison, Jul 1941 to Jan., 1942, and Col. Fre erick V. H. Kimble, Jan., 1942, t Dec., 1942. 8-11-45

TRAINS TECHNICIANS

TAAF not only trains fliers bu trains technicians for all the essential offices of a combat air field—mechanics, photographers, radio operators, and weather men.

Barney Jefferson Back Again

TUSKEGEE, Ala., Nov. 15.—He is just rounding into shape after long service as a fighter pilot in Europe (54 missions) and word is to watch Lt. Lawrence Bernard (Barney) Jefferson in the Tuskegee Warhawk backfield when the famed Negro AAF eleven meets the New London Submarine Base Undersea Raiders in the Polo Grounds Thanksgiving Dal. Nov. 22, in New York's biggest charity football contests.

Barney is a familiar name to football fans, recalling his All-American triple-threat days at Northwestern University eight years ago. The big fellow ranks with the best players in Big Ten history.

As Lt. Jefferson, he fought with the 332nd Fighter Group in Italy with 54 missions and five enemy planes destroyed on the ground to his credit. During Barney's 12 months overseas, he distinguished himself as a fighter pilot, flying escort to bombing missions over Munich, Ploesti, Vienna and Greece. He was awarded the DFC, and Air Medal with five Oak Leaf Clusters. 11-4-5 N.Y.

Because of illness following his return from overseas, Lt. Jefferson was not a member of the Warhawk team until the opening game. Since then he has rounded into shape. Earlier in the season he assisted Lt. Big Bill Bell in coaching the backfield of the AAF squad. 11-16-45

Because of his wide experience in football, Jefferson usually makes the scouting trips with Lt. Bell, and saw the Sub Base team in action against Harvard and Holy Cross. Lt. Jefferson was a star of the last Negro charity game at the Polo Grounds in 1941, when his team (Oz Simmons, Sidat-Singh, etc.) lost by one touchdown to an All-Star pro white team.

One of the top football games of the year will be played next Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, at the Polo Grounds, when the Tuskegee Army Air Field meets the powerful U.S. Navy Submarine Base in an inter-racial game which is the third in a series begun in 1941.

The Tuskegee AAF Warhawks, famed Negro Air Force group which includes many players back from the service in Europe, offer one of the nation's great football stars—Bert Piggot, former Illinois All-America candidate who has averaged 7.45 yards per carry in 55 tries. Piggot, a triple threat man in the best sense of the term, will play in the backfield with Lt. Berney Jefferson, former Northwester All-American in 1939, who won the Air Medal with four oak leaf clusters, four battle stars and the DFC.

The New London Oversea Raiders are a mixed Negro and white team with a host of former excellent gridders. The game, promoted by the Associated Football Charities, is an important one in the campaign to further Negro-white relations and will, I am sure, receive the support of all real sport fans.

Tuskegee Beats Raiders, 14-7, As Piggott and Jones Star

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

By NAT LOW 11-23-45

Before an excited Negro-white crowd of 20,000 fans who turned the Polo Grounds into a carnival arena yesterday, the Tuskegee Army Air Field Warhawks, composed of Negro fighter pilots and crews of the 352nd Fighter Group, beat the New London Sub Base Undersea Raiders, 14-7.

WARHAWKS	7	7	0	0—14
SEA RAIDERS	0	7	0	0— 7

The veterans of far-flung war theaters played hard, smashing football, but throughout exhibited that friendship and mutual respect which was born in the war.

Playing on a field made almost unnavigable by a torrential morning downpour, the Warhawks, who have been deaten only once in two years and who had taken seven previous games this season as against but a single loss, struck in the first and second periods to score their touch downs and roll up their eighth victory of the campaign.

PIGGOTT SENSATIONAL

Col. Bert Piggott, former Illinois footballer, proved to be everything the publicity releases had claimed he was. He ran with tremendous speed, got away kicks that travelled awesome distances and despite the mud-caked pigskin, succeeded in showing why he is one of the leading service passengers in the country. Just slightly behind Piggott in brilliance was Warhawk fullback Jerry Williams, who scored both touchdowns, center John Stuart and left end Ira O'Neal.

For the Undersea Raiders, former LSU and Tulane star Dub Jones was the standout. Jones, a lean, rugged pile-driver, carried the big portion of the Raiders' offensive but he received valiant support from 210-pound Vince Moravec, former Lafayette fullback whose crashing charges over tackle kept the Raiders in the game down to the closing seconds.

Had it not been for the waterlogged turf, the score would have been larger for both teams worked out of alternating T and single wing formations that were dazzling as they were effective.

Although the mud-soaked ball kept forwards to a minimum, passes figured in all three of the game's touchdowns—as did an incredible fifty yard kick by Piggott which stopped dead on the Raider one foot line in the opening period and which led to the first Warhawk tally. 11-23-45

With their backs to the goal posts, the Raiders went into a kick formation at this juncture but Jones' boot was partially blocked and recovered by Warhawk center John Stuart on the 13. Piggott fumbled the slippery ball on the first play and was thrown back to the 17 but from a single wing formation on the next one he threw a jump pass while surrounded by four Raiders which smacked right into the hands of end Lt. Bill Hudgins who carried it to the one yard line.

After being stopped dead by a stonewall defense on the first two tries, fullback Williams burst over his right tackle on third down and went through for the score. His boot was good and that made the score 7-0.

Piggott, whose running and kicking was bringing tremendous roars from the crowd, set off a real thunderburst when he booted one towards the end of the first period that sailed 64 yards.

But Jones, who had to turn tail and chase the ball, brought it back thirty yards to the Tuskegee 46 before being downed by none other than Piggott.

From here the Raiders moved irrisistibly to their score, which came early in the second period. On pile-driving plunges behind their heavier line, the Raiders drove to four successive first downs that brought the ball to the Warhawk's four from where Moravec crashed over for the score. Jones booted the extra point and that knotted things at 7-7.

TOUHDOWN INTERCEPTION

However, a few minutes later, after the Raiders had taken the ball on an exchange of punts, Williams intercepted a bullet pass over the line by Jones on the midfield stripe and picking up two bockers started to swish down the right sideline with a terrific burst of speed. Running through the mud, Williams outdistanced Jones and went over for the score to put the Warhawks ahead in what proved to be the final touchdown of the contest.

The loveliest play of the game, which was nullified, came in the middle of the third period when Piggott recovered a Moravec fumble on the Warhawks 20-yard line and whizzed 75 yards to the five. Trapped on the 25 by Jones, Piggott stopped dead, feinted first to the left and then to the right and finally got around Jones who eventually drove him out of bounds. But the officials ruled the fumble had touched the ground and the play was called back.

With the time running out the Raiders took to the air with desperation tosses late in the game and succeeded in moving the ball to the Warhawk fifteen on a forward-lateral from Moravec to Jones to Desmond Charouhas but a diving tackle by Piggott stopped the threat as the gun sounded ending the game.

Tuskegee Army Air Field, Ala.—In a forceful address keynoting the development of a strong personality an an aid toward achieving fuller integration into America's democracy Mr. Forrester B. Washington, Director of Atlanta University School of Social Work, Atlanta, Ga., delivered a stirring message to the 33rd class of Aviation Cadets who were graduated from the Tuskegee Army Air Field in graduation exercises held on November 20.

Mr. Washington, who has been a leading figure in the field of social work at Atlanta University for two decades, told the youthful pilot graduates: ". . . The same courage which was required of you in training should be yours to carry into civilian life in seeking employment in commercial aviation." He also offered many concrete suggestions concerning post-war career possibilties in commercial aviation, and urged the graduates to use initiative in pioneering the field for Negroes in commercial flying.

12-6-45

Youngest Class in History

The graduation class, numbering 25, represented the youngest class to be graduated from Tuskegee Army Air Field. The average age of the newly appointed 2nd Lieutenants and Flight Officers is 19, which established a new age level for graduates in more than three years of flight training.

Honor students in the class, who were selected for all-around excellence in all phases of training during the 11 months spent as cadets were: 2nd Lt. Lincoln J. Ragsdale, Ardmore, Oklahoma (first); F/O William A. Streat, Lawrenceville, Va. (second); and 2nd Lt. William Bibb, Ottumwa, Iowa (third).

Fourth Anniversary At Tuskegee Army Air Field:

TAAF Can Take Pride In A War Job Well Done

Journal and Guide

By LEM GRAVES JR.
Journal and Guide War Correspondent
Norfolk, Va.

If there appears to be some extra chest expansion noticeable around Tuskegee Army Air Field this week, I would say that there was sufficient justification for it.

For they're celebrating the fourth anniversary of the field this week—which means that they are also celebrating the fourth anniversary of Negro pilot training in the Army Air Forces—and I am convinced that they have good reason for taking pride in their four-year achievement at TAAF.

8-11-45

GRAVES

The best way to evaluate the commodity turned out by any production plant, it seems to me, is to watch its performance under the difficult strains of hard use. To be sure, plants can set up various scientific testing grounds at which consumer use conditions are simulated, but they seldom show the "bugs" which develop when the product is exposed to the trying conditions of actual use.

I may not be able to see and know how they build my automobile in Detroit but I can tell, after I've driven it several thousand miles, whether the automobile manufacturer has reason to beat his chest about his accomplishment.

THEY PASSED THE TESTS

So without knowing too much about how they do their job at TAAF, I can say, without hesitation, that they can take pride in their achievement. Because I watched their finished products operating under the gruelling tests of war and combat and I know they were good.

While TAAF is busy celebrating its four year production record, it seems appropriate to briefly review the record made by the Negro men on wings who did a magnificent job as Army Air Corps pilots and ground personnel in the overseas theatre. For they were trained at TAAF and they passed, with flying colors, the supreme test of ability, training, leadership and cooperation which was imposed by combat in North Africa and Europe.

It was April 2, 1943, when the 99th Fighter Squadron sailed from New York harbor. They were the pioneers. No Negro Air Corps pilots had ever flown in combat for the United States before and nobody knew how the "experiment" would turn out.

Two months later, on June 2, these pilots were briefed for their first mission. Flying P-40 Warhawks, from Cape Bon, in North Africa, they were sent to divebomb the tiny Island of Pantelleria, between North Africa and Sicily.

CARRIED HEAVY LOAD

These men carried a heavy load on this mission. Not only did they carry bombs but they carried the hopes and aspirations of 13,000,000 American Negroes. But despite their load, they got off the ground, did their job and came back to land.

With this mission, they launched a new career for Negro youth—a career which has cost many lives but a career which opened new vistas of opportunity for service to their country and for personal achievement.

It was a hard, gruelling pace that they had to follow before they were "accepted." In those first days, many white airmen were skeptical about their ability to measure up. Every known psychological barrier was thrown in their way. Despite the fact that they flew regularly for several months from North Africa, Sicily, and the Eastern Italian coast, around Foggia, there still existed, in the minds of other Air Forces personnel, some doubts about their ability. These doubts, which persisted long after Captain Charles B. Hall had shot down the first German plane to become a victim of a Negro airman, and after several of their fliers had been killed or made prisoners of war, depressed these young men and made it particularly difficult for them to continue the hard, dangerous work of dive-bombing and close-support flying. If TAAF had done a less efficient job of training them, it is quite possible that they would have cracked in the face of the persistent refusal of their fellow Air Corps mates to "accept" them.

But then came Anzio. The great show started on January 28, 1944. In three days of furious fighting, the 99th became a fighting byword among allied air and ground troops in the Mediterranean theatre. Names of heroes of that memorable air operation were on the lips of every Air Corps pilot in Italy. The kids were "in."

DAVIS TAKES LARGER COMMAND

Meanwhile, Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., who had commanded these men through the North African and early Sicilian phases of combat operations, had returned to the United States to assume command of the three-squadron 332nd Fighter Group.

This outfit, three times the size of the 99th and accompanied by a colored service group, the 96th, had sailed with your reporter aboard, from Hampton Roads Port of Embarkation for the Italian theatre on January 3 of the same year.

We were still on the high seas when radio reports flashed the startling news that the 99th fliers had run their victory total from one to seventeen planes in the Anzio beachhead show. Morale went up because these men, facing combat themselves, knew that other Negro pilots had made the grade and had paved the way for them.

THEY HAVE OWN DIFFICULTIES

As a result of the 99th's great showing, we met an enthusiastic welcome when we first landed in Italy. But the 332nd fliers were destained to have to "sweat out" their own gruelling period of initiation, regardless of the achievements of the 99th. They had five months of difficult, monotonous and unrewarding coastal patrol duty in the P-39 Airacobra assigned them and their growing pains were no less severe than had been those of their predecessors.

But they were, also, to have their day of triumph. It was June 9, 1944, after they had been taken out of the P-39 and placed in the cockpit of the heavy, effective P-47 Thunderbolt for long range, bomber escort duty with the 15th Strategic Air Force. On June 7, these lads had flown their first bomber escort mission. On June 8th, they had been assigned a strafing mission which was scarcely spectacular. But on June 9, while escorting bombers from the Adriatic coast of Italy, they were jumped by German fighters and they shot down five enemy planes in some bristling action.

WHITES FOUND THEM DEPENDABLE

From then on, the 332nd fliers were "in." They had other difficult moments but from June 7 until the end of the war on May 8, 1945, these fliers earned the respect and admiration of thousands of bomber and fighter crew members who found them dependable and courageous.

An interesting sociological sidelight to their notable achievements was the fact that they converted many southern lads to a new appreciation for and evaluation of the abilities of Negro airmen and indoctrinated these men with a genuine respect for the potentialities of Negro youths.

For nine out of ten 15th Air Force officer and enlisted fliers will invariably praise the "Red Tails" as they came to be known when they were transferred from Thunderbolts to the P-51 Mustang last fall. The 332nd men painted the tails of the Mustang a bright red color. Whites commend them, especially, for the fact that they would stick by the bombers, despite the temptation to promote their own "jerry-killing" reputations by unauthorized fighter sweeps. They stayed on the job, protecting bombers, which was their usual assignment. Many white Air Corps men have told me that, at escort, the "Red Tails" were the best fighter group in Italy.

Col. Davis, who led the 99th, and then the 332nd, into combat, has been chosen to lead the third Negro Air outfit into combat in the Pacific. His new command is the 477th Composite Fighter-Bomber Group. That is a tribute to the genius of this officer, one of the first class of fighter pilots to graduate from TAAF.

TWO COMMANDERS OUT OF FIRST CLASS

As further evidence of the quality of training given at TAAF from the very beginning is the fact that another graduate in that first class, Major George Spencer Roberts, succeeded to the command of first the 99th and later the 332nd Group when Col. Davis left those units to assume bigger commands. Col. Davis and Major Roberts are the only Negro Air Corps group commanders in the United States Army.

Of the other three men in that first class, only one, Captain Mac Ross, has been killed. He crashed in Italy last year. The other two men are: Captain Lemuel Rodney Custis, who completed a tour of duty as a combat pilot with the 99th and has returned to the States; and Captain Charles Debow, a former fighter squadron commander, who has been returned to the United States.

Of the graduates of Tuskegee, eighty have been awarded the coveted Distinguished Flying Cross, and more than 400 have won the Air Medal with oak leaf clusters as a result of brilliant combat records overseas.

Some have died but in dying for the joint cause of world peace and domestic justice for their people, have made memorable contributions to race progress. Those who have lived are shining examples of notable accomplishment despite the terrific odds against them.

On the basis of the things I saw them do, I'd say TAAF has reason for pride on this, its fourth anniversary. What would you say?

Dual-Rated Pilots Among Grads

Establishing another "first" in the Army Air Forces, six rated bombardier student officers were presented their silver pilot's wings, which marked the first group of such rated flying officers to be graduated from Tuskegee Army Air Field.

These officers had previously earned one pair of wings as qualified bombadiers from the Bombardier Training School, Midland Field, Texas and upon returning to Tuskegee Air Field they pursued courses in flight training which led to the pilot's rating.

The six Bombarier-Pilot Officers are: 2nd Lt. Clinton McIntyre, New York City; 2nd Lt. Henry T. Holdman, Baltimore, Md.; F-O Clifford E. Moseley, Boston, Mass.; F-O Harold Maples, Washington, D. C.; 2nd Lt. Gordon Turner, Los Angeles, Calif.; and 2nd Lt. George Choisey, Jamaica, N. Y.

The graduation exercises had a unique finale when two officers presented their graduating brothers with the silver wings and letters of appointment. 1st Lt. Graham Smith, veteran combat returnee of the 99th Fighter Squadron, presented the coveted wings to his younger brother, F-O Reginald Smith, of Ahoskie, North Carolina, and Lt. James T. Williams, Ass't Personnel Services Officer at this station presened the letter of appointment to his brother, Lt. Eugene Williams, of Roanoke, Va.

Those receiving their wings from the twin-engine school were: 2nd Lt. John C. Curry, Indianapolis, Ind.; 2nd Lt. Jerrold Griffin, Philadelphia, Pa.; 2nd Lt. John S. Harris, Richmond, Ky; 2nd Lt. George A. Brown, Baltimore, Md.; F-O William E. Broadwater, Bryn Mawr, Pa.; F-O Joseph C. Bryant, Dowagiac, Mich.; F-O Harry E. Ford, Detroit, Mich.; F-O George R. Miller, Des Moines, Iowa; F-O Walter N. O'Neal, Cleveland, Ohio; F-O Mexi on O. Prewitt, Berkley, West Va.

With a calm, clear voice, Attorney Shores scanned the annals of history in pointing out to the capacity audience of visiting relatives of the 37 graduates the role which Negroes in America had played in fighting for American freedom and democracy since Chrispus Attucks' heroic stand in 1770. He cited the Battle of Bunker Hill, the War of 1812, and the Battle of Lake Erie as examples in which the blood of Negro America had been shed in order that this country could be called the home of the free.

The Napoleonic attorney urged the graduates of class 45-E not to fear the personal sacrifices which they are making in their dedication tasks of helping to bring about a new world for all mankind. He reminded the audience that as these pilots would go forth to battle foreign oppressors, their relatives and loved ones on the home front should re-dedicate their lives to the fulfillment of their promise to continue the struggle for full integration into every phase of American activity.

Emphasizing the fact that as a select group America's Negro fighting men must perform above and beyond the call of duty. Mr. Shores concluded his address with the words of the poet, Utemyer:

Air Force Stays Open to Negroes

Pittsburg Courier

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala.—(NNPA) — Indications that Negroes may be part of the post-war Army Air Forces were contained in a recent statement here by Col. Noel F. Parrish, post commander. 9-8-45

"There are no known plans," the colonel stated, "which would change the pilot production program at this station other than the number of cadets that will enter preflight in the next class of Sept. 11. Under present instructions, future preflight classes will consist of ten men each."

According to this announcement, and provided no further changes are made, the last of the large cadet classes will finish at Tuskegee on May 23, 1946.

A survey is being made now, it is reported, to determine what cadets desire to remain in the post-war Army Air Forces. Many are believed desirous of staying.

PATTERSON URGES GEN. MARSHALL TO EXTEND PROGRAM

Pittsburg (Pa) Courier

By JOHN YOUNG, Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—President F. D. Patterson of Tuskegee Institute held a lengthy conference here last week with Gen. George C. Marshall and it is believed that he was turned down in a request to make Tuskegee an exception in the Army Air Forces order cancelling all civilian contracts for the training of Army air pilots.

This means that all training of Army pilots at Tuskegee Institute will cease in the near future. During the war and early stages of preparations, Army pilots were trained in the primary phase by civilian contractors. Tuskegee Institute held such a contract to train all of the Negro pilots who later were graduated to the Tuskegee Army Air Field. 9-15-45

WHAT ABOUT MOTON FIELD?

Cancellation of Tuskegee Institute's contract brings up the question of what will happen to Moton Field, the half-million-dollar airport that was built at the institute during the training of Army pilots. Also directly affected are practically all of the Nation's Negro flight instructors and over 200 specialists and workers hired at the airport.

The order does not mean the end of pilot training for Negroes in the Army. It is expected that the Army Air Forces intends to train all its pilots at Army bases. In the future Negro pilots formally trained at Tuskegee Institute will probably be trained at nearby TAAF when the AAF order is executed.

Dr. Patterson could not be reached for a statement. 9-15-45

Tuskegee Pilots To Speak On Freedom Day Program

Philadelphia Tribune - Pa.

1-27-45

Coming to take part in the local national Freedom Day celebration Thursday of next week will be two of Tuskegee Army Air Field's aces, Captain Herbert Carter of Armory, Mississippi, and Lieutenant Robert W. Deiz of Portland, Oregon, both members of the famous 99th Squadron.

Captain Carter, one of the first students to earn his commercial pilot's license under the CPT setup at Tuskegee, served as engineering officer as well as pilot in his 16 months of aerial combat duty in Africa, Sicily, Italy and Europe. He has 98 missions to his credit.

1-27-45

Lt. Deiz, who was the subject for a War Bond poster, has a pair of Nazi Focke-Wulf-190's to his credit and is the first colored twin engine instructor assigned to teach cadets at Tuskegee.

He flew in 93 missions and has the Air Medal and Oak Leaf Cluster. After 15 months overseas he was returned to complete training in the twin-engine school at Harding Field and Bryan, Texas.

Also included on the program, which will be held at the Academy of Music, will be Mayor Bernard Samuel, United States Senator Francis Myers, Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, Miss Beulah T. Whitby, State Representative Homer S. Brown, and Congressmen William L. Dawson and Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., The Bilbrew Chorus, with 450 voices, will also be heard.

CAPT. HERBERT CARTER

LT. ROBERT W. DEIZ

Pennsylvania's Governor Edward Martin, in a proclamation, issued this week said:

"The Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States stands forth as a beacon of enlightenment to guide all who love libery and are united in the present struggle to save the world from enslavemen by the forces of cruel aggression.

"It was that brief statement written into the fundamental law of our land which gave new force and vigor to the inspired words of the Declaration of Independence 'that all men are created equal.'

"Eighty years have passed since President Lincoln, on February 1, 1865, signed the resolution of Congress submitting the Thirteenth Amendment to the States for ratification. It is proper and fitting that this memorable date be observed each year to perpetuate and honor an epochal step in human progress.

"I deem it a privilege, therefore to call the attention of our citizens to the celebration of National Freedom Day, February 1, 1945, and to urge that it be observed with appropriate ceremonies in all parts of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Leading Negro Ace In Va. Hospital After Auto Crash

Washington Post - D.C.

6-8-45

Richmond, Va., June 7 (AP).—First Lieut. Lee A. Archer of New York, leading Negro air ace, who has completed 138 missions flying P-38s, P-39s, P-40s, P-47s and P-51s, all without a scratch, has a word of advice for neophyte pilots:

Take it easy when you drive a car.

6-8-45

The 25-year-old pilot, who returned to the United States uninjured after 14 months overseas with the famed "Red Tail" group, is in Richmond Army Air Base Hospital with a broken leg, a broken finger and cuts and concussions. He got those wounds driving a car from Atlantic City, N. J., to Atlanta, Ga., 21 days after he returned to the States.

Tuskegee Air Field Prepares Pilots For Pacific War Duties

Twin-Engine Trainees Must Fly B-25s

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala. — The first planes to bomb Tokyo under General Jimmy Doolittle's command will be the first type planes used by Negro pilots to bomb Tokyo in the near future.

As a result, the B-25 medium bomber, madee famous by spearheading the Army Air Forces' way through the heart of Japan, has taken the Tuskegee Army Air Field spotlight away from the fighter planes since V-E Day in Europe, for it will be the bomber which will play the most important role in the aerial fight in the Pacific.

In the past, twin-engine trainees here received their instruction in the AT-10, an advanced trainer, and didn't attempt to fly the B-25 until after graduation. All that has changed now. Aviation cadets, taking twin-engine training, must learn to handle the fast medium bomber before they receive their wings.

With the 477th Composite group, under Col. B. O. Davis Jr., scheduled for overseas combat duty in the near future, Tuskegee Army Air Field is preparing its pilots, air mechanics, photographers, radio operators, weather men and many other technicians essential to the Army Air Forces for replacements in the Pacific.

The permanent party at Tuskegee has already basked in reflected glory over the achievements of the school's graduates in the European Theater of Operations; and the graduates, members of the 99th Fighter Squadron and 332nd Fighter Group, have gained international recognition by distinguishing themselves in the North African, Sicilian and Italian Campaigns—strafing enemy shipping, skip-bombing and fighting aerial battles.

As evidence of their merit, more than 65 members of the unia have been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross "for exeraordinary achievement and heorism in aerial combat" and hundreds of Air Medals and Oak Leaf Clusters.

the Call

Going Four Years

One might ask the question "How did all this come about?" Well...it began back in July, 1941, when the Tuskegee Army Air Field was activated. It was during the following month that the first Negro cadets began their primary training at the 66th Army Air Forces Training Detachment, Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, under the instruction of civilian pilots with the Army personnel doing the supervision and administrative work. It was during this time that the first 13 cadets were being questioned by the nation in editorials with such questions as "Will the first class pull through?" and "Will the program be a success or failure?" Those questions were answered by the deeds of the members of the first class...an hundreds of Negro pilots have followed in their footsteps.

The first troops arrived at TAAF during the month of October, 1941. The first Commanding Officer of the field was Major James A. Ellison. He was transferred in January, 1942, and Col. Frederick V. H. Kimble, a West Point graduate with 24 years of flying experience, was assigned as the Commanding Officer for the post. On December 26, 1942, Brig Gen. Kimble was appointed the Commanding General of the 28th Training Wing of the Eastern Flying Training Command and Colonel Noel F. Parrish, who rose through the ranks from the grade of private to his present rank, assumed the command of the Tuskegee Army Air Field. Lt. Col. John Cooke, Director of Administration and Services; Lt. Col. Donald G. McPherson, Deputy Commander, and Major Clyde H. Bynum, Adjutant, are among the high ranking officers assisting Col. Parrish. Most of the officers at this air base are Negroes.

The hundreds of mechanics, technicians and specialists, who are vitally necessary to "Keep 'em Flying," are for the most part graduates of the Air Corps Technical School at Chanute Field, Illinois and Lincoln Army Air Field, Nebraska.

A Day On The Flight Line

Yes....the story has been told before but it is always good news for any reader when it is retold. The "grease monkey," the man of aviation who knows what the term "stay on the ball" really means. However, the term is very uncomplimentary for a group of TAAF's efficiently-trained mechanics and technicians. The phrase "Man works from sun to sun" is a true statement of the men on the flight line. The airplane is a delicate mechanism and the men that play the role of "keeping 'em aloft" are conditioned through rigid study to be forever alert to know the ship and each of its intricate parts from propeller to tail assembly.

Duty on the flight line is no "white collar" job. Soon after dawn, the crew chiefs are at work pre-fighting the planes in order to have them conditioned in time to take off from the flight line. The flight chief has several planes under his supervision, and the line chief is responsible for all flights. The line makes the promise that every man will strive to the limit of his capacity and ability to preserve the motto, "keep 'em flying." This is the spirit of check the planes at regular intervals. They will do their share in helping to make victory a reality for the allied cause.

Along with these enlisted men are many civilian workers. Most of these civil service employees are women, and they fill every conceivable type of job. They are stenographers, clerks, parachute riggers, machinists, propeller specialists, riveters, welders, sheet-metal workers and course plotters in the airway section. These and scores of other jobs are being performed efficiently by women. Young and old, they in there doing their part to keep those planes in the air.

The first class of pilots grad- the men who tune the engines, and uated on March 6, 1942. This class consisted of only five (5) men, ncluding Capt. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., (now colonel and commanding officer of the 477th Composite Group at Godman Field, Ky.). The Tuskegee program also includes the pre-flight training of all Negro bombardier-navigator students who later receive their commission in Tevas.

Just how well these Tuskegee-trained pilots have done is reflected in the record of citations bestowed upon members of the 332nd Fighter Group, the only Negro Air Corps unit to see combat duty. Over 65 have received the Distinguished Flying Cross and 6 have been awarded the Purple Heart. Practically all of the more than 450 pilots who have gone overseas from Tuskegee have earned the Air Medal with one or more Oak Leaf Clusters.

Spurred on by the news of the excellent showing of Tuskegee-trained pilots in the European Theater of Operations, the cadets look forward with great anticipation for the day to hasten when they can spot our enemy in the Pacific through the gunsights of their fighters and bombers.

It is the silent oath of each officer, cadet and enlisted man of the Tuskegee Army Air Field to uphold the motto of the Eastern Flyinf Training Command: "Prepare for combat."

Patterson Prefers Harmony to Disunity

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE — Dr. Frederick D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, on Saturday, withdrew his previous suggestion, that tactical reserve colored units for peacetime be based at Tuskegee Army Air Field.

In a telegram to the chief of staff of the War Department in Washington, Dr. Patterson said:

"I do not believe the best interest of colored men in the Army Air Forces will be served if stationed in this community."

Bows to Harmony

He explained that "information now received, indicates objection by important percentage of colored flying officers to basing of such tactical units at the Tuskegee Field."

He concluded that "the harmonious working together between Tuskegee Institute and the flying personnel is important for successful relationship."

NAACP Fights Proposed Unit for Tuskegee

PATTERSON GIVES OK

Urges Plan Until Army Develops Integration

NEW YORK — Unqualified opposition to the proposed Army Air Force plan to establish a "composite group" of colored bombers and fighters as a segregated unit at the Tuskegee Air Field was voiced Thursday by the NAACP.

In a letter to Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, Walter White continue these squadrons as colored units with integration with other flying personnel.

"There squadrons, if based at the Tuskegee Army Flying Field, would be units of the Southeastern Flying Command as would white units based in this area."

The NAACP expressed disagreement with Dr. Patterson's proposal that segregation be continued or that any encouragement should be given to segregation until such time as the War Department of its own volition decides to abolish segregation.

The NAACP also pointed out that the Tuskegee field does not at present have either adequate training or housing facilities for so many men and that other fields already created could be used and avoid un-economical spending of money to erect additional facilities at Tuskegee.

Patterson's Explanation

When queried by the NAACP on his reported approval of the plan, President F. D. Patterson of Tuskegee said:

"I have suggested to the War Department that colored fighter units now segregated wherever they are located be based at the Tuskegee Army Flying Field in terms of their peacetime strength and until such times as the Army develops a policy which will dis-

"Colored people fall for that,' she said. "They like to drink tea with white people and feel they're all equal."

Mrs. Hollister said, "Then let's form an interracial committee.' She was sure Mrs. Perry, the wife of the colored doctor, would co operate.

Mrs. Hammond said she had a colored cook and she certainly would want to be on the committee.

Miss Tripp then suggested that the colored doctor's wife should have the tea. She had a pretty home for a colored person.

Then it was all agreed that they would work together on the interracial tea.

"But what good will it do if we go into their homes and just get the fat?" protested little Mrs. Crane, pulling on her immaculate white gloves.

"Darling," cooed Mrs. Lucas "are you serious? That's all we're sion of specialists. Members of this parachute packing section have packed parachutes for 5798 jumps and not one failed to open.

This includes the parachutes that we packed for jumps of the 542nd Parachute Inf. Bn. and the 515th Parachute Inf. Regt. of the 13th Airborne Division.

We were highly commended for our efficient service.

Till Men Grow Wings

Every rigger of this organization has accepted this as his creed: "Until men grow wings their parachutes must be dependable."

Efficiency, accuracy and safety are as much in our work as salt in our meals. The penalty for carelessness means death for the highest ranking officer to the lowest.

Our parachutes have been jumped by members of the Airborne Center, Camp Mackall, N.C., in tests and experimental jumps, none of which failed to open, even in storms when in addition to regular functions they served as umbrellas. — T/SGT. SAMUEL W. ROBINSON, 555th Parachute Inf. Bn.

Army Considers Use Of Mixed Air Units; Shake-Up Expected

9-22-45

By JOHN H. YOUNG III, Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Returning to its policy of training all Army pilots at Army installations, the War Department, in an attempt to decide where Negro Army pilots will be trained in the primary phase, last week debated moves which may cause a major shake-up in the training and tactical deployment of its Negro personnel and units and eventually lead to the end of segregation in the Army Air Forces.

This was revealed by a reliable source and was coupled with an official confirmation of the cancellation of Tuskegee Institute's civilian contract under which Negro Army pilots have been trained in the primary phase. The date of the cancellation is set for late November.

SHIFT OPPOSED

First consideration is being given the possibility of shifting the training from Tuskegee Institute to nearby Tuskegee Army Air Field. Strong opposition in the AAF to this move is developing because TAAF is already overloaded with different phases of training.

The nature of the AAF segregated policy has resulted in the dangerous overloading of TAAF. At one time four phases of training were conducted at this one field: basic, advanced, tactical and liaison. This was against the accepted sound AAF policy of maintaining separate fields for each phase of training because of safety reasons. (Planes of each phase have different speeds, and the accepted theory is that the wider the divergence of speeds in aircraft operating from the same field, the greater the hazard).

Since TAAF is still operating three phases of training, addition of the primary phase there would mean an added hazard.'

OTHER POSSIBILITIES

All other possibilities being debated under the segregated policy entail major shifts of personnel and units from Godman Field in Kentucky, where the 477th Composite Bombardment Group is stationed, at Walterboro AAB, where reserves of the 477th are being trained in tactical work and at TAAF.

The difficulty of making any shift is that nowhere within the sphere of the three fields can the primary phase be shifted without an increase in hazard and a decrease in efficiency. Too, the small number of Negro pilots being trained in the primary phase makes the establishment of another Army air field, for their training, a costly and prohibitive measure.

Narrow-minded and impractical officers of the air staff are said to be advancing the theory that no cost in safety, efficiency and money is too high to pay for the maintenance of segregation. If this group wins out, it is expected that the 477th will be shifted to Selfridge Field—its later fate to be determined by the Congressional decision as to the size and kind of air force demanded for peacetime protection. This would be followed by use of Godman Field as another segregated field, housing several phases of training. Further overloading of TAAF would be a possibility. 9-22-45

Practical and well-thinking officers of the air staff, while not vocal on the point at this time, are said to be considering the simplest solution to the problem—the end of segregation. To them it is apparent that the small number of Negro cadets could easily be integrated into primary classes already under way at several Army primary schools. One high officer, encouraged by the policy of integration initiated by the Navy at Great Lakes, is said to be particularly hopeful of pressing this point as argument to support the contention that the abolishment of segregation in the AAF could begin with the training of Negro pilots in the Army primary phase of training.

Drew Pearson, in his Sept. 16 broadcast, reported that the resignation of Secretary of War Stimson is expected to take place this week, and that President Truman will appoint Under-Secretary of War Robert Patterson in his place.

Withdraws Request For Postwar Army Aviation Program

The Louisiana Weekly New Orleans, La.
10-6-45

(By The Associated Negro Press)

Tuskegee, Oct. 3.—Dr. F. D. Patterson, president of Tuskegee Institute, has informed the army that he is withdrawing a suggestion previously made that reserve aviation units composed of Negro flyers be based at the army flying field located near Tuskegee. The Tuskegee field is one of the finest in this area, the government having spent some $5,000,000 in constructing it. It has been a big operation, several thousand fighter pilots, bomber pilots, technicians and ground crewmen having been trained here and ushered into the army. The famous 99th squadron had its inception and training here.

Despite these facts Dr. Patterson informed the chief of staff by telegram Saturday that a survey had shown an important percentage of the Negro flying officers preferred that their units be not based in this area.

ST. LOUIS.—Capt. Wendell O. Pruitt, St. Louis army air ace and holder of the Distinguished Flying Cross and Air Medal with six Oak Leaf Clusters, was killed Sunday in a plane crash at Tuskegee Air Field where he was flight instructor.

The flier's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Pruitt, 4569 Garfield avenue, said they were apprised of the fatal accident, but full details were not immediately disclosed by the war department. However, reports from Tuskegee stated that Capt. Pruitt was piloting a plane with a student at the time of the crash.

Capt. Pruitt's flight companion, also killed in the crash, was Pvt. Edward N. Thompson, 26, Miami, Fla., airplane mechanic at Tuskegee Army Air Field. The fliers were killed on a routine flight in an advance trainer plane, piloted by Capt. Pruitt, when the craft crashed near an auxiliary field of Tuskegee. 4-21-45

Pvt. Thompson was a member of Squadron C, TAAF. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thaddeus James Thompson, 1009 Northwest Second avenue, Miami, Fla. A board of officers has been appointed to determine the exact cause of the accident, Tuskegee officials stated.

Proclaims "Pruitt Day"

Capt. Pruitt was recently assigned as instructor at the Southern flying field after his return from Italy where he was credited with completing more than 70 missions over enemy territory, as a member of the famed 92nd Pursuit Squadron.

Signal honor was paid Capt. Wendell O. Pruitt on Dec. 12, 1944, when Mayor Aloys D. Kauffman of St. Louis, proclaimed that date "Capt. Pruitt Day."

Special programs were held at various places in his honor and time of his induction, was one of a feature of the day's tribute was the speakers on the City Hall program. the official welcome extended the hero in the rotunda of the City Hall. 4-21-45

Came to TAAF in 1943

Major Martin, then a captain former CIAA commissioner of football officials and physical education director at Miner Teachers' College, became director of the first all-colored post exchange TAAF in February, 1943.

Major Martin was the first of his race to graduate from Norwich University, receiving a B.S. in engineering. While there he captained the varsity football team, and earned letters in baseball, track and hockey. He later served as coach at Va. Union, Shaw University and Va. State College.

MAJ. HAROLD D. MARTIN

Prior to signing with Uncle Sam, his life had been a field day, with him serving as star performer in a host of athletic endeavors; from college football captain to commissioner of athletic officials for both the CIAA and EIAC.

Served 8 Years At Miner

For eight years previously, he had been public health director at Miner.

During his thirteen years as health education specialist, he received his master's degree from New York University, played pro football and declined an appointment to West Point.

He was a member of Washington's' Bachelor Benedict Club, a lieutenant in the first auxiliary police of Washington and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Martin of 12 Gannett Street, Boston, and husband of the former Miss Beatrice C. Boyd of Boston. Two sons were born of this union.

As evidence of his continued interest in body building, shortly after going to Tuskegee, he drew up plans for the field day program and sold officials on the idea of a bowling alley for men of the 99th Fighter Squadron.

Flight Instructor Stephens was a graduate of Tuskegee, with a B.S. degree. Prior to becoming an instructor, he was civilian primary instructor at Moton Field, Tuskegee.

Besides his widow and twin sons, Ernest and Harold, Major Martin is survived by two brothers, Dr. J. Ernest Martin, Bluefield, W.Va., and Julius F. Martin, Washington, D.C.

6-9-45 the Washington Tribune D.C.

By AL SWEENEY

With the moonlit night and the twinkling stars serving as a canopy and, the rippling Potomac, as a background, thousands are expected to throng the Watergate this week-end, to witness the Tuskegee AAF players present a hilarious musical, entitled "Roger."

The all-soldier show, scheduled to appear Saturday and Sunday, which has been literally laying thousands in the aisles from laughter in the southland, officially opens the Watergate for the year of 1945.

It marks the first appearance of an all-Negro GI show in Washington. Its cast numbers 100 and comes to the District with a fine reputation.

The show includes a male chorus of 50, a huge swing band composed of former members of Jimmie Lunceford, Erskine Hawkins, Andy Kirk, Coleman Hawkins, Floyd Ray, Savoy Sultans, and other name outfits.

6-9-45

Benefit of Tuskegee Athletic Fund

The money accumulated from the presentation of the show will go to the Tuskegee Air Forces' Athletic Fund.

The show has been brought to Washington under the sponsorship of Charles James, prominent restauranteur, Jerry Coward, well known promoter, and Alexander Barnes, circulation manager of The Washington Tribune.

James, who operates the People's Cafe at New Jersey Avenue and R Sts., N.W., is the "angel" for the show having underwritten for the reported sum of $5,000.

To Go on Air

The bringing of the Tuskegee Air Force show "Roger!" to Washington is going to give the performers one of the biggest build ups they have received, since the show started.

A half hour radio show, originating from the studios of WTOP at 4:30 p.m., Saturday, over the Columbia Broadcasting System, will mark the first time that there has ever been a whole program carried on by Negro servicemen over the networks.

The Tuskegee Band, under the direction of Capt. Charles F. Drye, is slated to appear for a concert in the huge shell at the War Department's Pentagon Building, Saturday, noon.

On Friday evening, at Tenth and U Sts., there will be a giant War Bond Rally, at which the cast of "Roger" will appear. To the first 100 purchasers of $500 War Bonds, will go choice seats to the Watergate performance of "Roger."

Tickets are on sale at the Federal Life Insurance Company, 1818 Seventh St., N.W., and The Washington Tribune office, 920 U St., N.W.

Proof of the nation-wide popularity of the show is shown by the fact that it is to be presented in Philadelphia, June 14 and in New ~~York, June~~ 15.

Col Davis Says Negro Pilots Prove Mettle

Cites Heroism Of 92nd, 332nd As Examples

Atlanta Daily World (Ga) 8-14-45

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD Alabama — "The men whom you have trained here have produced an indelible record reflecting the accomplishments of Tuskegee Army Air Field." stated Colonel Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., Commanding Officer of Godman Field, Kentucky, in delivering the principal address here Thursday commemorating the 4th Anniversary of the Tuskegee Army Air Field.

"It is a record written in the blood of our men and that of our enemies in Sicily, Italy, France, Yugoslovia, Albania, Greece, Bulgaria, Rumania, Hungary, Austria, Czechoslavakia, Poland and the very heart of Germany itself," he continued. "It is a record that stands on its own and empty words I might speak would not add to it."

The youthful West Pointer then reviewed briefly the history of the Negro in the Army Air Forces.

VALIANT FIGHTERS IN ALL WARS

"All Americans hate war," he said. It is basic American philosophy not to seek war but to prevent it. This has been true from the "shot heard 'round the world" at Lexington to the treachery of Pearl Harbor.

It is also true, and I am proud to say — that wherever there has been war American Negroes have been more than willing to carry their share. Bunker Hill, San Juan, the Argonne Forest, Bataan, and more recently the shores of Normandy are all drenched with the blood of Negroes who made the supreme sacrifice for the right to be called Americans without qualification.

"The role of air power in modern warfare is too well known for me to repeat and the victory that is and is to be America's is due, in a large measure, to air supremacy. In this too, Negroes have played an important part.

"The decision to include Negroes in the Air Forces program grew out of the broader decision made by the War Department to include Negroes in the Army in about the same ratio they held to the total population of the United States," the youthful commander stated in pointing out that each branch of the service — Infantry. Artillery, Calvalry and Air Corps, would be 9 or 10 percent colored.

"Enlisted personnel began their training at Chanute Field during the winter of 1940-41 and the following summer Major James A. Ellison, a veteran pilot of World War I, laid the ground work for the development of this site which has become the Tuskegee Army Air Field.

Col. Davis reviewed the history of the first Air Field for the training of Negro pilots established in this country. In speaking of the role Col. Noel F. Parrish, Commanding Officer of the field, played in its development, Col. Davis said:

8-14-45

LAUDS COLONEL PARRISH

"In Colonel Parrish's hands rested the future of the Negro in the Air Forces. There were many who did not believe him capable of learning to fly modern high speed aircraft. Colonel Parrish who was then in charge of Primary flying training, bore on his shoulders the heavy task of the first phase — determining whether the Negro would meet Army flying standards.

Colonel Parrish later became Director of Training at this field, where he continued to apply the yardstick turning out flying school graduates who have thoroughly demonstrated their capabilities in combat.

In speaking of the work of Negro fighter pilots overseas, Colonel Davis said:

"Let us look at the record of the 99th Fighter Squadron. The 99th went into combat early in June, 1943 when it received its first baptism of fire in the bombing of Pantelleria.

Prior to the invasion of Sicily it escorted medium bombers to targets in western Sicily where Captain Charles B. Hall became the first Negro pilot to shoot down an enemy airplane.

During the landings on Sicily the 99th covered the beaches at Gela Point and eight days after the initial landings moved its base to Sicily where it performed missions in support of ground units — dive-bombing, strafing, patroling of key areas, armed reconnaissance, and other typical fighter missions. Later the 99th supported the British 8th Army on the eastern side of Italy until the landings at Anzio.

DOWN 8 PLANES IN ONE DAY

Here they cashed in on many months of careful, conscientious, but unspectacular ground support work, and achieved the recognition and admiration of the entire Mediterranean Theater of Operations when they shot down eight German fighters in one day.

"The 99th continued its ground support work with the 12th Air Force until June, 1944, when it joined the 332nd Fighter Group. I would say that the 99th Fighter Squadron erased many of the doubts about the ability of Negro pilots.

8-14-45

The 99th achieved great proficiency in tactical operations, but unfortunately only a few were acquainted with the fact, and save for the three of four lucky days at Anzio, when the pilots of the 99th had an opportunity to give concrete evidence in a form that would be accepted by the worst type of skeptic — the shooting down of Nazi pilots — most people knew little of their abilities. So the experiment moved in to its final stage with the 332nd Fighter Group.'

Colonel Davis then went into details concerning the work of the 332nd overseas. He told of the work the group did when given the job of protecting the Fortresses and Liberators of the 15th Air Force on long range strategic attacks of targets deep in the homelands of our enemies.

BOMBER PILOTS GRATEFUL

"I am very proud to be able to state that the 332nd was accepted by the 15th Air Force from the beginning as a combat fighter group and not as a Negro Fighter group presenting special problems.

Good professional relationships were maintained with other units of the the air force and the intimate feeling that develops automatically as a result of close association in combat extended to the 332nd. As I land at different bases over the country, it is rare for me not to meet an ex-bomber pilot of the 15th Air Force who always has a grateful word to say for the the Red Tails of the 332nd.

"Today at Godman Field two units are undergoing the final phases of training before striking out the tail end of the axis, the Japanese. There is no longer any experiment involved. Negro flyers—fighting men—are an accomplished fact.

There are simply members of a Composite Group of Mitchell Bombers and Thunderbolt fighters with the associated service group, which are among the many Air Force units being sent out to wind up the war.

There is no question of their ability to execute the mission assigned them when they reach the Theater of Operations."

TUSKEGEE'S ROLE IMPORTANT

On elaborating on the achievements of individuals and groups in making the success of the 99th and 332nd possible, Colonel Davis said:

"You members of the Tuskegee Army Air Field may justly take pride in the important role you have played. Only by the high level of efficiency that has been developed and maintained here could all these things have been possible. Your toil, sweat, and efficient devotion to the task is as much an integral part of the 99th Fighter Squadron—332nd Fighter Group—and the 387th Service Group as the men actually assigned to these groups.

"I salute you on your fourth anniversary with confidence that you will continue to carry on demonstrating the same vigor, determination, and oneness of purpose you have displayed in the past."

In his brief remarks to the pilots who carried the current conflict to the luftwaffe, he emphasized that seriousness of purpose is an essential quality of instructors guiding the destiny of future pilots.

He also pointed out that their present assignment was next in importance to actual combat in

Cadet Killed Near Tuskegee

Atlanta Daily World Georgia

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD, Ala — (SNS) — Aviation Cadet Cleodis V. Todd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Otis J. Todd, Berkley, California, was killed in an airplane crash on a routine flight about four miles south of this field Monday afternoon. It was the first air collision to occur during the four years of flying-training of pilots at this field, according to officials.

Prior to entering the service, Cadet Todd worked as a shipyard metal chipper and was a member of Boilermakers Union No. 304, AF of L, in Oakland, Calif. Following his graduation from Dois Palos high school in Berkeley where he excelled in basketball, boxing and tennis, he was employed as an auto mechanic and a semi-skilled laborer.

Todd had a varied and interesting career since enlisting in the service October, 1942, having attended the Army Administration School and the AAF Technical School in Lincoln, Neb., prior to beginning his pilot's training here in October, 1944. He had attained the rank of corporal when he reported to TAAF in June, 1944 when he was assigned to air crew training.

The student officer flying the collided plane was appointed to determine the cause of the accident.

Bomber training for Negroes accelerated

Los Angeles Tribune Cal.

Tuskegee steps up bomber training; celebrates birthday

TUSKEGEE — In a statement commemorating the fourth anniversary of Negroes in the Army Air Forces, officials at Tuskegee Army Air Field pointed out this week that the concentrated war on Japan has changed the emphasis in TAAF training from fighter planes to the B-25 medium bomber, and all trainees at the field must now learn to handle the fast medium bomber before receiving their wings.

Prior to V-E day, twin-engine trainees didn't attempt to fly the B-25 until after graduation. Now TAAF pilots, air mechanics, photographers, radio operators, weather men and other technicians are being trained for replacement in the 477th Composite group, scheduled for overseas combat duty in the near future.

Activated in July of 1941, TAAF received its first cadets the following month. The 13 cadets, pioneers in the most important movement of the war involving Negroes, started their primary training at the 66th Army Air Forces Training detachment at Tuskegee Institute under civilian pilots since the installation at TAAF was not ready.

HILLS LEVELED

The air field is located in South Central Alabama, 12 miles from Tuskegee Institute. One of the biggest tasks in constructing the field was the leveling of hills. One spot is now 54 feet less than its elevation four years ago. The field forms a rolling valley, sloping back up the hill with headquarters, barracks and office buildings on the top of the northern slope.

The first class of pilots, only five men, graduated Mar. 6, 1942. In the group was Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., commanding officer of the 477th Composite group now at Godman Field, Ky.

Only single-engine fighter pilots were produced until December, 1943 when the first class of twin-engine bomber pilots graduated. These were assigned to the 477th, activated in 1944. Tuskegee is the sole source of pilots for both the 332nd Fighter group and the 477th Composite group and its production program has, of necessity, been accelerated. Training of pilots reached a high point last March when 38 students received their wings.

The Tuskegee program also includes pre-flight training of Negro bombardier-navigator students who later receive their commission in Texas.

How well Tuskegee has trained its pilots is reflected in the record of citations bestowed upon the 332nd Fighter group, the only Negro Air Corps unit to see combat. Over 65 have received the Distinguished Flying Cross and six have been awarded the Purple Heart. Almost all of the 450 pilots who have gone overseas from TAAF have earned the Air Medal with one or more Oak Leaf Clusters.

Sergeant Gets Bronze Star For Action In Belgium

Pittsburgh Courier Penn.

2-10-45

WITH U.S. FORCES IN FRANCE—For "exceptionally meritorious conduct in face of enemy action," T/Sgt. Harold F. Jackson, 812-A Walnut Street, Milwaukee, Wis., has been awarded the Bronze Star. He is a member of the 57th Ammunition Company, an all-Negro Ordnance unit which was forced to clear an area of Germans before it could set up an ammunition dump near the Belgian border last September.

Turning infantrymen when they had received word that a German patrol had control of the area they were planning to use, the Ordnance men quickly organized three squads and advanced on the enemy.

Surrounding them in an old barn the Yanks were met with small arms fire. The men of the ammo company, having only rifles and grenade, could not blast the barn as combat men do. Sergeant Jackson crawled under fire to a vantage point and threw an incendiary grenade into the barn. The ensuing fire forced the Nazis out, where they were picked off, one by one, as they emerged.

Chaplain Beasley Saves Two Lives, Gets Bronze Star Award

Atlanta World 2-13-45

Atlanta, Ga. 2-17-45

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY, ITALY — Lieutenant Colonel Louis J. Beasley of Atlanta, Georgia recently was awarded the Bronze Star for meritorious service in combat on the Fifth Army front in Italy.

Chief chaplain of the 92nd "Buffalo" Infantry Division, Beasley was on his way to the front and was forced to abandon his vehicle when the road on which he was traveling became a target for German artillery.

Seeking cover in a nearby house, he and his assistant were joined by three enlisted men who also had been forced from their vehicle. The immediate area instantly became the object of an intense artillery barrage of at least 35 shells, one of which struck a corner of the house wounding the three enlisted men.

Beasley with his assistant quickly extricated the wounded and safely evacuated them to an aid station. This quick initiative resulted in saving the lives of two of them according to the citation.

Bealsey's wife, Mrs. Lauvenia C. Beasley and their four children reside at 325 East Sweet Water Street Florence, Ala. The children are George F., Louis J. Jr., Sadye M. and Winnie C. Beasley.

Distinguished Service Medal To Gen. Davis

Chicago Defender Ill.

2-17-45

WASHINGTON—The award of the Distinguished Service Medal to Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis, United States Army, for exceptionally meritorious service to the government, was made this week, the War Department announced. 2-17-45

The citation accompanying the award follows:

"For exceptionally meritorious service to the government in a duty of great responsibility from June, 1941, to November, 1944, as an inspector of troop units in the field, and as special War Department consultant on matters pertaining to Negro troops.

"The initiative, intelligence and sympathetic understanding displayed by him in conducting countless investigations concerning individual soldiers, troop units and other components of the War Department brought about a fair and equitable solution to many important problems which have since become the basis of far-reaching War Department policy.

"His wise advice and counsel have made a direct contribution to the maintenance of soldier morale and troop discipline and has been of material assistance to the War Department and to responsible commanders in the field in understanding personnel matters as they pertain to the individual soldier."

WASHINGTON—the first Distinguished Service Medal to be awarded a Negro was announced this week by the War Department. The honoree is Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, only Negro general, who is stationed in the European Theatre.

General Davis, rounding out forty-six years of Army service, was cited for "meritorious service in a duty of great responsibility as an inspector of troop units in the field and as special War Department consultant on matters pertaining to Negro troops."

His citation added that his "wise advice and council have made a direct contribution to the maintenance of soldier morale and troop discipline."

General Davis entered the service as an enlisted man during the Spanish-American war and rose through the ranks He is the father of Colonel B. O. Davis, commander of the famed 332nd Fighter Group.

GEN. B. O. DAVIS

AN EDITORIAL

With so many Brigadier Generals being advanced to Major Generals, it seems to us that General Davis deserves not only a medal but a promotion. Too, it would seem that from among the scores of Negro colonels, one or two might well be advanced to the rank of Brigadier General. Likewise, according to the many heroic deeds of our service men, it seems that at least one or more merit the nation's highest award. But, to date, no Negro has received the Congressional Medal. These timely suggestions warrant serious thought by heads of the armed services. —The Editors.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, Kan.

FIRST LT. HENRY A. WISE, Jr., now a student in the 22nd General Staff Class at the Command and General Staff School here, was awarded the Certificate of Valor in recognition of courageous service in aerial combat by the direction of Maj. Gen. Nathan Twining, commanding general of the Fifteenth Air Force.

Lt. Wise reached the Mediterranean theater in July, 1944, and was promoted to first lieutenant in September. He was a fighter pilot with the 332d Fighter Group of the 15th Air Force, doing principally escort work.

His last mission is one of the lieutenant's most vivid remembrances. It was a raid on the Ploesti oil fields Aug. 26. His plane was forced down over Bulgaria, and he was captured and imprisoned by the Germans in that country. "That was a stroke of luck, though," Lieut. Wise said. "I was a prisoner for only three weeks, and then the Russians moved in and we were all freed." He returned to the United States in October.

The Certificate of Valor, though not an official War Department award, nevertheless has an interesting history. 3-25-45

During the trying days of our Air Force in 1943, Lieut. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, then a brigadier general in command of the Light Air Force in England, sought a personal way to express his gratitude to the men of his command who worked night and day in flying missions over Germany.

Worker

The result was the Certificate of Valor, a close, personal recognition in the form of a certificate signed by the General himself citing the faithful and courageous service of the pilot. This award became highly cherished among the men of the Eighth Air Force.

In addition to the Certificate of Valor, the 24-year-old officer holds the Air Medal and the Purple Heart. He is a former teacher of social science in the Accomac High School, Chariton, Va.

Maj. Gen. Karl Truesdell, commanding general of Fort Leavenworth and commandant of the Command and General Staff School, made the presentation at a ceremony in Gruber Hall before some 800 of Lt. Wise's classmates.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. Wise, of Chariton, Va., Lt. Wise, upon entering the Army in July, 1942, was first assigned to Grenier Field, Manchester, N. H. He was then transferred to the 38th Aviation Squadron, Dow Field, Bangor, Me. He left Dow Field as a sergeant, and received his commission as second lieutenant at Tuskegee Army Air Field, Ala., in February, 1944.

Stars Fall On 999th Field Artillery They're Bronze Awards For Heroism

Chicago Defender, Chicago Ill.

By EDWARD B. TOLES
(Defender War Correspondent)

WITH THE FRENCH 1ST ARMY.—Stars fell on the 999th field artillery battalion last week just outside of Colmar, where their eight-inch howitzers are blasting the German trans-Rhine salient bulge right back into the Rhineland. 2-17-45

The stars were bronze and they were given in recognition of the heroic action of heroes in action.

The heroes were: Staff Sgts Willie Fulton, Anding, Miss.; Rudolph Jones, Charleston, S. C.; George H. Edwards, Richmond, Va., and Leroy Burgess, Lake City, Fla. The action took place some time ago but they have been moving so fast since first they fired in mid-July that there has been no time to award the medals. 2-17-45

But their citations and their stories in a series of brave events that is typical of the entire battalion. It was a busy night near Rennes when the battalion was ordered to make a hasty occupation of a position without opportunity for prior reconnaissance. 2-17-45 Telephone lines had to be strung to observation posts immediately to enable the battalion to mass its fire for the following morning's attack.

Brave Enemy Fire

Out went Fulton with his crew laying lines under enemy mortar and artillery fire for the entire distance to the forward observation posts. At Azerailles Fulton constantly patrolled and kept wire lines to observation posts mended and repaired while enemy fires raged all around him, cutting lines as soon as he could repair them.

When Sgt. George H. Edwards' detail of wiremen lacked an officer, the sergeant went ahead without the services of an officer and performed all the duties and at no time for three months while he acted in this capacity was the battalion without communication with its forward observation posts.

Under a withering steel hail of machine gun fire S-Sgt. Leroy Burgess crawled on his hands and knees dropping sometimes flat on his belly under the blanket of fire but he laid the important telephone communications wire up front. 2-17-45

When you're without the services of the battalion's cub observation plane the observers up at the front lines with the infantry serve as the eyes and brains of the battalions. The forward observer sends back the coordinances for firing and S-Sgt. Rudolph Jones, chief of wire detail, has located so many vantage points from which it was possible to bring effective fire on enemy installations that naming names would be useless. Without regard for his personal safety he made the fires of many missions successful. 2-17-45

A MONUMENT FOR PRIVATE BROOKS

Chicago Defender, Ill.

The thrilling, dramatic rescue of more than 500 Allied war prisoners from a Japanese prison camp in the Philippines is a historic epic of World War II that will live long in the memory of Americans. 2-10-45

Perhaps in coming years a monument may be built at the spot where hundreds of Americans lost their lives under the torture inflicted by cruel Japanese.

Not far from the Nippon stockade at Cabanatuan where the daring rescue was effected, another monument ought to be erected at Fort Stotsenburg for the first soldier in the U. S. armed force to die in defense of the Philippines.

That soldier was a Negro — and strangely enough serving in a white unit. He was Robert H. Brooks of Sadieville, Ky., a youth of light complexion who enlisted in the Army and was able to pass for white. He was killed at Fort Stotsenburg in the first Japanese attack the day after Pearl Harbor. 2-10-45

His color was not discovered until he died in the service of his country. Today a parade ground at Fort Knox, Ky., and a housing project in Chicago are named after Private Brooks.

Now that Fort Stotsenburg has been retaken by General Douglas MacArthur, whould it not be appropriate to rename the Philippine fort after Private Brooks, first American — and probably first Negro soldier — to die in World War II?

Carolina Governor Honors War Heroes

Memphis World Tenn.

FORT BRAGG, N. C.—(SNS) — Making his last public appearance before retiring from office, Gov J. Melville Broughton of North Carolina Friday assisted Brigadier General John T. Kennedy, commanding general of Fort Bragg, in presenting Bronze Star awards to the father of a Negro enlisted man killed in action and to a Chaplain now stationed here after service overseas. 1-9-45

Joseph E. Ray of Route 2, St Pauls, N. C, received the Bronze Star awarded posthumously to his son, Pvt. Deormy Ray, for "heroic achievement" in connection with military operations against the enemy in the Solomon Islands.

Private Ray was ambushed in enemy territory in the war. Private Ray, without regard for his own personal safety, advanced without hesitation to give aid to a fallen comrade. On reaching his comrade he found that he was too late to give aid; and in trying to withdraw, was hit by a burst of enemy fire which resulted in his death. "This example of heroism and devotion to duty," the citation stated, reflects the highest citation on the Military Service."

Chaplain (Captain E. Clark, son of W. A. Clark of Route 3, Bentonville, Ark., was presented the Bronze Star awarded for meritorious achievement while serving with the 340th Army Service Forces Band in New Georgia, Solomon Islands.

Chaplain Clark was decorated for his achievements in the Solomon Islands from July 5 to Aug. 15, 1943. The official citation disclosed that he accompanied a Battalion which established a road block on the Munda - Bairoka Trail. When there was a critical shortage of food and medical supplies, Chaplain Clark was active in encouraging and comforting the men through the trying circumstances they faced. He cared for the wounded and at all times put the welfare of the troops above his own, the citation stated. 1-9-45

The Governor told Chaplain Clark and assembled officers and men that men of the ministry have had "high duty" in the war and are adding "new glory to the history of the nation."

WITH THE 9TH INFANTRY DIVISION IN GERMANY. —First Lieutenant Sherman C. Kelly, of "A" Company, 60th Infantry Regiment, 9th Infantry Division was awarded the Silver Star Medal for heroic action by General George S. Patton Jr., former Commanding General of the U. S. Third Army, at a review commemorating the Fifth anniversary of the activation of the now famous 9th Division at Manching Germany.

A resident of Topeka, Kas., before entering the Army, Lieutenant Kelly received his commission at Camp Hood, Texas and came overseas in February, 1945. On his arrival in the ETO he was assigned to the "Go-Devils" of the 60th Infantry Regiment, 9th Division and took part in the final stages of the war in Europe.

On April 18, 1945, at Victorshone Germany, Lieutenant Kelly was leading assault elements of the infantry against enemy emplacements when they were subjected to intense enemy rocket, machinegun and small arms fire. With complete disregard for personal safety, Lieutenant Kelly unhesitantly exposed himself to the heavy fire to deploy his men and then lead them forward in an assault on the enemy emplacement. 10-19-45

Obtaining the aid of a supporting tank unit, he stood upright in face of withering enemy fire to personally designate the enemy positions to the leading tanks. Two rockets landed so close to him that the concussion hurled him to the ground.

Lieutenant Kelly refused to fall back but continued to direct the fire and movement of his men and tanks against the enemy emplacement. His bold and fearless leadership, devotion to duty and courageous actions resulted in the capture of approximately 60 of the enemy and contributed materially to the success of the mission, according to the official citation.

He is the husband of Mrs. Frances Kelly of 807 7th St., Temple Texas.

Work As Military Mayor Commended

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Captain Joseph Adams, Jr., of Fitchburg Mass., was recently presented the Bronze Star Medal by Brigadier General B. F. Koenig, commanding Chanor Base Section, for meritorious achievement in providing accommodations for 50,000 troops and procuring upwards of 15,000 civilian laborers for the U. S. Army between September 20, 1944 and June 1, 1945.

The citation for the coveted award reveals that Captain Adams procured the laborers and the billets while 'Town Mayor' at one time or another of Le Havre Rouen and Calais, France, and Mons, Belgium.

As "military mayor" of these cities he was also responsible for the welfare of the citizens. "His ingenuity, untiring efforts and outstanding devotion to duty," the citation continue, "made it possible for the detailed operations of the Town Major Offices to function in a highly efficient manner in connection with military operations against the enemy in the European Theater.

At present, as Executive Officer Real Estate and Civilian Labor Division, Chanor Base Section, Captain Adams is responsible for the procurement of civilian laborers for the U. S. Army from France, Belgium and Holland under the Reverse Lend-Lease program.

NEGRO NMU HERO AWARDED MEDAL

The Daily Worker N.Y. 10-24

Brother Anderson, awarded the Mariner's Medal by the War Shipping Administration for brave action aboard the S. S. Polybius, which went down in the Caribbean in June, 1942, has been at sea for 17 years. A Negro, he came out of Jacksonville, Fla., to take his place among the seamen who established the NMU. 10-24-45

A veteran of three invasions, Anderson has other "decorations." On his face are two deep cuts from a longshoremen's hook swung at him by a goon on the west side last week when he and other NMU'ers were out helping the rank and file of the International Longshoremen's Association.

On the Polybius in 1942, Anderson risked his neck to help save other members of the crew. The ship, an old tub without guns, returning from India out of convoy, went down in five minutes after a hit by a torpedo. Mack was knocked unconscious and landed in a life boat.

"I had a busted shoulder and a fractured leg," he said. He moved his shoulder stiffly to show that it isn't mobile.

Anderson, who has a wife and two children with a third en route, expects to ship out soon, but wants to stay ashore long enough to see Benjamin Davis go back to the City Council.

"You see," he told us, "I was one of the NMU'ers who worked on Ben Davis' campaign two years ago. That man has what we need."

332nd Pilot Gets Yugoslav Medal For Aiding Tito's Partisans

The Chicago Defender Chicago, Illinois

GODMAN FIELD, Ky.—A young Virginia flier who flew under three flags was honored by Yugoslavia this week at ceremonies conducted here.

The pilot is Lt. William W. Green, Staunton, Va., who was awarded the Order of Partisan Star, third class, for his week's services with Marshal Tito's Partisans and British Supply Missions after he was forced to parachute from his plane Oct. 13, 1944, while on a fighter mission.

Previously decorated by the United States for completing 123 missions and bringing down three German planes, he holds the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Medal with six Oak Leaf Clusters, the E.T.O. ribbon with three battle stars, and the Purple Heart.

Peasants Took Him In Tow.

The lieutenant said he "lived like a king" with the Partisans after his plane strafed and blew up a Nazi ammuntion dump in Ceneral Yugoslavia as he returned to his bas in Italy from an escort mission over Hungary.

"As my wing man and I were returning to Naples we caught sight of German installations at a strong point being attacked by Yugoslavs. We swooped down and made three passes at a large barn. On the third try it exploded and our plane was damaged by the flying debris. My wing man bailed out and I followed five minutes later," Green said.

Five peasants, armed to the teeth, rushed up to him and took him to safety. A day later he was taken to a division headquarters of Tito's Army. Green said the Partisans piled food in front of him and "went to extremes" to make him comfortable. The following day, after he had talked to division officers, he volunteered to help a British Supply Mission drop supplies to Tito's men in various parts of the immediate area. 10-26-45

Russians Took Him Out.

Four days later, Green said, Russians landing at the base flew him to ihs base with the 332d fighter group at Naples. When he arrived in the United States several months ago he learned that his companion had been captured by the Germans but liberated later.

The Partisans' gratitude and the award are due, he believes, to the fact that the installation and ammunition dump his plane blew up had been the object of a costly attack by Tito's men.

Green, who entered the Army Air forces in March, 1942, believes he will stay in the service.

Negro Sergeant Win French Decoration

Birmingham News-Ala.

Probably the only Negro in Alabama to be awarded the French Croix de Guerre is S-Sgt. Louis Love, of Birmingham, who received the decoration from the French provisional government by direction of Gen. de Gaulle for meritorious service and bravery beyond the line of duty in the early phases of the Normandy campaign.

Assigned to an infantry unit, S-Sgt. Love served as platoon sergeant in a quartermaster trucking company which hauled supplies to front line troops and sometimes fought as infantry troops. He was the only member of his company to receive this award.

Veteran of 17 years' Army service, he is now on 90-day reenlistment furlough before returning to Germany. Prior to his enlistment, he lived at 710 Charles Street, North, and was employed by the Whitaker Paper Company here.

During his 22 months overseas, he took part in five campaigns, and a commendation from his company commander states that his service during these various campaigns was "notable." "Constantly displaying the characteristics of coolness, leadership and obedience to duty, S-Sgt. Love has been an inspiration to his platoon," the commendation stated.

He wears the braided shoulder ing receipt of Guerre, and has him for his part of France." The which none were war because of will be sent him later.

Thomasville Pilot Is Given DFC Air Award

Atlanta World, Ga. Atlanta.

1-11-45

15TH AAF IN ITALY — Captain Henry B. Perry, 24, 519 Oak Street, Thomasville, Georgia has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross. Captain Perry is a P-51 Mustang Fighter Pilot in the All-Negro Fighter Group commanded by Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., which is actively engaged in long range escort and participates in the strafing of enemy ground targets and installations.

He was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for his outstanding display of courage and devotion to duty on an escort mission for 15th Air Force heavy bombers deep into enemy territory. During this mission, several enemy fighter aircraft attempted to intercept the bomber formation of B-24 type aircraft. Without hesitation, Captain Perry led his flight to the attack on the enemy aircraft. Engaging an enemy fighter, Captain Perry fired several short bursts from his guns and after the last short burst, he noticed that his guns were no longer operative.

Reporting the malfunction of his armament to his formation leader, Captain Perry left the battle regretfully and headed for home. Upon reaching Northern Italy, he observed two enemy fighter aircraft about to attack a crippled bomber, also homeward bound. Realizing that his guns were still inoperative, but also being aware of the fact that the bomber was helpless against the enemy ships, Captain Perry made three aggressive passes at the two enemy aircraft and was able to break up their attack, in spite of lack of armament, and escort the crippled bombe to safety in friendly territory.

This same display of courage and defiance of personal safety has enabled Captain Perry to successfully fly 102 combat missions against the enemy. He is a veteran combat pilot, having participated in the North-African, Sicilan and Italian campaigns. He wears the Air Medal with four Ook Leaf Clusters for "Meritorious achievement in aerial flight.

ADVANCED 15TH AAF BASE, ITALY—(By Cable)—They made New Year's Day something extra special here with the fighter group commanded by Col. Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., using the occasion for a ceremony during which seven more of the group's pilots were awarded Distinguished Flying Crosses and two enlisted men received bronze stars.

The presence of Col. Davis, who has just returned from a furlough in the States to resume command of the group, which during his absence was headed by Major George S. Roberts, deputy commander, added sufficient trimmings to make the occasion as completely satisfying as the turkey dinner everybody got afterwards.

Md., D.C. Flyers Honored

First Bronze Star Winners

Bronze stars, the first ever awarded to the group's personnel, went to T/Sgt. Raymond L. Washington, 1209 Edmondson Avenue, Baltimore, and S/Sgt. Professor Anderson, Selma, Ala.

Despite a cold heavy snowstorm blowing about the group's large area, making travel by foot through ankle-deep muddy slush extremely difficult, 300 officers and enlisted men gathered to witness the ceremony in an unheated stable which the group had converted into an auditorium by painting the walls, putting a platform at one end and sand on the bare ground for flooring.

Everybody huddled in heavy jackets and coats but the recipients, Brig. Gen. Deance Strother, white, Fifteenth Army Airforce official who pinned on the awards; Col. Davis and Capt. Thomas J. Money, the group adjutant, who shivered in neat but ineffective cold-resistant blouses and pinks.

In a half-hour, the citations were read and awards made. Brig. Gen. Strother told the assembly how proud the 15th AAF officials were to have the group and a man of Col. Davis's calibre with them.

The ceremony ended with everybody crowding around the recipients, stomping cold feet in the sand and enthusiastically congratulating them.

Then everybody rushed out to spend at least fifteen of the remaining twenty minutes before the three o'clock dinner getting warm somewhere.

1-20-45

All Hold Air Medals

Capts. Jackson, Rayford, Turner, and Campbell are squadron commanders in the group. Jackson has an enemy plane to his credit. All of the DFC recipients hold air medals with three Oak-leaf Clusters, and Rayford, in addition, has received the Purple Heart.

Rayford, Campbell, and Gray are veteran pilots, having previously flown with the pioneer 99th Squadron before the present fighter group came overseas a year ago.

1-20-45

Perfects Testing Device

Honored as one of the first of his group to receive the Bronze Star, T/Sgt. Washington, radio mechanic, won the award for improvising and perfecting a testing device which eliminates the necessity of sending aircraft radios to a special service squadron for testing.

His testing read in part: "Time thus saved has allowed the squadron to keep a maximum number of aircraft operational." A 1940 Douglass High School graduate, Washington has a wife, Mrs. Pauline Washington, and child in Baltimore where he was employed in a radio shop before entering the army two years ago.

S/Sgt. Anderson, another veteran member of the pioneer squadron, won the Bronze Star for constructing a jeep from Allied and enemy salvaged parts and repairing several other of that squadron's vehicles a few months ago at a time when parts and extra vehicles were difficult to secure.

1-20-45

Marks First Year Overseas

He has worked as squadron motor sergeant during his entire twenty-one months overseas. He has a wife, Mrs. Lizzie M. Anderson, in Selma, Ala.

The group celebrates its first anniversay overseas January 3. During this first year of combat, the group's pilots have flown 147 missions and 5,559 sorties against the enemy, and chalked up 79 victories. In addition, thirty DFC's and two Bronze Stars have been awarded the group's personnel for meritorious services.

PORTLAND, Ore.—(ANP)—Miss Helen Merrill, white, a member of the SPARS, and nationally known as the SPAR who extricated the foot of a little Negro boy in a New York subway last September, received a week on leave. Miss Merrill was cited by the coast guard for saving a human life.

Subway Incident Described

The subway incident described while SPAR Merrill was on fur-lough with her sister; who is a marine. When the two girls arrived at the subway entrance, they saw that the child, James Jefferson, caught in the turnstile, ordered the crowd to stand back, then held him and attempted to ease the pain of his broken foot. Pictures of her appeared in various York tunstile subway and was being crushed by the pushing crowd trying to force him out of the turnstile. SPAR Merrill entered the crowd, picked up nearly unconscious child, ordered the crowd to stand back, then picked up her sister for help.

While the emergency crew worked for two hours to release the trapped boy, Miss Merrill newspapers and magazines throughout the country. She refused to give her name, although hundreds of people wanted to know the name of the unidentified SPAR. The letters to her contained praise, thanks and some were proposals of marriage.

Miss Merrill's identity was established when she returned to San Francisco. The coast guard awarded her a citation for saving a human life.

Two Navy Men Win Commendation For Heroic Attempts At Rescue

Philadelphia Tribune Pa. 1-20-45

Two Navy men, Edward King, StM2c, of Atlanta, Ga., and Fred Magee, Jr., St3c of Delphos, Kans., were cited recently for their attempts to rescue a shipmate from drowning last April, off the Majuro Atoll, Marshall Islands.

King, who has been in the Navy 2 years and five months, was awarded the Navy and Marine Corps Medal. According to his citation, King and two other men swam out to save a drowning seaman, but could not get a secure hold on him. King tried desperately to save his companion, but became exhausted and was finally picked up by a barber patrol and carried to safety.

Magee, who has maintained an excellent record for his past four years in the Navy, was presented a commendation of the Secretary of the Navy. As a member of an authorized swimming party, Magee heard one of his comrades cry for help and unhesitatingly risked his life to go to his aid. He tried to save the helpless seaman, but became exhausted and was barely able to return to shore.

WITH THE 332nd FIGHTER GROUP, Italy—Capt. Luke Weathers, 24, of Memphis, Tenn., has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for "meritorious achievement in aerial flight as a pilot of the P-51 type aircraft during sustained operational activities against the enemy."

A flight leader with the 332nd, attached to the 15th AAF, Captain Weathers is a veteran combat pilot, having flown with the Group since its initiation into combat flying a year ago. He has more than 75 successful missions against the enemy and is credited with destroying two enemy aircraft in aerial battle.

He wears the Air Medal with five Oak Leaf clusters. The captain attended Xavier university in New Orleans before entering the AAF.

Pacific Rescue Heroism Earns Seaman Medal

Journal & Guide 3-17-45 Norfolk, Va

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A Negro sailor who dived overboard during fire-fighting and rescue operations and saved the lives of two survivors of a stricken aircraft carrier has been awarded the Navy and Marine Corps Medal, the Navy Department announced last week.

The heroic sailor, 27-year-old Judge Cantrell Jr., cook second class, of 93 McPherson street, Knoxville, Tenn., was one of twenty-six officers and men on the USS Irvin, a destroyer on Pacific duty, who were awarded the Navy and Marine Corps Medal for heroism during the fire-fighting and rescue operations alongside the USS Princeton, an aircraft carrier, last Oct. 24.

JUDGE CANTRELL

THE CITATION 3-17-45

Each of the 26 officers and men courageously dived overboard from the ship to rescue drowning survivors. Only when they were physically exhausted did the rescuers leave the water.

"For distinguishing himself by heroism while his ship was conducting fire-fighting and rescue operations alongside an aircraft carrier on October 24, 1944. With complete disregard of his own safety he voluntarily and courageously dove overboard from his ship and succeeded in rescuing two drowning survivors. Only when physically exhausted did he leave the water. His conduct was at all times in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

Heroic Ga. Seaman Gets Silver Star

Chicago Defender (Natl ed.) Ill. 3-17-45

CHARLESTON, S. C.—For heroism in exposing himself to Nazi fire while giving first aid to his shipmates Willie James Jackson, a navy cook from Valdosta, Ga., was awarded the Silver Star this week. 2-3-45

Although he was suffering intense pain from shrapnel wounds received in the head and thigh while administering first aid to his commanding officer, Seaman Jackson continued to expose himself to enemy fire in order to care for wounded comrades and bring in other casualties.

The heroic Georgian, whose present home is in Jacksonville, Fla., and who previously had won the Purple Heart, received his latest award as a crew member of the USS LST 357 during the amphibious invasion of Salerno, Italy, last September. 2-3-45

In a citation, accompanying the Silver Star medal, Secretary of the Navy Forrestal wrote: "By his heroic initiative and untiring efforts in the face of grave peril, Jackson contributed materially to the saving of many men who otherwise might have perished and upheld the highest traditions of the United States Naval Service."

Pfc. Jack Thomas One Of 2,600 Combat Volunteers

KUNZELSAU, Germany—A fighting infantryman from Albany Ga., one of 2,600 Negro GI's who volunteered last spring to fight alongside their white comrades in seven infantry divisions on the Western Front, has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, the War Department reported.

Awarded for "extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against the enemy during action near Harvegrode, Germany," the decoration was pinned on the chest of Private First Class Jack Thomas during ceremonies held on October 19 at Kunzelsau, Germany.

The Georgia doughboy was a fighter in Company E of the famous 60th ("Go-Devil") Infantry Regiment which fought with the Ninth Infantry Division of General Hodges' famed U. S. First Army.

OFFICIAL CITATION

Following is the official citation from Headquarters, U. S. Third Army, to which the Ninth Division was subsequently assigned:

"Private First Class Jack Thomas, Company E, 60th Infantry Regiment, 9th Infantry Division, USA for extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against an armed enemy in Germany on 9 April 1945, during action near Harvegrode, Germany.

"Private First Class Thomas courageously led his squad on a mission to knock out an enemy tank, providing heavy calibre support for a hostile road back.

"Skillfully directing the deployment in firing of his squad, he advanced upon the enemy position and hurled two hand grenades wounding several hostile soldiers. When two of his men manning a rocket launcher were wounded, he picked up the weapon and launched two rockets at the enemy, preventing them from manning the tank.

DISREGARDS FIRE

11-11-45

"This gallant soldier then picked up one of the rocket-launching team who was seriously wounded and with utter disregard for the intense small arm and automatic weapon fire, carried his comrade to safety. Private First Class Thomas' heroic leadership and unflinching devotion to duty are in keeping with the finest tradition of the military service."

The young hero, who joined the army when he was 18, is an orphan who lives with his grandmother, Mrs. Betty Quiggs in East Albany.

Two other living Negro veterans wear the Distinguished Service Cross: Captain Charles L. Thomas, Detroit, Michigan, who won the award for leading his platoon of Tank Destroyers in a breakthrough of the Siegfried Line last December, and First Lieutenant Vernon J. Baker, rifle platoon leader in the 92nd Infantry ("Buffalo") Division.

Private George Watson, Birmingham, Alabama, first Negro to win the award in World War II, received it posthumously in 1943.

KUNZELSAU, Germany—History was written on Wafer Field in the small dorf of Kunzelsau, Germany recently when Pfc. Jack Thomas became the third Negro ever to receive the Distinguished Service Cross, th enation's second highest honor.

The entire 350th Field Artillery Battalion held a parade and review in honor of Pfc. Thomas and several other members of the battalion who received battle awards at the same time.

The Commanding General of the Sixth Corps arrived at the parade grounds at 1445 and promptly at 1500, the adjutant's call was sounded. Even the weather looked with approval upon the memorable scene, and Wafer Field, in its early autumn setting between a small valley, was a beautiful sight.

With Headquarters, Able, Baker, Charley and Service Batteries appearing in that order, General Burress and his staff conducted an inspection in ranks of the battalion Captain Marion, as troop commander, presented the men for their decorations and immediately thereafter, the 428th Army Service Forces band played the always stirring National Anthem.

After the men were decorated, they formed a part of the general staff, and the entire battalion, led by the band, passed in review. It was a brilliant spectacle as the men, in perfect step, executed their movements with flawless precision. Every battery was commended upon the superior appearance of its troops, and Baker Battery was singled out as being exceptionally excellent. General Burress was well pleased and he complimented both the battalion and the band, saying that the parade and review were, in all ways, one of the best he had ever been privileged to witness.

From Ninth Division

Ill.

The honors were monopolized by the men who had fought with the famed First and Ninth Infantry Divisions, with the highlight of the occasion being the award of the Distinguished Service Cross to diminutive Jack Thomas of Albany, Ga., who fought with the Go-Devil Regiment of the Ninth Division.

Bronze Star Medals went to Staff Sgt. Alfred Curry of New Haven, Conn., and to Pfc. Floyd Thompson of Steubenville, Ohio, both of whom fought with the 18th Regiment of the First Infantry Division. Sgt. Harry Peters, formerly with the 26th Infantry of the First Division, was awarded the Purple Heart. Pfc. James Gray, who fought in the same platoon with Jack Thomas, was awarded the Bronze Star Medal.

These awards were won for heroic action in the particularly bitter fighting during April, when the Germans were making what turned out to be their last determined stand. Sgt. Harry Peters received his Purple Heart for wounds which he suffered on a day in April when half his squad was either killed or wounded in an assault upon a city held by SS troopers. Staff Sgt. Alfred Curry received his award for heroism during a successful combat patrol which he led against the German city of Dessau. Pfc. Thompson was cited for heroism in the same action.

Chicago Ill.

The extraordinary valor and courage which Pfc. Jack Thomas exhibited in winning his Distinguished Service Cross, is something which will be long remembered and not soon forgotten. Not only was he instrumental in helping to repulse the deadly threat of an enemy tank, but he also carried a wounded comrade to safety, with utter disregard for his personal safety. As the official citation pointed out, Pfc. Thomas showed a degree of "heroic leadership and unflinching devotion to duty which are in keeping with the finest traditions of the military service."

There had been only two Negroes ever to receive the Distinguished Service Cross prior to Pfc. Thomas' decoration by General Burress, and Thomas is the first soldier of his race ever to win this coveted award while fighting with the Ninth Division. The United States has only one honor higher than the Distinguished Service Cross and that is the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Joined Army at 18

The gallant little soldier was inclined to be modest concerning his remarkable and tremendous achievements, stating quietly that, "Any other man would have done the same thing."

This small hero, who is an orphan and lives with his grandmother, Mrs. Betty Quiggs, in Albany, Ga., came into the army when he was just 18. His post-war plans call for completing his education and getting a job. He is one of the quietest soldiers in the battalion and hardly anyone who does not know him, even suspected that he had earned a particularly sacred niche in the heroes' Hall of Fame.

GENERAL DAVIS' AIDES DECORATED—Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis Sr., congratulates T/Sgt. Barbara Richfield of New York City following her receipt of the Bronze Star Medal at a ceremony in Paris, France, last month. She received the award for meritorious work as the general's secretary. On the right is Capt. John C. Overton of Flint, Mich., who was given the Bronze Star Medal for his work as aide-de-camp to Gen. Davis.

Ga. GI Wins Distinguished Service Cross for Heroism

KUNZELSAU, Germany—A fighting infantryman from Albany, Ga., one of 2,600 colored GI's who volunteered last spring to fight alongside their white comrades in seven infantry divisions on the Western Front, has been awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, the War Department reported last Thursday.

Awarded for "extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against the enemy during action near Harvegrode, Germany," the decoration was pinned on the chest of Pfc. Jack Thomas during ceremonies held here on Oct. 19.

The Georgia doughboy was a fighter in Company E of the famous 60th ("Go-Devil") Infantry Regiment which fought with the Ninth Infantry Division of General Hodges' famed U.S. First Army.

Courageous Leadership

The official citation from Headquarters, U.S. Third Army, said Pfc. Thomas, on April 9 last, during action near Harvegrode, Germany, courageously led his squad on a mission to knock out an enemy tank, providing heavy calibre support for a hostile road back.

H skillfully directed the deployment in firing of his squad, advanced upon the enemy position and hurled two hand grenades, wounding several hostile soldiers.

When two of his men manning a rocket launcher were wounded, he picked up the weapon and launched two rockets at the enemy, preventing them from manning the tank.

Pfc. Thomas then picked up one of his comrades who was seriously wounded, and with utter disregard for the intense small arm and automatic weapon fire, carried him to safety.

His Death in Vain?

U.S.S. Arizona messman, who manned a machine gun and downed eight Jap planes during the attack on Pearl Harbor. His father, Conery Miller, Waco, Tex., farmer, in a nation-wide broadcast, Sunday, declared that his death was in vain and he'd rather have his son back.

he'd rather have his son back.

In a nation-wide broadcast, aired by the American Broadcasting System, Mr. Miller and two other heroes in whose honor theatres were dedicated at Treasure Island Naval Base, were interviewed by Orson Welles, stage, radio and screen star.

Mr. Miller, who was interviewed at his home in Waco, Tex., was asked whether things are better because of his son's sacrifice.

Without hesitating, he gave a resolute, "No."

Conditions No Better

"Do you mean to say things are no better?" Welles countered. Again, he received a firm, "No," no more.

Welles tried again and Mr. Miller answered, "Well, maybe, Mr. Welles, but I don't think so. If I could have had my RUTHERS, I'd RUTHER have my son back!"

The air lanes were silent for one shocked half minute, Mr. Miller was not asked to go into detail.

His reply was in sharp contract to that given by relatives of the other two heroes, both white, who told in glowing terms how their sons' sacrifice had helped make things better for them.

However, earlier in the program in introducing Mr. Miller, Welles told how Miller who had never fired a machine gun before, left his messman's post and, along with a reserve lieutenant, downed eight Jap planes when the USS Arizona was attacked at Pearl Harbor, on Dec. 7, 1941.

Navy Lowers Barriers

He expressed satisfaction that his son was "a good boy who never dropped its color bars and was allowing colored seamen to get training in firing guns.

"No, because he said it made him think of his dead buddies."

At present, a wooden plaque identifies it. This, however, will eventually be replaced by a metal one as a memorial to Miller's heroic deed.

The theatre, which has a seating capacity of 1500, is used by all races. It is of semi-permanent construction and has been in use more than a year.

The 22-year-old Navy hero, who won the Navy cross for his Pearl Harbor exploits, was reported missing in action in the Battle of the Coral Sea in the South Pacific in Dec., 1943, soon after he returned to duty.

Mr. Miller recounted that his son was "a good boy who never gave anybody any trouble." Asked whether he had talked much about ITALY — Two officers of the 92nd Infantry Division, 1st Lt. William E. Porter, Lima, Ohio; and 2nd Lt. Reuben L. Horner, Tucson, Ariz., have been awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action against the enemy, the War Department has announced.

Last December 5, Lieutenant Porter, alone, advanced on an enemy machine-gun nest, killed the German officer in charge, and forced the remaining enemy to surrender, thus facilitating the advance of his platoon, pinned down by heavy enemy automatic weapons.

Later in the day, after the platoon had been completely surrounded by superior enemy forces, he constantly exposed himself to hostile fire in moving back and forth between platoon positions.

Repulsed Counter-Attacks

Last October 22, Lieutenant Horner repulsed five enemy counter-attacks against his platoon which was holding a mountain position.

Under a continuous rain of hostile fire, he cooly deployed his own small arms and automatic weapons, and personally directed counter artillery and mortar fire so aggressively that all five enemy actions were successfully repulsed.

Hail Leadership, Courage

Lieutenant Horner, regardless of personal safety, consistently exposed himself between weapon positions, making fire adjustments and encouraging his men. The pressure of his counter-attack forced an enemy machine-gun squad and several riflemen to surrender.

The citations said of Lieutenant Porter: "His aggressive leadership was an inspiration to the officers and men of his organization"; and of Lieutenant Horner: "His intrepid courage . . . was a heroic example of the fighting man's desire to close with the enemy and destroy him."

7 Engineers Given Soldier's Medals

Baltimore Md.

FOGGIA, Italy. — Seven members of the 1246th Engineer Composite Platoon, who ignored the intense heat of blazing freight cars packed with explosives to bring a threatening holocaust under control on Dec. 13, were awarded the Soldier's Medal recently.

According to the accompanying citation, the men showed marked heroism by segregating from other cars two tank cars and two loads of fragmentation bombs which were ablaze in a filled freight yard here.

Working until the blaze was extinguished and the bombs sufficiently cooled to eliminate the danger of an explosion, they saved not only many lives but also large amounts of vital war material, the citation added.

T/3 Manuel Reed, Liberal, Kan.; Sgt. Samuel L. Brantley, Detroit; Sgt. Octave M. Jensen, New York City; Cpl. George A. Bradley, De Funiack Springs, Fla.; T/5 Dallas Austin, Holly Springs, Miss.; Pfc Harold Bardell, New Orleans, and Pvt. Rufus Barner, Inverness, Miss.

P.M.-N.Y.

Capt. Charles L. Thomas, 25, of Detroit, received the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action. His armored car, leading a task force of the 618th Tank Destroyer Battalion in an attack last Dec. 14 on Climbach, France, near the Siegfried Line, was blasted by an enemy shell. Thomas, who was wounded in the thighs, stomach and right arm, helped the others in the car to safety, directed the setting up of two anti-tank guns and repelled the Nazi counterattack. Now, although he has not fully recovered from his wounds, Capt. Thomas is touring the Second Service Command in connection with the reconditioning program. He hopes to return to Wayne University, Detroit, to complete his training as an aeronautical engineer (It should be pointed out that he will have little chance at his career unless FEPC is given real power to break down racial discrimination in industry.) To a man who has earned the best future his country can give him:

Six Messmen Down Jap Plane, Get Citations

Philadelphia Pa. Tribune

Six Negro steward's mates who manned their anti-aircraft guns until a Japanese suicide plane crashed into flames among them have been awarded the Bronze Star Medal for their heroism in action aboard the USS INTREPID, the Department of the Navy said this week.

Vice Admiral John S. McCain, U. S. N., commander of Task Force 38, made the awards for their partication in the action of October 29, 1944.

The medals were awadled to:

Que Gant, steward's mate, first Class, U.S.N.R., 22, of 132 Center st., Atlantic City, N. J.

Eli Benjamin, steward's mate second class, U.S.N.R., 20, of 734 Jefferson St., Norfolk, Va.

The six men who volunteered to man anti-aircraft guns in the event of attack by the enemy, were stationed at a 20 millimeter machine gun by the gunnery officer of the USS INTREPID, ESSEX-class carrier that was damaged four times by attacking Japanese planes.

The citations read: "For distinguished himself by heroic and meritorious service in connection with operations against the enemy, while serving aboard an aircraft carrier on October 29, 1944. When a Japanese dive-bomber attacked from the starboard side of the ship, he continued to operate his portside gun in its fire over the flight deck although it became apparent that the enemy plane was headed directly for his gun tub. His gun fired until the Japanese plane crashed into his tub. The courage and skill he displayed were at all times in keeping with the highest traditions of the Naval Service."

Benjamin twice has been wounded during action with the fast carrier task force in the Pacific, while Clark, Swann and Dockery have also been wounded in action.

Meritorious Service Wins Star for Major

Philadelphia Tribune

MAJ. JAMES A. BATTS, JR., —son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Batts, of 5615 Girard avenue, has been awarded the Bronze Star medal for meritorious service in support of combat operations in Italy from November 8, 1944 to May 2, 1945. Pa.

According to the citation honoring Major Batts, his frequent presence in Battalion Aid Stations and in the front lines was an example and inspiration, not only to his own officers and men but also to all the men of the regiment, assuring them that prompt and efficient medical attention would always be provided them. 8-4-45

Major Batts attended Temple University, where he received the B. A. degree, and was graduated with honors from the School of Medicine at Howard University. Upon graduation, he was commissioned a First Lieutenant in the Medical Reserve and, after interning at Mercy Hospital for a year, was assigned to active duty.

RECEIVING MEDAL OF MERIT AWARD — In the name of the President, the Secretary of War, the Honorable Henry L. Stimson today presented the Medal for Merit for Civilians to Mr. Truman K. Gibson, Jr., Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War since September, 1943, at ceremonies in his office in the Pentagon building.

Following is the citation which accompanied the award:

"For the performance of extraordinary service to the War Department in handling for the Secretary of War as a special advisor the problem of the fair and effective utilization of Negroes in all branches of the military service including the employment of Negroes in a civilian status.

"In the performance of his duties, he exercised at all times a strong sense of fairness and moderation and a rare human understanding. His counsel has been of great value to the War Department in its efforts to effect the greatest possible utilization of Negroes in the Army. He has set a high standard of useful service in the field of racial relations in time of war for which the War Department and the nation are grateful.

The Fighting 969th

Nashville Globe Nashville, Tennessee 9-7-45

"Among the heroes of the Bastogne fighting of last December were the members of the 969th Field Artillery Battalion, then attached to the 101st Airborne Division. It was this division which held the surrounded road junction for nine days during the 'Battle of the Bulge,' until General Patton's armor could open up a corridor for their relief. Their spirit was expressed in the famous reply of Brig. Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe to the German demand for surrender—the one word, 'Nuts.' For nine days these gunners, fighting as infantry, short of food and finally almost out of ammunition, helped stand off three German divisions. Yesterday the 969th received a Presidential citation. Soon, no doubt, they will be returning to this country, where, one hopes, their valor will be recognized as generally it was abroad. The 969th, though commanded by white officers, is a Negro outfit. If prejudiced persons continue to say that the Negro does not make a good and brave soldier the rank and file of the 969th will now have a ready answer. Officers and men, they all did honor to the land of their birth." (New York Times, August 3. 1945.)

Artillery Heroes In Hall Of Fame

Voorhees Guide Norfolk 8-18-45

By Associated Negro Press

VOGUIERS, FRANCE—The 969th Field Artillery Battalion entered America's military hall of fame recently when it became the first Negro military group to be awarded the Presidential Distinguished Unit Citation in honor of heroic defense of Bastogne.

The Negro artillerymen's chance for glory came when Field Marshal Gerd Von Rundstedt attempted a breakthrough in the Ardennes in December. They were in a position northeast of Bastogne when the German attack came and were ordered to move southward. When they arrived at Bastogne, Brig. Gen. Anthony McAuliffe, acting commander of the 101st Airborne division, conscripted them to help stop the German thrust.

8-18-45

THEIR HEROISM

Their heroism is noted in the original citation awarded to the 101st "and its attached units for extraordinary heroism and gallantry in defense of the key communications center of Bastogne, Belgium" during the most critical phase of the Battle of the Bulge.

This marked the first time in America's military history that a whole battalion of Negro troops have received the Presidential Distinguished Unit citation for extraordinary bravery and heroism.

The Washington Tribune 9-22-45

The citation presented to Mr. Gibson, who rose to the position of Civilian Aide to the Secretary of War upon the resignation of William (Bill) Hastie, read as follows:

"For the performance of extraordinary service to the War Department in handling for the Secretary of War, as special advisor to the problems of the fair and most effective utilization of Negroes in all the branches of the military service including the employment of workers of civilian status in performance of duty.

"Exercising at all times a strong sense of fairness and the modification of rare human understanding, his council has been of great value in the effective utilization of Negroes in the Army. He has set a high standard of useful service in racial relations in War Time, for which the War Department and the nation is grateful."

The Medal and Citation was presented to Mr. Gibson in the office of Mr. Stimson at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Louis Lautier, civilian liason officer in the Office of the Secretary of War was presented a similar medal and citation the same day that the Japs surrendered to the American forces.

Lem Foster Given Award

Atlanta (Ga) Daily World

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — The emblem for Meritorious Civilian service was awarded to Lemuel Foster, racial relations analyst for the army service forces last Friday afternoon by Major General Joseph N. Dalton, director of personnel, ASF.

10-6-45

"For meritorious civilian service with army service forces as a consultant on minority groups," read the citation which was signed by Gen. Brehon G. Somervell, commanding general of ASF, "and for active assistance in bringing about the maximum use of such groups during America's greatest war effort, thereby not only materially aiding war production but also providing the members of such groups with an opportunity to participate fully in America's war effort."

Foster came to Washington for the war department on November 20, 1942. Prior to that he had been racial relations adviser for the Works Progress administration in New York when General Somervell first met him.

Joe Louis, Truman Gibson Get Army Merit Awards

WASHINGTON—At ceremonies no less impressive than those during which Secretary of War Stimson presented the Medal for Merit for civilians to Truman K. Gibson Jr., his civilian aide, Wednesday for extraordinary service to the War Department, Sunday on the Army Hour radio program, T/Sgt. Joe Louis Barrow, heavyweight champion of the world, was awarded the Legion of Merit medal by Army officials at Fort Hamilton, N. Y., by Major General Clarence H. Kells, commanding general of the New York Port of Embarkation.

The Gibson award was made in the Capital by direction of President Truman and is the counterpart of the Legion of Merit which is awarded to officers and enlisted men of the armed forces.

EXCEPTIONAL SERVICES

The Louis citation read for "exceptional meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services," and the civilian aide's citation was for "the performance of extraordinary service to the War Department as adviser on the problem of the fair and effective utilization of Negroes in all branches of military service including employment of Negroes in civilian status."

Mr. Stimson made the Gibson award in his office at the Pentagon Building at noon on Wednesday. Present was the civilian aide's wife, their daughter Karen, Mr. Gibson's office staff and other military and civilian personnel. Mr. Gibson's services dated in the War Department from November 28, 1940, when he was assistant to William H. Hastie.

GIBSON APPOINTED 1943

On February 16, 1943 he became acting civilian aide upon the resignation of Mr. Hastie. September 22, 1943, he was appointed to fill the office of the former aide. His travels since then took him to nearly all theaters of war where he made investigations of complaints concerning the treatment of colored personnel in the Army and in civilian employment in the War Department.

His citation concluded: "He has set a high standard of useful service in the field of racial relations in time of war for which the War Department and the Nation are grateful."

Heavyweight champion Louis as a member of a special services unit, toured Army camps throughout the country and in Europe, North Africa and the Mediterranean and Italian theaters of operation where he engaged in ninety-two exhibition bounts before more than 2,000,000 service men.

It was pointed out that the champion willingly volunteered such services at considerable risks to his boxing future rather than disappoint the men who desired to see him in the ring. He also visited camp and theatre hospitals where his encouragement to sick and injured soldiers had a definite recovery value and moral lift.

Louis' service covered the period from August 30, 1943 to October 10, 1944. Functioning most of the time as a staff sergeant, Champion Joe Louis was recently promoted to technical sergeant. At present he is assigned to the Special Services Division, Camp Shanks, N. Y.

Gibson Gets Merit Award

WASHINGTON—The nation's highest award, the Medal of Merit for Civilians, was presented this week to Truman K. Gibson, Jr., civilian aide to the Secretary of War, by his chief, Henry L. Stimson.

As the first Negro to receive the award, Gibson was cited by President Harry S. Truman "For the performance of extraordinary service to the War Department in handling for the Secretary of War as a special advisor, the problem of fair and effective utilization of Negroes in all branches of the military service, including the employment of Negroes in a civilian status."

During the brief, but impressive ceremony, Secretary Stimson said that he had been most impressed by the number of statements critical of army policy and procedure which Gibson has submitted to him, adding, perhaps it would have been easier for all concerned had the pleasant things been emphasized.

He said he had followed Gibson's work very carefully and had been greatly impressed with the service he had rendered.

Visibly moved by the recognition accorded him, Gibson later told the Defender that "The secretary's references to my critical evaluation of the War Department's policy with respect to Negro personnel was exceedingly gratifying to me." He said the award came as "a complete surprise," declaring, "I was flabbergasted."

9-29-45

The citation, signed by the President of the United States, Harry S. Truman, read:

"For the performance of extraordinary service to the War Department in handling for the Secretary of War as a special advisor, the problem of fair and effective utilization of Negroes in all branches of the military service, including the employment of Negroes in a civilian status.

"In the performance of his duties, he exercised at all times a strong sense of fairness and moderation and a rare human understanding.

"His counsel has been of great value to the War Department in its efforts to effect the greatest possible utilization of Negroes in the army.

"He has set a high standard of useful service in the field of race relations in the time of war, for which the War Department and the nation are grateful."

Th Medal of Merit has been given to approximately 10 civilians in its history. On other such occasion was when it was awarded posthumously to Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox.

A president of Chicago, Gibson enjoyed a successful law practice in the "Windy City" prior to coming to the War Department where he has served as civilian aide since September 1943. He succeeded William H. Hastie in that office.

Commando Tactics Used In Spectacular Raid Along Riviera Coast In Italy; Men Find It Harder To Withdraw Than Attack

By JOHN "ROVER" JORDAN

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY IN ITALY'S GOTHIC LINE—(Via Wireless)—Heroism, excitement and drama, blended with commando tactics as exciting as any in fiction, featured a violent raid by units of the 92nd Infantry Division along the heavily fortified Italian Riviera Coast last week. The bronzed 92nd warriors advanced under cover of a smoke screen and worked in behind the enemy lines where they fought for hours killing Germans, knocking out fortifications and capturing prisoners.

In moving off on this perilous mission, the 92nd units were supported by a terrific artillery barrage and by massed tank support. The units struck along the beach and then suddenly swerved inland surprising the Kraut defenders by a rear guard attack. 1-13-45

The Germans fought back fanatically alerting the enemy in the entire area. A terrific fight developed with the Nazis using every possible weapon. Our troops were outnumbered and some of their weapons were jammed by exposure to the salt water and sand. Nevertheless, they blasted the Nazi installations with bazookas and hand grenades.

JORDAN

WIN DECORATIONS

The Negro infantrymen then fought their way out with valor and suffering which has already won for some of the participants, one Silver Star and five Bronze Stars. 1-13-45

The number of men missing in action is not exceptionally heavy considering the nature of the mission and the resulting accomplishments.

RETURN COSTLY

Crossing No Mans Land and advancing behind the enemy lines was not costly at all but a real battle developed when the other German troops in the area had been alerted by the probing action of our troops against the coastal defenders. The narrow coastal strip blazed in battle when the other Krauts joined in the fight. 1-13-45

Our raiders spread into small parties at the height of the fight. One group captured four Germans. After knocking out several pill boxes and fortifications and killing numerous Nazis, the raiders were ordered to make their way back to our lines along the same beach route that they took to get in behind the Nazis.

The battle to get back proved most bitter. Two Nazi prisoners were killed by enemy fire and a third ran away. The harrassed 92nd infantrymen held on to the fourth prisoner through the entire ordeal.

CRAWLED IN SEA 1-13-45

The entire German strength in the area was thrown into battle as our raiders made their way back. Most of the 92nd men crawled along on their hands and knees in the sea water to escape land mines on the beaches and to avoid the intense enemy fire which shelled the beach. When the fire became too intense the men would duck their heads under the water. The weather was near freezing.

Every returning man told a heart-rending story of battle suffering. 1-13-45

Lt. D. A. Harrod, of Washington, a weary and unshaven platoon leader said "It was a nice night for romance but for us it was the nearest thing to hell I have ever dreamed of on earth."

Lt. James T. Owens, of Boston, hailed the superiority of American weapons declaring that the Nazi grenades were nothing but noise.

The soldiers told of last seeing one officer standing waist deep in icy water helping men to crawl back across a canal near our lines. That officer is reported missing in action.

Sgt. Kenneth Evans, of South Hill, Va., had a portable radio shot from his back. 1-13-45

COOKS IN COMBAT

Even the company cooks had a combat role in this spectacular raid. Pfc. Jethro Spikes, of Glenwood, Ga., and Pfc. Moses Stradford, Roselle, N. J., were penned down by fire and Spikes volunteered to crawl through the minefields to bring artillery fire to bear on enemy positions. For his heroism, Spikes was presented the Bronze Star.

Lt. Melvin W. Walker, of Covington, Ky., an officer of the attacking raiders, was awarded the coveted Silver Star as a result of this battle. The citation pointed out that he assisted in directing the fight and when he found that his own gun would not fire because of sand and water, he repeatedly exposed himself to draw enemy fire. On his return to the 92nd base, he assisted in evacuating wounded across a canal and led a group through the withering fire to safety.

SILENCES MACHINE GUN

Another raider receiving the Bronze Star was Pvt. James W. Wilson, of Paulsboro, N. J., who was cited for single-handedly assaulting a Nazi machine gun position, silencing the weapon and enabling the unit to continue their advance.

Bronze Stars also went to three officers of the division headquarters who helped plan the raid.

When the raiding party returned, cold and exhausted, all of the officers of the unit contributed their whiskey rations to the shivering heroes.

DEMOCRACY -- 1945 — Writing in the New York Post, for which he is a special war correspondent, Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP, in a story datelined Hollandia, New Guinea, paid tribute to Major Hildrus A. Poindexter, world authority on tropical diseases. 3-24-45

Major Poindexter, Negro aide to Col. Dwight M. Kuhns, of Louisville, according to the story, was awarded the Bronze Star for his work in the Solomons reducing the malaria rate 86 per cent. And then Mr. White, wrote this:

"I asked Kuhns if he had experienced any difficulty among white members of the staff when Poindexter joined him. He said at first there was some objection to Poindexter eating and being housed with the others. Separate quarters had been erected but were soon done away with as staff members recognized the ability and personal qualities of the Negro scientist."

That story was not written from the southern part of the United States about treatment of an eminent Negro physician in the South, but was written from the Pacific theatre of operations where the darker races greatly outnumber the whites.

It was written, too, from a theatre of war which will, unfortunately probably last for several years after cessation of hostilities in the Europaen area, because the philiosophy of, and actions of, the white man in that area have not been entirely of the nature that would engender any other feeling than of the much-vaunted white supremacy ideology.

At a time when democracy is on trial all over the world, it would seem that the white supremacy boys in our armed forces would realize that by carrying into new and strange lands their prejudices and hatreds against the Negro, they are prolonging just that much longer the coming of the peace. And they are also creating suspicions and doubts as to the sincerity of the United States and the kind of democracy it is fighting to preserve and, yes, extend.

Purple Hearts To Four GIs Wounded In Philippines

Pittsburgh Courier Pgh. Pa. 3-10-45

By BILLY ROWE, Courier War Correspondent

IN THE PACIFIC WAR AREA—"Greater love hath no man" than he who withstands the rigors of war in distant lands for the ideals of his country, which backs up right with might. Since entering the Philippines in late October through Leyte, American forces have battered the walls set by the Japanese and today are in sight of complete victory. 3-10-45

White and Tan Yanks alike have died and been wounded in General MacArthur's thrusts to get back that which is America.

Four Tan Doughboys who recently were wounded in action received Purple Hearts from Maj. Kenneth Gee of Iowa at a rear echelon general hospital. Pvt. Clinton Johnson, Philadelphia, was wounded taking ammunition up to the front. A member of the 827th Amphibian Duck Company, QM Corps, he is the husband of Mrs. Barbara Johnson, 1513 South Woodstock Street, Philadelphia. 3-10-45

Pvt. Johnnie M. Gilyard hit the beachhead in the Philippines D-Day with the Ordnance Department. The son of Mrs. Bell Gilyard, 1316 North Sixth Street, Wilmington, N. C., he is with the 595th and was hit by shrapnel while guarding an ammunition dump.

Pfc. John Jones Jr., son of Mrs. Blanche Jones, 1509 Queen Street, Portsmouth, Va., and a member of the 291st Port Company, was wounded while hauling gas.

Pfc. J. B. Shropshire was wounded while his unit, the 991st QM Service Company, was unloading ships in the harbor. From Osyka, Miss., he is the son of Mrs. Annie Turner. Out of action for a while, all of these men expressed the desire to get going again and add to the complete setting of Japan's rising sun.

General Clark Cites Valiant Record Of Men

Atlanta World 1-23-45 Ga.

All Members Of 92nd Division In Northern Italy

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY, Italy — Five members of the 92nd "Buffalo" Division, part of the Fifth Army in northern Italy, recently were presented battlefield commissions by Lieutenant General Mark W. Clark, new commander in chief of the 15th Army Group.

Cited for demonstrated leadership, coolness under fire and ability on the field of battle, the newly-created second lieutenants are: Joseph Bracy of Boston, Massachusetts, and Gilbert Boothe of Forsyth, Georgia, former first sergeants; Frank Whisonant, Washington, D. C., Joeph Fry of Homestead, Penna. and William Hicks of Cleveland, Ohio, former technical sergeants.

BRONZE STAR AWARDS

Both Hicks and Whisonant previously had been awarded Bronze Stars for heroic achievement in action. 1-23-45

In making the presentation, Gen. Clark praised the five men for the natural ability as leaders they had demonstrated in battle. He added that from now on they will be marked men and will be expected to continue the high tradition they have established.

"The job of routing out the enemy from these mountains is an unglamorous one," Colonel Clark said, "but it is a highly important phase of this global war."

ROLE OF GUARD 1-23-45

The General then compared it to the role of the football guard whose very necessary work goes unnoticed by the press, while the running backs grab all the glory.

He added that the Allied Armies are continuing to score over the best enemy divisions in Italy, a fact which plays a big part in the overall war picture.

AN ADVANCED ALLIED AIR BASE IN ITALY—(Via Wireless) — Major George Spencer "Spanky" Roberts, deputy commander of the 322nd Fighter Group and former commander of the 99th Fighter Squadron when this unit achieved its greatest fame, was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross here recently after 20 months of overseas flying service.

Simultaneously with the awarding of this distinction to the intrepid flying hero came the surprise announcement that the governor of his native West Virginia had made Major Roberts an honorary colonel.

The Air Corps major is a native of Fairmount, W. Va., and is a graduate of West Virginia State College. He was one of the five first Negro graduates of the flight cadet training program at Tuskegee Army Air Field 1-27-45

Major Roberts was cited for the D.F.C. as a result of "his exceptional leadership, coordination and control in leading a formation of Mustang fighters in a strafing attack on airdromes in Yugoslavia, navigating through inclement weather to the target."

The citation said further that "he skillfully dispersed his force to concentrate devastating fire defying the intense anti-aircraft fire thrown up by the enemy defenders of the airdromes. He made repeated passes destroying or damaging every enemy aircraft in the target area. Fourteen planes were known to be destroyed."

Major Roberts, who went overseas as operations officer of the Original 99th Fighter Squadron, in April, 1943, has the air medal with three oak leaf clusters. As operations officer of the 99th, he took command when Col. B. O. Davis Jr., then commanding officer, left the unit to return to the States in September, 1943. Major Roberts, who earned the respect of his flyers by his courageous leadership, took leave in April, 1944, and returned home where he stayed a few months.

He returned to his command in the fall of 1944 and soon moved up to deputy group commander being second in command of the 332nd, ranking behind the present commanding officer, Col. Davis. Major Roberts was group commander when Col. Davis returned to the States this fall on leave for thirty days. 1-27-45

When told of the honor the West Virginia governor had paid him, Major Roberts said: "How is a fellow supposed to feel when he is a major and a colonel at the same time."

Recently promoted from first lieutenant to captain were three squadron intelligence officers in the 332nd and one squadron adjutant. Promotions went to:

Captain John R. Beverly Jr., of Ruther Glen, Va., a former teacher and a graduate of Virginia State College, who is married to Mrs. Mary J. Beverly of Paulsboro, N. J., and who is intelligence officer of a squadron commanded by Captain Melvin Jackson of Warrenton, Va.;

Captain John B. Quick, of 505 Troop street, Brooklyn, N. Y., a graduate of Brooklyn College, husband of Mrs. Marion D. Quick and intelligence officer of a squadron commanded by Captain Andrew D. Turner, of Washington; 1-27-45

Captain Samuel C. Scott, 55 Orient street, Jersey City, N. J., who attended City College of New York, is husband of Mrs. Carolyn Scott and father of Samuel Scott, III, and who is intelligence officer of a squadron and commanded by Captain Lee Rayford, of Washington; and Captain Paulus Taylor, of 28 Dimick street, Burkeville, Va., Captain Rayford's adjutant, who is a Hampton graduate and formerly the youngest member of the Hampton faculty.

Captain Weathers, Memphian, Downs Two German Planes

A crippled American bomber was limping home over Northern Italy last November. A sleek P-51 Mustang, piloted by a Memphis negro, and two other fighter craft roared along as escorts.

Six Nazi fighter planes jumped the Americans, apparently intent on finishing off the bomber which had been "laying the eggs" over Munich.

Downed One Plane

"They were German ME 109's," recalled Capt. Luke J. Weathers 24, former athlete at Booker T. Washington High, yesterday. "They jumped me as the bomber and other escort went on. I got one bandit in range and opened up. He went down.

"Another got on my tail and the five started circling me. It looked like they had me so I decided to follow the falling plane down.

"I made a dive, came out of it and looked back. One plane was still on my tail. I was headed back toward Germany . . . and I didn't want to go that way. I chopped the throttle and dropped the flaps to cut my speed quickly. The fellow overshot me and this left me on his tail.

"H was in range and I shot him down. I took out for home. The other four had disappeared. I really felt sorry for my old motor . . . because I really pushed her."

For shooting down two enemy planes, Captain Weathers, now at home at 601-C South Lauderdale on leave, received the Distinguished Flying Cross.

And did the Memphian ever meet the pilot of the wounded bomber he saved? 4-9-45

Met Bomber Pilot

It was in the only night club in Naples when the Memphian was awaiting transportation home. A young white officer came into the club and spoke to a group of negro fliers seated at a table. He told of the fine record made by the negro group and said that one of them probably saved his life, Captain Weathers recalls.

"He told of the experience and we started comparing notes," the Memphian continued. "It turned out that I had been one of the escorts on that mission."

The bomber officer identified himself as a Mississippian . . . a cousin of a former governor of the Magnolia State.

In service since August, 1942, and overseas since December, 1943, Captain Weathers has 112 missions to his credit. He also has the Air Medal with seven Oak Leaf Clusters, the Mediterranean Theater Ribbon with three stars for giving air support to our invading armies. He has eight enemy planes to his credit . . . and three of them are aerial victories. He destroyed the others on the ground.

Captain Weathers served overseas with the all-negro 332nd Fighter Group. Born in Memphis, he left his studies at Zavier University at New Orleans to enter the Army Air Forces. He won his wings and commission as second lieutenant at Tuskegee Institute, Ala., in April, 1943. 4-9-45

Escorted Bombers

"We were escorting the bombers when I spotted a bandit who was waiting for one of the bombers to fall out of formation," the Memphian said. "I asked the squadron commander if I could go after him. We had a pretty good scrap and I got in several hits.

"The enemy pilot bailed out as his plane went down. While he was drifting down on his parachute I circled him and he waved. I waved back. It's just like hunting ducks. The planes are the ducks. You want to knock out the plane . . . not necessarily the men."

Based in Italy, Captain Weathers had six missions over the Ploesti oil fields. 4-9-45

His group flew as escorts for convoys to the Anzio beachhead. He also strafed installations prior to the invasion of Southern France and then on D-Day he escorted bombers taking part in the invasion. 4-9-45

"The experiences have been fine," said Captain Weathers. "But there's nothing like coming home . . . even if I did catch the mumps when I got here."

Sergeant Tells How D.C. Officer Won Silver Star

Afro-American Balt, Md.

U.S. GENERAL HOSPITAL, CAMP PICKETT, Va.—It's hard to get Sgt. Roscoe Thompson of Norfolk, Va., to tell you how he got wounded fighting with the 92nd Division in Italy because the Virginia Union graduate always ends up by telling you what a great guy Capt. Charles F. Gandy was. 5-5-45

Thompson's commanding officer in Company F of the 370th Infantry Regiment, first unit of the 92nd Division to cross the Arno River last fall, for his "gallantry in action" while leading his company, Capt. Gandy was posthumously awarded the Silver Star on March 5.

"Just One of Those Things"

"How I got hit? Oh, it was just one of those things, I guess," said Sgt. Thompson who was wounded by shell fragments in his back, chest, throat and legs by mortar fire when he "left my foxhole to go to the command post to get the password for the night."

Convalescing at the hospital here, Sgt. Thompson, formerly employed at the Norfolk Navy Base, is the son of Mrs. Viola Walker of 910 Hanson Ave., Norfolk. He entered the service in March, 1943, and went overseas in July, 1944.

The Citation accompanying the award of the Silver Star to Capt. Gandy provides official concurrence to Thompson's eulogy. Released last week by the War Department, the citation, in part, reads as follows: 5-5-45

Gandy Citation Quoted

"Captain Gandy personally led his company out in broad daylight and, through further reconnaissance and by personal example and leadership, succeded in getting his entire company across a canal, with an abrupt twelve-foot wall.

"This was accomplished in rain and under extremely heavy enemy fire. Halting the company at its intermediate objective, Captain Gandy went forward alone to reconnoiter the route of the next movement. While engaged in this activity, he was mortally wounded by enemy machine-gun fire."

Wife Accepts Air Medal For Mate Downed in Raid

Washington Tribune
5-31-45 D.C.

Second Lt. Alfred I. Carroll, Jr., 21, of the Army Air Forces and a native Washingtonian, was one of the six heroes honored at Bolling Field on March 28, when Col. John M. Hutchison, commanding the D.C. Air Base, made presentations to next-of-kin of the airmen of Air Medals won in the European Theater of Operations.

The lieutenant, at present a prisoner of war in Austria, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Q. Carroll, 325 Sixty-first Street, N.E. He was graduated from Armstrong High School with the class of '39, and attended Howard University for two years. Prior to entering the service in February, 1943, he was employed by the Government Printing Office.

Lieutenant Carroll was trained as a pilot at Tuskegee, Ala., Army Air Field, and commissioned in November, 1943. In June, 1944, he was dispatched overseas where he saw distinguished service against the enemy until his plane was shot down in July, 1944, in the course of a raid over Austria. 3-31-45

With the award of the Air Medal went a citation "For meritorious achievement in aerial flight while participating in sustained operational activities against the enemy from June 23 to July 13, 1944."

High-Ranking Officers Laud 866th Port Co.

N.Y. Amsterdam News N.Y. 4-14-45

All-Negro Personnel At Staten Island Terminal Cited For Top Leadership

Less than six months after its activation, the 866th Port Company, with all-Negro personnel, has won two commendations from high-ranking officers for its excellent progress in training.

The first commendation was won in the camp of its activation, and the other was earned at the Staten Island Terminal of the New York Port of Embarkation, where the company is now doing advanced training. 4-14-45

The initial commendation was received on January 3, 1945, from Major General Philip Hayes, Commanding General of the Army Service Forces Depot at Indiantown Gap, Pa., for achieving the rating "superior" in a technical inspection conducted there by a Board of Transportation Corps officers. The citation received by the company congratulated the men "on their excellent leadership, hard work, co-operation and team work."

Citation Indorsements

This citation carried the indorsement of Brigadier General Jesse A. Ladd, Commanding Officer of Indiantown Gap Military Reservation; Colonel F. E. Ambrose, Commanding Officer of the Training Center there; Colonel Frederick S. Gillespie, Chief of Personnel, New York Port of Embarkation; Colonel James A. Stevens, Commanding Officer Port Terminals, and Lt. Col. Lindsey J. Griffith, Commander of the Staten Island Terminal.

The activity of the 866th Port Company which won a second commendation was the breaking of all previous training soldier records for loading supply ships. This the company did during the period February 19 through February 23, 1945. 4-14-45

The feat was described in a letter dated February 23, 1945, from Major Alvin Spiess, Water Division, NYPE, to the Commanding Officer of Staten Island Terminal. Enclosed with the letter were reports showing that the company had loaded and lashed a Liberty Ship in five days, averaging a work-record of 28.2 weight tons per hour during that period. The best day of the record-breaking performance was February 20, when the soldiers loaded 1440 weight tons, averaging 34.7 weight tons per hour.

Record Smashing Job

In expressing his commendation for the record-smashing job done by the company, Colonel Griffith stated that the feat was "just one other indication of the excellent spirit and morale of the company."

In a second indorsement of this commendation, Colonel F. W. Huntington, Commanding Officer of Fox Hills Terminal, Staten Island, N. Y., where the company is quartered, sent his congratulations to the officers and enlisted men of the organization for their latest accomplishment. 4-14-45

Commanding officer of the 866th Port Co. is Captain William A. Williams, of Indianapolis, Ind., who volunteered for officer's training in July, 1943. Captain Williams was a pharmaceutical chemist and an employe of the War Labor Board before he began his Army career. He has captained the company since its formal designation as a Port Company, September 10, 1944.

Other company officers are Lieutenants William G. Pegg, of Omaha, Neb., executive office; Joseph Tandy, of Detroit, Mich., platoon leader; Ulysses Ricks, of Washington, D. C., assistant platoon leader; Gordon F. Flagg, of Washington, D. C., administrative officer, and Bernard A. Smith, of Greenwood, S. C., supply officer.

A Top "Top-Kick"

"Top-kick" of this record-breaking outfit is First Sgt. Ralph F. Dight, of St. Paul, Minn., who has served a three year hitch in the regular army. Sgt. Dight had returned to civilian life when he was inducted in June, 1942, for service in this war. He was a statistician for the U. S. Bureau of Labor, has been an employee of the U. S. Health Department and has held a position in the U. S. Engineers Office during peace time.

First Sgt. Dight attributed the high morale of the company to the fact that the officers work closely with the men, understand their problems, and never demand that the enlisted men do more than they are willing to do themselves in getting their important job of training completed.

RECEIVES POSTHUMOUS AWARD FOR SON — The Rev. William J. Faulkner, Sr., dean of the chapel at Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., is shown after he received the posthumous award of the Air medal and four Oak Leaf clusters on behalf of his son, Captain William J. Faulkner Jr., at a special ceremony at the 20th Ferrying Group, Ferrying division, air transport command, Municipal Airport, Nashville. Lt. Robert V. Freeland, public relations officer of the 20th Ferrying Group, is shown with the minister following the presentation. Capt. Faulkner, the first Nashville Negro to receive a commission in the Army Air Forces, was killed Nov. 7, 1944, over Austria while serving as a fighter pilot based in Italy. The Nashville officer was paid a tribute by the Lockheed Aircraft plant at Burbank, Calif., when a P-38 Lockheed Lightning was dedicated in his name March 27. He was employed from October, 1941, to August, 1942, at the plant where he built bombers on the assembly line until he volunteered in the Army Air Forces. His widow in Cleveland, Ohio, was present to christen the plane.

First Negro Awarded Legion Of Merit Aids College Fund

Journal & Guide Norfolk, Va. 6-2-45

FIRST NEGRO—24 TBI DC

NEW YORK—Speaking for "my buddies who are still over there," Sgt. Jerry Davis, first Negro soldier to be awarded the Legion of Merit, appealed to all Americans to support the current United Negro College Fund campaign during an interview at the Fund's national headquarters.

"The war has shown Negro soldiers the importance of education," said Sgt. Davis, "and thousands of them are planning to go to college under the GI Bill of Rights."

When Sgt. Davis visited Fund campaign offices at 38 East 57th street he was met by John D. Rockefeller Jr., advisory committee chairman; Thomas A. Morgan, national chairman, and a group of press photographers and reporters.

HOME IN MACON

Sgt. Davis, whose hometown is Macon, Ga., was wounded by German shrapnel while attempting to bring rations to his gun crew during the battle for Pisa.

He said that his own plans for an education include enrollment at one of the 32 private schools associated with the United Negro College Fund's nationwide campaign for $1,550,000.

The wounded soldier, an artilleryman with the 92nd Division, told of the exploit which earned him the coveted medal almost at the cost of his life.

Last August 30, his artillery battery had been pinned down for eleven hours by intense enemy fire. In order to get food for his outfit Sgt. Davis raced across a shell-swept open area to a mess truck 300 yards away. He secured the food but on the return trip a shell exploded ten feet away and he was hit by a piece of shrapnel. Forty-five minutes later Sgt. Davis underwent a four-and-a-half hour operation and received seven blood transfusions. The shell splinter shattered his left arm, cracked three ribs, fractured his spine and injured his spleen, lung and kidneys.

IN SEVEN HOSPITALS

He has been in seven different Army hospitals and his left arm is still in a sling and he walks with a cane.

On the subject of education Sgt. Davis expressed the belief that many of the returning Negro servicemen will take advantage of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act, popularly known as the GI Bill of Rights, to continue their education.

Sgt. Davis desires to be a writer. At one time he did "some spare time reporting" for the Atlanta Daily World. His family lives at 257 Third avenue in Macon and he has two brothers and a sister.

FIGHTERS PRAISED

During the interview Sgt. Davis Clark to Chairman Morgan which endorsed the United Negro College Fund and praised the record of Negro soldiers in the war. Sgt. Davis's old outfit, the 598 Field Artillery Battalion of the 92nd Division, is part of Gen. Clark's 15th Army Group. 6-2-45

Sgt. Davis's Legion of Merit citation reads in part: "For exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service. By reason of his inspiring leadership, his section soon became the best in the battery and continued to improve until it was generally rated the best in the division. As first sergeant he held the reputation of being the best non-commissioned officer in the battalion."

p.m. Hats Off! 5-16-45

N.Y.

Hats off today to another American hero, Sgt. Jerry Davis, of Macon, Ga., first Negro to win the Legion of Merit. He was wounded so severely by German shrapnel while attempting to bring rations to his gun crew during the storming of Pisa that an Army doctor told him afterward he was "playing hookey from hell." Now, nearing complete recovery, Davis plans to attend one of the colleges aided by the United Negro College Fund, whose campaign to raise $1,550,000 for 32 institutions also rates a hats off.

West Pointer Wins Oak Leaf In Pacific Drive

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Captain Clarence M. Davenport, Jr., of Detroit, Michigan, a 1943 graduate of West Point and executive officer of the 742nd Anti-aircraft Artillery Gun Battalion in New Guinea, and Captain Lee V. Futrell, of Sylvania, Ohio, commanding officer of an all-Negro Engineer General Service Battalion in the Philippines, have been promoted to the rank of major, the War Department announced today. Both officers rose from the rank of second lieutenant in a little more than two years.

Major Davenport was the first Negro from the state of Michigan to receive an appointment to the U. S. Military Academy at West Point after maintaining a brilliant scholastic record at the University of Detroit, where he was a pre-medical student.

Parents in Motor City

A resident of Detroit, Major Davenport is the husband of Mrs. Yolandie Davenport and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence M. Davenport, Sr., of 272 Hague Avenue in the Motor City.

His first assignment was to the 207th AAA Automatic Weapons Battalion as a platoon leader, from which position he advanced in rapid succession to adjutant, battalion operations officer and finally battery commander. When the 742nd AAA Gun Battalion was converted into an all-Negro unit early this year, Major Davenport was selected for the responsible position of executive officer and earned his promotion in this capacity.

He was erroneously reported as killed in action at Bougainville several months ago, as a result of his being confused with Lieutenant James Davenport, who was killed in action during a beach assault in the Solomons. The mistake was not discovered until the family and friends of Major Davenport had held memorial services in his honor.

The rugged West Pointer has completed 20 months service in the Southwest Pacific.

Futrell from Ohio

Major Futrell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Reat Futrell of Sylvania, Ohio. Inducted into the Army December 9, 1941, Major Futrell is married to Mrs. Frances Futrell, 1125 City Park Avenue, Toledo, Ohio. He took his basic training as an engineer at Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri, and was commissioned in August 1942, at Fort Belvoir, Virginia.

He attended schools in Sylvania and Toledo, Ohio, and has a brother, Sergeant Thomas D. Futrell, assigned to a Quartermaster truck company in India.

In addition to the Asiatic Pacific Theater Ribbon, Major Futrell also has been awarded the Philippine Liberation Ribbon with a Bronze Star. He has been overseas 16 months.

Epic Heroism Won Negro Gobs New Glory In Navy

Chicago Defender Chicago, Ill.

5-12-45

By ROBERT LUCAS

With death-spouting guns at Pearl Harbor, Dorie Miller began the heroic saga of Negro heroism in World War II.

Since December 7, 1941 the sweat and blood and lives of Negroes have added chapter after chapter to the proud history of the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard.

V-E Day marks a milestone in the progress of the Negro towards complete integration in the armed forces of the United States.

Negroes Won Equality

But until V-Day, when Negro Leathernecks storm the beaches of Japan and colored coast guardsmen patrol her shores and dusky bluejackets sail her waters, there is still a big job to do.

For discrimination and segregation remain the policy of these traditionally "white" branches of the service.

By their individual heroism and courage, backed up by public pressure from the home front, Negroes have forced navy officials to give them more and more equality.

"Back Door" to Coast Guard

It has been a long, hard pull from the days when Negroes were relegated to the ship's galley as messmen until the present. The blood of colored Coast Guardsmen has tinted the Pacific waters around Tarwawa and Okinawa, and stained the white sands of these Jap-infested islands.

The exact date when Negroes entered the Coast Guard is not known, for they slipped in by accident—through the "back door." In the late Sixties competitive entrance examinations for the Coast Guard were given through the Post Office.

The accompanying questionnaire did not inquire as to race or color since it was assumed that Negroes could not pass. In North Carolina, however, some Negroes passed the examinations and were admitted to the Coast Guard without the realization at Washington Headquarters that they were not white men.

5-12-45

"Always Ready"

The efficiency of their service as surfmen and life-savers was later recognized by making an all-Negro station at Pea Island, N. C.

In June, 1942, another all-Negro station was established at Tiana Beach, Hampton Bays, Long Island. Other colored Coast Guardsmen train at Manhattan Beach, New York. Mounted on horses, Negro Coast Guardsmen patrol the beaches of New Jersey.

Officers commanding these guardians of America's shores, report that Negroes have never tarnished the Coast Guard's motto, "Semper peratis."—"Always ready."

"Fighting Leathernecks"

"From the Halls of Montezuma to the shores of Tripoli," booms the fighting song of the Marines, and Negroes in the Corps have earned the right to be proud of their title, "fighting leathernecks."

For when Negroes entered the Marines in August, 1942, they broke down a racial barrier set up when the Marine Corps was first organized. Although they have not seen combat duty yet, the fact that colored Marines are now admitted to Officers' Training school proves that they have won their fight for recognition. In the 51st Division at Camp LeJeune, La., are many non-commissioned officers who before World War II were barred because of their color.

When the Secretary of the Navy announced in April, 1942 that Negroes would be recruited for the Navy as apprentice seamen, he emphasized that they would not be commissioned as officers.

However, in March, 1944, 12 Negroes were commissioned as ensigns in the Navy.

By this action and the admission of colored bluejackets to specialists' schools, the Navy showed it was aware of the heroism of Negro messmen who grabbed up machine guns in the heat of battle and proved themselves courageous fighters.

5-12-45

Negro women who have joined the Spars, Waves and Navy Nurse Corps have blazed a trail which will end on the shores of Tokio with complete integration into these branches of service.

Jim Crow Ever-Present

But highlighting the Negro's progress from Pearl Harbor to V-E Day have been cases of flagrant Jim Crow:

STRIKE—A hunger strike by 1,000 Negro Seabees was staged in March, 1945 in a mass protest against Jim Crow conditions and lack of promotions.

The men were members of the famed Construction Battalion who served 21 months in the South Pacific. Their anti-Negro commanding officer was removed and the outfit shipped back overseas after widespread criticism of Navy policy.

MUTINY—Negro sailors refused to load ammunition on the West Coast following the tragic Port Chicago blast, which many of them survived.

5-12-45

A mass mutiny trial of 50 sailors, the first in the history of the U. S. Navy brought to light the Navy policy of relegating Negroes to the most dangerous, least desirable jobs. Public pressure and a brilliant legal defense reduced their punishment to short prison terms. The fight to free them is still going on.

FLOGGING—Four Negro Seabees of the famous 34th Construction Battalion were flogged at Port Heuneme, California, on orders of Dixie-bred Battalion Commander L. G. McBean. McBean was later ousted.

Merchant Marine Democratic

That Negroes in the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard have made good in spite of the Jim Crow which these incidents point up, is a tribute to their courage and faith in democracy.

5-12-45

The Merchant Marine, with its democratically mixed crews and Negro captains, has set a precedent for other services to follow. Captain Hugh Mulzac, skipper of the Liberty ship S.S. Booker T. Washington, was the pioneer in the maritime service which supplies the tools of war to the fighting fronts.

Latest official figures of Negro personnel show:

NAVY—148,768 enlisted men.
WAVES—45; 2 officers.

Marine medals were awarded to 34 men of the Merchant Marine, 28 posthumously—Feb. 1945.

Negro Spars Olivia J. Hooker and Aileen A. Cooke began boot training at Manhattan Beach, New York, April, 1945.

On Guam, 16 Marine cooks dropped their pots and pans to bag seven Japs—Oct. 1944..

Steward's Mate Clement H. Carrington of Brooklyn fought and extinguished a fire which swept the LST on which he served at Leyte—Nov. 1944.

5-12-45

On Peleliu, Palau Island, 200 Negro Seabees volunteered for stretcher bearer duty after two days and nights of unloading ships under murderous Jap fire — Nov. 1944.

COAST GUARD—3,556; 4 officers.

MARINE CORPS—15,771; 3 Negroes now in officer training.

Heroes All

5-12-45

A few of the many heroic exploits of colored enlisted men in these branches of service tell part of the story of the Negro's progress.

An all-Negro crew of a Navy patrol boat saved the lives of five white sailors adrift on a raft near Mare Island—Sept. 1944.

Shouting "Marines never retreat!" Cpl. Joseph Gogins of Chicago encouraged an unarmed group of Marines and sailors at Saipan to stand off a Jap attack. When the skirmish was over 7 Japs lay dead —Sept. 1944.

The first Negro Waves to graduate from training school were Harriet Ida Pickens and Frances Willis, who were commissioned lieutenants (j.g.) Dec. 1944.

LONDON—(ANP)—RAF Pilot Officer Adesonyah Kwamina Hyde, 40, has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for "tenacity and unfailing devotion to duty." 6-23-45

Although suffering from pain and loss of blood when his arm was shattered by shell fragments over Les Catelliers in August, 1944, Hyde did not inform his captain of the injury until he had successfully bombed his target.

He refused morphia and would not give up his post until the English coast was sighted. The RAF citation reads: "Pilot Officer Hyde has completed numerous missions, at all times showing skill and enthusiasm for operational flying."

Born at Murraytown, Sierra Leona, he was educated at the Sierra Leona Grammar School and the Methodist Boys' High School, Freetown. He was commissioned in November, 1944, after serving in the ranks.

332nd Fighter Group Mechanics Get Honors Along With Pilots

AN ADVANCED ALLIED AIR BASE IN ITALY—(Via Air Mail)—Aviation mechanic crewss are generally the last folks you'd expect to be wearing fancy medals. Because they don't participate in the glory which goes to air corps fliers to much extent and because they don't have the opportunity for personal heroism which are available to combat ground forces, you just don't expect to see medals decorating their uniform breast pockets.

But you can't keep a good man down and it has been proven by the recent awarding of six Bronze Star medals to the plane crews of the 332nd Fighter Group at an air field overlooking the beautiful Adriatic Sea in Italy.

CAN EARN MEDAL

Even if a guy doesn't have the opportunity to shoot down Jerries or blast Kraut infantrymen, he can, by sincere devotion to duty and by mastering to a high degree the intricate techniques of airplane mechanics, qualify for the nation's top drawer decorations.

This is what these six men have done and the bronze star was presented to them at a special parade ceremony at the airbase recently by Col. T. H. Taylor, wing commander of the 306th Fighter Wing under which the 332nd operates.

Col. Taylor also presented the bronze star to one ground officer, pinned Distinguished Flying Crosses on ten fliers, issued three Purple Hearts to fliers, dished out a gob of Air Medals and clusters, and watched the smart group formation file by in review. 6-9-45

YIELD SPOTLIGHT

On a day when the long forgotten enlisted ground crews, most of whom are highly skilled and exceptionally capable young men, grabbed off a few honors, such "routine" things as DFC's and Air Medals must yield the spotlight while we report, first, the news of the Bronze Star awards for the men who keep 'em flying.

The Bronze Stars were won by the following men:

M/Sgt. Ellsworth H. Dansby, Decatur, Ill., veteran line chief of the original 99th Fighter Squadron, who is deeply and sincerely respected by every pilot and ground man in that pioneering squadron for his work. Mentioned many times for a combat commission, which never materialized, M/Sgt. Dansby, an intensely serious, brilliant college graduate, has always wanted to fly and has, since the 99th first landed in North Africa, kept a watchful eye over the ships his pilots had to fly. He later became a key man in the group's engineering section.

M/Sgt. Alexander Crawford, Dayton, Ohio, another 99th veteran who rose to be line chief and who has the confidence of the pilots who have to take his ships long distances and get back home in them. 6-9-45

M/Sgt. C. C. Corbin, Pulaski, Va., electrical specialist.

S/Sgt. Charles P. Feater, Louisville, Ky., propeller specialist.

And S/Sgt. Elmer H. Wilson Jr., Philadelphia, Pa.

For meritorious service in the performances of his duties, Capt. Paulus C. Taylor, 28 Dimick street, Burkeville, Va., was also awarded the Bronze Star. Capt. Taylor is the adjutant of the 301st Fighter Squadron, commanded by Capt. Walter Downs.

DFC AWARDS 6-9-45

Col. Taylor pinned DFC awards on the fliers during the colorful ceremony. Most of these awards had been previously announced. They were released as soon as the special orders came through. However, those who received their awards at this presentation were: Capt. Robert J. Friend, New York City; Capt. Henry R. Peoples, St. Louis, Mo.; Capt. Marion R. Rodgers, Elizabeth, N. J.; Capt. Charles L. White, Oakland, Calif.; 1st Lt. Roscoe C. Brown Jr., New York City; 1st Lt. Earl R. Lane, Wickliffe, Ohio; 1st Lt. William S. Prive, Topeka, Kan.; 2nd Lt. Charles V. Brantley, St. Louis; 1st Lt. Hanibal M. Cox Jr., Chicago; and 2nd Lt. Vincent I. Mitchell, Mt. Clemons, Mich.

Air medals were awarded to: 1st Lt. Harold L. White, Detroit, Mich.; 1st Lt. Conrad A. Johnson Jr., New York City; 1st Lt. Lewis J. Lynch, Columbus, Ohio; 1st Lt. Hiram E. Mann, Cleveland, Ohio; 1st Lt. Carl X. Ellis, Chicago, Ill.; 1st Lt. Charles A. Hill, Detroit, Mich.; 1st Lt. Rupert C. Johnson, Los Angeles; 1st Lt. Robert W. Lawrence, Bloomfield, N. J.; 1st Lt. Harry T. Stewart, Corona, L. I., N. Y.; 2nd Lt. William E. Rice, Swathmore, Pa.; 2nd Lt. Carl E. Carey, St. Louis; 2nd Lt. John E. Edwards, Steubenville, Ohio; 2nd Lt. George A. Lynch, Valley Stream, N. Y. 6-9-45

ATHLETES HONORED

The wing commander didn't stop there. There were other soldiers to be honored although these were not hero decorations. Members of the 332nd's basketball team, which won the 15th Air Force tournament this spring, were presented the championship awards. Those receiving awards were: M/Sgt. Chester A. Burris, Sistersville, Va., team captain; 1st Sgt. Samuel W. Henderson, New York City; S/Sgt. Augustus B. Harrison, New York City, team's high scorer; S/Sgt. Lionel Grimes, Allison, Ohio; S/Sgt. Julius Lovett, Newark, N. J.; S/Sgt. Willard Wright, Springfield, Mass.; S/Sgt. Robert Jenkins, Springfield, Mass.; S/Sgt. John B. Young, Kansas City, Kan.; Sgt. Cyril O. Byron, Bronx, N. Y.; Pvt. Joseph Spooner, New York City; and Cpl. William Lowell, Westfield, N. J., team manager.

When Col. Taylor arrived at the Northern Italy airbase, he was greeted by Col. B. O. Davis Jr., commander of the fighter group. Following the presentation of the awards, the group formation passed in review before their commanders and the honorees of the occasion.

WITH THE 14TH AA COMMAND IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC—The 742nd Anti-Aircraft Artillery Gun Battalion again held the center of attention on this Southwest Pacific island when it turned out recently in review to honor three of its personnel who were presented with the Soldier's Medal for heroic action.

Recipients of the coveted honor were Chief Warrant Officer Laydell Buckmon, Detroit, Mich.; S-Sgt. F. Harold Tingley, Washington, D. C., and Cpl. Eddie L. Brown, Perry, Fla. They were instrumental in saving two individuals from drowning in the waters of the Renee River in the New Hebrides where the 742nd was stationed some time ago. 6-2-45

The presentation of the medals was made by Colonel G. A. Chester, acting chief of staff, 14th Anti-Aircraft Command, and the citations which were given by Major General William F. Marquat, commanding general of the 14th Anti-Aircraft Command, were read by Lieutenant Colonel Michael F. Blenski, his adjutant general.

AMERICAN HEROES OF WORLD WAR II.

This is another of the series on outstanding American heroes of the present war. Subjects for the series are chosen from among heroes who have been decorated for valor. Illustrations are by Clara Fargo Thomas and Alexander Varnak.

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

INDIANS, as every one knows, are plucky fighters. For centuries their ancestors in the forests and upon the plains of this country had to fight for their existence, and today the warrior strain still is strong in Indian blood.

Many are the Indians who now are among our combat troops on the various fronts. Perhaps none, however, is more entitled to respect and admiration for gallantry in action than 6 foot 2 Lt. Ernest Childers of Broken Arrow, Okla., who wears the medal of honor (congressional medal) for conspicuous bravery in the fighting in Italy.

Childers, in whose Creek Indian blood there is a dash of Irish from his mother's side (the Irish are valiant fighters, too), was elevated from the ranks on a battlefield in Sicily for his qualities of leadership. Two weeks after the American landings at Salerno he suffered a broken instep.

It was on Sept. 22, 1943, while he was receiving aid for his injury, that he learned his battalion had been pinned down by heavy machine gun and mortar fire. Disregarding his broken foot, he organized a party of eight men and led it to where the enemy was concealed.

Ordering his men to cover him with their fire, he advanced alone. He killed two Germans who were firing at him from a house. Then he slipped behind an enemy machine gun nest and slew its two occupants with his carbine. He picked off another German gun position and exposed still another to the fire of his men. Finally he captured a German mortar observer. When the affray ended he couldn't remember how many he had slain, but admitted "it will run into numbers."

On April 12, 1944, at allied headquarters at Naples, Gen. Jacob L. Devers placed the blue ribbon of the medal of honor around Lieutenant Childers' neck.

ST. LOUIS.—For gallantry in action in the European war zone, Cpl. Robert M. Smoot, infantryman, has been awarded the Silver Star, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Smoot, of 309 Third street, Lovejoy, Ill., have been informed.

Cpl. Smoot, a member of the fighting 92nd Division, which is a part of the Fifth Army, also holds the Purple Heart and the Combat Infantryman's badge.

866th Port Company Wins 19th Citation

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Another honor was added to the long list it has won when the 866th Port Company, with all-Negro personnel, was selected last week for the first Unit Award Plaque granted to the unit of the month. The award is the 19th commendation received by that company, a record never before attained within the corps in so short a period of time.

2 BRONZE STARS WON BY NEGROES

Two Alabama Negroes were listed yesterday by the War Department, Bureau of Public Relations, as being among members of the 262nd Quartermaster Battalion Headquarters who received Bronze Service Stars for the battles of Normandy, Northern France and Germany. The men are Corp. Henry P. Harvest, 607 Court Street, Montgomery, and Corp. Julius C. Adams, Route 2, Verbena.

The 262nd Quartermaster Battalion, which landed in Normandy three days after D-Day as a part of the First Engineer Special Brigade, has been supervising shipment of war supplies to combat troops since early days of the Normandy campaign. The unit's "office" at first was an apple orchard, with ration boxes for desks. From this office were carried on coordinated operations of six service companies forwarding supplies in the U. S. First Army units.

For its part in the beachhead operation, the 262nd has been listed with other troops of the engineer brigade on a special stone monument built over the first German pillbox captured by brigade troops.

Four Alabama Negroes were listed by the Bureau of Public Relations as members of the 657th Port Company, said by the bureau to be one of the oldest transportation units of the Army.

The men are Corp. R. C. Caldwell, of Calhoun County; Corp. Claude Allen, Evergreen; Corp. Acev Gain, Bessemer, and Corp. Gamelia Merkerson, 455 Rogers Street, Gadsden.

Hero Awards To Forty In 761st Tank Outfit

Pitts. Pa.
Pittsburg Courier

WITH THE U. S. THIRD ARMY IN AUSTRIA—(Delayed)—Forty heroes of battle action with the 761st Tank Battalion, first tank battalion ever to enter combat with all-Negro enlisted personnel and a mixed staff, recently received awards and decorations from Maj. Gen. Willard G. Wyman, Commanding General of the XX Corps' Seventy-first Infantry Division, with which they finished the war against Germany.

Men of the 761st spearheaded the Seventy-first drive for a distance of 465 miles, from the Rhine at Oppenheim to the May 6 junction with elements of Field Marshal Koniev's First Ukranian Army at the Enn River, near Steyr, Austria. The forty officers and enlisted men received the Bronze Star Medal.

THREE POSTHUMOUS AWARDS

Three other officers and four enlisted men had received the award of the Silver Star, three posthumously, and one in "absentia."

Second Lieut. Warren G. H. Crecy of Corpus Christi, Tex.; Sgt. Ervin Latimore, Winston-Salem, N. C., and Pfc. George C. Blake, of Worthington, Ohio, were presented with the Silver Star. Capt. David J. Williams II, Pittsburgh, Pa., received the Silver Star, "in absentia." To First Lieut. Kenneth W. Coleman, Washington, D. C.; First Sgt. Samuel J. Turley, Bronx, N. Y., and S/Sgt. Reuben Rivers, Tecumseh, Okla., went posthumous awards of the Silver Star. 7-7-45

Among the forty who received the Bronze Star Medal was the commanding officer of the 761st Tank Battalion, ex-all-American grid star, Lt. Col. Paul L. Bates of Boonton, N. J., who commanded the now-famous Task Force Rhine, which battered through the toughest part of the Siegfried Line's mountain defense belt in the Nieder Schlettenbach - Reisdorf - Klingenmunster area. Colonel Bates' tankers supported the Second Battalion of the 103rd Infantry Division's 409th Regiment, which was reinforced by a detachment of engineers and a reconnaissance platoon from the all-Negro 614th Tank Destroyer Battalion. They accomplished this mission in three days, knocking open a big hole through which passed the Fourteenth Armored Division on March 24.

BRONZE STAR MEDALS

Others awarded the Bronze Star Medal were:

Capt. Garland N. Adamson, Chicago, Ill.
Capt. Charles A. Gates, Kansas City, Mo.
Capt. Philip W. Latimer, Silesbee, Tex.
Capt. William L. O'Ddea, Newark, N. J.
Capt. Leonard P. Taylor, Atlanta, Ga.

Release of Officers With Points Stopped

CATTOLICA, Italy (By Cable) — For extraordinary heroism above and beyond the call of duty voluntarily and at the risk of his own life, Cpl. Daniel Ferniel, Los Angeles, of the 332nd Fighter Group was recently awarded the Soldiers' Medal for rescuing a drowning British soldier.

The British Tommy was swimming off the coast of Pacific Beach near here from a raft located out beyond breakers approximately three hundred yards from shore when he suddenly began to yell for help.

Attracted by the frantic cries of the drowning soldier, Corporal Ferniel, with utter disregard for his own personal safety immediately plunged into the high surf and swam to the drowning man.

Administered First Aid

Despite the struggling soldier's great weight and cramped condition, the corporal towed him to safety and then administered first aid treatment while awaiting an ambulance. The citation accompanying the award reads, "By his great courage and professional skill, Corporal Fernier saved the life of the Allied soldier."

The morale of the officers' division of the 332nds Homeward Bound Marching Orders Club received a severe blow here recently when it was announced from higher headquarters that no more officers in the Mediterranean theater with 85 points or over could be released.

Shortage in Theater

It was pointed out that in this theater 33.4% of all the officers have a score of 85 points or more and that there has been an overall shortage of officers in the MTO for several months.

The future use of the group, it is said, might determine the possible release of the officers since the War Department has ordered that all units dispatched to the Pacific must be sent with full strength of officer personnel.

While the European theater has announced a policy of making non-essential officers with 85 points or more eligible for release, MTO has pointed out that many times as many officers are on duty in the ETO.

Replacement Pools Smaller

Furthermore, it adds, ETO's large replacement pools had allowed essential units to draw on low score officers for replacements which is not the case here in the MTO. 7-7-45

Since it will be sometime before the entire group leaves for the United States many of the enlisted men and officers here are taking advantage of the Army education program for university study and will spend four weeks of study at the University of Florence in the same city. Among the 332nd men now attending are:

Lt. Felix McCrory, Yuma, Ariz., mathematics; Cpl. Robert Laws, 415 Schwartz Ave., Baltimore, psychology; Lt. James Fischer, Stoughton, Mass., languages;

Sgt. James Hills, Athens, Ga., sociology; Sgt. Unias Atkins, Oxford, N.C., government; Cpl. Clarence Farquhar, Du Quoin, Ill., music; Sgt. Calvin Dacus, Des Moines, Iowa, business administration.

Veterans in Italy have been able to radio telephone to folks at home since July 1. Any Tan Yank who wishes may for the sum of $12 plus local rate carry on an intimate uncensored conversation with anyone he wishes in the States for three minutes.

Virginian Talks with Wife

The first and only Tan Yank I met in the long line waiting to call the States was Sgt. Charles Whims of South Boston, Va. Following a thirty-five second connection Whims was connected with his wife, Mrs. Rosa N. Whims in Rome, Ga.

For first time in the fourteen months he has been overseas he talked with his wife and 3-year-old daughter.

Sergeant Whims didn't tell me the text of his conversation but said his wife and child's voices were clear and that both he and his wife were so excited that most of the time was spent in asking questions no letter can answer.

WASHINGTON

The proudest mother in Washington was Mrs. Douglass Crawford, 92 S St., S.W., mother of Seaman Herbert J. Crawford, when she was informed of her son's heroism in helping to save the carrier U.S.S. Bunker Hill.

The carrier was struck by suicide planes off Okinawa on May 11 and limped into port for repairs at Bremerton, Wash.

Mrs. Crawford told the AFRO Wednesday:

"I'm mighty proud of my boy, but he has always been determined that he would do something for his country."

Mrs. Crawford, who has another son in the Navy and a third who was discharged from the Army last March, said that she was proud that her youngest son, Herbert Joe Crawford, a steward's mate aboard the Bunker Hill, had done his duty like a man in the time of crisis.

The giant carrier, which has figured in every Pacific invasion and campaign during the past year, lost 392 of her crew and was turned into a blazing inferno when two Japanese suicide planes crashed into her off the coast of Okinawa.

Thereafter, for more than five hours, officers and members of her crew battled valiantly amid flames and exploding ammunition and gasoline to save their ship.

Prominently mentioned among those whose efforts made it possible to keep the vessel afloat was Crawford.

According to the Navy report released Wednesday night, young Crawford fought the fires for five hours in spite of the terrific heat and smoke.

His refusal to quit or give way to the flames is credited with materially aiding the effort to control the raging fires. 7-7-45

SURVIVOR OF 'DO OR DIE' REAR GUARD BROUGHT HOME

7-8-1945

Miami Whipper

NEW YORK PORT OF EMBARKATION, CAMP SHANKS, N. Y. —Veteran of 172 days of continuous front-line action, and survivor of a desperate rear guard whose orders were to stand or die, Sgt. Joseph W. Hawkins, of 72 Mill road, Hempstead, Long Island, recently passed through Camp Shanks with a group of liberated American prisoners.

From the Omaha beachhead in France, his outfit, the 333rd Field Artillery Battalion of the First Army, was in every action up to and including the Belgian Bulge. It was in Belgium as a member of a 155-mm howitzer battery that Sgt. Hawkins came face to face with the full fury of Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt's desperate Panzer hordes.

He was left behind with a small holding force to cover the hurried withdrawal of his battalion with only small arms and a few hastily placed mines to block the enemy's advance. After holding out for considerable time, the little group was overwhelmed by sheer weight of numbers early on the morning of December 17, 1944, near the fortified town of Sharenburg, on the Seigfried line.

In sub-zero weather, while suffering from exposure and the pain

Awards for Valor

Finally, on April 29, the 14th Armoured Division of General Patton's 3rd Army battered the Germans into submission and once again liberated Sgt. Hawkins and his stricken companions.

At Camp Shanks Sgt. Hawkins tore into some really fine American chow. He had a steak, fresh milk, fruit and ice cream. It went good. But better yet goes the 60-day furlough he is spending in Hempstead. 7-14-45

WITH THE 104th TIMBERWOLF DIVISION IN GERMANY —Shortly after ten Negro doughboys of the 104th Timberwolf Division received the praises of five generals and awards they had won in combat while fighting alongside their white comrades against the enemy in Germany, it was announced by high Army officials that the 104th will leave intact soon for Pacific duty after stopovers in the United States.

Negro members of the combat division were former rear-echelon Quartermaster Corps soldiers who had asked for a chance at front-line infantry fighting.

During the ceremonies held deep within conquered Germany, three of the Tan Yanks received the Silver Star and seven the Bronze Star. 6-23-45

PRAISED BY DAVIS

Taking an active part in the ceremonies was Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis of the Inspector General's office, European Theatre of Operations. Addressing the troops, he said: "You have been given a chance, and you have won the respect and friendship of your comrades . . . You have proved white and Negro soldiers can serve and fight side by side."

Their own commanding general, Maj. Gen. Terry Allen of the fighting Timberwolves, pinned the medals on their uniforms.

"We're all proud of you," General Allen told them. "You're a better bunch of soldiers than the men I saw when you first joined the Division back at Cologne," he added—and the Negro troops remembered the tough, realistic training they had received at the Timberwolf Reinforcement Training Center, the famed 104th camp, where soldiers new to the front received combat tips from battle-wise veterans.

PROVED GOOD COMBAT TROOPS

6-23-45

The troops were proud themselves when Brig. Gen. Charles Trueman Lanham, the assistant division commander, and a general who spent much of his time up front, told them: "I have never seen any soldiers who have performed better in combat than you."

Their record spoke for itself. They had taken many a town during the Timberwolf Division's lightning thrust past the Rhine. One of their men had been recommended for the Distinguished Service Cross, a decoration ranking only behind the Medal of Honor.

They smiled when the general told of the first Negro soldier he had seen in combat—a youth who had insisted on wiping out an enemy sniper's post although already painfully injured—but they remembered how nervous they had been when the first machinegun bullets went over their heads, and how they had overcome that "stage fright" which inevitably comes to all fighting men. They applauded enthusiastically when General Lanham thundered: "I want you with us when we go after those Japanese."

CITATIONS READ

Also present at the ceremony were Brig. Gen. Richard C. Partride, chief of staff of the Seventh Corps, and Brig. Gen. William Woodward, 104th Division artillery commander. Col. Bartholomew R. DeGraff, chief of staff of the Timberwolves, read the citations, and the 104th Division Band, one of the few bands in the European Theatre to win the Meritorious Service Unit Plaque, played the Star Spangled Banner on the field, where Nazi storm troopers had once goose-stepped to the strains of the "Horst Wessel."

Receiving the Silver Star were Pfc. June Jefferson Jr., 343 Bainbride Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Pfc. Ben T. Brown, 5018 Washington Avenue, Charleston, West Va., and S/Sgt. Claude Pierce Jr., 308 South Fifth Street, Easton, Pa. Each received the Silver Star for gallantry in action. 6-23-45

HEROES UNDER FIRE

Jefferson was credited with attacking and destroying an enemy tank crew singlehandedly in a captured German town, April 9 of this year. Brown went "beyond the call of duty" to save the life of his platoon leader, a feat that made it necessary for him to risk his own life by dodging enemy machinegun fire, April 1. Pierce was credited with saving the lives of an entire tank crew, April 13. Under heavy enemy fire, he extinguished the flaming tank and recued the wonnded men.

BRONZE STAR HEROES

Calhoun was credited with leading his squad of men into a German town under heavy enemy fire, flushing out enemy troops and capturing several prisoners . . . Williams crossed 600 yards of open terrain and guided two litter bearers to a wounded Yank lying exposed to enemy fire . . . Smith crossed a fire swept bridge at great risk to his life to reconnoiter territory on the other side, discovered an enemy half-track and several soldiers, set the tank on fire withh is last grenade and captured or killed the enemy troops . . . Dodson killed an enemy tank commander with a captured pistol and took other members of the tank crew as prisoners . . . Travis led a patrol through enemy lines by using a captured self-propelled gun to knock out an enemy bazooka and bring about the surrender of two Nazis . . . Hallums enabled his task force to continue through a captured town by knocking out snipers . . . Whitcraft obtained information that enabled his tank commander to fire several rounds and disable an enemy tank, forcing the supporting infantry to withdraw.

DISTRICT CADET GETS TOP HONORS AT MOTON FIELD

Outstanding cadet for Class 45-E, which was graduated from primary flight training at the 2164th AAF Base Unit, Tuskegee Institute, Ala., last week, was George M. Wharton, son of Mrs. Cordella H. Wharton, 1924 Eleventh Street, Northwest.

Wharton was awarded a $25 War Bond as outstanding cadet, a rating based on military bearing, leadership ability, PT ability, general attitude, etc. He was also awarded a $10 GI War Bond, for having attained the highest ground school average for the class.

His average, one of the highest ever made at the school, was 92.5. The ground school average is based on average grades made in all subjects contained in the ground school course.

Wharton is a graduate of Dartmouth College, and also attended Temple University. His wife, Mrs. Dorothy E. Wharton, lives at 226 W. 150 Street, New York.

Interested in different types of athletics, music, and art, as well as flying, Wharton was inducted into the armed forces on March 3, 1944, and was transferred to Moton Field last December to begin his primary flight training.

92nd's Highest Scorer Killed 15 in 1 Day

By MAX JOHNSON

WITH 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY—(By Cable)—T/5 Jefferson H. Hilliard of Brooklyn, N.Y., was awarded the Silver Star this week for single-handedly accounting for 14 German casualties during an enemy thrust at 92nd Division lines in the Serchio River Valley sector on December 26.

Eleven others in the division, four of them Easterners, received Bronze Stars for heroism in this and other recent engagements with the enemy. They are:

Sgt. Orva Snelling Barnwell, SC; T/5 William H. Lewis, Arista W.Va.; T/5 Joseph Hill, Saint Stether, S.C.; Pvt. Willie L. Wheeler, Clairton, Pa.; First Sgt. G. Clendening, Pvt. Julius Poole, and Pfc. Vernon M. Alexander, all of Cleveland; Pvt. Willie F. Teal, Buena Vista, Ga.; Pvt. Frank Walker, Dallas, Tex.; Pfc. John Nealy, Chicago; T/Sgt. Charles A. Pulliams, San Antonio, Tex.

Hilliard Nears Record

Hilliard's efforts in the Serchio affair made him the 92nd Division's second highest scorer in enemy casualties during a single day's activity. Pfc. Ollie V. Ammons of Lonoke, Kans., credited with 15 during a patrol clash last November, holds the record. Pvt. Jake McInnis, Mount Olive, Miss., is third with 13, scored in the same month.

Hilliard was a member of a Cavalry reconnaissance unit holding a flanking strong point when the Germans struck in the Serchio area the morning of December 26. This strong point was one of the enemy's objectives.

Official Citation

Hilliard's citation recounting this experience read in part:

"During this activity he accounted for at least twelve enemy casualties while he and his assistants were the target of an intense mortar concentration.

"When a maneuver by superior enemy forces made their position untenable, T/5 Hilliard was ordered to cover the withdrawal of the other men.

"He removed his machine gun from its tripod and fired from his hip, carrying the cartridge belt on his shoulder while his assistant carried the tripod.

"Firing in this manner until his ammunition was exhausted, he accounted for at least two more enemy casualties."

Assistant Decorated

Pvt. Teal was Hilliard's assistant in this action and received a Bronze Star for his gallantry.

Sgt. Snelling won the Bronze Star when, serving as an ambulance driver on December 5, he evacuated 17 wounded men under such extremely heavy enemy fire that the task was offered only to volunteers.

T/Lewis, T/5 Hill, Pvt. Walker and Pfc. Nealy were cited for evacuating wounded under similar circumstances on other recent occasions.

Braved Enemy Fire

Pvt. Poole won his star for volunteering and successfully repairing a communications wire under enemy mortar fire at one forward artillery observation post on November 12, on an occasion when communications were critically needed for the safety of men in that area.

Pvt. Wheeler was cited for sticking to his observation post on November 16 in the face of heavy enemy fire and directing successfully artillery fire on German strong points. Pfc. Alexander was cited for performing similar duty on November 5.

T/5 Pulliams, a member of the 92nd Division's quartermaster unit, and First Sgt. Clendening won their stars for being outstanding examples of the character of men the Division and the Army desires.

Promotion of the week was that of First Lt. Millard D. Smallwood, 2111 Second Street, Northwest, Washington, who was raised from the rank of second lieutenant.

A recent bronze star recipient, Smallwood is a combat infantry officer in the 92nd. His wife, Lois, lives at his Washington address.

BROOKLYN, N.Y.—Cpl. Jefferson H. Hilliard, of 227 McDonough Street, has been awarded the Silver Star for killing fourteen Germans in one day.

His wife, Mrs. Carol Hilliard, unaware of her husband's heroism, was surprised and speechless. "He's that way about service awards."

Mrs. Hilliard told the AFRO that her husband has been in the Army for almost three years now. At first, he was assigned to the cavalry, but has more recently served with the quartermaster corps.

She last heard from him about a week ago, and in his letter he wrote:

Tells What Letters Mean

"I will be O.K., I hope. I have had some narrow escapes. Lawrence [their 6-year-old son] really gave Santa Claus an order. Did Santa fill his order? No, I will answer that—it was impossible.

"And, darling, take it easy and remember that I am the fellow who is never satisfied but loves you more than life itself.

"You will never know what your letters mean to me even though I may tell you. But I will never be able to express how much they do for me and how much they mean to me. No, you will never know!"

Corporal Hilliard is only 26. He was born in Rocky Mountain, N.C., and came to New York fifteen years ago. Educated at P.S. 178 in Brooklyn, he left high school and became a truck driver.

Wants to Open Business

"Jefferson was transferred overseas six months ago," his wife continued. "There's no use in telling you that I'm constantly worrying about his well-being. I'm so glad that he's a hero. Think of it—killing fourteen Germans in one day!

"He writes me and says that he would like to move to the country and go into the cleaning and dyeing business after the war's over. I guess a good many of the returning service men will want to strike out for themselves when they come home."

The Hilliards have two children, Lawrence, 6, and Laura, six months old.

"Jefferson's a hero now," Mrs. Hilliard added, "and the whole neighborhood will know it today. I only hope that he comes home well to his family."

HE CAN'T FORGET—Wearer of the Air Medal and Purple Heart, First Lieut. Henry A. Wise Jr., Chariton, Va., has been awarded the Certificate of Valor. Shot down over the Ploesti oil fields, captured and made prisoner by the Nazis in Bulgaria, the officer was freed in three weeks by Russian troops. A former fighter pilot with the 332nd Fighter Group in Italy, Lieutenant Wise is now a student at the Command and General Staff School, Fort Leavenworth, Kan.—U. S. Signal Corps Photo.

The editor is Pfc. John D. Montgomery of Corona, N.Y., who has received the praise of the South Pacific Base Command and Stateside publishers. His staff includes Pfc. Jerome A. Cohen, Atlantic City, N.J., and Cpl. Philip Harris, New York City.

Records Set

Island records for handling vital war materials have been set and maintained by details under Sgts. Theodore Grimes, Utica, N.Y., and Junious Pearson, Jr., Buffalo, N.Y.; Cpls. Willie Lyons, Neptune, N.J., and James F. Brabham, Jr., Brooklyn, N.Y.

One group established a record of loading, unloading and storing over 200 tons of supplies in an 8-hour shift. This averaged over five tons for each man. This record still stands.

The following Easterners are among section leaders of the company, which was cited for "superior performance of duty and the achievement and maintenance of a high standard of professional and military proficiency."

Transportation and mess: S/Sgt Milton Stewart, Welch, W. Va.; T/5 Herman A. Morris, Neptune N.J.; labor: 1st Sgt. Hayes H. Howard, Jr., Salisbury, N.C.; supplies and post exchange: S/Sgt. Nathaniel Hudson, South Hill, Va., and Pfc. Harry H. Harding NYC.

Officers Of 92nd Cited For Heroism

Chicago Def.

HEADQUARTERS, 92nd Infantry Division, Italy—Two Negro officers, one who "set a heroic example of the fighting man's desire to close with the enemy and destroy him," and the other, whose "aggressive leadership was an inspiration to the officers and men of his organization," have been awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action against the enemy in Italy, the War Department announced this week.

7-21-45

When his platoon was pinned down by fire from enemy automatic weapons last December 5, Lieutenant Porter cleared the way for his men by advancing alone, killing the German officer in charge, and forcing his men to surrender.

Second Lieutenant Horner's platoon, holding a mountain position, was the object of five vigorous and determined enemy counter-attacks during the day. In a continuous rain of hostile fire, Second Lieutenant Horner coolly deployed his own small arms and automatic weapons and personally directed counter artillery and mortar fire so aggressively that all five enemy actions were successfully repulsed.

TUSKEGEE ARMY AIR FIELD. —(ANP)—At impressive retreat ceremonies held here Tuesday, during which military personnel of the entire field participated, 12 returned veteran pilots were awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flights in the European Theater of War. 5-18-45

The recipients were:

Capts. Elwood T. Driver of Trenton, N. J.; Howard L. Baugh of Petersburgh, Va.; Arnold W. Cisco of Chicago, and Albert H. Manning of Spartansburg, S. C.

First Lts. George M. Rose of Brooklyn; Laurence D. Wilkins of Los Angeles; Dempsey W. Morgan of Detroit; Leonard F. Turner of Washington, D. C.; Felix J. Kirkpatrick of Chicago; John F. Briggs of St. Louis, and William W. Green of Staunton, Va.

Col. Noel F. Parrish, commanding officer of Tuskegee Army Air field, in speaking before a capacity audience of military personnel at the post amphitheater immediately following the retreat ceremonies, lauded the flyers for their achievements. 5-18-45

Twenty-six pilots, who have been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, and eight enlisted men who have been awarded bronze and battle stars, participated in the program. They were:

First Lts. John F. Briggs, Felix J. Kirkpatrick, Dempsey W. Morgan, William H. Green, George M. Rhodes, Leonard F. Turner and Laurence D. Wilkins.

The enlisted men were:

The text of the citation for the recipients of the DFC, is as follows: 5-18-45

"For extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight in the European Theater of War. Consistently, throughout many combat missions against highly important and strategic enemy installations, the personnel listed below have demonstrated the highest order of professional skill heroism, leadership and devotion to duty. Although regularly and frequently opposed by large numbers of enemy fighters, together with intense, accurate and heavy anti-aircraft fire during which their aircraft were at times seriously damaged, these men have fought through to their targets and aided in the destruction of these vital objectives. Despite severe and adverse weather conditions, rugged terrain and many other major obstacles and hazards, these men have gallently engaged, fought and defeated the enemy without regard for their own personal safety and against great odds. Their conspicious and extraordinary achievements throughout these many missions against the enemy have been of inestimable value to successful combat operations and have reflected great credit upon themselves and the armed forces of the United States of America."

Few Front-Line Changes Since Position Assumed

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY, Italy Since their first combat team crossed the Arno River last September to capture the city of Lucca, men of the 92nd Infantry Division have won seven awards of the Legion of Merit, 65 Silver Stars, 162 Bronze Stars, four Air Medals and 1,377 Purple Hearts, the War Department announced today.

At the end of their first six months in combat, the "Buffalos" had received 5,991 Combat Infantryman Badges. Altogether, 7,000 officers and men of the division had received recognition for their efforts in action against the enemy Seven men who stood out in the field of battle had earned commissions on the spot and many others were being considered.

FEW FRONT—LINE CHANGES 4-16-45

Regarding operations, the 92nd Division had seen only negligible changes in its front-line positions. One major drive, launched in February, gained some ground before the Germans sacrificed much in men and material in pushing the division back to its original starting point. Sharing the assignment of pinning down Wehrmacht divisions in Italy, the 92nd was confronted by the loftiest peaks and mountains in the Apennines.

Many heroes, whose exploits earned the praises of high ranking Army leaders, emerged from the division's first half-year of combat. Daring fighters like Captain Charles F. Gandy and Second Lieutenant Theodore O. Smith of Washington, D. C.; Sergeant Rodger Holmes, of Hodges, S. C.; Major Willis D. Polk, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Sgt. Jefferson H. Hilliard, of Brooklyn, New York; Private First Class James Robinson, of Atlantic City, New Jersey; and Private Jake McInnis, of Prentiss, Miss., have lived up to the finest traditions of the United States Army.

SEVERAL COMMISSIONED

Quick recognition, in the form of commissiosn as second lieutenants, came to the following men while on the battlefields: First Sergeant Gilbert Boothe, of Forsythe, Ga.; First Sergeant Joseph Bracy, of Boston, Mass.; Technical Sergeant Frank Whisonant, of Washington, D. C.; Technical Sergeant Joseph Fry, of Homestead, Pennsylvania; Technical Sergeant William Hicks, of Cleveland, Ohio; Technical Sergent Caesar O. Rucker, of Fort Sam Houston, Texas; Staff Sergeant Ernest L. Carlton of New York City, and Technical Sergeant John Birdsong of Washington, D. C.

Pricking of the German lines by patrols, which constantly probed for weak points in the coastal ramparts of the Gothic Line, characterized the chief activity of the 92d Division. The wily Jerry, who used natural mountain barriers masterfully, made all maneuvering for the attacking elements just about the toughest in modern warfare.

HEROIC CONDUCT 4-18-45

In the course of one patrol action, Staff Sergeant Mansfield Mason, of Baltimore, Maryland, notably distinguished himself by heroic conduct. Acting on information that some Germans had been seen to enter a house near a certain village, Mason's patrol, under the command of 2nd Lieut. Wilbur E. Ledbetter, of Washington, D. C.; surrounded the building and effectively covered all its approaches. Staff Sergeant Mason then crawled to within 30 feet of the dwelling in the face of withering machinegun fire. He hurled three hand grenades into the building and shifted his position slightly. Out walked five Germans, including an officer, to surrender.

First Lieut. William E. Porter, of Indianapolis, Ind., who was awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action, exposed himself to enemy arms while his company advanced on its objective under a hail of machinegun fire. With his unit pinned to the ground, Lieut. Porter succeeded in eliminating the machinegun nest, killing the German officer in command, and forcing the gun crews to surrender. 4-18-45

NON-COMBATANTS CITED

Men of non-combatants units also won their share of awards. Private First Class Walter L. Gillis, of Jonesboro, North Carolina, a member of a medical detachment, administered first aid to members of an attacking platoon while in tense enemy fire created havoc with the terrain. Although he was in full view of the Germans he did not falter in his efforts to see that all who needed medical attentions were treated. He then assisted in evacuating the casualties.

"Magnificient" is the way Major General Edward M. Almond, Commander of the 92nd, describes his division's artillery. Time and time again, 'Buffalo' infantrymen, sweating out a tight spot, have seen perfectly placed artillery fire shatter hostile emplacements and break up repeated and determined German counter-attacks. "Boy, that artillery was great," said many 92d doughboys upon return from skirmishes with the enemy. 4-16-45

General of the Army George C. Marshall was the first five-star general to inspect the 92nd Division. In an official statement, the Army Chief of Staff said that what he had seen in Italy was "very reassuring."

Five D. C. Men Help Handle 75,000 Wounded Since D-Day

Washington Times-Herald - D.C.

The Meritorious Unit Service Plaque, the first such award given a unit of this type, has been presented recently to the 703rd Medical Sanitary Company in England, which has five Washington members, "for actively participating in the evacuation of battle casualties from the Contient June 6 to August, 1944, in an exemplary manner," it has been reported. 4-28-45

This duty was performed under the most adverse weather conditions, time, and unfavorable circumstances. Capt. Paul E. Johnson, Jr., 32, of Chicago, commands the company which had handled more than 75,000 patients since D-Day in Normandy.

The Washington members are: Sgt. Edward E. Smith, 37, of 1516 R St., N. W.; Crpls. John W. Ross, 22, of 632 Delaware Ave., S .E.; James W. Lewis, 25, of 1134 Seventh St., N. W.; Pfc. Herbert E. Brooks, 24, of 415½ First St., N. W., and Percy E. Morris, 28, of 2819 Eleventh St., N. W.

MILITARY CITATION reports give a good cross-section of Negro service.

Here are a few, briefed down:

The Coveted Presidential Unit Citation was awarded to the 969th Field Artillery Battalion, an all-Negro 155-mm. howitzer outfit, for sticking to its guns with the famous 101st Airborne Division, and firing all around the compass in the heroic defense of Bastogne. 4-8-45

The Distinguished Service Cross was awarded to Capt. Charles L. Thomas, twenty-four-year-old Negro commander of a tank destroyer company, who shot his way through the Siegfried Line in a blaze of fire from enemy rockets, artillery and machine guns.

Though severely wounded, he secured his objective.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Thomas of 5877 Beechwood Avenue, Detroit.

Gets Bronze Star As Eastland Raves

Is back Oklahoma City, Okla.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. — (ANP) —Home on furlough, war-wounded Capt. Beauregard King, nephew of the Rev. B. G. King, prominent local clergyman, was notified of the "Award of Bronze Star medal," by Gen. McAuliffe "for heroic achievement in action.

This citation, ironically, was received by the battle-marked hero of the 641th Tank Destroyer battalion on the day Sen. Eastland of Mississippi was libeling Negro soldiers in the senate under immunity. 7-14-45

A comrade of Capt. King wrote him a letter in which was packed this striking comment:

"Gen. McAuliffe, who has gone back to the States, came out and gave the third platoon "C" company the Presidential Unit Citation ribbons, and Silver Star to Capt. Smith and Sturckey and Serreo Nelson. Nelson's platoon, with a platoon of light tanks from the 761st attached, tangled with the Krauts after we broke through the Siegfried line and had quite a hand to hand battle and did a lot of good work.

"Sgt. Spencer banged one German over the head as the German was trying to shoot Nelson, and all in all, there was a lot of fighting, and good work on the part of our men."

The citation to Capt. King reads, "On March 15, 1945, Capt. King planned and organized a small task force for an attack on France. Leading his men in the attack, Capt. King was severely wounded by enemy automatic weapon fire. After falling to the ground, he called to his second in command and urged him to continue the attack, which resulted in the capture of the village and the taking of a number prisoners. Capt. King's outstanding leadership reflected the highest tradition of military service." 7-14-45

Quitman Negro Sailor Cited Posthumously

QUITMAN, Ga., July 11.—A Negro sailor from Quitman, Charles Wesley Giddens, has been posthumously awarded the Bronze Star and Purple Heart by the Navy Department. He lost his life in the Pacific on Oct. 29, and his parents, Ernest Giddens and Rosa Lena Giddens, of Quitman, received the decorations this week. Details concerning the presentation of the Bronze Star showed Giddens' heroic action in diverting a Jap suicide plane from crashing the flight deck of the ship.

Giddens was steward third class and a member of a crew of a 20 mm. gun tub aboard a vessel when Japanese aircraft launched a violent attack against the ship. One fanatical pilot attempted a suicide dive on the ship and in the face of almost certain death, Giddens remained steadfast at his station and bravely continued his performance of duty until the plane crashed. 7-12-45

Bolden Describes Agony, Death In Pacific Jungles

Atlanta Daily World — Atlanta, Ga.

By FRANK E. BOLDEN,
NNPA War Correspondent

ALONG THE STILL ROAD, INDIA-BURMA (Delayed) — Last night a boy died. It doesn't make much difference whether you knew him personally or not. The important thing is that he died—died in that poignant and awful loneliness out here in the gloomy silence of the jungle thousands of miles from home—died after rendering a service far beyond the call of duty—an unselfish service— a service that saved the lives of two other comrades, but which cost him his own. 7-11-45

Last night in those agonizing hours of unspeakable isolation, he went through a thousand deaths without the one thing which might have helped a little—the sound of a familiar voice, like Mom's, or the pat of a friendly hand, like Dad's.

The pain was terrible enough. But there was that dreadful burden of thought in those last endless hous—the thought of home—the thought of the little frame house with its green flower bedecked, and freshly-cut lawn; all surrounded by the white-washed picket fence, punctuated by the perpetually-creaking gate, whose hinges Dad was always going to oil but never quite got around to—and of course, the thought of his childhood sweetheart, Mary, whose goodbye kiss, sealed their solemn pledge to each other, still lingered on his lips; brought some measure of comfort to his torture-wracked body. 7-11-45

And what about the old gang that used to hang out at "Harry's" the corner drug store, and while away the extra hours sipping 'coke's" and playing the jukebox? Sure, he would see them again. And he musn't forget the little tan-roadster that he had planned to buy, once he returned home. And oh yes, in this hour of retribution he could not help but think of the little brown, ivy-covered church, where first his mother had carried him in her arms as a baby to be christened in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost—and where he had learned to repeat "Our Father which art in heaven"—and his favorite "Suffer the little children and forbid them not. . . . "And now was the time to repeat over and over the "keys to the kingdom" which his minter has said, "unlocked the door t' heaven for all good Christians wh sought admittance"—yes, he would repeat it, "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live." Oh, God, would not somebody help him, please? He felt so all alone. He had always wanted to be at home when he died. But God did not will it so. This boy boy died that night, and far away from home. 7-11-45

That's the way that I would have written the story of the last moments and death of 23-year old Pfc. Otto Stringer, Jr., of 1125 Chaba St., Birmingham, Alabama, and a member of a colored engineer unit serving here in Burma, who made the supreme sacrifice while attempting to save the lives of two white soldiers, had I been present one year ago when the accident happened.

The facts and details were told to me by some of his comrades-in-arms who are still wroking here on the Road. 7-11-45

It was a cold mroning in Jan., and Pfc. Stringer was taking his regular turn at traffic-guard duty on the then-called Ledo Road. He adjusted the collar of his jacket, as he walked from one diesel road flare to another, trying to keep warm. His teeth were chattering from the biting cold. He was engrossed in the pleasant reminiscences of home and loved ones, of and of his post-war plans—all thoughts which generally run panoramic fashion through the mind of any lonesome GI, who must stand the lonely vigil of guard duty, especially on a chilly night.

Stinger was deep in the threes of his reverie, when a truck driven by two white engineers came rolling down the hill, south of his post. This was not unusual. Many trucks had rambled down this hill on numerous occasions before when he had been on guard duty. But this one was different. It was out of control. Death was riding at the wheel.

Suddenly, the truck careened crazily, and ran straight into the bank at the foot of the hill, near where Stinger was walking his post. As it crashed into the soft earth, the vehicle knocked over one of the flares. The quick-thinking sentry hastned towards the tangled wreck. The drivers yelled to him to keep his distance because there was high-explosive powder aboard. But the brave GI Samaritan disregarded the warning, and kept advancing. He would help them.

He had moved but a few yards towards the trapped occupants of the truck, when the powder exploded, and all were instantly enveloped by the searing flames. It was indeed a miracle that they were not killed right thee on the spot. 7-11-45

Other guards and GI's hearing the explosion, hurried to the scene and arrived in time to see the gallant Stringer, his entire body aflame, tugging with almost superhuman strength at the helpless, burning soldiers in the cab of the truck. He was able to free them, and then proceeded to carry the victims, one by one, several yards to safety.

A volunteer rescue squad tried to move in to aid the wounded soldiers, but had to pause momentarily because the flames were too hot. When it was able to penetrate the ring of fire, it found the two white soldiers conscious, but the "human torch" unconscious.

The squad wrapped the cinder-like forms in blankets and carried them to the hospital, a few miles away. July 11, 1945

Soon after his admittance, Stringer regained consciousness, and with his face etched deeply with agony lines from the excruciating pain, mumbled through puffed lips that he wanted a chaplain. To him he made his confession, and bade farewell to all of his dreams and post-war ambitions. Then he lapsed into a delirous coma, and in his delirum mumured repeatedly about all those things which home meant to him.

He died without learnnig that his rescured companions would live. They buried him in the bowels of the green hell of the jungle, where the cruel fates of war had decreed that he be sent to serve the cause of liberty.

Oh yes, someone did say that he received a posthumous waard; citation or something like that But he died last night you see. There's no getting round that.

Croix De Guerre Given Atlantan

Atlanta Daily World 7-11-45 Ga.

WITH ADVANCE SUPPLY FORCES IN GERMANY — Corporal George W. Edwards, 1105 St. Charles Place, N. E., Atlanta, Georgia, a chauffeur assigned to the 524th Quartermaster Car Company, has been awarded the Croix de Guerre with Bronze Star, for distinguished service rendered in the presence of the enemy.

Corporal Edwards, the only Negro soldier among 15 GIs awarded the decoration, in a recent ceremony, is a driver with G-1 Section, Advance Section Communications Zone, in Germany. The recommendation to higher headquarters read, in part: 7-11-45

"Corporal Edwards, having driven the Deputy Chief of Staff and Headquarters Commandant, Advance Section, Communications Zone on Command Post reconnaissance to Le Mans, France, prior to the entrance of the infantry, was caught with his vehicle in sniper fire outside the former headquarters of the German Seventh Army. Corporal Edwards dismounted, took cover, and covered the reconnaissance party until the firing subsided." The Georgian also was cited for directing a convoy to safety during an enemy air-attack, without regard for his own welfare. Twenty low-flying German planes were involved in the strafing. Entering the Army January 18, 1943 at Fort Benning, Georgia, Corporal Edwards took his basic training at Camp McCain, Mississippi. He arrived overseas in December 1943 and on the Continent July 1, 1944 His aunt, Mrs. Maria Fickling, resides at the St. Charles Place, address. 7-11-45

Seven Engineers Decorated For Heroism In Italy

Put Out Fires Of Cars Loaded With Explosives

Atlanta Daily World - Atlanta, Ga.

HEADQUARTERS, AA SERVICE COMMAND, Mediterranean Theater of Operations—Seven Negro Engineers, who ignored the intense heat of blazing freight cars packed with explosives to bring a threatening holocaust under control, have been awarded the Soldiers Medal, it was announced today. 7-21-45

All members of the 1246th Engineer Composite Platoon, they were: Technician Third Grade Manuel Reed, Liberal, Kansas; Sgt. Samuel L. Brantley, 566 Erstine St., Detroit Mich.; Sgt. Octav M. Jensen 200 W. 130th St., New York; Cpl. George A. Bradley, DeFuniack, Fla.; Technican 5th Grade, Dallas Austin, Holly Springs, Miss.; Pfc Harold Bardell, 2913 Belmont St., New Orleans, La.; and Pvt. Rufus Barner, Iverness, Mississippi.

Following is the official citation:

"For heroism. On December 13 1944, a fire broke out in the freight yards of Foggia, Italy, where numerous rail cars filled with bombs of varying sizes and gasoline tanks were side tracked awaiting delivery to their destination. Two tank cars and two loads of fragmentation bombs were ablaze when the crew responded to the alarm and, disregarding the danger of an explosion at any moment, they immediately began segregating the burning cars, thereby reducing the possibility of the fire spreading.

"They continued to brave the intense heat of the burning cars until the blaze was completely extinguished and the bombs cooled sufficiently to eliminate the danger of an explosion. Their resolute courage and outstanding devotion to duty in the face of great danger undoubtedly saved many lives, both military and civilian, in addition to large amounts of vital war material, and reflects great credit upon themselves and the Armed Forces of the United States."

Major Letcher Gets Bronze Star for Salerno Action

IN ITALY—Major Henry M. Letcher, former Washington school teacher, recently received the Bronze Star for meritorious achievement in connection with his work with the 99th Fighter Squadron in the Mediterranean Theater of Operations, including North Africa, Sicily and Italy.

Major Letcher, who has been executive officer of the 99th since August, 1943, was cited for his "Continual display of exceptional leadership, ability, aggressiveness, creativeness, and ability to improvise from captured and abandoned enemy equipment, serviceable equipment that was used by his squadron."

In Salerno Invasion

He was especially praised for his leadership during the Salerno Invasion, Sept., 1943, when an advance party of the 99th landed on the beach under his command. The citation read:

"Although the party was being fired upon intermittently, Major Letcher (then lieutenant) exhibited calmness, tact and excellent leadership ability by expeditiously directing the unloading of his squadron's motor transportation and equipment from the LST.

"Upon completion of this task, he personally directed his men to cover in the face of repeated shell fire from the enemy. During the same night, Major Letcher and his small party were assigned a sector of road to defend in case the anticipated breakthrough by the Germans materialized. The assignment was carried out in an exceptionally courageous manner by the entire party." 7-21-45

Major Letcher was in command of 80 men of the 99th at the time, the party arriving in Italy 20 days in advance of the remainder of the squadron. He wears nine service stars on his European-African-Middle East campaign ribbon.

He is married to Mrs. Evelyn H. Letcher, 239 Division Ave., N.E., Washington.

Mariner's Medal Awarded 52-Year-Old Wounded Veteran Seaman for Heroism

AFRO-AMERICAN - 7-14-45

Balt, Md.

NEW YORK—For heroism and injuries received when his ship, the S.S. Agwimonte, was attacked on Jan. 12, 1943, Ralph Coombs, 51, boatswain and quartermaster in the Merchant Marine, was presented the Mariner's Medal on July 6.

The presentation was made during the fifth annual convention of the National Maritime Union at Manhattan Center.

Coombs, who lives here in New York City, was also given a statement signed by E. S. Land, head of the War Shipping Administration, congratulating him on receiving this award by authority of the Congress of the U.S.

Still Incapacitated

Still using a cane to support his injured leg and suffering from a broken left ear drum, Coombs gave for the first time his account of battle with the enemy for which he was cited.

The ship, sailing alone on a voyage heading back from Malta by way of the Cape of Good Hope, and carrying high explosives, had news that a convoy ahead of it was being blasted from the air, he said.

"We, ourselves, were being raided by enemy planes at least seven times a day," he said. "Suddenly, at about 11:30 p.m., we were attacked by a German raider.

Worked at Gun 6½ Hours

"I was in the messroom when I heard the alarm bell ring. Before I could get outside, the raider was throwing shells at us. I got to my station on the big 5-inch gun as the No. 1 loader.

"Actually, I worked at that gun from 11:30 that night until 6 in the morning, when the enemy was finally driven off and disappeared.

Stuck at Station

"During the action, a shell fell on my foot and it started bleeding. It bled for almost six hours—but I didn't leave my station. Meanwhile, the concussion from being near the big gun fractured the lower bone of my left ear."

Although the Agwimonte was scarred all over from the shells that hit it, he added, it didn't get a direct hit and no one else was injured seriously.

He said further that the extent of damage to the raider was not known but that she disappeared when daylight came. 7-14-45

"She was a bigger and faster ship than ours, and we had to keep zigzagging to keep from being hit," he explained.

Coombs, despite his injuries, has gone to sea several times since, and intends to ship out again next week. His ear is still very bad and he has a constant ringing despite all the medical attention he has had.

He has been in the Merchant Marine for 30 years and has traveled to Greenland, Iceland, Africa, Europe, Russia and all the theatres of this war. 7-14-45

Honored Before Maritime Union

Forced to Abandon Ship

In addition to his Mariner's Medal, he also has a silver star and a Merchant Marine combat bar for having been torpedoed and for losing his ship in other engagements.

In that same year, 1943, a wolf pack of 34 German subs attacked and sunk his ship. He was forced to take to a lifeboat and was picked up by a British rescue ship and taken to Halifax.

HEADQUARTERS, 92nd Infantry Division, Italy—For meritorious achievement in action against the enemy on February 8, 1945, Chaplain (Captain) Douglass F. Hall, 1325 Wallach Place, Washington, D. C., has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal. 7-21-45

On February 8, 1945, while his battalion was in the attack against enemy positions, Chaplain Hall, the battalion chaplain, was in the forward areas giving comfort and encouragement to the men of the Anti-Tank Platoon.

"When wounded by enemy artillery which fell in the area, he, showing great courage and devotion to duty, and after having his wound dressed at the Battalion Aid Station, returned to the forward areas, where the men of his battalion were engaged with the enemy, and remained there throughout the action, giving comfort to the wounded and serving as an inspiration to the unit. During both static and moving situations, Chaplain was in the forward areas on numerous occasions, cheering the men on the front lines and offering all possible assistance.

"Chaplain Hall has constantly been a source of inspiration to the soldiers of his battalion and his devotion to duty reflects on the traditions of the United States Army."

Negroes Prove Their Mettle as Soldiers

Lt. Vernon J. Baker of Cheyenne, Wyo., is the third Negro soldier to be awarded the Distinguished Service Cross in the present war. In a one-man assault against enemy positions which had been holding off his unit in Italy he killed five Germans and wounded four more.

Recently a Southern Senator declared that Negroes are poor soldiers. United States Army military authorities immediately denounced that statement as untrue. Lt. Baker has shown an example of the best kind of military service. Other Negroes, whole regiments of them, have proved their worth and valor and to belittle them as soldiers is unfair. The Negro race has done its part well in fighting for America.

Two Alabama Negroes Honored For Service

Two Alabama Negroes, Corp Henry P. Harvest, Montgomery, and Corp. Julius C. Adams, Route 2 Verbena, were listed yesterday by the War Department Bureau of Public Relations as being among members of the 262nd Quartermaster Battalion Headquarters who received Bronze Service Stars for the battles of Normandy, Northern France and Germany.

The 262nd, which landed in Normandy three days after D-Day as part of the First Engineer Special Brigade, has been supervising shipment of war supplies to combat troops since early days of the Normandy campaign. For its part in the beachhead operation it has been listed with other troops of the engineer brigade on a special stone monument built over the first German pillbox captured by brigade troops.

BALTIMORE

Literally returning from the dead, S/Sgt. John Williams, who was awarded a posthumous medal by the War Department, was reunited with his wife, a Baltimore Wac, at the home of his parents in Utica, N.Y., last week.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Williams, were notified in April of the Silver Star award to their son for gallantry, and he was reported by the Army Command headquarters in North Italy to have saved the lives of two friends at the cost of his own.

Visits in Baltimore

He and his wife, Sgt. Enolia D Williams of Camp Gruber, Okla. visited her family at 639 W. Lafayette Ave., on Wednesday.

The sergeant is now able to tell his own story. He had been overseas more than a year with the 92nd Infantry Division.

While leading a platoon assigned to cover a withdrawal, he and two other men were separated from their unit by a concentrated barrage of artillery. 7-28-45

Tackles Disguised Nazi

Later the three men approached a house guarded by a German in a U.S. uniform. They identified the German by his speech and as he drew his gun, Williams tackled and downed him.

The sergeant was taken prisoner, but his two companions, who escaped amidst a hail of German bullets, believed him mortally wounded and reported him as dead.

Liberated by 99th

He was liberated from a concentration camp by the 99th Division shortly before V-E Day and heard the victory broadcast while on a plane en route to Rheims.

The sergeant sent his own cablegram notifying his wife and parents that he was alive and well.

Wac Williams traveled from her station to Staten Island to meet her husband's troop ship.

The two have been married 18 months, and Mrs. Williams has been in the service 30 months. She has a mother, Mrs. Enolia Dyer Goodwin, and two sisters living at the Baltimore address. Before joining the Army, she was employed at the signal depot at Camp Holabird.

The Silver Star Medal awarded posthumously to Major Willis D. Polk, local psychologist, who was killed in Italy on February 8, was presented to his daughter, Janice D. Polk, 4, during an impressive ceremony at the Custom House on Tuesday.

The presentation was made by Lt. Col. George R. Bookwalter in behalf of President Truman and the War Department. The citation was recommended on February 22, in Italy, by Maj. Gen. E. M. Almond, 92nd Division commander. 6-23-45

Guests at Ceremony

In addition to his wife, Mrs. Dorothy Polk, and mother, Mrs. Geneva Polk, present at the ceremony were Lionel M. Harper of Washington, Patrick J. McNelis, who represented local postal clerks, and members of the Phi Beta Sigma fraternity.

A native of Laurel, Del., Major Polk, a member of the 366th Infantry, was commissioned a second lieutenantin 1930, and was one of the city's highest ranking Army officers.

He was a graduate of Central High and Howard University, and received the master and doctor of philosophy degrees from the University of Pennsylvania.

The citation with the award stated:

"On February 8, in Italy, Major Polk was in command of an infantry battalion participating in task force operations of infantry, tanks, and engineers in an offensive against the enemy.

"During the planning of the attack, he displayed great initiative and zeal and had his men in a high state of willingness to close with the enemy before the jump-off time.

Killed by Sniper

"Shortly after the launching of the attack, the battalion's sector was subjected to intense enemy artillery and mortar fire. Major Polk then personally went out to encourage the troops and, while doing this, was hit by artillery fragments. 6-23-45

"Despite his wounds, he refused to be evacuated and remained with his troops. As he personally led them toward their objectives, he was hit and killed by an enemy sniper.

"His courageous determination and aggressiveness inspired the officers and men of his organization and exemplified the high traditions of the United States Army."

GERMANY — In a ceremony deep within conquered Germany, ten colored doughboys of the 104th Timberwolf Division this month recieved the praises of five generals and awards they had won in combat while fighting alongside their white comrades. 6-23-45

"I have never seen any soldiers who have performed better in combat than you," Brig. Gen. Charles T. Lanham told the men. "I want you with us when we go after those Japanese."

Commander Proud of Men

"We're all proud of you," declared Maj. Gen. Terry Allen, division commander. "You're a better bunch of soldiers than the men I saw when you first joined the division back at Cologne."

Also present was Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis, who told the former Quartermaster Corps soldiers, "You have been given a chance, and you have won the respect and friendship of your comrades."

Other generals present who commended the GI's were Brig. Gens. Richard C. Partridge, chief of staff of the Seventh Corps, and William Woodward, 104th Division artillery commander.

3 Receive Silver Star

Receiving the Silver Star were Pfc. June Jefferson, Jr., of Brooklyn, N.Y.; Pfc. Ben T. Brown, Charleston, W.Va., and S/Sgt. Claude Pierce, Jr., Easton, Pa. The Bronze Star Medal was presented to the following:

Fires Tank; Kills Crew

Pfc. Jefferson was decorated for crossing "open fire-swept terrain in face of direct fire" on Apr. 9, and dropping grenades into the open turret of an enemy tank, causing it to catch fire. As the crew emerged, he killed them with his rifle.

The Silver Star went to Pfc. Brown for saving the life of his platoon leader. He crawled 100 yards under enemy machine-gun fire to get to the wounded man, administered first aid, moved him, and then went for an aid man.

Also cited for helping to evacuate a wounded soldier was T/Sgt. Williams, who received the Bronze Star Medal.

Rescues Trapped Tankmen

Although twice knocked from a flaming tank on Apr. 13 by concussions of near misses from enemy artillery fire, S/Sgt. Pierce, then a private first class, climbed back, extinguished the fire, and removed the trapped crew.

Sgt. Calhoun was cited for exposing himself to lead his men into a town to make contact with another unit. He then led a squad in flushing out enemy soldiers and capturing several prisoners.

Encountering enemy troops on his return from a mission, Pfc. Smith therw his last grenade, setting a half-track afire, and then killed or captured several enemy troops.

Captured Tank Crew

The Bronze Star Medal was awarded to Pfc. Dodson for his courage in leading a patrol into enemy territory. Despite a wounded hand, he killed an enemy tank commander and the rest of the crew surrendered.

While a private first class, S/Sgt. Travis, as leader of a patrol was held up by gun fire, set out alone to eliminate it. He scored a direct hit on the gun, causing two enemy soldiers to surrender and the others to flee.

Helped Get Snipers

Private First Class Hallums was decorated for his action in helping to clear a town of enemy snipers, thus paving the way for a task force to go through the town without casualties.

The Bronze Star Medal went to T/Sgt. Whitcroft for fearless courage displayed in obtaining information which led to the disabling of an enemy tank which blocked the progress of an Allied column.

BALTIMORE

Lt. John C. Robinson Jr., of Baltimore, a member of the 93rd Infantry Division on duty in the Pacific has been awarded the Soldier's Medal for unusual heroism beyond the call of duty, his family was notified this week.

The citation, which was forwarded to his mothr, Mrs. Clara R. Overton of 1520 E. Monument St., recites how Lt. Robinson "at great risk to himself and through his own initiative and courage," evacuated injured and salvaged valuable property, when a plane crashed and burned in a bivouac area in the Los Negros Island in the Admiralty group.

Many Lives Saved

The crash endangered the lives of many troops then asleep in the area, and the citation says that Lt. Robinson, "succeeded in so inciting troops under him that lives were saved where they would have perished."

LT. JOHN C. ROBINSON

"With complete disregard for his own safety," the citation adds, "Lt. Robinson entered the conflagration of burning gasoline and exploding small arms ammunition and without hesitation began the evacuation of injured and salvaged valuable property . . . This action was in keeping with the highest traditions of the U.S. Military Service . . . "

In Army 4 Years

Lt. Robinson is a native Baltimorean and the son of the late Dr. John C. Robinson. He is a graduate of Howard University and was employed as an airplane draftsman in Washington before induction.

He has served in the Army 4 years, the past 18 months in the Pacific. His wife, the former Miss Catherine Russell, is a graduate student at Atlanta University.

A brother, Kenneth, is a cadet at the Tuskegee Army Flying School.

Company Commanding Officer

Mrs. Overton said that in his last letter to her, her son mentioned that he was in a hospital for a cold. Since receiving notice of his heroism, she feels he might have suffered slight injuries.

In the letter, he also mentioned that he has recently been elevated to commanding officer of Co. K, but added that while he appreciated the honors, things would not look right until he could see Baltimore again.

ORLEANIAN AWARDED COVETED SILVER STAR FOR GALLANTRY IN ACTION ON ITALIAN FRONT

New Orleans, La.

Louisiana Weekly 7-7-45

It is evident that Senator Eastland (Dem.) of Mississippi is willfully ignorant of the true facts concerning the Negro soldier's performance in World War II. Discrediting Senator Eastland's FEPC filibustering charge, made Saturday, that Negro troops were "abysmal failure" is the War Department's announcement of the Silver Star Award being made to New Orleans' own Captain William S. M. Banks Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William S. M. Banks Sr., of 3649 Erato Street, for gallantry in action in Italy on July 10, 1945. The Silver Star is the third highest ward, only the Congressional Medal of Honor and the Distinguished Service Cross precede it. Captain Banks, former Dilard athlete, YWCA worker and school teacher, is only one of the many Negro soldiers who have performed with more credit to the American way of life on the battle front than the willfuly ignorant Senator from the backwoods of the Delta has in the Senate. 7-2-45

CAPT. W. S. M. BANKS, JR.

The citation which Captain Banks received is as follows: "William S. M. Banks Jr., 01295957, Captain, Infantry, United States Army. For gallantry in action from February 6, 1945, to February 14, 1945, in Italy. Captain Banks' company attacked and seized a heavily mined hill. During the following eight-day period, the enemy launched eight separate, determined counter attacks against the position. Captain Banks personally deployed his company each time, constantly supervising and encouraging his men and directing mortar and artillery fire time and time again. On one occasion he personally commanded a group that repulsed a hostile attacking force, killing one enemy officer and nine enlisted men. Captain Banks' extreme effective personal leadership of his company under combat conditions was in keeping with the gallant traditions of the United States Army. Entered military service from Fort Valley, Ga."

The citation was signed by Major General E. M. Almond, Commanding General of the 92nd Division at that time. Captain Banks was commander of Company E, 365th Infantry Regiment, attached to the 92nd Division.

Native Kansan Is Bunker Hill Hero

the Call, Kansas City, Mo.

By HARRY McALPIN

7-6-45

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) — The second battle of Bunker Hill—70 years after the American Revolution was fought for freedom—like the first, had a Negro as the outstanding hero. He was Steward's Mate 1-c Herbert Coo Crawford, a native of Coffeyville, Kas., now of this city.

This battle of Bunker Hill was fought in the Pacific ocean against the Japanese. The Bunker Hill is an aircraft carrier, flagship of Admiral Marc Mitscher's Task Force. She was smashed by two Japanese suicide planes on the morning of May 11, according to Navy reports.

For hours, her crew battled against attacking planes and fire and explosions within the ship. It was a battle for survival. Credit for surviving is heavily heaped upon Crawford by the carrier's skipper, Capt. George A. Seitz, also of Washington.

For five hours, Crawford fought the fires despite the terrific heat and smoke. His refusal to quit or give way to the flames is credited with materially aiding the effort to control the raging fires, the Navy said.

The death list of the Bunker Hill numbered 373, and another 264 were wounded and 19 missing.

The ship was standing off Okinawa, and some of her planes were just returning for refueling, while others were battering Jap installations on the island. Suddenly, a single-engine Jap fighter plane wave-skimmed in from the starboard quarter, loosed a 500-pound delayed action bomb and crashed among 34 planes on the flight deck poised for a take-off. The smashing plane fired the deck immediately.

Within seconds, another Jap plane, a dive bomber, struck from astern, dropped a second 500-pound bomb that exploded on the gallery below the torn flight deck and then caromed into the deck at the base of the carrier's island and the bridge where Admiral Mitscher was directing the task force operations.

When the fires were brought under control, the ship limped under its own steam to Bremerton, Wash., where it is now undergoing repairs. 7-6-45

Crawford, the hero, is a native of Coffeyville, Kansas. He worked at the Clarifying company here before he went into the Navy in March, 1943. Two months later he was assigned to the Bunker Hill when she was commissioned, and he served on it in the European theater until August, 1944, when he was home on furlough.

His mother, Mrs. Douglas Crawford, of 92 S Street, S. W., said that he went to the Pacific early this year and had been in 13 invasions there.

Crawford has three brothers, Shore Patrolman 3-c Cecil B. Crawford on duty at Detroit Mich.; Corp. William L. Crawford who was honorably discharged from the Army in March; and Fred Crawford, a District employee. He has a sister Phyllis Crawford who works as secretary in a lawyer's office.

N.Y. Seaman Gets Mariner's Medal

By RICHARD DIER

NEW YORK — The second colored merchant seaman to receive the coveted Mariner's Medal this month from the U.S. War Shipping Administration for injuries during the Sicilian invasion and heroism is George Watson, a veteran of 19 years at sea. 7-21-45

Watson, who lives at 313 W. 145th St., was one of only 15 men saved when his ship was destroyed by German dive-bombers. On board at the time were 168 crew members and 159 troops.

Trapped Amidship

"I guess it just wasn't my time to go," was the way he explained it to the AFRO last week. He said his ship was prepared to land the troops on the Sicilian coast when it was hit by enemy Stukas.

"I was trapped amidship and it took a little time before I could extricate myself and jump overboard. We knew the ship was doomed. Balt., Md.

I swam hard to get away from the fiery waters.

"I saw a drum of high octane gasoline from my ship floating around, and I grabbed it and held on, although it could have blown up at any minute." 7-21-45

Unconscious 3 Days

He was soon picked up by a PT boat and taken to a destroyer where he was given first aid. He had severe burns on his right hand, which was also ripped wide open. Watson still bears some bad scars on his hand.

"They transferred me to a hospital ship," he continued, "which went to Tripoli. When I got there, they found that I needed three and a half pints of blood plasma. I was unconscious for three days."

Lauds Army Treatment

"I want to give my thanks to the Army for the swell treatment they gave me," Watson said. "If it hadn't been for them, I wouldn't have survived."

He explained that he got along very well with all the white seamen on board his ship, even though he was the only colored man.

In addition to his Mariner's Medal, he has also received a Silver Star, indicating loss of ship in action.

"I've sailed all over the world," he told the AFRO, "and I expect to ship out very soon. I have no preference. I am willing to go anywhere they send me."

Watson is married, and has a 3-year-old son.

25-Year Old Negro Outstanding Hero of Allied Attack on Cherbourg

Savannah Tribune

Savannah Ga.

by Associated Negro Press Correspondent

2-12-45

Paris--(ANP)--Five hundred Nazis were either killed, wounded or captured by Antoinne Montbrun, a 25 year old Negro from Martinique, during the bloody battle of Cherbourg. Young Montbrun is acknowledged as the outstanding hero of Cherbourg. His dauntless courage and fanatical nationalism are comparable to that of the late Felix Eboue.

I was informed that Antoinne is the assistant jailer at the Mason d' Arrest and I immediately headed there for an interview. When I arrived at the ancient building, I found it untouched by the ravages of war in the town. It was typical of French prisons. There was even a quaint sound of antiquity in the resonance of the prison bell as I rang for admittance. The massive steel doors closed behind me with exacting promptness which might suggest an overture to a prison term. But I had come to interview a black hero and it was up to me to decide how long I wanted to remain in the jail.

I found myself closeted with a slim chocolate colored lad about five feet six inches, whose zealous patriotism, sparkling eyes and expressive hands convinced me that he only understood one language—that of fighting Germans. Antoinne's parents in Martiique are farmers but he decided not to follow the same occupation. He joined the merchant navy at 14 and was trained as a navigator.

Antoinne worked on a ship ship named the Orica and ran between L'Harye and America. When the war broke out he was going on a voyage to Valperaiso and Panama. His ship afterwards called at Halifax for important cargo which had to be delivered to England in a convoy. From England his ship went to Harve where he received his mobilization papers.

Young Antoinne immediately joined the navy, a place where he was best suited, and was assigned by request to serve on the Dilligant, a destroyer which was later bombarded off the coast of Holland. The Dilligant was towed into the harbor of Cherbourg just at the time when things had begun to look very serious for France.

Antoinne answered the urgent call for men to form a volunteer force in Cherbourg in order to stop the rapidly approaching Germans, who were threatening the very life of France at this time. Antoinne joined but France surrendered in the meantime. With Nazi cunning and daring, the Germans were rolling all over France with amazing swiftness. Antoinne's volunteer force established a line at Saint Sauvaur Levicomte just outside Valognes. But this line was easily cracked by the blitzkrieg tactics of Hitler's victorious panzer divisions.

The commandant gave orders to attack the Nazis wihtin range of fire. Nothing could have pleased the young warrior more than such a command Antoinne was in the front line of the forces. He was eager. The men in the rear told him not to shoot at the Germans in defiance of the commandant's order. 2-12-45

"I must obey," Antoinne replied. "Well,, replied his comrades, "If you aim at the Germans again we are going to shoot you. It is no use shooting at the Nazis when they have an overwhelming superiority of men and materiel. Let us lay down our arms and surrender."

The spirit of the young warrior had been crushed. He could not fight under the Teutons, a name used in contempt for Germans. Antoinne broke his rifle in despair and threw it into the river.

Fifteen minutes later Antoinne and his comrade were prisoers and en route to a concentration camp at St. Lo. They were not even given the "luxury" of a ride in a cattle van. They walked 55 miles to their imprisonment. The Germans immediately erectd the color bar. A large number of Senagelese was in the prison cage and together with Antoinne they were thrown into a separate camp 2-12-45

The Nazis, however, served the same slop to all prisoners but Negro prisoners were made to work in the snow for long periods during the perishing cold days of 1940 while the whites remained indoors. Some of the Negro prisoners died from undue exposure. They were fired upon by the Nazis on the slightest pretext, especially if they accepted food from civilians. But the Nazis will shoot anybody. On one occasion, three whites were shot and 3 wounded; one Negro was shot, four wounded.

2-15-45

After six months as a prisoner of the Nazis, Antoinne convinced them he was crazy. Antoinne and his pals had been transferred to Cherbourg where the German torture continued. Sometime a prisoner would be ordered to report to the guard house and upon his arrival the order would turn out to be a mistake. On the way back to his cell he would be shot in the back. Antoinne did not really collapse under the strain of prison life but the Germans thought so. They called in a French specialist to examine him and was told that Antoinne was positively crazy. The Nazis immediately released him with identity papers certifying that he was crazy.

Once free, Antoinne hurried to join the resistance movement. The local chief had seen Antoinne several times before and was impressed with his personality. The resistance movement chief warned Antoinne what kind of torture to expect if captured, namely, the pulling out of each finger nail; being poked with a hot iron and the slow roasting torture, which is to be placed in front of a fire to burn slowly. That did not frighten Antoinne.

2-12-45

He joined and was assigned to the action group. (The resistance movement was composed of two groups, the action group and the information group). Antoinne broke down in tears when he accidentally missed his first resistance movement assignment. But his chance came for action when the American army arrived in France.

He seized an abandoned German rifle and rushed to one of the forts in Place Divette. The god of Nemesis was now on his side and he had at last embarked on his revenge against the Teutons. At the Place Divette, he wounded a German and captured 77 others, turning them over to the first American troops. Later, he accompanied American troops across the town to Place Napoleon where he killed a German and climbed on top of an American tank to show the way to the arsenal where mines had been laid. Mounted on a German bicycle he directed two American soldiers to the Place Vasteville where he killed three Germans and captured 30 prisoners who were placed in an American truck and taken away 2-12-45

Antoinne knew exactly where the Germans were hiding, because there was excellent team work between the information department and theaction department of the resistance movement. By this time, night was approaching. They camped until the next morning, then started for Beaumont-Hague to join the American forces in that area and to find suitable position for the attack of Beaumont.

Antoinne killed two Nazis in Beauumont and six at Chebourg Before he finished his revenge he accounted for 500 Germans killed, wounded or captured.

The Voice

The second Negro to received the Distinguished Service Cross, Captain Charles L. Thomas, now in New York, was interviewed by the metropolitan press Tuesday morning at 90 Church st.

While participating in a battle to capture the village of Climbach, France, December 1944, Thomas was wounded in his chest, legs and left arm. Despite the pain caused by these wounds Thomas directed his men until he realized that he could no longer command. He signalled his platoon commander, and thoroughly oriented him on enemy gun disposition and the general situation. Only then did he permit himself to be evacuated. 7-28-45

All of his wounds have thoroughly healed except his arm which was badly shattered. He was in three hospitals in France and two in the States, where he has received treatments. He expects to have an operation upon the shattered nerves in his arm in the near future.

Thomas, who entered the army in 1942, went overseas last summer and returned this March. Before the war he was a student of aeronautical engineering at Wayne University. He plans on returning to school to study mechanical engineering after he is released from the army.

Lt. N. Alsbrook, Distinguished Fighter Pilot, Home on Leave

the Kansas City Call. 4-6-45

"For extraordinary heroism" is the citation listed on the papers accompanying a Distinguished Flying Cross, but 1st Lt. William Noel Alsbrook, home on leave from the Italian-African theatre of war, prefers to talk of the future he is planning for himself, his wife, the former Miss Louise Brown of Chicago, and their nine-month old son he had seen for the first time last Sunday.

Of course, there was the time that Capt. Creston Gleed told his men that "All of you Misters ain't comin' back this time," just before the most dangerous mission, and all did come back—that time. And Lt. Alsbrook lost the tail of his plane another time, when he was forced to bail out. But he likes to reminisce over his early ambition to be a flier.

Years ago, this Kansas City, Kas., boy who sold The Call was asked by his employer, Milton H. Bledsoe, Kansas side office manager, what he would like for a gift. "Airplane pilot's goggles" was the request. This was his first flier's "equipment." Now he speaks of strafing missions and daring exploits as we would discuss eggs for breakfast.

The Distinguished Flying Cross was awarded to the young veteran about 15 days before he left the combat area and because he has not seen the papers, the fighter pilot is not certain just which of his exploits are mentioned.

(In a news story by Max Johnson, war correspondent in Italy, published in The Call of March 9, there was an account of a "strafing field day" in which 80 enemy installations and supply trains in Southern Germany were destroyed or damaged. Ten locomotives, two enemy aircraft and a power station were completely destroyed. Lt. Alsbrook received the DFC for participating in this engagement, according to the correspondent.) 4-6-45

Strafing in Hungary and elsewhere, dive-bombing, escorting bombers over enemy areas, landing with only a three-minute supply of gasoline at another time—this is only a brief mention of his unusual experiences. For the last-named adventure, he was made a member of the Three-Minute Egg club, an unofficial but exclusive organization. The Caterpillar club, on whose roster are those forced to make a parachute jump, has his name on the roll. 4-6-45

Lt. Alsbrook has the air medal—for expert flying formation—plus three oak leaf clusters, each for additional achievement. There is no doubt that he will receive other awards.

About prejudice? "I have no cause for complaint," says the flier. "No favoritism whatever has been shown. Daring missions are always passed around to the six fighter groups in the same succession." To correct the misconception that all Negro fliers are in the 99th, Lt. Alsbrook explained: "The 332nd Fighter Group includes three squadrons—the 99th, the 100th, and the 301st. The 332nd Fighter Group includes all Negro fliers now in combat. Each fighter group has a different color for the tails of its planes—our are red."

A graduate of Sumner high school in this city, Lt. Alsbrook received two years' training in aeronautical engineering at the University of Kansas, before Pearl Harbor. His pilot training was at Tuskegee Air Field and at Selfridge Field in Michigan. He went to Europe as a replacement pilot in the original 99th Pursuit Squadron which later was transferred from the 12th to the 15th Air Force. 4-6-45

"Please remind everyone that the hometown papers, even those several months old, are always good news to us. We read every ad and keep up with the business places too.

"Now, commercial flying would be a great field—" and he was dreaming and planning again for his family—especially William Noel Alsbrook 2d—with whom he is visiting at 1148 Armstrong.

The distinguished flier is the son of Mrs. A. B. Hunt and the brother of James Alsbrook, a defense plant employe of this city. Another brother, Adolphus, lives in Minneapolis.

RECENT REPORT THROWS LIGHT ON DEATH OF DORIE MILLER WHILE IN COMBAT ZONE

Black Dispatch Oklahoma City, Okla. 1-27-45

Flattop Is Hit by Torpedo When Crew Believed All Enemy Ships Far Away

WAS STILL MESSMAN WHEN HE MET DEATH

WASHINGTON, D.C.—(ANP)—The true story of the death of Dorie Miller now stands revealed. In a thrilling account of the "Tragedy of the Liscome Bay," Robert L. Schwartz, Y 2-c, Yank navy correspondent, tells the story. "The baby flat-top, Liscome Bay, was sunk by a torpedo on the day before Thanksgiving of 1943," Schwartz begins his saga. "The Liscome Bay was on her first battle assignment covering the occupation of Makin in the Gilberts.

"The submarine attack was a complete surprise. It was the Liscome Bay's third day of the invasion and her crew had lost the tenseness that goes with the beginning of a long operation. Only their standard occupational alertness remained. The scuttlebatt reported that the nearest enemy ships were two days away.

"The torpedo struck a half-hour before dawn and it was still dark when the Liscime Bay sunk. 1-27-45

"General quarters had sounded at 0505, in keeping with the strict custom of sending men to their battle stations at dawn and at dusk in combat zones. Five minutes later a lookout shouted, "Christ, here comes a torpedo."

"It struck near the stern of the port side. The whole after section broke quickly into flames and mist of the crew stationed there died instantly.

"The casualty list for the Liscome Bay was the second largest of any navy vessel in the war. The complement for baby flattops has never been revealed, but they probably carry about half the 2000 men alloted to big aircraft carriers. Only 260 were saved.

"Ironically, many of those men who died in the after end of the Liscome Bay might have been saved if they hadn't been called to battle stations before the torpedo struck. They would have been asleep in the crew quarters forward. 1-27-45

"Most of the men in the stewards' branch of the navy are Negroes. They wait on tables, serve as orderlies and work in the officer's galleys.

"There was an unusual messman on the Liscome Bay. The son of an impoverished farmer near Waco, Texas, he had joined the navy to help his family earn a living.

"It was in the ill-fated Arizona that he became famous. During the Pearl Harbor attack he rushed to the bridge and manned a machinegun. For this action, Dorie Miller won the Navy cross.

"In the Negro world Dorie Miller became an idol. There were fan clubs organized for him and songs written about him. His mother was brought up from Waco for a big rally in Harlem. She spoke to the people there.

"I just got a letter from Dorie," she said. "He don't write much, but he said he thought he'd be home around 1945." 1-27-45

"Dorie Miller was in the after section of the Liscome Bay and was not a surviver."

It would have been interesting for the writer to have told some of the duties the Negro mess attendants have to perform during battle. They have the most dangerous assignments, for the most part, such as handling ammunition in the magazine and passing shells and powder up from the hold of the ship for gunners. They also have other assignments equally as dangerous.

D. C. Chaplain Wins Bronze Star Award

Atlanta Daily World Ga.

HEADQUARTERS, 92nd Infantry Division, Italy — For meritorious achievement in action against the enemy on February 8, 1945, Chaplain (Captain) Douglass F. Hall, 1325 Wallach Place, N. W., Washington, D. C., has been awarded the Bronze Star Medal.

On February 8, 1945, while his battalion was in the attack against enemy positions, Chaplain Hall, the battalion chaplain, was in the forward areas giving comfort and encouragement to the men of the Anti-Tank Platoon.

"When wounded by enemy artillery which fell in the area, he showing great courage and devotion to duty, and after having his wound dressed at the Battalion Aid Station, returned to the forward areas, where the men of his battalion were engaged with the enemy and remained there throughout the action, giving comfort to the wounded and serving as an inspiration to the unit. During both static and moving situations, Chaplain Hall was in the forward areas on numerous occasions, cheering the men on the front lines and offering all possible assistance.

2-21-45

"Chaplain Hall has constantly been a source of inspiration to the soldiers of his battalion and his devotion to duty reflects on the traditions of the United States Army."

Ten Proud Doughboys Decorated in Germany

Union 6-23-45

Five generals praise infantrymen for heroic action in racially mixed combat units. Three of those honored are from New York. Make history for Negro troops.

N.Y.

WITH THE 104th TIMBERWOLF DIVISION IN GERMANY—In a ceremony deep within conquered Germany, 10 Negro Doughboys of the 104th Timberwolf division this month received the praises of five generals and awards they had won in combat while fighting alongside their white comrades against the enemy. They were former rear-echelon Quartermaster Corps soldiers who had asked for a chance at front-line infantry fighting. Now they were receiving the Silver Star and Bronze Star Medals they had won in that fighting.

"You have been given a chance, and you have won the respect and friendship of your comrades," Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis told the men, as giant transport planes circled overhead.

6-23-45

"We're all proud of you," General Allen told them. "You're a better bunch of soldiers than the men I saw when you first joined the division back at Cologne" he added—and the Negro troops remembered the tough, realistic training they had received at the Timberwolf Reinforcement Training Center, the famed 104th camp where soldiers new to the front received combat tips from battle-wise veterans.

RECORD SPEAKS

The troops were proud themselves when Brigadier General Charles Trueman Lanham, the assistant division commander and a general who spent much of his time up front, told them: "I have never seen any soldiers who have performed better in combat than you."

Their record spoke for itself. They had taken many a town during the Timberwolf Division's lightning thrust past the Rhine. One of their men had been recommended for the Distinguished Service Cross, a decoration ranking only behind the Medal of Honor.

They smiled when the general told of the first Negro soldier he had seen in combat—a youth who had insisted on wiping out an enemy sniper's post although already painfully injured—but they remembered how nervous they had been when the first machine gun bullets went over their heads, and how their hatred for the Nazis had overcome that "stage fright" which inevitably comes to all fighting men. They applauded enthusiastically when General Lanham thundered: "I want you with us when we go after those Japanese."

Also present at the ceremony were Brigadier General Richard C. Partridge, chief of staff of the Seventh Corps, and Brigadier General William Woodward, 104th Division artillery commander. Colonel Bartholomew R. DeGraff, chief of staff of the Timberwolves, read the citations, and the 104th Division Band, one of the few bands in the European Theater to win the Meritorious Service Unit Plaque, played the "Star Spangled Banner" on the field where Nazi storm troopers had once goose-stepped to the strains of the "Horst Wessel."

The Silver Star, for gallantry in action, was awarded to Pfc. June Jefferson jr, of Brooklyn, NY; Pfc. Ben T. Brown of Charleston, W. Va; and Staff Sgt. Claude Pierce jr, of Easton, Pa. The Bronze Star, for heroic action beyond the line of duty, went to Sgt. Ocie J. Calhoun, of Flint, Mich; Tech. Sgt. Howard Williams, of Detroit; Pfc. Silas Smith, of Brooklyn, NY; Pfc. Peter Dodson, Long Island, NY; Staff Sgt. Garnet A. Travis of Lawton, Okla; Pfc. James E. Hallums, of Anderson, SC, and Tech. Sgt. Leon A. Whitcroft, of Clay, Pa.

How Lt. Baker Won the DSC

Afro-American

(REPRINT FROM THE BUFFALO-)

Lt. Vernon Baker of Cheyenne, Wyoming always did like to fire a rifle—ever since he was a kid.

This week he became the first colored officer of the 92nd Infantry Division and in the Mediterranean Theater of Operations to win the Distinguished Service Cross—the nation's second highest award.

He's won the Purple Heart and the Bronze Star, but had his field day on April 5, when his deadeye marksmanship and coolness won him the DSC.

Thought His Number was Up

Baker had a premonition this day, he'll tell you, thought his number was up, and wore his new officers' "greens" just in case.

It was a dawn attack. The 92nd Division's 370th Infantry regiment was to take the high ground to the right of Highway 1 on the coastal anchor of the Gothic line. C company was ordered to take Hill X.

8-4-45

Hill X was a key terrain point, overlooking the Ligurian sea coast and before any concerted drive up the coastal drive could materialize, it was necessary to wipe out the enemy installations on this vantage spot.

The rolling barrage of artillery had already started. The first volley fell short. Lt. Vernon Baker, a short, wiry-framed youth, led his weapons platoon up the draw toward the objective. A rifle platoon had gone ahead and had already reached more than halfway up Hill X.

Deploys Machine Guns

Baker decided to move his platoon on ahead quickly, to stay ahead of the artillery barrage falling at ten-minute intervals. Then with his objective in sight, he deployed his machine guns to cover the approach of the riflemen.

As he moved forward to reconnoiter, he noticed two cylindrical objects pointing out of a slit in a mound at the very edge of the hill overlooking the flat land.

Thinking they were machine gun barrels, he crawled slowly towards the mound, stuck his M-1 rifle into the opening. He waited for almost 60 seconds and when nothing happened, looked into the aperture.

Baltimore, Md

Kills Germans

There were two Jerries there; one slumped over in his chair next to a BC scope which Baker thought at first was a machine gun.

The other German was crawling toward a stack of "potato-masher" grenades and just as he reached for one Baker wheeled to the other end of the observation post, pulled the pin from one of his own grenades, and tossed it inside.

He then quickly cut the telephone wires, placed a hand grenade in the cradle of the BC-scope, pulled the pin and moved out of the OP.

Breakfast "Kaput"

As he moved forward to another position, he stumbled upon a well camouflaged machine gun nest, but the two-man crew was away from the gun, only a few yards, eating breakfast.

The breakfast ended suddenly for these two Jerries and then Baker set up his own machine gun crew at the same spot.

German Misses Mark

The small ravine approaching the objective had to be cleared of the enemy and Baker rejoined his company commander for further orders.

While the two officers were discussing plans, a Jerry popped out of a concealed dugout just below them and tossed a hand grenade which fell long from its mark and failed to explode.

Seeing he missed, the German darted for the dugout as Baker took aim. It was the last grenade thrown by this member of the Werhmach (sp).

8-4-45

Wipes Out Enemy Fort

Sensing more trouble, Baker immediately procured a sub-machine gun, several enemy "potato-mashers" he acquired at the first enemy observation post.

He retraced his steps to proximity of the dugout and when another unwary German soldier, shirtless, raised his head—that was the end of him.

Wasting no time and taking no chances, the Cheyenne platoon leader pumped the remainder of a thirty-round magazine into the well-constructed enemy fort and then tossed his two captured mashers for good measure.

Mortar Barrage

A pall of smoke shrouded the entrance. He waited for it to clear and entered cautiously. It seems another breakfast came to an abrupt halt; three enemy soldiers lying motionless on the floor.

When Baker rejoined his company commander, he learned that a hand-grenade fight had developed and that enemy mortar fire was taking heavy casualties.

Enemy Ruse Fails

Somewhat later the enemy unleashed another heavy mortar barrage which preceded a Jerry counter attack in platoon strength.

The enemy soldiers disguised themselves as medics and advanced under the protection of a flag bearing a red-cross insignia.

But when Jerry attempted to set up a machine gun carried by disguised litter-bearers, they became easy targets and the cheap ruse ended with dead and wounded strewn on the southern slope of the battalion objective.

The wounded had to be taken out and Baker volunteered to cover the evacuation with his accurate marksmanship.

As he started to leave, another mortar barrage fell in the area and four Jerries appeared on the hill's crest.

Two More Nests Erased

Nothing happened so he caught up with the eight men evacuating the wounded. A Jerry sniper killed the only medic left and mortar wounded a member of the platoon.

The sniper was accounted for, but more trouble was encountered as the party ran into two machine gun nests by-passed earlier in the attack.

Covered by the fire of one of his men, Baker then moved slowly to the positions and destroyed them both with hand grenades, clearing the way for the safe evacuation of the wounded to the battalion aid station at the bottom of the hill.

Hill X was still a stumbling block. But, meanwhile, Lt. Vernon Baker had himself a field day.

He always liked to fire a rifle—ever since he was a kid.

Seven Engineers Decorated For Heroism In Italy

G2.

HEADQUARTERS, AA SERVICE COMMAND, Mediterranean Theater of Operations—Seven Negro Engineers, who ignored the intense heat of blazing freight cars packed with explosives to bring a threatening holocaust under control, have been awarded the Soldiers Medal, it was announced today.

7-21-45

All members of the 1246th Engineer Composite Platoon, they were: Technician Third Grade Manuel Reed, Liberal, Kansas; Sgt. Samuel L. Brantley, 566 Erstine St. Detroit Mich.; Sgt. Octav M. Jensen 200 W. 130th St., New York; Cpl. George A. Bradley, DeFuniack, Fla.; Technican 5th Grade, Dallas Austin, Holly Springs, Miss.; Pfc. Harold Bardell, 2913 Belmont St. New Orleans, La.; and Pvt. Rufus Barner, Iverness, Mississippi.

Following is the official citation:

"For heroism. On December 13 1944, a fire broke out in the freight yards of Foggia, Italy, where numerous rail cars filled with bombs of varying sizes and gasoline tanks were side tracked awaiting delivery to their destination. Two tank cars and two loads of fragmentation bombs were ablaze when the crew responded to the alarm and, disregarding the danger of an explosion at any moment, they immediately began segregating the burning cars, thereby reducing the possibility of the fire spreading.

"They continued to brave the intense heat of the burning cars until the blaze was completely extinguished and the bombs cooled sufficiently to eliminate the danger of an explosion. Their resolute courage and outstanding devotion to duty in the face of great danger undoubtedly saved many lives, both military and civilian, in addition to large amounts of vital war material, and reflects great credit upon themselves and the Armed Forces of the United States."

7-21-45

6 Aboard Carrier Get Bronze Star

ALL STEWARD'S MATES

8-4-45

First Reported to Have Received Navy Cross

NORFOLK, Va.—For heroism in action aboard the aircraft carrier USS Intrepid on Oct. 19, six steward's mates who manned their anti-aircraft guns until a Japanese suicide plane crashed in flames among them have been awarded the Bronze Star Medal.

[EDITOR'S NOTE: Earlier reports from official Navy Department sources said that the six steward's mates had been awarded the Navy Cross, but the release was withdrawn with no explanation of why the less significant Bronze Star was substituted. Consistent failure of the U.S. armed forces to award the higher decorations to deserving colored service men has been the subject of considerable public comment.]

The men, all volunteers, had been assigned to operate the 21-millimeter gun by the gunnery officer of the Intrepid, an Essex class carrier which was damaged four times by attacking Japanese planes.

Those awarded the Bronze Star are:

Que Gant, 22, SM1/c, Atlantic City, N.J.; James E. Dockery, 38, SM1/c, Newark, N.J., and Alonzo A. Swann Jr., 19, SM1/c, Steelton, Pa.

The awards were made by Vice-Admiral John S. McCain (USN), commander of Task Force 38, who cited each man "for distinguishing himself by heroic and meritorious conduct in operations against the enemy."

The citations accompanying the medals are identical and read as follows:

"When a Japanese dive-bomber attacked from the starboard side of the ship, he continued to operate his portside gun in its fire over the flight deck, although it became apparent that the enemy plane was headed directly for his gun tub.

Four Formerly Wounded

'His gun fired until the enemy plane crashed into his tub. The courage and skill he displayed were at all times in keeping with the highest traditions of the Naval Service."

Benjamin twice has been wounded during action with the Fast Carrier Task Force in the Pacific, while Clark, Swann and Dockery also have been wounded in action.

Bronze Star for Sergeant Major

The award was presented to Sergeant McKoy, while the Ninety-third Division was on Morotai.

969th Artillery Given Citation

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON—(NNPA)—For its historic nine-day stand at Bastogne last December, during the Battle of the Bulge, the 969th Field Artillery Battalion, composed of colored enlisted men and white officers, was given a Presidential citation last week in Vouziers, France.

When the award of the Presidential citation to the 101st Airborne Division first was announced earlier this year, no mention was made of the 969th, but this and other attached units were included later.

Actual presentation to some units was delayed because they were on the move through Germany when the 101st was honored.

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY.—Official recognition for their outstanding heroic activities during clashes with the enemy on this Fifth army front, brought silver and bronze stars this week to 25 members of the 92nd division. 1-26-45

Bronze Stars were awarded: Pfc. Milton Hall of Kansas City, Mo.; 2-Lt. Millard B. Smallwood, TSgt. Albert T. McReynolds, Sgt. James Daugherty, all of Washington; S-Sgt. Eugene Jones, Roanoke, Va.; Pfc. Samuel Corbett, Durham, N. C.; Sgt. Richard O'Neal, Trenton, N. J.; Pvt. James M. Wilson, Paulsboro, N. J.; S-Sgt. Ernest F. Prescott, T-5 Garvall H. Booker, Pfc. Jethro Spikes, all of New York City; S-Sgt. Francis J. Minton, New Rochelle, N. Y.; Pvt. Camille DuBois, Hartford, Conn.; Chaplain Lt. Col. Louis J. Beasley, Atlanta, Ga.; T-Sgt. Arthur Long, Tampa, Fla.; Sgt. Charles W. Francis, Selma, Ala.; S-Sgt. James Talbert, Mobile, Ala.; Sgt. Thomas Ruff, Jacksonville, Fla.; Cpl. Henry Small, Compti, La.; Pvt. Willie F. Teal, Buena Vista, Ga.; S-Sgt. Howard Washington, Cpl. Ernest Hamilton, both of Houston, Texas; S-Sgt. Keith A. Goodall, Los Angeles, Cal. 1-26-45

Outstanding among the citations was that which brought a Silver Star to Lt. Smith 1924 Howard university graduate, formerly employed by the postal section of the war department in Washington. Smith was decorated for leadership with a small patrol which successfully accomplished a difficult mission, the night of Jan. 11, capturing some and the extermination of other units of enemy troops from mountainous fortified positions of costal sector on this fifth army front.

Smith led his 14-man patrol two miles across a mined area, through enemy lines to climb from a rear mountain to the top where the enemy unit was holding out.

Smith and his men captured two Germans and killed four others there. 1-26-45

Lieutenant Walker, a member of Unit number 1, won the Silver Star for gallant action December 29 when he directed a raiding party across the enemy observed canal to successfully destroy the hostile installations, despite the intense opposition.

S-Sgt. Morris, a member of the 92nd Cavalry reconnaisance unit, won the Stars for directing effective artillery fire on the enemy during the recent Serchio River affair and holding the strong point in face of the heavy mortar and automatic weapon, fire, until his outnumbered unit could effect an orderly withdrawal to previously prepared fortifications.

Most of the Bronze Star awards were for bravery on Parto or during enemy fire, which enable the successful accomplishment of missions or resulted in safeguarding the lives of comrades.

Lieutenant Smallwood is among the latter classification. He is credited with saving the life of a wounded soldier November 15, by stopping a vehicle on the road in the midst of intense army fire to pick up a man from the roadside and drive him to the Medical Station. 1-26-45

T-Sgt. McReynolds, a platoon sergeant, was cited for single-handedly holding off the unit enemy with a machine gun while the platoon withdrew to safety during an operation November 18, when they faced unexpected opposing machine gun mortar fire.

Chaplain Beasley was cited for his action November 1 when enemy artillery fire forced him to abandon a Jeep near the front lines and wounded three soldiers in a building where he sought protection. He hastily extricated them safely to an Aid Station despite the continued shelling.

S-Sgt. Prescott won an award for the invention of a device adding greater stability to the Base Plate 81 MM guns and thereby increasing their effectiveness.

Sergeant Minton, a member of the Combat Engineer battalion, was cited for heading a Platoon December 21 which constructed a badly-needed bridge at an extremely difficult point in record time. Others cited were:

Colonel Howard Queen, of Parkersburg, Tenn., former head of the infantry regiment, in this theater, is on his way home and the outfit is now headed by its former executive officer. Illness is believed to be the basis of his relief of command. Colonel Queen has been ill for the past two months.

Detroit Captain May Get Distinguished Service Cross

By EDWARD B. TOLES
(Defender War Correspondent)

WITH 7TH ARMY IN ALSACE—"For my boys I would not take all the gold in the world!"

That stirring tribute was bestowed this week on the surviving soldiers of a heroic Negro tank-destroyer battalion which smashed through the strong German Siegfried line into the Saar basin.

It came from Lt. Col. Frank Pritchard of Lansing, Mich., commander of the unit and respected by his men as a father, on the occasion of awards for 30 soldiers for heroism in the stirring battle fought viciously from Climbach to the Siegfried line.

Many fell in the fight but never flinched. 1-20-45

One stalwart, Capt. Charles L Thomas of Detroit, won outstanding glory and has been recommended for the Distinguished Service Cross.

Thrilling Saga

Near the front lines where many of their comrades were mowed down by Nazi bullets, I heard the thrilling saga of the unit's terrific drive into Germany

It was a story of "too much heart and courage" beating back virtually superior Nazi firepower

Lt. Col John P. Blackshear of Charleston, S. C., task force commander, paid his respects to the pluck of the Negro troops with the comment:

"I never saw so much mass bravery." 1-20-45

But it was the inspired individual soldiers, every man a hero on his own, that displayed gallantry on the field.

There were men like Captain Thomas, who won his DSC citation, by defying Nazi fire to answer with burst for burst from his machine gun.

Meet Blanket of Fire

Leading the column uphill was Captain Thomas in an M-20 armored car with Cpls. Bradley Norman and Horace Whitfield of Durham, N. C., and Benjamin Shinsoster of Metter, Ga. Halfway up the incline, the column was met with a blanket of Nazi mortar, machine gun and artillery fire.

Flanking the approaching U.S troops on a high ridge, the Nazis, anticipating a field day, gave the oncoming column "everything in the book." 1-20-45

In the first barrage, one German shell struck the windshied of of Thomas' vehicle, while another ripped the wheels from the light armored car. Scrambling to the .50-caliber machine gun atop the car, the captain proceeded to answer the Nazis burst for burst.

When wounded, Thomas was immediately replaced by Norman and Whitfield who gave a splendid account of themselves until they were also hit. Capt. Thomas managed to crawl under the overturned armored car as Lt. George W. Michell of 1300 Carolina street, Gary, Ind., assumed command.

Reinforcements Arrive

Lt. Michell ordered two tank-destroyer guns towed from the rear of the column by M-3 halftracks, set into position and manned by 10-man crews while the Germans poured their relentless fire on open terrain targets.

Skilfully directing fire into Nazi strongholds, Pvt. Leon Tobin of Monroe, La., took everything they could offer while his comrade lay mortally wounded beside him. When Cpl. Peter Simmons, after giving everything he had, was silenced by enemy fire, Pvt. Whitl Knight jumped into position to knocked-out armored car, dragged him out, and under withering shell fire, walked 100 yards with the wounded officer in his arms to medical aid. Sgt. Paul Warner of Cressmon, Tenn., ran 75 yards under fire to give the company commander first aid.

Into the Reich!

In spite of the fact that they remained under fire for five hours with dead and wounded comrades all about them, a gallant band of 54 American soldiers marched up the hill arm in arm to penetrate the Siegfried line and enter the Reich. 1-20-45

Lt. Col. Frank Pritchard of Lansing, Mich., commander of the TD unit and respected by his men as a father, was visibly shaken after the battle but said quietly "For my boys I would not take all the gold in the world." Thus did another Negro combat unit combine with fellow soldiers to give their all for democracy for all peoples of the world.

Said Lt. Col. Blackshear, "I never saw so much mass bravery."

With tears streaming down his cheeks, Lt. George W. Mitchell named the dead and wounded of his outfit. Recommended for the Distinguished Service Cross was Capt. Charles L. Thomas while the Silver Star went to Pvt. William Phipps of Littleton, N. C., who drove his quarter-ton truck into enemy fire but managed to reach his wounded mates.

Silver Stars were also awarded to Cpl. Peter Simmons, Lt. George Mitchell and Pvt. Leon Tobin.

Awarded the Bronze Star were Lt. Floyd J. Stallings, Cpls. Whitl Knight, Robert W. Harris, James A. Perry, Thomas C. McDaniels, Al Hockaday and Sgts. Dillard Booker, William Tabron and Paul Warner. 1-20-45

Chicagoans with the outfit are Lts. Leonard I. Burch, Joseph L. Keeby, Preston Helm, Ormond Forte and Milton B. Beas.

Two more guns from the rear skirted tanks stalled in mud to reinforce the firing. Sgt. Dillard Booker, a New Yorker, set his gun up in an open field under intense fire and wiped out a harassing enemy machine gun nest. Eagle-eyed Pvt. Thomas McDaniel, Chattanooga, sighting a group of enemy grenadiers attempting to outflank his unit's guns, hopped on a halftrack, manned a .50-caliber machine gun and mowed them down as they crept into position.

Brings Ammo Thru

While men of the 511th Infantry and engineers were being cut down by an extremely effective machine gun nest as fast as they moved up the hill, Cpl. James Perry moved his gun into pinpoint position and blew the worrisome nest to bits. Although seriously wounded, Sgt. William L. Tarbon of Wilson, N. C., continued to swing the orbit of his .50-caliber machine gun mechanically until, exhausted, he toppled from the turret on the halftrack.

Lt. Michell, moving from gun to gun, sighting, firing and supplementing empty gun positions, ordered more ammunition from the rear. At breakneck speed, Cpl. Robert W. Harris, Marcelline, Mo., wheeled his three-quarter-ton truck loaded with ammo past the task force commander who hailed him down with, "You can't go up, you'll be certain to get hit!"

Disregarding orders and self-safety, Harris replied, "Out of my way, sir, I'm going to my buddies!" and rushed the vital shells to the exhausted guns as bullets and mortar shells bounced off and near his truck. 1-20-45

Many Casualties

Twenty-five yards from the gun positions, Harris found only dead and wounded. Ignoring danger, he unloaded the ammunition at each weapon while a steady barrage of fire whistled past.

Renewed fire came from a gallant little band on the crest of a hill and Pvt. Lucius Riley, spotting a straggling band of infantrymen, leaped from his three-inch gun to man one of the .50s on a halftrack and got a "full house." Seeing two German tanks stealing out into the open, he darted to a TD gun and knocked them out of While firing singlehanded, an enemy round caught him and blew the lower portion of his legs and limbs off while he held the lanyard in his hand. Cpl. Al Hockaday of Roanoke, Va., took over and manned two guns by himself, pulling the lanyards simultaneously. 1-20-45 Rescue work was handled efficiently by Lt. Floyd J. Stallings who, although exposed to enemy fire constantly, drove up to Capt. Thomas'

With the topic "Making Freedom Effective for All Men in All Human Relations," as the theme of the meeting, addresses on labor, employment, GI bills, the FEPC and other issues wil be made.

Delegates appointed by the governors of many States will bring greetings. 1-27-45

Officers of the National Freedom Day committee, Major R. R. Wright, president; Bishop David Sims, vice-president; I. N. Patterson, secretary, and Dr. D. W. Henry, treasurer, are busy putting the finishing touches on the meeting.

Yank Tells How Dorie Miller Died

AFRO-AMERICAN
1-27-45 Balt., Md.

WASHINGTON (ANP) — The true story of the death of Dorie Miller now stands revealed. In a thrilling account of the "Tragedy of the Liscomo Bay," Robert L. Schwartz, Y 2/c, Yank Navy correspondent, tells the story.

"The baby flat-top, Liscomo Bay, was sunk by a torpedo on the day before Thanksgiving o 1943," Schwartz begins his saga "The Liscomo Bay was on her firs battle assignment covering the oc cupation of Makin in the Gilberts

"The submarine attack was a complete surprise. The scuttle butt reported that the nearest en emy ships were two days away The torpedo struck a half hour before dawn and it was still dark when the Liscomo Bay sank.

Called to Battle Stations

"General Quarters had sounde at 0505, in keeping with the stric custom of sending men to thei battle stations at dawn and at dusk in combat zones. Five minutes la ter a lookout shouted, 'Christ, here comes a torpedo.'

It struck near the stern of the port side. The whole after section broke quickly into flames and most of the crew stationed there died instantly. 1-27-45

"Most of the men in the steward's branch of the Navy are colored. They wait on tables, serve as orderlies and work in the officers' galleys. There was an unusual messman on the Liscomo Bay. The son of a farmer near Waco, Texas, he had joined the Navy to help his family earn a living.

"It was on the ill-fated Arizona that he became famous. During the Pearl Harbor attack, he rushed to the bridge and manned a machine gun. For this action, Dorie Miller won the Navy Cross. Dorie Miller was in the after section of the Liscomo Bay and was not a survivor."

Colored Sergeant Gets Posthumous Award For Daring

Nashville Globe
Nashville, Tenn.
6-15-45

Oklahoma City, Okla—Staff Sergeant Rueben Rivers of Tecumseh, Oklahoma was honored posthumously by the awarding of the Nation's third highest award, The Silver Star Medal at a ceremony prior to a review of the troops stationed at Will Rogers Field. Colonel John E. Bodle, Commanding Officer of the Oklahoma Station presented the medal to the father, Mr. Will Rivers.

The following is cited from the official citation: 6-15-45

"Staff Sergeant Rivers, a tank platoon sergeant was in the leading tank, when a road block was encountered which held up the advance. With utter disregard for his personal safety S. Sgt. Rivers courageously dismounted from his tank in the face of directed enemy small arms fire, attached a cable to the road block and had it moved off the road thus permitting the combat team to proceed. His prompt action prevented a serious delay in this offensive operation and was instrumental in the successful assault and capture of the town. His brilliant display of initiative, courage and devotion to duty reflects the highest credit upon Staff Sergeant Rivers and the Armed Forces of the United States."

Birmingham Negro Third To Win Coveted DSC

Birmingham News Ala.

First Lt. Vernon J. Baker, 25, whose wife, Helen S. Baker, lives at 122 10th Avenue, North, became the third Negro to receive the Distinguished Service Cross in this war, when announcement of the award was made by the War Department according to an Associated Press dispatch from Washington. 8-20-45

The Negro officer, who killed or wounded nine Germans while single-handedly knocking out three enemy machine-gun nests and an observation post, won the decoration last April 5 near Viareggion, Italy. A rifle platoon leader in the 92nd Infantry Division, Baker made a one-man assault against enemy positions which had been holding up the advance of his battalion. The citation said he killed five Germans and killed and wounded four more.

92nd Div. Lieutenant Awarded Silver Star

Philadelphia Inquirer
8-11-45

WITH THE AIR SERVICE COMMAND IN GIOIA, ITALY: —First Lieutenant William E. Wright of Philadelphia, Pa., has been awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action the sixth of February 1945 on the Italian front.

A platoon leader with Company "I" of the 365th Infantry Regiment, 92nd Infantry Division, Lt. Wright was presented the medal by his Battalion Commander, Major William E. Wren Jr. 8-11-45

The citation read in part: "During an attack by his company an enemy machine gun firing from an emplaced position, delayed the advance of the troops and caused a large number of casualties. . . Lt. Wright located the weapon and moved to outflank it. After reaching a position from which he could observe the hostile weapon and crew, he stood upright to deliver gun, on the enemy emplacement.

"He drew fire upon himself, a bullet piercing his helmet, but not harming him, and calmly emptied his tommy gun at the enemy crew, until it was silenced. The troops then proceeded to advance. Lt. Wright's aggressive courage under extremely dangerous combat hazards exemplified the heroic traditions of the United States Army"

Lt. Wright is the son of Mrs. Laura Wright, 129 La Pierre avenue, Magnolia, New Jersey. His wife the former Dorothy Gilmore, resides at 43 north 58th street, Philadelphia. He enlisted in the service October 1940. Overseas for more than ten months, he is now engaged in securing a large airdrome in Southern Italy.

Killed at Least Fifty Germans

Hero, Wounded Eight Times, Recommended For Medal of Honor, Receives DSC

The Pittsburgh Courier

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the first story written on the returned Negro veterans of the ETO who volunteered for infantry combat duty last winter following the German break-through in Belgium in December 1944.

Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

By JAMES E. SMITH 9-29-45

NEW YORK—The story that came from the lips of 27-year-old S/Sgt. Edward A. Carter of Los Angeles, Calif., platoon leader of Company D, Fifty-sixth Armored Infantry Battalion, Twelfth Armored Division, Ninth Army, who arrived here Sunday morning aboard the Army transport SS E. B. Alexander, will sound almost incredible.

Although wounded eight times and armed only with a tommy-gun and five hand grenades, he killed twenty-six German infantrymen, destroyed two enemy machine-gun nests, wiped out one mortar squad and captured two prisoners single-handed, making a total of fifty Germans killed and two captured. The action took place just before the dramatic crossing of the Rhine River at Spryer, Germany, March 23, but even this feat and the recommendations of his superior officers that he be awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor brought him only the Distinguished Service Cross, thus making him the fourth Negro to receive the medal in this war.

JERRY CUTS LOOSE

The young non-com, a slight quiet man, told his story in a very modest manner:

His battalion was moving up to cross the Rhine, he said, but it was necessary to take the town of Spryer first. They had come close to the town when the Germans "cut loose with their 88's." The tank column that supported his outfit refused to advance any further and dispersed, despite the urgings of the men for them to continue.

OFFERS TO LEAD WAY

The holder of the Nation's second highest award for valor said that he offered to lead the way into the town with his squad, whereupon he and his men began to advance across the open area before Spryer. This was done, he said, before they knew that the tanks were not following them. When that was discovered, it was too late. They were cut off completely from their lines.

"Jerry opened up with everything he had," he declared. "Our small group was cut to ribbons. Only one other man and myself remained alive. I don't know what happened to the other fellow after we got into the town."

ENTIRE SQUAD DESTROYED

Continuing, Sergeant Carter said that before he could hit the dirt three bullets from a "Burp-gun" plowed through his left arm, knocking him over. With the thought of how his entire squad had been destroyed, and the sight of his own blood he became "boiling mad."

"The hell that was being loosed by those Germans convinced me that I only had a few minutes to live," he said, "and I decided that if I had to die, some of those Jerries would meet me in hell."

CHARGES MACHINE GUN

He jumped up and charged the machine gun which had wounded him. A grenade tossed into the midst of the crew silenced them all forever. From there he never stopped. A mortar squad was lobbing shells into American lines. Two grenades took care of them.

Still running, he was knocked down again by bullets number four and five. This time he was tossed five feet by the force. When he hit the ground bullets splattered around him like rain drops. He lifted his head to see from which direction the fire was coming; another bullet tore through his shoulder for number six.

FOURTH DSC WINNER—S/Sgt. Edward A. Carter, Los Angeles, Calif., has been awarded the fourth Distinguished Service Cross to go to a Negro in World War II for his extraordinary courage against the Germans, fifty of whom he is reported to have killed during an action in which he received eight wounds.

REALLY GETS MAD

He lay where he fell for some time, trying to take some of the "wound pills" he carried. As he raised his canteen to wash the tablets down with some water, another slug crashed through his hand.

"This really made me mad," Carter said, "but there wasn't much I could do.

"As I lay there I saw an entire squad of Germans coming toward me in a skirmish line. I opened fire on them with the tommy. Got every one of 'em."

CAPTURES TWO

At this point, Carter said, he thought it was time to move again, but an even bigger bunch of Jerries were coming at him. He said it looked as if there were at least twenty men, but he didn't know. He used three clips of ammunition on them and killed all except two. These were the two he captured.

He said that he kept the two Germans he had captured (one an officer) as close to him as he could, hoping that the enemy would not attempt to kill him while he was with their own men.

"It seemed to work for a while," he declared, "but the artillery opened on me as soon as the infantrymen withdrew. One shell landed too close and I decided to get away from that place."

TAKES COVER

Taking the two prisoners with him, he took cover behind a shell-gutted building. An 88-mm. "blew hell out of that wall." Splinters from the shell dug into his legs, but the dust from the hit gave him a screen and he made his way behind it with his prisoners.

Only one other shell was fired, he said, and by this time he was just fifty yards from his own lines. As escape seemed so near, the Germans made one last effort to stop him, but his tommy-gun spoke again and three more fell.

NO TIME TO COUNT

Sergeant Carter maintains that he has no idea how many Germans he killed because he didn't have time to count them, but his officers who followed his story, accounted for at least fifty and for this he was recommended for the Congressional Medal of Honor" for completely demoralizing the enemy."

Sergeant Carter is married to Mrs. Mildred Carter of Los Angeles and has two sons, Edward Jr. and William. He was born in the States, but was educated in Calcutta, India, and Shanghai, China. He hopes there is a discharge awaiting him after his more than two years overseas.

Joe Louis Awarded Legion of Merit

The Washington Post D.C.

New York, Sept. 23 (INS).—Staff Sergt. Joe Louis, the world heavyweight champion, was awarded the Legion of Merit today at Fort Hamilton. 9-24-45

The award was made by Maj. Gen. Clarence H. Kells, commanding general of the New York Port of Embarkation.

General Kells said in his citation that Louis had been a model soldier and also had entertained "two million soldiers in the European, North African, Mediterranean and Italian theaters as well as in the United States by frequent boxing exhibitions which entailed considerable risk to his boxing future as heavyweight champion of the world."

General Kells added that Louis had made "one of the greatest contributions of all in helping to develop a reconditioning program for veterans returning from overseas.

NAPLES — The remaining members of the 332nd Fighter Group are expected to leave for the United States about Sept. 18.

LUCERA, Italy (By Cable)—Drawn up for what will probably be their last parade formation overseas, proud officers and enlisted men of the 332nd Fighter Group recently received the Army's Distinguished Unit Citation.

[EDITOR'S NOTE—This award is sometimes erroneously referred to as the Presidential Unit Citation which is given only to Naval units.]

The award, the first received by a large all-colored unit, was presented for outstanding performance of duty while escorting heavy bombers over Berlin March 24, 1945, on one of the 15th Air Force's longest missions over enemy territory.

9-8-45

Followed Change of Command

In presenting this well deserved but belated award, Brig. Gen. William L. Lee, commanding general 15th Air Force, lauded the assembled men for the superior record which the group amassed while in combat.

9-8-45

It took a change in commanding generals to bring about this award.

Early in June when asked why the group had not received a unit citation, Brig. Gen. D. C. Strother a Texan, said that the matter had been considered, but nowhere could be found a mission outstanding enough to merit the award.

Prior to the ceremony in which General Lee attached the unit citation streamer to the group's standard, Col. Elmer J. Rogers, chief of staff, 15th Air Force, read the following citation:

59 Fighters on Mission

"On March 23, 1945. the group was assigned the mission of escorting heavy bombers attacking the vital Daimler Benz tank assembly plant in Berlin, Germany.

"Realizing the strategic importance of the mission and fully cognizant of the amount of enemy resistance to be expected and the long range to be covered, ground crews worked tirelessly and with enthusiasm to have the planes at the peak of mechanical condition to insure success of the operation.

"On March 24, 1945, 59 P-51's rendezvoused with the bomber formation. Through superior navigation and maintenance and strict flight discipline the group formation reached the bomber formation at the designated time and place.

Downed 8 Jet Planes

"Nearing the target, 25 enemy planes were encountered which launched relentless attacks in a desperate effort to break up and destroy the bomber formation.

"Displaying outstanding courage, aggressiveness, and combat technique, the group immediately engaged the formation in aerial combat. In the ensuing engagement that continued over the target area, gallant pilots of the 332nd Fighter Group battled enemy fighters to prevent breaking up of the bomber formation thus jeopardizing successful completion of this vitally important mission.

9-8-45

"Through superior skill and determination the group destroyed three enemy aircraft, probably destroyed three, and damaged three.

"Among the claims were eight of the highly rated enemy jet-propelled aircraft, with no losses sustained by the 332nd.

Ground Installations Damaged

"Leaving the target area and en route to the base after completion of the primary task, planes of the group conducted strafing attacks against enemy ground installations and transportation with outstanding success.

"By conspicuous gallantry, professional skill and determination of the pilots together with outstanding technical skill and devotion to duty of the ground personnel, the 332nd Fighter Group has reflected great credit upon itself and the armed forces of the United States of America."

Who Can Wear Award

Only personnel here with the 332nd on March 23 and 24, 1945 are entitled to wear the award. Men who have since joined the group may wear the framed blue ribbon over the right hand breast pocket.

8-8-45

The only two members of the unit unable to wear the award are two enlisted men who were in the stockade when the mission was made.

1,578 Missions Flown

The group has flown 1,578 combat missions during its participation in seven campaigns. The personnel has been awarded 865 individual awards, and pilots of the group successfully accomplished more than 15,500 individual sorties against the enemy, and destroyed or damaged more than 400 enemy aircraft.

Negro Unit Is Given Citation

Corporal James Winkey, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Winkey of Finderne, was a member of the 969th FA Bn., a hard-fighting Negro unit that recently received the Presidential Distinguished Unit Citation. Corporal Winkey, who is proud to be a member of this unit, sent the following newspaper clipping home to his parents from Forchenberg, Germany where he is presently stationed:

Vougiers, France, Aug.—The 969th FA Bn., a hard-fighting Negro unit that took part in the defense of Bastogne, received the Presidential Distinguished Unit Citation in a ceremony in this little Ardennes town yesterday, the first Negro battalion in this war to be so honored.

The unit was decorated 216 days after a 4th Armored Div. task force, spearheading the relief for the U. S. Bastogne garrison, broke through to make contact with the Americans.

The original citation was awarded to the 101st Airborne Div. "and its attached units for extraordinary heroism and gallantry in defense of the key communications center of Bastogne, Belgium," during the most critical phase of the Battle of the Bulge.

Von Rundstedt's December offensive through the Ardennes gave the Negro artillerymen of the 969th an opportunity to win a place in America's military hall of fame. They were in position northeast of Bastogne when the German breakthrough came, and were ordered to move south. Arriving at Bastogne, the 969th was called on by Brig. Gen. Anthony McAuliffe, acting commander of the 101st, to help stop the Nazi thrust.

The decision to stand and hold the town against overwhelmingly superior enemy forces was later described by Gen. George S. Patton Jr. as "a stroke of genius." The successful defense of Bastogne was decisive in stemming Von Rundstedt's attack.

Corporal Winkey entered the service on December of 1942 and before that time worked at Calco Chemical Division of American Cyanamid Company. He has a brother Norman Winkey who was inducted into the service yesterday.

Virginia Flier Gets Tito Medal For Bravery

Norfolk Virginia Journal and Guide

GODMAN FIELD, Ky. — (NNPA) — Presentation of the Partisan Medal, third class, from Marshal Tito of Yugoslavia, was made to First Lt. William W. Green, 24, of Staunton, Va., by Col. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., commanding officer of Godman Field, last Saturday.

The medal was awarded to Lt. Green by Marshal Tito for heroism. Flying a P-47, on Oct. 3, 1944, he blew up an ammunition dump in Yugoslavia. He had to bail out of his plane but was rescued by the Partisans with whom he spent four days. The Russians flew him back to Naples.

In Yugoslavia, Lt. Green said, he saw girls, 14 and 15 years of age, doing the work of men in the Partisan Army. "They didn't all have uniforms," he said, "but they had guns and grenades."

He added that Yugoslavs were very grateful to him because the ammunition dump he destroyed had been the source of a costly attack on Marshal Tito's men.

"I hope some day I can go back to Yugoslavia for a visit," he said.

The Partisan Medal is a red star with two crossed rifles and is a military award for heroism in the war of liberation.

Lt. Green has the Distinguished Flying Cross with six Oak Leaf Clusters, three battle stars, and a Purple Heart. He was a member of the 332nd Fighter Group.

N.Y.

WITH THE 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY.—One of the most unusual acts of heroism in this theatre of war, the rescue of a wounded soldier who had an unexploded mortar shell in his leg, was recorded here this week after Pvt. James Robinson, of Atlantic City, had been awarded the Silver Star.

Pvt. Robinson, more than six feet in height and weighing 200 pounds, was the man so honored. His bravery under fire was revealed for the first time last Monday although it occurred last November 9.

21 Get Awards

At decoration ceremonies, Pvt. Robinson and 20 others received the Silver and Bronze Star which cited them for outstanding combat activities. Pvt. Robinson, the citation said, rescued another soldier although he was nursing a machine gun wound in the shoulder at the time. 3-3-45

They were out on patrol, the story goes, when the 19-year-old Atlantic City man was struck by enemy fire. About 100 yards away, another soldier was struck in the leg by a shell which did not explode.

Pvt. Robinson crawled forward in clear view of an enemy observation post, removed the shell from his buddy's leg and pulled the latter back towards the rear.

Among the recipients of the Bronze Star were Lieut. Philip W. Grayson, of New York City, who was commended for excellent performance in the line of duty; Pvt. Quincy A. Day, also of New York, and 17 other soldiers from other sections of the country.

TEXT OF CITATION

The accompanying citation signed by James Forrestal, cites Jackson: "For conscious gallantry and intrepidity in action as crew member attached to the USS LST 357 during the amphibious invasion of Salerno, Italy, on September 9, 1943. When his commanding officer and a great number of our troops were seriously wounded by devastating enemy shell fire during initial land operations, Jackson courageously performed his duties as a stretcher bearer and, although suffering intense pain from shrapnel wounds received in the head and thigh while administering first aid to his commanding officer, repeatedly exposed himself to the hostile fire in order to care for his comrades and bring in additional casualties.

"By his heroic initiative and untiring efforts in the face of grave peril, Jackson contributed materially to the saving of many men who otherwise might have perished and upheld the highest traditions of the United States Naval service."

Apparently Jackson's heroism has not earned him a promotion, for he was cook, third class at the time of this action. He is still cook, third class.

Silver Star To Navy Cook For Bravery

Risked Life To Save Mate Who Tumbled Into the Icy Waters Somewhere In France

WITH THE 535TH COMPANY, France.—Risking his life to save a soldier who tumbled into the icy waters of this port city's outer harbor from aboard the first troop transport to arrive here, a Negro private, Hamilton Allen, Jr., 23, Box 15A, Cypress, Texas, has been awarded the Soldier's Medal for heroism.

Presented to him before a full company formation by Colonel August H. Schroeder, Port Commander, the Soldier's Medal is given for heroism in operations not involving the enemy.

"Man Overboard"

Working as a stevedore aboard a transport, Private Allen swung into action the minute the "man overboard" sounded. A soldier, weighted down with a full field pack, had slipped between the big vessel and unloading barges. Private Allen shinnied down a rope into the water, seized the man, and hauled him to safety. In the water, both rescuer and victim were in deadly peril, since a slight roll in the sea would have sent the barge crashing against the transport's hull, crushing them both.

"We are proud of Private Allen's prompt and courageous action," said his commanding officer, Lieutenant Colonel Frank L. Kiefer, of Bay St. Louis, Mississippi. "His initiative and resourcefulness reflect credit upon himself, his battalion and the United States Army."

Medal Ceremony

At the Medal ceremony, the Texas soldier's Company paraded in his honor and a large military band played, the Stars and Stripes snapping in a stiff breeze before the procession.

Before entering the service, Private Allen was employed in dairy and farming work. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Allen, Sr., reside at Cypress, Texas.

Risks Life In Rescue Attempt

Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON, D. C.— (SNS)—Announcement was made Saturday of the award of the coveted Navy and Marine Corps Medal to Steward's Mate, second class Edward King of Atlanta for his heroic attempt to rescue a shipmate from drowning.

In the Navy for two years and five months, Steward's Mate King resides at 781 Fraser Street.

His citation reads: "For heroic conduct as a member of the crew of an aircraft carrier while attempting to rescue a comrade from drowning off the Majure Atoll, Marshall Islands, April 7, 1944.

"Hearing a cry for help and seeing one of his shipmates struggling in the swift current about 40 yards from shore, King, with two other men, swam out toward the drowning seaman, but was unable to get a secure hold on him. 1-14-45

"Battling the strong undertow, King tried desperately to save his companion but became exhausted and was finally picked up by a harbor patrol and carried to safety. His extreme bravery in the face of grave danger was in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Navy Service." 1-14-45

The citation, presented aboard ship by Captain N. W. Taylor was signed by Randall Jacobs, chief of Naval personnel.

Negro Sergeant Wins Legion of Merit Award

Richmond Dispatch - Va.

ATLANTA, April 5—(AP)—First Sergeant Jerry B. Davis, 36, of Macon, Ga., today become the first Negro in the country to win the Legion of Merit—fourth highest army decoration.

Davis led the best section in the Ninety-Second all Negro Division in Italy and was wounded bringing rations to his gun crews during a heavy enemy barrage at the battle of the Arno River.

92nd DIVISION MEN GET BATTLEFIELD COMMISSIONS

The Guardian-Boston Mass 1-27-45

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY, ITALY—Five members of the 92nd "Buffalo" Division, part of the Fifth Army in northern Italy, recently were presented battlefield commissions by Lieutenant General Mark W. Clark, new commander in chief of the 15th Army Group. 1-27-45

City for demonstrated leadership, coolness under fire and ability on the field of battle, the newly-created second lieutenants are: JOSEPH BRACY of Boston Massachusetts, and Gilbert Boothe of Forsythe, Georgia, former first sergeants; Boston, Mass

Frank Whisonant, Washington, D. C., Joseph Fry of Homestead, Pennsylvania, and William Hicks of Cleveland, Ohio, former technical sergeants. Both Hicks and Whisonant previously had been awarded Bronze Stars for heroic achievement in action.

In making the presentation, General Clark praised the five men for the natural ability as leaders they had demonstrated in battle. He added that from now on they will be marked men and will be expected to continue the high tradition they have established. 1-27-45

The job of routing out the enemy from these mountains is an unglamorous one," General Clark said, "but it is a highly important phase of this global war."

He is a member of the unit which has led the world ten successive times in the handling of vitally needed war materials.

AFRO-American Balt, Md. 1-13-45

ATLANTA.—John T. Tomkins, graduate of his native Eatenton, Ga., high school, who could speak only English when he came to Camp Wheeler in February, 1943, now speaks two foreign languages—Italian and German—and received a Meritorious Award recently. Tomkins, originally a shoe repairman, later transferred to the wood and metal shop, of which he ise now foreman, received the award from the Army Service Forces, signed by his commanding officer and the commanding general of the Fourth Service Command.

Coupled with the fact that he now can speak two foreign languages is his native initiative, ambition and foresight that have won him a promotion for outstanding accomplishment. So, he gets the citation, the promotion and additional pay in his present job as foreman. 1-13-45

It Happened Like This

It all happened this way:

Tomkins went to work in the maintenance branch February 15, 1943, as a junior shoe repairman. On May 1, 1943, he was transferred to the wood and metal shop as a blacksmith helper, doing forge work and soldering.

The investigation that won for him the promotion, citation and more pay, points out that he grasped the principles of the work and quickly learned soldering and the how and the why of that job. 1-13-45

About that time four Italian prisoners of war were assigned to duty in the wood and metal shop, which brought on complications. The investigation report records that there was a white man employed as foreman of the shop. He could not speak Italian and the Italians could not speak English.

Succeeds White Foreman

The report adds that the white foreman could not handle the necessary paper work, increased when the Italians came, so Tomkins was made foreman and it wasn't long before things were running more satisfactorily.

Tomkins says the German language was easier for him to learn than the Italian. The German language, he says, has some words that sound something like English, but the Italian hasn't.

The medal was awarded Lieutenand Archer for action while on a bomber escort mission. Sightng a flight of enemy aircraft apparently preparing to attack the bombers, he led his flight to meet the attacking planes.

Destroyed Three Planes

Lieutenant Archer, who had earned the Air Medal with eight Oak Leaf Clusters, encountered and destroyed three enemy aircraft and then provided cover for his fellow pilots who destroyed three more. Not a bomber was lost. 1-13-45

The victories gave the lieutenant, an enlisted infantryman for eighteen months, a total of four enemy aircraft destroyed in aerial combat, with six enemy aircraft destroyed on the ground. He is the group's leading individual scorer.

93rd Men Win Medals In Pacific

Peoples Voice N.Y. 3-3-45

Flash

WITH THE 93RD INFANTRY DIVISION IN NEW GUINEA — The story of the 93rd Infantry Division this week is a story of heroism in face of the enemy, promotions for jobs well done, and awards for proficiency and exemplary conduct in action against the enemy. Three heroes were expecially outstanding. 3-3-45

Sergeant Frank Portee, of Clover, South Carolina, has been decorated with the Combat Infantryman Badge, and the Purple Heart. Sergeant Portee was advance scout for a reconnaissance patrol operating in enemy territory when he was suddenly fired on by a Jap sniper. A .25 calibre bullet struck him in the arm and he slumped to the ground, firing as he fell. Though wounded, he returned the fire with such accuracy that the sniper abandoned his position, thus permitting the rest of the patrol to come up and form a circle.

Crawling into the center, without assistance, Sergeant Portee directed the fire of his patrol until the danger point had been neutralized. After receiving first aid, he then continued to perform as advance scout for the patrol until its mission had been completed.

The story of Private First Class Samuel King of Melwood, Arkansas, is another story of heroism. While out on a special mission with a unit dispatched to secure information and fight if necessary. Private First Class Smith came face to face with three Japs charging him with fixed bayonets. With deadly coolness, Smith killed all three with a burst of lead from his automatic rifle. One of the dying Japs fell almost at the feet of the straight shooting doughboy. This week Smith was still in action, having been awarded the Combat Infantryman Badge.

The story of Captain Edgar G. Davis of the 93rd is a typical story of hard work with promotion as the reward. This week an announcement from General of the Army Douglas MacArthur's Headquarters said Captain Davis was advanced from first lieutenant.

As regimental communications officer, Captain Davis, then a lieutenant, had the direct supervision of the broad network of communications for the Division which is so essential to a unit in combat in the jungle. Captain Davis, a native of Montclair, New Jersey, came all the way through the ranks to his present grade.

Awards for Valor

Two Orleanians Awarded In Italy

Louisiana Weekly New Orleans, La.

WITH THE AAF ENGINEER COMMAND IN ITALY. — Two former New Orleans residents now serving with a veteran Negro aviation engineer battalion building airfields for the Mediterranean Allied Air Forces in Italy, were recently awarded the Mechanic's Bar for qualifying as outstandingly efficient operators of airfield construction equipment.

Sergeant George H. Hawkins, son of Mrs. Maude Joseph of 2325 S. Johnson St., was employed by A. Huber & Sons of 4800 Canal St., before joining the service in April 1942. Married, his wife, Ruth, lives at 1003 N. Claiborne Ave., with their 28-month old daughter, Jocelyn. 3-3-45

Sergeant Otis Kendrick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Benton Kendrick of Amite, left his position with the New Orleans Drainage & Construction Co., to enter the Army in June 1942. His wife, Estella, lives in Amite with his parents.

Both men, veterans of 23 months overseas, have seen active duty in North Africa and Italy building the bases from which have been launched the mighty air blows that pulverized Southern Germany and the Balkans.

Silver Star To One for Super-Courage

By MAX JOHNSON

NNPA War Correspondent in Italy

WITH 92ND DIVISION IN ITALY. — A Silver Star for one of the most unusual heroic acts of bravery ever recorded in this theater of war was awarded Pfc. James Robinson, 19, of Atlantic City, N. J., during decoration ceremonies at 92nd Division headquarters Monday. Twenty other members of the division received bronze stars citing them for outstanding combat activities.

Robinson, who stands 6-2 and weighs 200 was commended for his gallant action Nov. 9 when though wounded himself, he risked his life to rescue a companion pinned down by an unexploded mortar shell in the leg. 3-2-45

Through Enemy Fire

Withdrawing with his unit following contact with the Germans, Robinson, with a machinegun wound in his left shoulder, suddenly saw a member of his company approximately 150 yards from the enemy position, pinned to the ground with the unexploded shell in one leg.

Despite his shoulder wound, Robinson went through intense enemy fire to the aid of the wounded man. In full view of the enemy and exposed to their fire, he extracted the unexploded shell not knowing at the time when it was timed, then carried his wounded companion to safety behind his own lines.

One of Bravest Rescues

Bronze Star recipients:

Ist Lt. J. T. John W. Bailey, Easton, Md.; Ist. Lt. Philip W. Grayson, New York City; 2nd Lt. Charles A. Kinder, Montgomery, W. Va.; S-Sgt. Roy S. Savage, Fort Bragg, N. C.; Pvt. John A. Ellis, Elizabeth City, N. C.; Pfc. Walter L. Gillis, Jonesboro, N. C.; Pvt. David Smith, Rocky Mount, N. C.; Sgt. Orva Snelling, Barnwell, S. C.; Pvt. Reuben E. Avery, Greenville, S. C.; T-Sgt. Howard W. Edwards, Trenton, N. J.; T-Sgt. Robert M. Thomas, Atlantic City; Pfc. Freddie W. Bryant, Philadelphia; Pvt. Quincy A. Day, New York City; S-Sgt. Caesaro Rucker, Houston; T-5 Clyde D. Barnett, Philadelphia; Pfc. John Nealy, Chicago; Pfc. George W. Bedell, Girardeau, Miss.; Cpl. Theodore Merritt, Jessup, Ga.; S-Sgt. Peter Brown, Houston; Pvt. Louis C. Caldwell, Gulfport.

Lt. Bailey won his Bronze Star for his action on Nov. 15 when he was acting as advance observation post lookout during the attack of certain troops. He left his relatively safe position to take charge of these troops after enemy gun fire caused them to become disorganized.

His action is credited with saving the situation so that our troops could proceed effectively on their mission which proved of vital importance. 3-2-45

Lt. Grauson was commended for excellent performance of his duties as registration office with one division of the regiment. Lt. Kinder was cited for bravery during the Dec. 26 thrust against the Germans in the Serchio section.

When the communication wires between his regimental and battalion commend posts on opposite sides of the river were severed by artillery fire, Kinder voluntarily took a Jeep on four separate occasions on an enemy-observed road in the midst of heavy shellfire to keep the commanders of both positions in communication with each other.

S-Sgt. Savage was commended for his preseverance in single-handedly fighting off an enemy attack on a house by hand grenades on Nov. 12, thus saving his companions as well as himself from death or capture.

Pvt. Ellis Browning, automatic rifleman with a patrol which infiltered the enemy lines at one point on Nov. 22, ambushing 20 Germans, killing five and wounding 7, covered the final forced withdrawal of his companions so effectively that no casualties were suffered during this highly successful mission.

Pvt. Gillis was cited for administering first aid to injured companions in a particularly hazardous frontline spot during one occasion of fierce fighting on October 21.

Sgt. Snelling, ambulance driver, was commanded for evacuating wounded under similar circumstances. Pvt. Avery and T-Sgt. Edwards won their awards for rescuing wounded companions pinned down from machinegun fire. 3-2-45

In this instance, Edwards, exposed himself to wipe out a German machinegun squad. T-5 Thomas, radio operator of the unit, was cited during an attack by taking an exposed position after enemy artillery had severed wires.

Citations to the others were for bravery and outstanding acts under similar circumstances.

Cpl. John C. Moody, member of an ordnance unit with the 92nd, received the Fifth Army athletic award for outstanding ability and accomplishments during the Spaghetti Bowl football game on this 5th Army front on New Year's Day. "Big Train" Moody, former Morris Brown star, highlighted the game, scoring three of the 5th Army team's four touchdowns.

1st Negro Sailor Honored Before Capt.'s Merit Mast

N.Y. 1-6-45

BAINBRIDGE, Md. (ANP)—The first colored boy to be brought before a captain's meritorious mast, the seventh such mast since the inauguration of the center two years ago, George S. L. Bragg, steward's mate first class, has been commended for outstanding performance in assigned duties as assistant company commander and company commander in the steward's mate school at the U. S. Naval Training center here.

He exhibited such qualities of initiative, loyalty, dependability and efficiency as to reflect credit upon himself, his race and his unit.

Won Third Place

Bragg placed third in the first PI Class of 68 men here and since his graduation, has successfully led 10 companies of boys through their training. All companies came out of training with high honors, and there were athletic winners in every sport in nearly every company. Another outstanding feature about Bragg is that he is the only steward mate in charge of a company of recruits, a job he has been doing since February of this year.

Before entering the service in August, 1942, Bragg worked for the Audio Manufacturing company of Flenberg, Conn., where he worked as a foreman for 2½ years before his induction.

Born in Stamford, Conn., George attended grammar and high school there before entering the prep institute in Brooklyn where he studied sound. After completion of this course, he went to work for the Audio Manufacturing company. He is 25 years old and married.

Artillery "Magnificent," Says General; Division Does Part In Holding Action

(A Special War Department Release)

WITH THE FIFTH ARMY, ITALY—Since their first combat team crossed the Arno River last September to capture the city of Lucca, men of the 92nd Infantry Division have won seven awards of the Legion of Merit, 65 Silver Stars, 162 Bronze Stars, four Air Medals, and 1,377 Purple Hearts, the War Department announced on Monday of this week.

At the end of their first six months in combat, the 'Buffaloes' had received 9,991 Combat Infantry Badges. Altogether, 7,000 officers and men of the division had received recognition for their efforts in action against the enemy. Seven men who stood out in the field of battle had earned commissions on the spot and many others were being considered.

Army Leaders High In Praise Of Unit

Regarding operations, the 92nd Division had seen only negligible changes in its front-line positions. One major drive, launched in February, gained some ground before the Germans sacrificed much in men and material in pushing the division back to its original starting point. Sharing the assignment of pinning down Wehrmacht divisions in Italy, the 92nd was confronted by the loftiest peaks and mountains in the Apennines.

Many heroes, whose exploits earned the praise of high ranking Army leaders, emerged from the division's first half-year of combat. Daring fighters like Capt. Charles F. Gandy, and 2nd Lt. Theodore O. Smith of Washington, D. C.; Sgt. Rodger Holmes of Hodges, S. C.; Major Willis D. Polk of Philadelphia, Pa.; Sgt. Jefferson H. Hilliard of Brooklyn, N. Y. Pfc. James Robinson of Atlantic City, N. J.; and Pvt. Jake McInnis of Prentiss, Miss., have lived up to the finest traditions of the United States Army.

Men Have Won Battlefield Commissions

4-14-45

Quick recognition, in the form of commissions as second lieutenants, came to the following men while on the battlefield: First Sgt. Gilbert Boothe of Forsythe, Ga.; First Sgt. Joseph Bracy of Boston, Mass.; T/Sgt. Frank Whisonant of Washington, D. C.; T/Sgt. Joseph Fry of Homestead, Pa.; T/Sgt. William Hicks of Cleveland, Ohio; T/Sgt. Caesar O. Rucker of Fort Sam Houston, Texas; S/Sgt. Ernest L. Carlton of New York City, and T/Sgt. John Birdsong of Washington, D. C.

Pricking of the German lines by patrols, which constantly probed for weak points in the coastal ramparts of the Gothic Line, characterized the chief activity of the 92nd Division. The wily Jerry, who used natural mountain barriers masterfully, made all maneuvering for the attacking elements just about the tougest in modern warfare.

Story Of Heroic Patrol Action

In the course of one patrol action, S Sgt. Mansfield Mason of Baltimore, Md., notably distinguished himself by heroic conduct. Acting on information that some Germans had been seen to enter a house near a certain village, Mason's patrol under the command of 2nd Lt. Wilbur E. Ledbetter of Washington, D. C., surrounded the building and effectively covered all its approaches. S/Sgt. Mason then crawled to within 30 feet of the dwelling in the face of withering machinegun fire. He hurled three hand grenades into the building and shifted his position slightly. Out walked five Germans, including an officer, to surrender.

First Lt. William E. Porter of Indianapolis, Ind., who was awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action, exposed himself to enemy arms while his company advanced on its objective under a hail of machinegun fire. With his unit pinned to the ground, Lt. Porter succeeded in eliminating the machinegun nest, killing the German officer in command, and forcing the gun crews to surrender.

Medic Braved Enemy Fire To Do Duty

4-14-45

Men of non-combatant units also won their share of awards. Pfc. Walter L. Gillis of Jonesboro, N. C., a member of a medical detachment, administered first aid to members of an attacking platoon while intense enemy fire created havoc with the terrain. Although he was in full view of the Germans, he did not falter in his efforts to see that all who needed medical attention were treated. He then assisted in evacuating the casualties.

"Magnificent" is the way Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, commander of the 92nd, describes his division's artillery. Time and time again, "Buffalo" infantrymen, sweating out a tight spot, have seen perfectly placed artillery fire shatter hostile emplacements and break up repeated and determined German counter-attacks. "Boy, that artillery was great," said many 92nd doughboys upon return from skirmishes with the enemy.

General of the Army George C. Marshall was the first five-star general to inspect the 92nd Division. In an official statement, the Army chief of staff said that what he had seen in Italy was "very reassuring."

Seven In Col. Davis' Outfit Awarded The Flying Cross

Pittsburgh Courier 5-10-45 Pg. 1, Pt. 2.

By COLLINS GEORGE, Courier War Correspondent

AT AN AIR BASE IN ITALY—During recent decoration ceremonies, Col. Y. H. Taylor, commanding officer of the wing to which Col. B. O. Davis Fighter Group is assigned, pinned the Distinguished Flying Cross on seven heroic officers of the group for "meritorious achievement and heroism in combat against the enemy."

He also pinned the Bronze Star on four enlisted men for "meritorious service in support of military operations against the enemy." Thirteen Air Medals also were awarded. 3-10-45

SEVERAL HONORED

The Distinguished Flying Cross went to William N. Alsbrook, Kansas City, Mo.; Clarence W. Dort, Elmira, N. Y.; Sgurgeon Ellington, Winston-Salem, N. C.; Richard S. Harden, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.; Robert Martin, Dubuque, Iowa; Charles Tate, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Edward M. Thomas, Chicago.

Chief interest in the ceremony centered around the awarding of the Bronze Star to S/Sgt. Elliott W. Lucas, Washington, D. C., whose brother, First Lieut. Wendell M. Lucas, received the Air Medal at the same ceremony. Sergeant Lucas won his star for designing and constructing a power-driven hydraulic test stand which reduced the time required for inspecting hydraulic systems of P-51 type aircraft.

Another enlisted man receiving the Bronze Star was Corp. John T. Fields of Renfroe, Ala. He is an expert aircraft armorer and gun expert. 3-10-45

WITH 92ND DIVISION, ITALY—In one of the largest and most colorful ceremonies of its kind in recent months here, thirty-two members of the 92nd Division were decorated Friday for various heroic deeds of outstanding commendable activities against the enemy on this 5th Army Front.

Citations included three battlefield promotions of enlisted men to the rank of second lieutenant; three Silver Star awards; ten Bronze Stars; two Oak Leaf clusters to air medals; six air medals and eight commendations. 3-31-45

Major Gen. Willis D. Crittenberger, commander of Fourth Army Corps, and Edward M. Almond, 92nd commander, presented the awards.

I did not hear what Gen. Crittenberger had to say about the 92nd during his speech at luncheon because correspondents, sometimes included among guests in such instances, were this time not only uninvited but actually denied entry.

He Got In, . . Was Put Out

I did manage to slip in after luncheon got underway, but an alert official with an apparent dim view of my protests, ushered me out immediately. 3-31-45

Combat Promotions

Combat promotions to second lieutenants as a result of their proven worth as leaders went to:

T. Sgts. Ernest L. Carlton, Detroit; Caesaro Rucker, Austin, Texas; Andrel Christiansen, 1214 North Frazier, Philadelphia. Silver Star recipients included Pfc. Truehart Fogg, Newark, N. J.; Pfc. Richard Tatum, Jr., Cunard, W. Va.; Pvt. John N. Mitchell, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Fogg was cited for heroism during Serchio action last December 26th, when he killed all in a four man enemy machine gun crew, a twenty-five man German raiding party and single-handedly knocked out another enemy machine gun, thereby saving his platoon from almost certain annihilation.

Tatum, a rifleman, acting as forward observer during a 92nd attack on February 11th, spotted a group of the enemy in a house on his front and directed fire on the building, though under heavy machine gun fire himself. Tatum remained in position and killed six Germans when they sought escape from the building. His action is credited with repulsing a strong enemy attack on his mortar squad position in this instance.

Won Silver Star

Pvt. Mitchell won the Silver Star for action on February 8th, when serving as combat engineer attached to an infantry rifle company. He was assigned the mission of blowing up hostile barbed wire entanglements impeding his company's advance. When additional sniper and machine gun fire held up the company advance by pinning down his company commander, Mitchell killed one enemy sniper, wounded and captured another, making possible his commander's and company's advance.

Bronze Star Winners

Bronze Stars 3-31-45 for outstanding heroic action against the enemy went to:

1st Lts. Andrew Lee, Jr., Cleveland, O.; Joseph L. Stephenson, Goldsboro, N. Carolina; 2nd Lt. Francis P. Mulhair, New York City; T. Sgts. William H. Pris, Fort Riley, Kan.; Willard C. Lawrence, Central City, Ky.; T-5s John Adams, Highpoint, N. Carolina; Marshall Lovelace, DeKalb, Miss.; James W. Walker, Gary, Ind.; Pfc. Raymond Jackson, Camp Blanding, Fla.

Other awards included:

Other Awards

Oak Leaf Cluster to Air Medals: 1st Lts. Albert A. Loving, Jr., Chicago; James E. Woodson, Topeka, Kan.

Air Medals: 1st Lts. Louis K. Hanks, Toledo, O.; George E. Pope, Hawkinsville, Ga.; Lloyd R. Taylor, Atlanta, Ga.; George F. Bizzel, Lancaster, O.; S. Sgt. Marshall R. Hurley, Washington; Sgt. Howard Hollis, Middletown, O.

Commendations: 2nd Lt. Charles R. Walker, Macon, Ga.; T. Sgt. Woodrow Bell, Birmingham, Ala.; S. Sgts. George Brooks, New Orleans; Pfc. Warren H. Brown, Birmingham, Ala.; Embert Madision, New Orleans, and Pvt. Jesse Durham, Marks, Miss.

Gallant Action

The Silver Star was won by Captain Diggs for his gallant action in quickly assuming command of a battalion February 8th after Major Polk, its commander, was killed while rallying his men to continue the attack. Acting battalion executive at the time, Diggs so efficiently took over command that his unit reached the objective and held it until forced back after other elements of the 92nd failed to take objectives in nearby Apennines, exposing them to German shelling from three sides.

1st Lt. McLeod received the Silver Star citation for heroism during the same 92nd attack on February 10th, when, as company commander, he effectively led his men against fortified positions and was able to take the objective at a great expense to the Germans. His citation read in part: 3-24-45

"Under intense enemy mortar, machine gun and hand grenade fire, Lt. McLeod held his position, continually exposing himself as he moved about securing his company's positions. When finally ordered to withdraw, he had accounted for ten enemy dead and fifteen captured."

Silver Star Winners

Captain Martin won the Silver Star for efficiently taking over command of his battalion on February 10th when its commander was killed during attack action. Lt. Foster, cited for bravery last December 5, when he advanced alone to kill a German officer and forced another enemy soldier to surrender after the two had pinned his platoon down with machine gunfire.

Lt. Dailey won the Silver Star for action last December 10th, when he performed a similar feat while leading a six man patrol. S Sgt. Simpson won the Silver Star for killing a German and forcing another to surrender during a similar patrol action last October 22nd.

Feb. 8 Action Fatal

Major Polk was killed February 8 when, as commander of the battalion which first crossed the Cinqualle Canal during the 92nd Division's attack, he personally led his men into action. First wounded by shell fragment while leading the fight for this objective on the extreme Tyrrhenian sea coastal sector, Polk refused to be evacuated despite his injury and was later killed by an enemy sniper while continuing to direct the attack.

His wife, Dorothy, lives in Philadelphia. 3-17-45

Gandy Killed in October

Captain Gandy was killed last October when he led his company in an attack, taking a difficult objective under extremely heavy enemy fire shortly after a 92nd Division combat team took the historical town of Lucca.

After his company fought to the objective, Captain Gandy was shot when he personally took it upon himself to advance alone to reconnoiter the route of his company's next movement.

Lieutenant Smith's Feat

Second Lieutenant Smith, recent silver star winner, was killed during the 92nd's attack on February 8. Leading a platoon assigned to assist in taking his company's initial objective in one sector of the Apennine Mountains, Smith and his men captured nine enemy soldiers and their equipment from well-fortified positions, completely neutralizing enemy fire on his company's left flank, thereby facilitating its subsequent advance. 3-17-45

Smith was a 1942 Howard University graduate and a former Washington postal employee. His father, Frank Smith, lives at his Washington address.

Takes Over for Polk

The silver star was won by Captain Diggs for his gallant action in quickly assuming command of a battalion on February 8 after Major Polk, its commander, was killed, and rallying the men to continue the attack.

Acting battalion executive officer at the time, Diggs so efficiently took over the command that his unit reached its objective and held it until forced back after other elements of the 92nd failed to take their objectives in the nearby Apennines, exposing them to German shelling from three sides. 3-17-45

Killed 10, Captured 15

First Lieutenant McLeod received the silver star citation for heroism during the same 92nd attack on February 10, when, as company commander, he so effectively led his men against enemy fortified positions that they were able to take their objective at great expense to the Germans. His citation read in part: "Under intense enemy mortar, machine-gun and hand grenade fire, Lieutenant McLeod held his positions, continually exposing himself as he moved about securing his company's positions. When finally ordered to withdraw, he had accounted for ten enemy dead and fifteen captured." 3-17-45

One Speeded Up Bridge Building; Bridge Is Saved

WITH U. S. SUPPLY FORCES IN FRANCE — (SNS) — Two Sergeants of the 1313th Engineer General Service Regiment have been awarded the Bronze Star Medal in France — one for building a bridge, the other for saving a bridge already built — Headquarters, European Theater of Operations, announced today.

The awards were presented by Brig. Gen. Charles O. Thrasher, Commanding General of Oise Section, Communications Zone, to Staff Sergeant Carl A. Kemp of Savannah, Georgia, and Sergeant Willie H. Smith, Monroe, La.

3-10-45

BUILT BRIDGE

The citation for Sergeant Kemp stated: "Staff Sergeant Kemp distinguished himself by the supervision of a vital bridge construction job, so that an important road could be put into operation for the movement of supplies to the armies engaged at the front. Sergeant Kemp by his forceful and efficient supervision of the construction details and untiring energy materially assisted the officers of his company who were not familiar with this type of construction, and by so doing affected the completion of the bridge eight days sooner than substantially the rapid supplying of the forces combatting the enemy."

3-10-45

SAVED BRIDGE

The citation accompany the award for Sergeant Smith read: "Sergeant Willie H. Smith distinguished himself by meritorious service in connection with the saving of an important bridge. The river was in flood stage and debris was being washed down stream and piling up aginst the bridge, which was a vital line of communication over which military supplies were being moved by truck to the American armies engaged at the front. Sergeant Smith, with utter disregard for himself, worked long hours in the water helping to get this debris removed and so prevent the loss of the bridge. Through his untiring energy and devotion to duty in the face of great difficulties, he gave direct material assistance to the Armies in combat."

WITH THE 92nd DIVISION, ITALY—The Silver Star for one of the most unusual herioc acts of bravery ever recorded in this theatre of war was awarded to Pfc. James Robinson, 19, of Atlantic City, N.J., during decoration ceremonies held at 92nd Division Headquarters Monday when twenty other division members received Bronze Stars, citing them for outstanding combat activities.

Robinson, who stands 6 feet 2 and weighs 200, was commended for his gallant action November 9 when, though wounded himself, he risked his life to rescue a companion pinned down by an unexploded mortar shell in his leg.

Withdrawing with his unit following contact with the Germans, Robinson, with a machine gun wound in the left shoulder, suddenly saw a member of his company approximately 150 yards from an enemy position pinned to the ground with an unexploded mortar shell in one leg. Robinson, despite the wound in his shoulder and intense enemy fire, went to the aid of the wounded man. 3-3-45

Brave Enemy Fire in Rescue

In full view of the enemy and exposed to their fire, he extracted the unexploded shell, not knowing at the time whether it was a dud or timed, then carried his wounded companion to the safety of his own lines. This action is deemed here as one of the bravest rescues ever effected by a member of the Ninety-second. 3-3-45

Robinson is single. His mother, Mrs. Louise Robinson lives at 1830 Washington Avenue, Atlantic City.

Bronze Star recipients are:

First Lt. J. T. John W. Bailey Easton, Md.; First Lt. Philip W Grayson, NYC; Second Lt. Charles A. Kinder, Montgomery, W.Va. S-Sgt. Roy S. Savage, Fort Bragg N.C.; Pvt. John A. Ellis, Elizabeth City, N.C.; Pfc. Walter L Gillis, Jonesboro, N.C.; Pvt. Davic Smith, Rocky Mount, N.C.;

Sgt. Orva Snelling, Barnwell S.C.; Pvt. Reuben E. Avery Greenville, S.C.; T-Sgt. Howard W. Edwards, Trenton, N.J.; T-Sgt Robert M. Thomas, Atlantic City; Pfc. Freddie W. Bryant, Philadelphia; Pvt. Quincy A. Day, NYC;

S-Sgt. Caesar O. Rucker, Houston, Texas; T/5 Clyde D. Barnett, Pittsburgh; Pfc. John Nealy, Chicago; Pfc. George W. Bedell, Girardeau, Miss.; Cpl. Theodore Merritt; Jessup, Ga.; S-Sgt. Peter Brown, Houston; Pvt. Louis C. Caldwell, Gulfport, Miss.

How They Won Stars

First Lt. Bailey won the Bronze Star for action on 15 when acting as advance observation post lookout during an attack by certain troops, he left his relatively safe position to take charge of these troops after enemy machine gun fire caused them to become disorganized. 3-3-45

His action is credited with saving the situation so our troops could proceed effectively on a mission which proved of vital importance.

Lieutenant Grayson was commended for excellent performance of his duties as Grave registration officer with one division of a regiment. Lt. Kinder was cited for bravery during the December 26 thrust by the Germans in the Serchio sector. When communication wires between his regimental and battalion command posts on opposite sides of the river were severed by artillery fire, Kinder voluntarily took a jeep on four separate occasions on an enemy-observed road, midst heavy shell fire, to keep the commanders of both positions in communication with each other.

Ellis rifleman with a filtered fighting October 21. Sgt. Snelling, ambulance driver, was commended for evacuating the wounded under similar circumstances.

Pvt. Avery and T-Sgt. Edwards won the award for rescuing wounded companions pinned down by machine gun fire. In his instance, Edwards exposed himself to wipe out a German machine gun squad of three men to accomplish his task. T-5 Thomas, radio operator of the unit, was cited for maintaining excellent communications for the outfit during an attack by taking an exposed position after enemy artillery had severed the wires.

Port Soldiers, Crane Mechanics Awarded Bronze Star Medals

Informer Houston, Texas

WITH U. S. FORCES, France.—Two Negro soldiers serving in France, one, an expert crane mechanic from Manhattan, Kansas, and the other, a capable platoon sergeant from New Orleans, La., have been awarded the Bronoze Star Medal, Headquarters, European Theatre of Operations announced today. 2-24-45

The awards were presented to Staff Sergeant Charles R. McCutcheon, 413 Riley street, Manhattan Kansas, and Staff Sergeant Charles Patterson, 2415 LaSalle Street, New Orleans, by Major General Henry S. Aurand ,of Chicago, Illisois, Normandy Base Commander. Patterson is a member of the 658th Port Co.

In the words of his official citation, "Staff Sergeant McCutcheon worked untiringly over long hours performing maintenance work, and in the absence of sufficient trained mechanics performed service over and above that which would normally be expected. He helped train inexperienced mechanics and operators, and his leadership, initiative and service was of immeasurable value in enabling this port to keep all cranes operational, thus allowlowing the port to meet its tonnage discharge goal." 2-24-45

According to his citation, "Staff Sergeant Patterson, as platoon sergeant, supervised the accomplishment of the discharge of a Liberty ship containing a cargo of critical heavy lifts during periods of total blackout under the most difficult conditions, a few miles from the front lines. Sergeant Patterson's coolness and confidence inspired the men of his platoon to perform their duties efficiently, reflecting great credit on himself and the military service." 2-24-45

His wife, Mrs. Morpril Patterson, lives at the LaSalle street address.

Legion Of Merit Awarded Georgian

Atlanta World 4-6-45

First Sgt. Jerry B. Davis, of Macon, Georgia, Thursday became the first Negro in the country to win the Legion of Merit--fourth highest Army decoration.

Davis led the best section in the 92nd All-Negro Division and was wounded bringing rations to his gun crews during a heavy enemy barrage at the battle of the Arno River. 4-6-45

HIT NEAR PISA

The 36-year-old sergeant was hit near Pisa last August 30 and was encased in a body cast from November 1 until a few days ago. A two-ounce piece of shrapnel from a German 88 MM shell entered his right arm, passed through his body and lodged in his spine. His arm was broken, his spleen and kidney ruptured and his spine fractured. The missile was removed from his spine in an operation.

Davis advanced to first sergeant within nine months of his induction and it was his leadership and heroism under fire which earned him the high honor.

FOR EXCEPTIONAL CONDUCT

4-6-45

The medal, the citation stated was awarded for exceptional meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service. While a corporal, Davis was assigned as acting chief of the section in Battery A, 598th field artillery regiment and by reason of his inspiring leadership his unit became the division's best. He was considered the best non-commissioned officer in the regiment and his loyalty, leadership and effectiveness under fire contributed largely to the efficiency and morale of the entire battery.

A graduate of Hudson High School, Macon, the sergeant is the son of Mrs. Belle Davis, of 257 3rd Avenue. He was employed as a brakeman for the Central of Georgia Railroad and is now on military leave. He joined the Army in October, 1942.

SOMEWHERE, Luxembourg. — (ANP)—For "meritorious service" against a U. S. enemy in France from July 30 to No. 30, 1944, M-Sgt. John W. London, Ord. (AM.) Co., has been awarded the Bronze Star medal. 2-24-45

Presentation was made to the Houston non-com at a recent company formation by Lt. Col. Walter E. Ferry, Tulsa, commander, Ord. Batt. Col. Ferry in making the award said Sgt. London is the "top master sergeant in the entire ammunition section of the 3rd army."

The citation declared Sgt. London "distinguished himself by the superior manner in which he performed his duties as a clerk in the depot office of the Ord. (Am.) Co." It added that the "initiative he displayed, his untiring efforts and loyal devotion to duty mark him as an outstanding soldier." 2-24-45

Sgt. London, 23, is regarded as the "brains" of the crack Ord. (AM.) Co., rushed here to support armies resisting the German counter-attack. During the break-through at St. Lo, the liberation of Paris, and the Moselle river crossings Sgt. London and his co-workers were important elements of the victories.

The Ord. Co., composed almost entirely of Louisiana and Texas men, is keeping the ammunition passed. 1-

Negro Battalion Given Special Task of Cleaning Out Pockets of Resistance After Big Battle

IN ON BASTOGNE CAMPAIGN

By RUDOLPH DUNBAR (ANP) War Correspondent

WITH U.S. 7th ARMY IN GERMANY—(A.N.P.)—In Germany where I am now installed, I have been given a special assignment with the 7th Army to cover a Negro tank outfit that had distinguished itself in the battle of the Ardennos. When I arrived to find this outfit, I was informed that it had been shifted to another Army sectar Instead, I found that the famous 969th Negro artillery of Bastogne fame was fighting with the 7th army. I immediately attached myself to this unit and was happy to be with it again, more so, to learn about the true story of Bastogne which brought the outfit so much recognition.

The first thing the commander told me was that the battalion had been awarded the Presidential citation for the heroic defense in the "Battle of Bastogne." This citation was included in the same order as the 101st Airborne division. Thus far there has been no official ceremony because the battalion was in continuous action since the Bastogne triumph. In actual fact, the 969th has been in action continuously since its appearance on the western front last July. 4-28-45

Always Called to Destroy Enemy Pockets

This battalion is always called upon to destroy surviving traces of enemy pockets after a big battle. This is the first time a Negro combat unit has received such distinguished recognition.

The 969th has received double honors. In the "Battle of Colmar" the battalion distinguished itself again supporting the 1st French infantry, and the 2nd & 5th divisions that were fighting in the city of Colmar in the Alsace pocket. In recognition of the battalion's brilliant exploits, the mayor has coonferred the honor upon the battalion to use the coat of arms of the City of Colmar. The commanding officer, Lt. Gen. Hubert D. Barnes, told me that the battalion would incorporate the arms in the insignia. 4-28-45

The total amount of decorations the battalion has received amounts to 14 Bronzo stars, one Silver star and one Croix de Gueere. These decorations have the Normandy, Brest and Bastogne campaign. In addition 28 Bronze stars have been recommended.

The record of the 969th has been so outstanding that it is safe to say the battalion will at the close of the war emerge as one of the most formidable combat units to have appeared on the western front. 4-28-45

The battalion commander, Lt. Col. Hubert D. Barnes from Wisconsin, Mass., is a proud man, and justly so, at the inextinguishable glory of his unit. It is due to his skill and coolness in the sombro and terrible moments that the battalion has achieved such a distinguished record. In the outfit, it is the concensus of opinion that during the exciting days of the Bastogne battle, Col. Barnes, was cool, calm and collected. He is remarkable for his friendliness of manner and the absence of those petty jealousies which are apt to irritate Negro soldiers.

Understands Negro Psychology

In actual fact, Col. Barnes understands Negro psychology. If there is any undercurrent of discontent among the men due to race, he would not attempt to arbitrate. His method in dealing with such an affair is simple and effective. Col. Barnes would prevail upon the most enlightened member of the battalion to talk to the men who are dissatisfied, and to present a true picture of the situation. He would purposely select a full-blooded Negro in order that the men would not think that they are being deceived or "sold-out."

Detroit Negro Tells How He Won the DSC

Detroit Freeds 3-19-45

Detroit, Mich.

Capt. Charles L. Thomas, of 5877 Beechwood, who last week became the first living Negro soldier awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, is a modest young man.

He says he didn't do much; it was the men of his tank-destroyer outfit who went ahead and took the town they were attacking in France after he was wounded and knocked out of action.

Thomas

At Percy Jones General Hospital, where he is a patient, Thomas, 24, said he'd like to go back and fight with his outfit again.

"You get attached to men like that," he said. "I'd like to go back and help finish it up with them." 3-19-45

"WE WERE sent in to take a town," Capt. Thomas said. "We thought there were only three German tanks opposing us. We rode into a sort of trap.

"The first thing we knew, the Germans opened up from the sides of the road and started attacking our flank."

It took the outfit five hours to fight its way out. 3-19-45

Thomas was riding in an armored car, but climbed out of it with a machine gun and blasted the enemy. Not until he was wounded did he cease firing.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Thomas. The elder Thomas is a Ford Motor Co. employee. The son entered the Army as an enlisted man and later was commissioned.

CAPT. R. A. DIGGS GETS SILVER STAR

Washington Tribune D.C.

Capt. Raymond A. Diggs, son of Mrs. Mary F. Diggs, 1351 Otis St., N. E., and a member of the 92nd Infantry (Buffalo) Division with the Fifth Army in Italy, has recently been awarded the Silver Star for gallantry in action on the front in northern Italy. 4-21-45

During a major attack, the captain, a graduate of Dunbar High School and Howard University, was acting executive officer of an infantry battalion. In the initial phase of the force's attack, the battalion commander and plans and training officer were killed. Diggs, without a supporting staff, assumed command. 4-21-45

He received his B.A. in education from Howard in 1933, and his M.S. in 1936. In 1933, he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the infantry reserve, promoted to first lieutenant in 1937, and promoted to captain in October, 1941.

In civilian life, he was a school teacher, statistician, and student.

2nd Negro gets DSC

Los Angeles Tribune 3-26-45

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The War Department has announced the award of the Distinguished Service Cross to Capt. Charles L. Thomas, 24-year-old commander of a Tank Destroyer Co. in France, for "extraordinary heroism in action."

Capt. Thomas, who entered the Army from Detroit, is the second Negro in the present war so honored. The other, Pvt. George Watson of Birmingham, received the award posthumously when he distinguished himself at Pordoch Harbor, New Guinea, in March, 1943, assisting several men to safety on a raft from their sinking boat, only to lose his own life.

Suffering multiple wounds in the chest, legs and arms, Capt. Thomas won the Army's second highest decoration for "shooting his way through the Siegfried Line last December in a blaze of fire from enemy rockets, artillery and machine guns," the War Department said. 3-26-45

When Task Force "Blackshear" of Lt. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's Seventh Army was organized to storm and capture the strong German fortress at Climbach, Capt. Thomas, then a lieutenant, was ordered to take a platoon of Tank Destroyers of the 614th TD Battalion and keep several of the German gun batteries occupied while the infantry infiltrated into the town around the flanks.

How well he executed his orders is best revealed in the official citation, which reads as follows:

"While riding in the lead vehicle of a task force organized to storm and capture the village of Climbach, France, Lt. Thomas' armored scout car was subjected to intense enemy artillery, self-propelled gun, and small arms fire. Although wounded by the initial burst of hostile fire, Lt. Thomas signaled the remainder of the column to halt and, despite the severity of his wounds, assisted the crew of the wrecked car in dismounting.

"Upon leaving the scant protection which the vehicle afforded, Lt. Thomas was again subjected to a hail of enemy fire which inflicted multiple gun-shot wounds in his chest, legs and both arms. Despite the intense pain caused by these wounds, the lieutenant ordered and directed the dispersion and emplacement of two antitank guns which in a few moments were effectively returning the enemy fire.

"Realizing that he could no longer remain in command of the platoon, he signaled to the platoon commander to join him. Lt. Thomas then thoroughly oriented him on enemy gun dispositions and the general situation. Only after he was certain that his junior officer was in full control of the situation did he permit himself to be evacuated."

Inducted at Fort Custer, Michigan, as a private in January, 1942, Capt. Thomas had advanced to the position of operations sergeant in the 614th Tank Destroyer Battalion before he was sent to the Tank Destroyers' Officers Candidate School at Camp Hood, Texas, where he was commissioned a second lieutenant. 3-26-45

After completing an advanced course at the Tank Destroyer School, he was promoted to first lieutenant and sailed overseas as commander of Company C. He was promoted to captain Jan. 1, 1945.

Prior to his induction, Capt. Thomas, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Thomas of Detroit, was a molder and metal pourer for the Ford Motor Company. At the time of his induction he was a student at Wayne University, Detroit.

3-24-45

RICHMOND. — Mrs. Julie B Maples of Orange, Va., was presented the air medal which has been awarded her son, First Lieut. Andrew Maples, Jr., who is missing in action, Thursday during special ceremonies at the Richmond Army Air Base.

The citation for the decoration was as follows:

"For meritorious achievement in aerial flight while participating in sustained operational activities against the enemy from June 7 to June 23, 1944."

The medal was pinned on Mrs Maples by Col. Clayton Hughes commanding officer of the air base. Andrew Maples, Sr., father of the pilot, also attended the ceremony. 3-24-45

Feels Son Alive

Although her son has not been heard from since he was listed as missing as of last June 23, Mrs. Maples said after the ceremony that she felt that he was still alive, probably a prisoner of war.

Lieutenant Maples received his wings at Tuskegee in January, 1942, and went overseas with the 332nd Fighter Group over a year ago.

Mother of 10 Children

Mother of ten children, Mrs. Maples said that her family seemed extremely airminded. One son is a flight officer and now is training as a pilot at Tuskegee; another is stationed with aviation engineer squadron in New Guinea, and third is taking civil areonautics training in Orange.

She has a daughter taking cadet nurse training at Freedmen's Hospital. Mr. Maples himself was a veteran of the first World War, having served as sergeant with the 366th Infantry.

General Discounts Rumors About 93rd ARTILLERY CITED

Assignment of New Commander Hailed

HOLLANDIA, Dutch New Guinea—"Race has nothing whatsoever to da with a man's ability to fight," General MacArthur told Walter White when he conferred recently with him in the Philippines.

"Any man who says that another man's fighting ability can be measured by color is wrong.

"I learned that," declared the general obviously provoked at the persistent rumors discrediting combat performances of the 93rd Infantry Division, "in serving as a junior officer with the famous 25th Regiment.

"One of the greatest armies I have ever commanded was a Filipino one." 3-31-45

No Cowardice Displayed

Mr. White in his report stated that recent developments in the attempt on the part of certain persons "to brand colored combat troops as failures and cowards, may backfire."

His ten-day investigation followed rumors that the 93rd Division had broken into port battalions and other labor units because its "reported" cowardice at Bougainville resulted in heavy casualties in the white division next to it.

Not in Beachhead Action

Explaining the situation Mr. White said: 3-31-45

"In the first place the 93rd has never been assigned beachhead action anywhere. The assault on Bougainville took place late in November and early in December in 1943. The 93rd was not ordered to Bougainville until the following April.

"Even Japaneses air activity had by then been stopped to such an extent that movies were being shown on the beach. There were still many Japanese troops on the island had been diriven back into the interior.

"Thus the 93rd did not fail in a beachhead action since it never participated in one nor did any white or any other color soldier or officer receive a pin scratch because of the 93rd.

Artillery Commended

Moreover, he continued, the 25th Combat Team of the 93rd, roughly one-third of the division, the only part given combat duties, performed in such creditable fashion as to elict high praise from American and 37th Division officers. Brig. Gen. W. C. Dunckel, commanding the Americal artillery at Bougainville, in a written and official commendation declared of its 593rd Field Artillery Battalion: 3-31-45

"Your occupation and construction of position arcas has been efficiently accomplished and initial results of your registrations and fire on Japanese troop movements have been very successful.

Called Well Trained

"My observers report that your adjustments have been very accurate, a fact that implies that your personnel has been well trained in the technique of the arm and can apply that training in its first combat service.

"My only regret is that you did not join us earlier. I know that in the future, all officers and men of this unit, will welcome, gladly, the opportunity to serve with the 593rd."

One section of the Combat Team, the 2nd Battalion, Mr. White continued, was assigned to take three days after arrival in Bouganville a strongly fortified Japanese position of five concrete pill boxes.

Action Worthy of Veterans

It did its job so efficiently and promptly that Brig. Gen. Leonard R. Boyd called its accomplishment "commendable even for a veteran outfit, outstanding for a unit in its first action," he added.

According to his report, the only incident revealed in the Army record which could be considered criticism concerns the disorganization which followed a directive given by a white company commander to his three colored lieutenants. 3-31-45

The record revealed that the commander ordered the three "deploy their men around the inside of the horseshoe."

Told to Dig In

When the officer assigned to the furthermost point with fifteen men found themselves tqwms-N men found they were outnumbered and surrounded he asked instructions by radio of his company commanded and was told to dig in and remain there.

"The officer," says Mr. White, "Lieut. Oscar T. Davenport of St. Louis, and eleven men were killed. Disorganization followed as the company led the etreat to the command post in the rear."

New Commander Hailed

However, a better day for the 93rd is forcast in the appaintment of May. Gen. Harry H. Johnson, new commanding general responsible for the unit's combat efficiency.

"He is doing everthing possible," stated Mr. White, "to stop the practice of assignment to the 93rd of white officers who are prejudiced against colored or who failed in other divisions.

Advocates Promotions

"He opposed promotion of such men over competent officers already in the division, especially colored officers.

"The 93rd is General Johnson's second colored command. He trained and led overseas the 2nd Cavalry Division early in 1944."

SANSORIGINE. (By Cable) — With the 92nd Division, Italy.—In one of the largest and mo[redacted]lorful ceremonies of its kind [redacted] recent months here, thirty-two [redacted]embers of the 92nd Division were decorated Friday for various heroic deeds and outstanding commendable activities against the enemy on this 5th Army front.

Citations included three battlefield promotions of enlisted men to the rank of second lieutenant; three Silver Star awards; ten Bronze Stars; two Oak Leaf Clusters to Air Medals; six Air Medals and eight commendations. 3-31-4

Maj. Gens. Willis D. Crittenberger, commander of the Army's Fourth Corps, and Edward M. Almond, 92nd commander, presented the awards.

Correspondents Banned

I did not hear whatever General Crittenberger had to say about the 92nd during his speech at a luncheon afterwards because correspondents, sometimes included among the guests in such instances, were this time not only uninvited, but actually denied entry. 3-31-45

I did manage to slip in after the luncheon got underway, but an alert official, with an apparent dim view of my protests, ushered me out immediately.

Combat promotions to second lieutenants as result their proven worth as leaders went to:

T/Sgts. Ernest L. Carlton, Detroit; Caesaro Rucker, Austin, Tex.; Andrel Christiansen, 1214 N. Frazier Street, Philadelphia. Silver Star recipients included Pfc. Trueheart Fogg, Newark, N.J.; Pfc. Richard Tatum, Jr., Cunard, W.Va.; Pvt. John N. Mitchell, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Fogg was cited for heroism during the Serchio action last December 26 when he killed all of a four-man enemy machine-gun crew, helped kill twenty of a twenty-fiveman German raiding party and single-handedly knocked out another enemy machine gun, thereby saving his platoon from almost certain annihilation.

He Killed 6 Germans

Tatum, rifleman, acting as forward observer, spotted a group of the enemy in a house on his front and directed fire on the building though under heavy machine gun fire himself. Tatum remained in his position and killed six Germans when they sought to escape from the building.

This action was credited with repulsing a strong enemy attack on his mortar squad's position in this instance. 3-31-45

Private Mitchell was the Silver Star for action on February 8 when, serving as a combat engineer attached to an infantry rifle company, he was assigned the mission of blowing up hostile barbed wire entanglements impeding his company's advance.

When additional sniper and machine-gun fire held up company advance by pinning down his company, Mitchell killed one enemy sniper, wounded and capture another, making it possible for his company to advance.

10 Get Bronze Stars

First Lieuts. Andrew Lee, Jr., Cleveland; Joseph L. Stephenson, Goldboro, N.C.; Second Lt. Francis P. Mulhair, NYC; T/Sgt. Robert P. Grant, Detroit;

S/Sgts. William H. Pris, Fort Riley, Kans.; Willard C. Lawrence, Central City, Ky.; T/5s John Adams, High Point, N.C.; Marshall Lovelace, Dekalb, Miss.; James W. Walker, Gary Ind.; Pfc. Raymond Jackson, Camp Blanding, Fla.

Other Awards Given

Other awards included:

Oak Leaf Cluster to Air Medals —Lts. Albert A. Loving, Jr., Chicago; James E. Woodson, Topeka, Kans.; 3-31-45

Air Medals—First Lts. Louis K. Hanks, Toledo, Ohio; George E. Pope, Hawkinsville, Ga.; Lloyd R. Taylor, Atlanta; George F. Bizzel, Lancaster, Ohio.; S/Sgt. Marshall R. Hurley, Washington; Sgt. Howard Hollis, Middletown, Ohio;

No Congressional Medal Of Honor

Negroes Have Received Fewer Top Decorations In This War

Pittsburgh Courier 6-2-45 Pgh., Pd.

Read Rogers' Column on Page 7

By JOHN H. YOUNG III, Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C.—An examination of official records of the War Department reveals that of the Negroes who heroically fought in this war, none has been awarded the Medal of Honor and only two have been decorated with the Distinguished Service Cross. Moreover, Negroes received far fewer top-rank decorations in the recent war in Europe than in World War I in which fewer Negroes were committed to combat over a shorter period.

The most astounding revelation is that no Negro has been awarded the Medal of Honor since it was conferred upon Sgt. Edward L. Baker, Tenth U.S. Cavalry, who was decorated at Santiago, Cuba, in the Spanish-American War in 1898.

(The Medal of Honor was established by an act of Congress in 1862. It is awarded in the name of Congress to an officer or enlisted man of the Army, who, in actual conflict with an enemy, distinguishes himself conspicuously by gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of his life and above and beyond the call of duty.)

WON BY 35 NEGROES

Prior to, and including 1898, thirty-five Negroes were awarded the Medal of Honor. The first recipient was Sgt. William H. Carney, Fifty-fourth Massachusetts Infantry, who was decorated for action near Fort Wagner, S.C., in 1863.

Prior to World War I, there were 1,723 awards of the Medal of Honor—thirty-five to Negroes. Fifteen of the thirty-five were won in the Civil War and the balance in the Spanish-American War and the Indian uprisings.

In World War I and prior to this war, there were 103 awards of the Medal—none to Negroes.

In this war to date, there have been 208 awards of the Medal, divided as follows: Army 147, Navy 33, Marines 27, Coast Guard one—none to Negroes.

ONLY TWO DSCs 6-2-45

Statistics on the conferring of the Distinguished Service Cross reveal that beside Capt. Charles L. Thomas, Pvt. George Watson has been the only other Negro so decorated in World War II in which there have been 3,029 such awards.

Moreover, a comparison of statistics of the two world wars shows that fifty-seven Negroes were awarded the DSC in World War I as compared to two in the three and one-half years of conflict in the present war.

(The DSC was instituted by Congress in 1918, and is awarded to persons who, while serving in any capacity with the Army of the U.S., distinguishes themselves by extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against an armed enemy.)

In the present war, there have been 416 awards of the Distinguished Service Medal—third ranking decoration. Out of these 416 awards, Brig. Gen. B. O. Davis has been the only Negro so honored.

(Also established in 1918, this award is made to persons who, while serving in any capacity with the Army of the U.S., distinguishes themselves by exceptionally meritorious service to the Government in a duty of great responsibility. This award may be made to civilians.)

LOWER MEDALS PREVAIL

The records reveal, further, that some Negroes have received the fourth, fifth and sixth ranking decorations. These decorations are, respectively: the Legion of Merit, Silver Star and Distinguished Flying Cross. 6-2-45

Most awards to Negroes have been of the seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth and eleventh ranking decorations. These decorations are, respectively: Soldier's Medal, Bronze Star Medal, Air Medal, Purple Heart and Good Conduct Medal. (Ranks not divided as to valor and achievement.)

Negroes who have won the Congressional Medal of Honor are:

1863—Sgt. William H. Carney.

1870—Sgt. Emanuel Stance.

1880—Sgt. George Jordan.

1877—Corp. Clinton Greaves.

1887—Corp. Clinton Greaves.

1890—Sgt. William McBryar and Corp. William O. Wilson.

1898—Pvts. Dennis Bell, William H. Thompkins, Fitz Lee and George H. Wanton; Sgt. Edward L. Baker on July 1.

HONOR MEDAL TWICE 6-2-45

Sgt. George Jordan was twice decorated with the Medal of Honor. On May 14, 1880, he was decorated for heroism at Fort Tulerso, New Mexico. The other decoration came on August 12, 1881, when he was decorated for great bravery at Carizo Canyon, New Mexico. 6-2-45

(Note: It is known that there were Negro officers who served in the Army in the period 1863-1898, but no officers were designated by race at that time. Therefore, there is a possibility that this list is incomplete.)

ROGERS SAYS:

No Negro Has Won Medal of Honor Since 1898 . . . WHY?

Pittsburgh Courier 6-2-45 Pgh. Pd.

By J. A. ROGERS

(The views expressed in this column are those of the writer and do not necessarily express the editorial opinion of The Pittsburgh Courier.—The Editors.)

PRESIDENT TRUMAN, at joint session of Congress, presented to an infantryman the 100th Congressional Medal of Honor to be won in this war by a member of that branch of the service. He said that 223 such medals have been awarded so far in this war. Of these 223 highest decorations, not one was given to a Negro. The nearest to it that I can find is that given to Lieut. Ernest Childers, who, from the published picture I have of him, looks like many a colored person I have seen. Lieutenant Childers is an Oklahoma Indian and as I have shown elsewhere, the Oklahoma Indians are more Negro than anything else. But he is listed as an Indian and I will accept it for that.

Mr. Rogers

Since the Medal of Honor was first issued, that is, in the Civil War, Negroes had been winning it in all the wars until a certain period, of which I will speak a little later on. 6-2-45

JOHN W. CROMWELL in his "The Negro in American History," pp. 249-253, lists forty-two winners of this foremost decoration as follows: Civil War, twenty-one, of which sixteen were in the Army and five in the Navy; Indian Wars, 1879-1890, twelve; Spanish-American War, six, of which two were in the Navy; and other deeds of valor, three. I have checked Cromwell's lists with the official records and have found forty-one, of which there can be no doubt, whatever

Since 1898, Negroes have not received this medal. They did not in World War I, even though some performed deeds of valor that rang through the Nation. Why is this so? Did the extraordinary deeds of valor by Negroes stop in 1898, those decisions, which, as Mr. Truman says, come from the heart and are "a flash of the nobility which we like to think is a part of every American"? Why have none received it in this war? 6-2-45

IT IS FAR beyond me to say whether any really deserved it or not. Probably none did. Still there are certain factors most disquieting to me.

When President Taft took office in 1909, he flatly announced that he would not appoint Negroes to office where it offended the White South. He did that, it was popularly said, to offset the policy of Theodore Roosevelt, whose appointments in the South created many protests. I recall vividly the great indignation of the Negroes when Taft said that.

TAFT'S POLICY has marked that of every President since. (It is still too early to speak of Mr. Truman in this respect). Woodrow Wilson, Taft's successor, was the great jim crower. And his Republican successors, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover, were but little better. All flirted with the white South for votes.

During Wilson's regime there was a clash on the Mexican border with Pancho Villa. At Carrizal, a Negro, Sgt. Peter Bigstaff, covered himself with glory by charging with his men into the teeth of Mexican machine guns. Bigstaff was acclaimed throughout the Nation, yet he did not get the Medal of Honor. Nor, as I said, did any Negroes get it in World War I, fought under the leadership of Woodrow Wilson. 6-2-45

LET ME REPEAT: I am not claiming that any Negro has deserved this medal since the Spanish-American War, yet I cannot help but wonder why its award to them should have stopped suddenly then. What I do know, however, is that since the Taft Administration there has been a marked tendency to play down the Negro in the Federal Government. Giving the Congressional Medal of Honor to a Negro would be, without a doubt, the rankest kind of "social equality." We recall the great fight waged by the Negro press to get the Navy Cross for Dorie Miller, who, otherwise would have been ignored.

The mere suspicion of why Negroes no longer get the Congressional Medal is, to say the least, distressing. I regret to say it, but I have never been able to shake off the strong conviction that in proportion as the Negro progresses in education and the arts of civilization, the more determined becomes the effort in certain powerful quarters to deny him the rights of American citizenship. The undoubted reason for this is that in proportion as Negroes advance, the more they imperil what certain whites believe is their God-given right to exploit them.

Colonel Davis Gets Army's Third Highest Decoration

RIMINI, Italy — For gallantry in action as pilot and leader of a group of P51 aircraft on a mission strafing enemy rail targets in Austria April 15, Col. B. O. Davis, commander of the 332nd Fighter Group, was awarded the Silver Star Medal, the U.S. Army's third highest decoration of honor.

Colonel Davis, holder of the Legion of Merit, Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal, with three oak leaf clusters, became the first colored pilot in the history of the U.S. Air Forces to receive the award.

Colonel's Citation Quoted

The citation reads as follows:

"Keenly realizing the necessity of successfully accomplishing this important mission, Colonel Davis was assigned to lead the mission. He exhibited expert navigational skill in leading his group through low clouds and haze to reach the assigned target area.

"Fully aware that the enemy could not be surprised because the area had previously been strafed during the day, Colonel Davis split his group into three squadrons in order to thoroughly cover the entire area.

"Without thought of his personal safety, he led one squadron of twelve planes down to strafe despite the intense ground fire that blanketed the area and difficult terrain features that made strafing hazardous. Leading his squadron gallantly on repeated passes Colonel Davis courageously pressed his attack until he had destroyed or damaged six locomotives.

"The thorough planning, outstanding leadership and professional skill displayed by Colonel Davis enabled the group to destroy or damage 35 locomotives, 8 oil cars, 44 other units of rolling stock, 4 barges, 4 motor transports on flat cars and one plane in the air to thoroughly disrupt the enemy's transportation facilities.

"Despite the hazard presented, and when he might have withdrawn, Colonel Davis remained in the target area more than an hour and only reformed his squadron when no further targets were available.

"By his conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty, as evidenced throughout sixty successful missions against the enemy by Colonel Davis, he reflected great credit upon himself and the armed forces of the United States of America."

3 Pilots Awarded DFC

First Lieuts. James Lanham 2013 Ridge Ave., Philadelphia Harry T. Stewart, 105-11 34th St., Corona, L.I.; Bertram W. Wilson 58 Hancock St., Brooklyn, N.Y.

The following officers and enlisted men received the bronze star:

Maj. Henry Letcher, 239 Division Ave., Washington, D.C.; First Lt. James M. Fatridge, 1730 Eighth Ave., Huntington, W.Va.; First Sgt. Samuel W. Henderson, 251 111th St., New York City.

Sen. Mead Raps Anti-Negro Talk

Daily Worker N.Y.

Daily Worker Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, July 6.—Senator James M. Mead (D-NY) responded today to the appeals that a group of Negro and white FEPC delegates made to him Monday to answer Sen. James O. Eastland's (D-Miss) slanders against colored troops.

Some recent speeches in the Senate have reached a "new low," declared Mead, without naming Eastland directly. Then Mead began reading Navy and Army citations given Negro service men for "extraordinary heroism."

Senators from the polltax states kept silent as Mead read the Navy's tribute to Dorie Miller of Texas, the Negro mess attendant at Pearl Harbor, who carried his wounded captain below, then returned to the bridge to man a machine gun. Miller since perished in action.

Mead continued reading other citations given Negro heroes, then said:

"The Senate should take cognizance of the heroism of the men of this particular group because of what has been said in the chamber in the recent past."

Senator Warren G. Magnuson (D-Wash) followed Mead with a stronger tribute to the Negro service men.

7-7-45

Speaking as a Navy veteran he declared that "there have been less difficulties in the Navy with Negro enlisted personnel in so far as patriotism, discipline and court martials are concerned than with any other single group.

Why Tan Yanks Have Not Received Top Army Award

Afro-American Baltimore, Md.

By VINCENT TUBBS

AFRO War Correspondent

BALTIMORE—If anyone really wants the answer to why no colored soldier or officer has received the Congressional Medal of Honor during this war, the answer is simply that all awards for heroism are stepped down a notch wherever colored are concerned.

Here is a case in point:

Lt. Vernon Baker, 92nd Inf. Div. (c)

vs.

Pfc. James Hendrix, 4th Armored Div. (w)

Lt. Baker accounted for at least fifteen enemy troops in a series of seven fire actions during which he carried out command functions of deploying his own weapons and supervising evacuation of wounded.

3 Machine Gun Nests

He wiped out three enemy machine gun nests, a well-constructed dugout, destroyed enemy equipment, cleared an observation post and silenced a sniper.

Crawling forward to attack the initial enemy gun position and later clearing the dugout were missions he might have easily delegated to others.

The entire operation, obviously over a lengthy period of time, was constantly under heavy enemy artillery and mortar fire.

Lieutenant Baker received the Distinguished Service Cross.

Pfc. Hendrix accounted for about six enemy troops in brazenly attacking two inactive 88-mm. gun posititons, capturing two machine-gun nests, rescuing three buddies from a burning halftrack and rendering aid to two others who lay wounded in a ditch.

8-11-45

Pfc. Hendrix was promoted to staff sergeant and awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Another to Compare

Another case of stepping down awards a notch:

Pvt. Leon Tobin, 614th Tank Destroyers (towed) (c)

vs.

Sgt. August Brocato—Infantry Regiment (w)

The citation awarding Pvt. Tobin the Silver Star Medal reads:

"During daylight hours of 14 December, 1944 in the vicinity of Climbach, France, Pvt. Tobin, a member of a task force in the attack, went into position in open terrain under severe artillery and small arms fire to man a three-inch gun.

"Although his position was in direct line of enemy fire and full observation he brilliantly and skillfully directed fire into enemy strongpoints.

8-11-45

1 Man on Field Gun

"The intensity of the fire became so severe that his comrades were wounded and killed on all sides of him. In the face of certain self-destruction he gallantly stood at his post manning the gun with the assistance of one comrade.

"He continued to pour fire into the enemy with such relentless furor and utter disregard of his life that they became confused. When his comrade was killed he remained at his post until cut down by direct fire . . ."

Sgt. Brocato's citation awarding him the Distinguished Service Cross reads:

"While advancing on well-prepared and stubbornly defended enemy positions near St. Marie Aux Mines, France on 29 November, 1944, Sgt. Brocato and his squad were pinned down by devastating enemy machine gun fire.

"Carefully observing the position of machine gun firing from his right, Sgt. Brocato courageously moved forward alone in an attempt to eliminate the hostile weapon.

"Undaunted by rapid bursts of fire directed at him, he crawled to within 100 yards of the gun and, leaping to his feet, charged the emplacement, firing his rifle from his hip. He killed the gunner, wounded two of the crew and forced the remainder to withdraw in confusion."

SGT. JOE LOUIS AWARDED LEGION OF MERIT MEDAL

The Louisiana Weekly New Orleans Louisiana 9-29-45

The award of the Legion of Merit to Technical Sergeant Joe Louis Barrow, Detroit, Michigan, was announced today by the War Department. Major General Clarence H. Kells, commanding general of the New York Port of Embarkation, pinned the medal on the heavyweight boxing champion in ceremonies held at Fort Hamilton, New York.

Awarded for "exceptional meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services from August 30, 1943 to October 10, 1944," the medal was accompanied by the following citation:

"As a member of a Special Services Division mission which toured through Army camps in the United States and the European, North African, Mediterranean and Italian theaters of operation, Technical (then Staff) Sergeant Barrow has entertained 2,000,000 soldiers by frequent boxing exhibitions which entailed considerable risk of his boxing future as the champion heavyweight of the world, but he willingly volunteered such action rather than disappoint the soldiers who desired to see him in the ring.

"Whenever possible he visited the camp and theater hospital and his encouragement to sick and injured soldiers had a definite recovery value and morale lift. His services merited and received acclaim from ranking commanders in the various theaters."

Chinchilla And Watermelons Gravely Considered By Senate

The Montgomery Advertiser
Montgomery, Ala.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16.—(AP)—The Senate looks forward hopefully this week to getting down to some very special legislation involving such things as chinchilla farming and Rastus Davis' missing watermelons. 12-17-45

Also, if the press of other business permits, the lawmakers may clarify the status of employes of the cobbler shop at the Naval Academy, grant relief for financially embarassed convicts, and vote on taking away the special privilege of Army officers to buy surplus government shotguns.

All are items on the calendar of favorably reported bills, which may be acted upon before the Christmas recess.

Although it may come as a surprise to fur-bearing varmints, the agriculture committee has recommended that the raising of chinchilla, karakul, fox, rabbit, mink, marten, fisher and muskrat be classed as an agricultural occupation involving domestic animals.

Rastus Davis' $100 claim against the government for 300 watermelons he missed from his patch near Camp Fannin, Texas, already has been okayed by the House. He based his claim on circumstantial evidence—a well beaten path, littered with watermelon rinds, leading from his melon plantation to the military reservation. 12-17-45

If other bills become law, the civilian cobblers at the Naval Academy will become civil service employes, indigent convicts won't be reqiured to serve out more than 30 days solely for nonpayment of fines, and Army officers will have to take their chances with enlisted men and civilians in buying surplus government shotguns.

It requests OPA to quit rationing butter and meat.

WHY JAMAICANS RIOTED AT CAMP MURPHY

Public Opinion

Kingston, Jamaica

This is an editorial article reproduced from the Wisconsin CIO News of Sept. 7 last. It throws further light on the recent riot at Camp Murphy, Florida among West Indian farm workers:

Last week the newspapers reported a riot of West Indian contract labourers stationed at Camp Murphy in Hobe Sound, Florida. Four Camps were burned to the ground. Scores of Barbadians and Jamaicans were sent to hospitals with busted heads. A large number landed in jail.

Why did all this happen? What a tragic aftermath to their seemingly fruitful experience in the United States.

The press reported that the West Indians rebelled because they did not want to be sent home! There were other accounts even more far fetched than that. 9-26-45

JAMAICAN REPORTS

Jamaica

A report of the incident was just received by the Wisconsin CIO News from Henry Gunter, former Jamaican contract worker at Allis-Chalmers and active member of Local 248, UAW-CIO.

The facts show that these workers, having completed their service to the war effort in easing manpower shortages on back breaking, low-paid jobs which were hard to fill, are now no longer useful. Their contracts, which guaranteed fair treatment and no racial discrimination on the job, have now expired, and so the rules no longer hold. And just in case some of them may have gotten erroneous ideas about American "democracy" they were sent Florida to finish off their American experience.

FOOD TROUBLES

Here, according to Gunter, is what they found: "The conditions here are terrible. There are about nine thousand men stationed here. Some have been here for more than three weeks in crowded unbearable quarters with no expectation of being sent home early.

"Think of this: it takes from two to three hours to get in the mess hall, owing to the length of the line. Most of us are half dead from fatigue and hungry before we get a glimpse of food.

"We are kept like cattle and guarded by white sheriffs who have been mistreating our boys. I was told that some of the workers are in jail. This made the boys very angry thus four camps were burned to the ground. There was a rebellion among the men and a number of the boys are in the hospital. Some were badly beaten up by the sheriffs. I am indeed troubled as to whether we will reach Jamaica safely or not, for the least sign of any mistreatment will result in another outbreak." 9-26-45

Is this what some of our simon pure patriots call Americanism?

Is this American appreciation for those who came thousands of miles to a foreign country to do the dirty work no one else would do?

This calls for immediate protest from union members against the intolerable treatment of our West Indian fellow-workers. Wire the war Manpower Commission and State Department about this at once. Demand an investigation of this situation. Act now!

Camps

Conditions At Camp Murphy Said Considerably Improved

Public Opinion, Kingston, Jamaica

Reproduced from the Miami Herald Jamaica

CAMP MURPHY, FLORIDA, Sept. 12: Camp Murphy has been blazing with activity for the past fortnight, caused the most part by the anxiety of West Indian workers to be shipped home, and by a shooting incident which occurred in the Camp.

On Sunday evening, Sept. 9, a Jamaican worker was seen by members of a patrol improperly dressed outside his barracks. He ran when the patrol stopped near him. He was fired at, and the bullet missed him and went into a nearby barracks and lodged itself in the knee of another worker who was in bed at the time. 9-27-45

Mr. Roy Abendana, Assistant Liaison Offifer lost no time on Monday morning in communicating details of the situation to Washington for further action. Mr. Abendana has been doing a very great job on behalf of West Indians in Florida. Through his instrumentality many amenities which were hitherto lacking have been initiated.

The management of the Camp has been co-operative in bringing about better conditions, and the workers are taking full advantage of anything that may be provided for their welfare. The outrageous conditions existing in and around the Camp are definitely against the wishes of the management, but only a stern and determined worker like Mr. Abendana could have brought about the recent improvements. He is determined that the shooting and the beating of West Indians must be stopped, and he has accomplished a great deal in that direction. 9-27-45

RECREATION

Barbadians have been showing their wares against Jamaicans at cricket, and there have been a number of soccer matches between these colonials.

There are a good many recreation halls with juke boxes, table tennis, books, and magazines, and a number of other outdoor games such as croquet and baseball.

With all this however there is much to be desired here. The management needs a better understanding of the average West Indian, and vice versa. 9-27-45

There have been a number of arrests at West Palm Beach during this fortnight. Jamaicans who dared to visit that town without their identification certificates on Monday were thrown into jail, and detained for hours. Again Mr. Abendana had a job on his hands, and he acted just as soon as he was informed.

Summing up the situation, conditions on a whole, have been considerably improved over the past month: There are still about five hundred men in camp to be shipped out by the end of the month. What is necessary at the moment is adequate transportation to bring the men home. Most of the discontentment and disorder is engendered by congestion.

Charge Negro GI Died After Brutal Beating at U.S. Camp

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.
12-19-45

LONDON, Dec. 17 (UP).—Charges that an American Negro private died after brutal beatings at the Lichfield Military Detention camp were introduced today during the third week of investigations into conditions at the camp.

Capt. Earl J. Carroll, San Francisco, said he would attempt to prove that Pvt. Eril L. Bolton, Chicago, died enroute to France of an inter-cerebral hemorrhage "possibly caused by his head being rammed against a cement wall" at the prison.

Carroll said Gen Dwight D. Eisenhower had ordered an investigation of Bolton's death. The preliminary diagnosis showed the cause to be a malignant brain tumor but doctors later reported there was no evidence of malignancy and external blows could have caused death. 12-18-45

Several prisoners told the court martial today of many alleged brutalities at Litchfield.

GI 'Crime Wave' Is Propaganda

People's Voice N.Y. 3-24-45

By LLEWELLYN RANSOM

POISON

As the Army prepares to buildan eight-ft. enclosure around Fox Hills Camp on Staten Island and establish a possible jimcro bus line, as a result of a cry of "rape" immersed in a maze of doubts and conflicting stories, "Don't Fence Me In" is the solemn dirge of thousands of fine young GI's who see themselves as the dregs of the Army, who have labored uncomplainingly at the lowliest and most menial tasks in the service of the nation, never sharing the public notice except for that provided by race-haters and sensation-mongers of the daily press. 3-24-45

3-24-45

The Right Way. Clarence De Hart, local prexy of the NAACP and Director of the Booker T. Washington Center on Staten Island, gives theatre ticket to a smiling GI, who worked in Tennessee Gov. Cooper's office for two years.

While Staten Island borough president Palma characterized the so-called "crime wave" on the Island as "a lot of propaganda—most of it untrue," and army officials insisted that the transfer of troops last week was part of regular routine and carried no stigma, New York daily papers continued to tie up their distorted stories of robberies, muggings and rape with the removal of 600 soldiers from Fox Hills. This only threatens to stir up the growing hysteria in the area.

THUMB BITTEN 3-24-45

Using the word Negro freely, the daily press reported last week pathetic stories of the raping of a 25-year-old GI w[illegible] by a Negro soldier in her fr[illegible] yard. Her claim that she ha[illegible]itten the thumb of her rapist [illegible] over 3,000 hard-working soldiers to be pulled from their beds at 2 am for police inspection.

Although the odds of finding a sore thumb of some nature, among the nearly 8,000 displayed, were good, police inspectors carried on their search and never caught up with the bitten thumb. Doubt increased when it was learned that the woman was not the wife of a GI eight months dead, as was claimed at first, but that of a civilian five years dead. Further contradictions arose with testimony that the attacker wore a white shirt and was light-complexioned and had straight hair.

Although Staten Island is a Port of Embarkation where countless numbers of troops leave for foreign ports, every notorious incident is laid to the Negro labor troops. This fact is attributed by some to the fact that Negro troops were never wanted in this area by prejudiced elements in the population.

PRESS HYSTERIA

No public attention has been given to reports of a Negro woman raped by white soldiers on the Island, nor to the many incidents of Negro soldiers attacked by white sailors with weapons. Negro servicemen, on the other hand, are searched before leaving camp, according to their own testimony.

This sudden and strange hysteria prevailing in the daily press, yet not shared generally by Staten Islanders except for small group petitioning Washington and Governor Dewey for the removal of the camp, is based upon but two serious incidents. The first occurred March 2 when a citizen was stabbed and a policeman was disarmed and pummeled; and the second is last week's rape charge.

LOCAL PAPER FAIR

The Staten Island Advance has been under criticism because it has refused to play up every rumor against Negro soldiers. It has praised them editorially and asked the public not to judge a group by the acts of a few. It made no racial distinctions in its stories of the recent rape charges.

NAACP local president and Director of the Booker T. Washington USO Center in Staten Island, Clarence De Hart, told PV that he gets a cross-section of the men from Fox Hills and that 99 per cent of them are orderly and well-behaved. He said practically all minor disorders are caused by a few men who have been drinking.

"No Racial Uprising At Camp Livingston," Army Officials Say

Houston Texas Informer

NEW ORLEANS.—There is no truth in the story of a threatened uprising at Camp Livingston, nor in the stories that 300 Negro soldiers have gone AWOL since March 1, and that one sick Negro soldier was shot on orders of an officer while another was unjustly sentenced to life imprisonment, public relations of Camp Livington told Informer Sentinel representatives who investigated the rumors during the past week. 4-7-45

"We have many Negro soldiers at this post undergoing infantry training as are thousands of our white troops. The great majority are a credit to the army and a credit to their race. Stories which tend to discredit them, because of the misbehavior of a few, only tend to lower morale," the report stated.

"It is our sincere desire to present the story of the Negro soldier as he really is—a good American doing a commendable job, as reports from overseas have clearly shown.

"We sincerely appreciate your interest in tracking down rumors before publishing heresay evidence, and trust we can count on your assistance in picturing the fine job the Negro soldier is doing."

The statement was in reply to an inquiry made by John E. Rousseau, Jr. of the Informer-Sentinel staff, after stories of a reported uprising among Negro soldiers at Camp Livington reached New Orleans.

Public Relations Officer T. V. Wick, First Lieutenant, said in a letter to the Informer-Sentinel that probably the rumors had been based on the following facts: 4-7-45

1. On March 1, 1945, a Negro private, whose name was withheld, used abusive language to his first sergeant, also a Negro, and otherwise behaved in a manner unbecoming a soldier. The sergeant preferred charges against him, and a Negro guard was called to take him to the post stockade. The private refused to go and during the ensuing argument was shot in the foot by the guard. He was immediately taken to the station hospital for treatment. Investigation on this case has not been completed. All parties involved, however, will have a just hearing before a courts martial.

2. Regarding the Negro who received a life sentence: Private Arthur P. Beard, 19, of Baltimore, Maryland, Negro soldier training with IARTC, Camp Livingston, was sentenced to life imprisonment by a general court martial, March 2, 1945, for violations of the 64th Article of War. Three specifications of the charge were drawing a bayonet on an officer, striking an officer, and failure to obey a direct order from an officer.

The officer exercising general court martial jurisdiction has not yet reviewed the case. The sentence will not be final until reviewed by the judge advocate general, Washington, D. C.

3. The statement about Negro AWOL's in typical of those started to discredit the Negro race. The Provost Marshal's records show that only a dozen Negroes have gone AWOL since March 1, and many of these have since been returned to military custody."

The disarming of the men despite Army regulations, it is said, is only aggravating the tension created by the setting up of a separate colored officers' club and discriminatory acts by other group and post officers. 4-7-45

[illegible]MY's at Freeman Field Disarmed

FREEMAN FIELD, Ind.—Military police at this post, the new training center for the 477th Bombardment Group, have been relieved of their arms and permitted to carry only night sticks, reliable reports here indicate.

Further unrest, observers say, has followed the return of two supposed leaders of the rebellion, Lt. William Ellis, pilot, and Lt.

GI 'Crime Wave' on Staten Island Laid to Agitators

AFRO-AMERICAN 3-24-45

9-24-45

By SAMUEL HOSKINS

NEW YORK.—Behind the accusation directed at the soldiers of the Fox Hills Cantonment, Staten Island, are a few unfortunate incidents, a batch of unsubstantiated complaints and a hint of deliberate agitation.

According to all available evidence, however, all the tumult and shouting that the service men are responsible for a "crime wave" and are a menace to the civilian population definitely is unjustified.

What AFRO Probe Reveals

Investigating the situation, I found that: 3-24-45

1. There have been complaints about the stationing of colored soldiers at the Fox Hills Terminal since it was established last April.

2. Both Army and police authorities, until the recent outburst on part of borough officials and New York City newspapers, have handled a delicate situation with commendable tact and skill.

3. The bulk of present civilian agitation comes from a small section of the population, mostly in the vicinity of Stapleton, Clifton, Concord and Grasmere.

Political Conspiracy Hinted

4. The intensity of the agitation against the soldiers increased as it became more certain that the New York Legislature would pass a State FEPC law and hit a climax when Governor Dewey signed the measure on March 11.

5. The majority of the soldiers at the terminal are bitter and resentful of the inference that a service man is guilty of the alleged attack last Tuesday night on Mrs. Christina Cortopossi, 25, white, of 20 Bowen Street, Stapleton.

(The daily papers first emphasized the angle that she is the widow of a soldier killed in France, but later retracted it.)

Saw Civilian Flee Scene

The day following the woman's report to police that she had been attacked by a colored soldier as she was about to enter the back door of her home, four soldiers signed an affidavit to the effect that at the time of the alleged attack they saw a man of light complexion in civilian clothes running toward the cantonment.

They say he ran toward the barbed wire fence around the camp, climbed through and disappeared. 3-24-45

While Army officials refused to comment on the statement, there seems to be doubt among them that one of their men is the guilty party.

Recent developments, however, have resulted in an increase of racial tension, both on the part of civilians and service men, and with the slightest provocation there can be more unpleasantness.

Trouble Began Last April

The real beginning of the complaints was last April when the camp was established on the site that formerly was the Fox Hills golf links over the protests of residents of the immediate area.

There were few complaints at first, but with the urgency of getting war materials loaded on ships bound for war zones little attention was given them. They finally decreased to a minimum.

Detective's Story Cited

Here is the story of Detective Lieut. James McIvor of the St. George detective bureau:

Last summer and fall there were some reports of various petty violations, of some muggings and robberies.

December, 1944, and January and February of 1945 were comparatively quiet months. Then in February and March—as if coinciding with Allied victories—complaints against the soldiers increased. There was talk of circulating a petition for removal of the camp.

Continuing, the detective pointed to two arrests.

One was in February of two GI's charged with beating a civilian whom they met on the streets with his wife and child.

The men were turned over to the Army for court-martial, but as yet they have not been tried because of a lack of evidence.

Second Arrest in March

The second arrest was in March 7, that of Pvts. Curtis Williams, 25, of Dallas, Texas, and Hayward Arrington, 25, of Norfolk, Va., charged with assault on Sherman Ivory, 25, white, and shooting at Patrolman Stephen Crowe, 32, both of Stapleton, according to the detective.

Between these two incidents complaints and rumors—some petty, some baseless and some wild—have cropped up thick and fast.

For instance, there was the report that colored soldiers killed a bemedaled veteran who had just returned from Europe. When the "story" did not appear in the papers, it was rumored that the Army had ordered the incident "hushed." 9-24-45

Other Hoaxes Cited

Another was that a group of soldiers walked out of a liquor store without paying for six bottles. It turned out that the merchant sold the goods on credit and was paid the following day.

There was also the rumor that a GI attempted to pull a woman from her toilet stool through the bathroom window.

One night police received a call from an excited housewife who demanded that something be done about the "situation." It seems that while walking near the camp she suddenly discovered two service men behind her.

Spoke to Her, She Ran

The woman quickened her pace, and finally broke into a run when one of the men said "good evening."

One person questioned made the observation that Staten Island is part of the district represented by State Senator Robert E. Bainbridge, one of the six senators to vote against the FEPC bill.

They recalled that he was on the same side of the fence as Assemblyman William R. Stuart (R), Steuben, who in February predicted that enactment of the bill would provoke race riots and a renaissance of the KKK.

Link Palma, Farrell to Move

I learned, also, that Borough (Richmond) President Joseph A. Palma and District Attorney Farrell M. Kane were leaders in the movement. 3-24-45

Palma is said to have made nightly visits to the area several days prior to the attack report, and later, with several high officials, "to observe the precautions being taken against possible new outbreaks."

Mr. Kane issued a public statement that there had been thirty-five complaints of beatings and forty of molesting women.

Also, he made an hour's speech before the grand jury outlining the attacks and robberies, and told how " a N---- (sic) soldier beat and raped the 25-year-old widow of a soldier who died in France."

Colored Guards In West Point Welcome To 'Ike'

Philadelphia Tribune

WEST POINT, N. Y.—Lined up at the Washington Gate to greet the Eisenhower party as it arrived at the West Point Military Academy on Wednesday was an honor guard composed of the academy's Negro cavalry detachment and the academy band.

Two tank destroyers, with crews at attention, completed the picture as the general's car pulled up at the leaf-bowered gate amid the booming of the cannon in the background. 6-30-45

When the 700 cadets lined up in full field dress with helmets and battle packs, General Eisenhower strode out with Vice Admiral Alan G. Kirk and Capt. Harry Butcher both of his staff, with General Wilby and Col. Legare Tarrant, acting commandant of cadets, for inspection.

At their heels was a Negro color guard, carrying a five-star flag white in a red field, for General Eisenhower, a three-star flag set in blue for Admiral Kirk and a two-star red flag for General Wilby.

Army Moves Negro GIs In N. Y. Rape Hysteria

Chicago Defender - Chicago Ill.

3-24-45

By EARL CONRAD
(Defender New York Bureau)

NEW YORK.—A recurrence of a wide-spread smear campaign against Negroes in the daily press here, resulted this week in the transfer of 1,000 Negro soldiers from Staten Island to stations elsewhere in the nation.

Yelling "crime wave" on Staten Island, the local dailies are playing up numerous alleged assaults, robberies and other incidents on the island where several thousand Negro troops have been engaged in longshore work.

The climax came with the charge of rape lodged by a white woman who asserted that the crime had been committed by a Negro soldier last Tuesday.

Soldiers Testify

However, four soldiers who were garrison prisoners at the time the 25-year-old woman was attacked as she entered her home, signed affidavits saying that they saw a man of light complexion and straight hair running toward cantonment.

He wore a white shirt, the soldiers said, and ran into the barbed-wire strung around the camp, then climbed through the camp and disappeared.

More than two companies of Negro soldiers, numbering about 450 troops, began moving Saturday and three other companies are being shifted this week, New York Port of Embarkation authorities revealed. 3-24-45

Times, Post on Bandwagon

In a story headed "Police and Army Fight Crime Wave—Transfer of 1,000 Negro Soldiers Begins," the staid New York Times implies that the soldiers are entirely responsible for unrest on the island.

Even the liberal N. Y. Post which should know better leaped on board the "crime wave" bandwagon with a top of the page story last Wednesday shouting, "Troops Inquiry Asked in Staten Island Violence."

On the following day the Post, like all the other newspapers, had to backwater with the announcement that the rape might have been the work of a white civilian.

Although the Army spokesmen who announced the removal of Negro troops from the area emphasized that the men being shifted were under no cloud of suspicion, they also made known additional steps being taken to "meet the problem."

To Fence Them In

An eight-foot fence will be built around the cantonment, officials stated. An application for authority to erect an extra gatehouse at the entrance will be sent to Washington; permissions will be sought to bui'd a recreation center or service club within the station, which thus far has none.

In addition, an Army bus service operating every half-hour between the camp and the Staten Island ferry has been ordered. Previously, men of the station wishing to visit Manhattan had access only to the Richmond route of the commercial bus line with the result that recreation has been strictly limited. 3-24-45

The Times story explained that men, unable to get bus service, strolled through the streets of Stapleton, Grassmere and Concord and authorities think this situation contributed to the crime wave."

Ga. Draft Steps Up For Deferred

Atlanta World

7-10-45 G2

ALBANY, Ga. — (SNS) — One hundred and fifty-six registrants, whites and Negroes between the ages of 18 and 26 years and having farm deferments, will be sent to induction stations shortly for pre-induction examinations, according to information revealed here.

According to information released, 130 Negroes and 26 white men in the county hold such deferments. The Negroes will go to Fort Benning and the white men to Fort McPherson.

GEORGIA AWAITS NEW ORDERS 1-10-45

New draft board regulations calling for the induction of men under drastically lowered physical standards, and of any occupational deferred registrants who change jobs without draft board consent, are now in the mails for all Georgia local draft boards.

Col. J. N. Keelin, Jr., in charge of Selective Service for Georgia, said he expected the orders to reach all local boards by Wednesday of this week at the latest. Many of the draft boards were to have gotten the new regulations Tuesday, he added.

BIG ARMED PATROL ON STATEN ISLAND

Police and Army Fight Crime Wave—Transfer of 1,000 Negro Soldiers Begins

3-16-45

The heaviest armed patrol yet assigned to the area was on guard last night throughout Stapleton and other Staten Island towns plagued in recent weeks with robberies, muggings and molesting fo civilians.

Determined to stamp out the wave of crime, authorities disclosed yesterday that more city poliec and additional trained military police would be on duty in the section, and that 1,000 of the Negro soldiers stationed at the Fox Hills Cantonment, believed to be the source of much of the trouble, had been ordered transferred to stations elsewhere in the nation. More than two companies of men, numbering about 450 soldiers, were already on the move yesterday, and three other companies are to be shifted in the near future.

Men Not Under Suspicion

3-16-45

The transfer will reduce the number of soldiers at the cantonment, which serves as a training center for stevedore work and as an embarkation point for men going overseas, to about 2,400. Army spokesmen emphasized that the men being shifted were under no cloud of suspicion, and that some of the transfers had been ordered before the series of attacks and robberies drew attention to the station. Most of the five companies being sent out are new, having arrived only recently, they said.

Army officials made known additional steps to meet the problem. An eight-foot fence is to be built around the entire cantonment; an application for authority to erect an extra gatehouse at the entrance will be sent to Washington; permission will be sought to build a recreation center or service club within the station, which thus far has none, and an Army bus service operating every half-hour between the camp and the Staten Island ferry has been ordered.

Recreation Has Been Limited

3-16-45

Previously men of the station wishing to visit Harlem had access onl yto the Richmond route of the commercial bus line, with the result that recreation has been strictly limited. Many men, unable to get bus service, strolled aimlessly through the streets of Stapleton, Grassmere and Concord, and authorities think this situation contributed to the crime wave.

Four Negro soldiers who were garrison prisoners last Tuesday night at the time a 25-year-old woman was attacked and raped as she entered her home, gave evidence yesterday that the assailant may not have been a Negro soldier, as the woman reported. The four signed an affidavit saying that at the time of the crime they saw a man of light complexion and straight hair running toward the cantonment. He had on a white shirt. The men said he ran into the barbed-wire strung around the camp, then climbed through it and ran through the camp and disappeared. 3-16-45

Army officers did not comment on the statements. City police, however, said they again talked to the victim yesterday and she reasserted her conviction that the man was a Negro soldier.

Staten Island President Hits 'Crime Wave' Bunk

Daily Worker N.Y.

3-17-45

By JOHN MELDON

Staten Island Borough President Joseph A. Palma told the Daily Worker yesterday that reports in New York City newspapers about a "crime wave" on the island "is a lot of propaganda—most of it untrue."

The borough chief would not discuss the matter further than that stating that the situation was entirely in the hands of local law enforcement agencies and army authorities. 3-17-45

Staten Islanders, ranging from municipal leaders to the man in the street, are angry at irresponsible news stories appearing in some New York papers regarding a non-existent "crime wave" attributed to Negro troops stationed on the island.

A series of minor incidents, including one alleged rape, of which there is no evidence or proof, has been blown up to scare-head proportions by certain New York papers, with the result that many civilians on the island, heretofore friendly with the Negro soldiers, are becoming alarmed. 3-17-45

Under the barrage of distorted news stories, and needled by certain elements on Staten Island who are anti-Negro, and local police authorities have established a big armed patrol while the army has set about erecting an eight-foot barbed-wire fence around the large Fox Hills army post at Stapleton, where some 4,000 Negro troops are being trained for army shipping chores.

Army officials will provide additional recreational facilities for the Negro troops through a service center within the troops' post, and have moved to put on extra bus lines to enable the soldiers to have more direct transportation facilities to Manhattan and Harlem when on leave. 3-17-45

BEHIND THE HULLABALOO

But what's behind the hullabaloo in the New York newspapers? Why all the talk of a "crime wave" when actual police records show that outside several street brawls and a holdup, the 4,000 troops have gotten along splendidly with the white civilian population? Where there's smoke there's fire. The real facts in the case are that a small group of Negro-baiters on the island are highly displeased with the establishment and activities of a local race-relations group set up a few months ago under the sponsorship of Borough President Palma and a group of liberal-minded editors, educators, Negro and white leaders.

3-17-45

Known as the Council for Democracy, the group has conducted highly laudable activities and has wide support among the citizenry as well as official backing from such organizations as the Staten Island American Legion, the Girl Scouts, the National Association for Advancement of Colored People, Negro-white church, civic and trade union groups.

The conferences, restaurants and theaters by Staten Island Borough President Palma and the local merchants were universal in their praise of the soldiers, and that no discrimination was practiced against them.

On several occasions, the Staten Island newspapers and the local editorially praised the Negro troops for their population.

Reports in New York papers that the army was moving hundreds of Negro troops to other parts of the country, in alarm over the alleged and non-existent "crime wave," are based upon either misinformation or outright distortions.

3-17-45

"The army has been regularly rotating the troops in and out of the Fox Hills post," a municipal leader said. "Once they are trained they are sent to other parts of the country."

Clarence De Hart, local NAACP leader and head of the big Booker T. Washington USO center for the Fox Hill soldiers, told the Daily Worker yesterday that the erection of a special service center for the troops at the Fox Hill base should not interfere with the Negro soldiers obtaining their regular passes to go to the USO center, or into town.

New York, March 15 (U.P.)—The New York Port of Embarkation announced today that five companies of Negro troops would be moved immediately from the Fox Hills Cantonment on Staten Island, an area that has been terrorized recently by a crime wave. 3-16-45

The troops, numbering about 1,000, will be transferred to other installations. All five companies arrived at the base within the last two months during which time there has been a series of unsolved robberies, beatings and attacks on women.

Davis To Command The Field

Pgh. Pa.
Pittsburg Courier

By JOHN H. YOUNG III

GODMAN FIELD, Ky.—We had just completed the simulated bombing mission to Tokyo when Colonel Davis drove up to the line on an inspection tour. I asked him for an interview and he said that although he was very busy he would be glad to talk with me. He suggested that I come over to Group Operations. 6-30-45

When I arrived at Operations, Colonel Davis was talking with Lieut. Daniel James, who had temporarily taken over duties as group operations officer. The colonel was pointing out the necessity for keeping at least sixty per cent of the aircraft in the air each day. Finally his conversation with Lieutenant James was ended and the colonel and I rode back to the line to talk and watch the boys land the sleek, silvery B-25s.

WANTS DISPOSAL OF REMAINING CHARGES

First, I wanted to know if Colonel Davis was intending to do anything about the three Negro officers still held under arrest for allegedly "jostling" the provost marshal in connection with his attempt to keep them from entering a "white" officers' club ste up by Colonel Selway (at General Hunters' approval) at Freeman Field. He had evidently given the subject much thought.

Colonel Davis said that he had talked the matter over before coming to Godman. He said that he would ask for immediate disposal of the case by the War Department. This was believed to be an indication that he had been of the opinion that the case had been dragged over long enough.

Next, I wanted to know if Colonel Davis would become commanding officer of the field as well as the 477th. He said that he would become base commander as well in about ten days. This removes any doubt that Colonel Selway will remain at Godman Field.

PROMOTIONS FOR PRESENT OFFICERS

Colonel Davis was then questioned about the men that he was bringing from overseas to take over position with his new unit.

"Here is the thing I have been trying to impress on everyone," he offered. "The men now in these bomber squadrons will still run them. I am not bringing in fighter pilots to replace them."

We then talked about the problem of promotions since most of the men coming in with Colonel Davis already outrank men of the 477th. He said that he believed that there would be a new table of organization which would allow additional rank because of the merging of what had been four squadrons into two in the composite group. Besides, the Colonel added, the men now coming into the unit are veterans of combat and would be added protection to the untried 477th. This he held to be more important than the subject of promotions. "Furthermore, as soon as the men of the 477th have proven themselves in combat I am going to place them in positions occupied by the veteran pilots we are now bringing into the unit," he declared.

NAMES STAFF

Colonel Davis then outlined for me the veterans of combat that would take over new positions with the 477th. He said that Major James Ramsey would be replaced by Major Vance H. Marchbanks, who would become group flight surgeon. The others, and their new positions were: Major Edward C. Gleed, operations officer, assisted by Captain Stanton and Lieut. Daniel James, bomber pilots; Major Elmer Jones, commanding officer of service group; Capt. Arthur Turner, Capt. Morris Johnson, Major Thomas Money, group executive; Capt. William R. Thompson, group armament officer; Capt. John R. Beverly, group intelligence officer; Capt. Dudley Stevenson, group communications officer; Capt. Omar G. Blair, commanding officer, material squadron; Capt. John H. Williams, commanding officer, enegineer squadron, and Major William Campbell, commanding officer, Ninety-ninth Fighter-Bomber Squadron.

Colonel Davis pointed out that Major Campbell, who was commanding officer of the Ninety-ninth Pursuit Squadron in the European Theatre was a great and respected fighter pilot. He said that Major Campbell was assembling the pilots for the fighter-bomber unit.

SERVICE GROUPS OFFER PROBLEM

Colonel Davis explained that the seven enlisted men he had brought over with him were expert technicians on the P-51 fighter plane. They were brought here in anticipation that the P-51 (Mustang) would be used by fighter pilots. He said that instead they would fly the durable P-47 (Thunderbolt), and did not know where these seven men would be assigned.

The colonel was then queried on the difficulties involved in such an immediate transfer and subsequent replacement of so many men. He admitted that there would be quite a job to be accomplished on this score. He pointed out that replacement of the service squadron personnel was a major problem because few if any Negro officers had been previously assigned to this squadron. On the contrary, some forty-two white officers had been assigned to this unit under Colonel Selway.

Colonel Davis concluded: "Yes. We are bound to experience some difficulty for the next few days, but I am certain that these two squadrons will be ready in a surprisingly short time."

Col. Davis Transfers All White Personnel

Pittsburg Courier
Pgh., Pa. 6-30-45

GODMAN FIELD, Ky. — Less than thirty minutes after the final ceremony had ended here last Thursday Col. B. O. Davis Jr. had transferred all of the white personnel out of the 477th, and was busy at his desk reorganizing and shifting his Negro personnel into important positions. The colonel had gone to work with his traditional exactitude and brevity.

The order transferring the white personnel—clearly demonstrated how Colonel Selway, at the instigation of General Hunter, Commanding Officer of the First Air Force, had usurped the cream of all of the important positions on the post for his white personnel.

IMPORTANT POSTS HELD BY WHITES

Under Colonel Selway, not a single Negro held a position of importance (or any other kind) in the headquarters of the 477th. Besides Colonel Selway, there were two lieutenant colonels, five majors and one captain—all white—transferred out of headquarters. There was only one Negro major on the whole field and he was a medical officer.

All four of the bombardment squadrons were headed by white personnel. They were Major Raymond Gandy and Capt. Eugene Endicott of the 616th; Major Gordon Berk and Capt. Earl Griffin of the 617th; Capt. Raymond Schreck and Capt. Curtis Youngblood of the 618th, and Major John Tyson and Capt. Murlin Brock of the 619th.

Transition In Complexion Of Personnel Noted

Atlanta, Ga.
7-13-45

WASHINGTON— (ANP)—A complete transition in the complexion of the personnel identified with the Godman Field air forces base and the 477th Composite group stationed there is being effected under the command of Col Benjamin O. Davis, Jr., it is learned here.

Col. Davis assumed command of the group on June 21 and of the base on July 1. Immediately after these transfers of authority had been made, white officers holding down command and administrative posts at Godman began being shifted to other assignments, at Fort Knox and elsewhere.

ARRIVE AT FIELD

Already a substantial number of Negro officers from the Tuskegee Army airfield have arrived at Godman and have taken over administrative positions formerly held by whites. Others are expected to follow.

Sunday week ago a contingent of Negro WACs numbering 30 arrived at the field also and are now handling the clerical work for the base and the group. These jobs were formerly held by white civilians in many instances. Col Davis is reported to favor the use of as much military personnel as possible. An even larger number of WACs are expected to follow the first ones. 7-13-45

The table of organization at Godman still calls for a complement that included lieutenant colonels and majors. It is to be expected that qualified Negro officers will not fill those ranks and carry the responsibilities that go with the jobs.

8,000 Integrated at Ohio Air Fields

Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

By LEON W. TAYLOR

DAYTON, Ohio (ANP) — Nearly 8,000 colored workers have been integrated here at the Wright and Patterson Army Air Fields. 7-21-45

At both fields, colored workers are in all branches of civilian employment, ranging from maintenance, semi-skilled and clerical workers to engineers and chemists who are making experiments for the advancement of American air power.

From All Sections

These workers came from all parts of the country. The inhibitions of some, the prohibitions of others, personal likes and dislikes, have vanished in answer to the summons for national strength and a shouldering of the greatest concerted effort in world history.

They work as one. The finese of integration stands as a tribute to patriotism and those charged with harmonizing social differences.

The extent of integration at first is hard to visualize, so complex are its many branches. When one traverses long corridors, and through different departments, the realization grows that here are governmental groups coordinated and efficiently manned in a democratic way.

No Conflict

In the processes of integration at Wright and Patterson Fields, there is no conflict with genuine ability. There is no bitterness between black and white.

Private industry has yet to approach the perfect detail achieved in these bustling workshops of the national government.

This union of common, cosmopolitan effort has forged a governmental productive chain from the human resources of America's forgotten people.

Colonel Davis's Bomber-Fighter Outfit to Be Based on Okinawa

Balt., Md.

By B. M. PHILLIPS
Staff Correspondent

GODMAN FIELD, Ky.—The new 477th Composite Group, formerly the 477th Bombardment Group (medium) headed by Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., who assumed command of both the unit and this base in ceremonies here Thursday, is Pacific-bound.

Lt. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, acting commanding general of the Army Air Forces, who flew here from Washington to install Colonel Davis in his new post, announced that the group would leave the States in late summer or early fall and would be based on Okinawa.

General Baker, former commander of Allied Air Forces in the Mediterranean where Col. Davis commanded the 332nd Fighter Group, said: "It was upon my personal recommendation and insistence that Colonel Davis is to take command of this group because of the excellent work I saw him do overseas."

MacArthur Welcomes Aid

He added that Gen. MacArthur when asked whether he would accept the 477th in the Pacific replied, "I'll take anybody willing to fight the Japs."

The reconstructed 477th will be known as the 477th Composite Group because it is to include two bomber squadrons and a fighter squadron from the 332nd. The remainder of the 332nd will be held in reserve.

Colonel Davis is expected to earn promotion to brigadier general, like his father, through his new assignment and it is fairly certain that he will be elevated before the group moves to the Pacific.

(Recommendations to that effect have already been made. His name now has to be submitted by President Truman for Congressional approval but in the face of his record, it is doubtful that it will be opposed.)

Gen. Davis, Gibson Attend

General Davis, Truman Gibson, Jr., civilian aide to the Secretary of War, and Brig. Gen. Edgar T. Glenn, chief of staff of the 1st Air Force, also flew here for the ceremonies.

6-30-45

Colonel Davis was presented to the 4,000 officers and men who turned out in formation at 10:30 a.m. and in the afternoon the 425 officers were apprised of the Pacific assignment.

Colonel Davis did not address the group on either occasion but his father, General Davis, said the new job carries with it "great responsibility" and urged the men to live up to the fine record flyers have made in Europe and Italy.

General Glenn promised that the Army Air Forces will do everything possible to equip the new unit for combat duty and confirmed a statement by General Eaker that the B-25's which they will fly in the Pacific are the best medium bombers.

Promotion Assured

Mr. Gibson assured the group that under the new setup they will have every opportunity for promotions and that there is no ceiling on ability. He cited General Eaker as an example of "the very fine men in the Army."

Colonel Selway, who has been the group's commanding officer since its activation and has been blamed for many of the abuses it has suffered during its stormy career, was on hand for the ceremonies but no mention was made of a new assignment for him.

He will remain here until all equipment and materials are properly turned over to Col. Davis.

Camps

Ousted Colonel Selway Blamed

Chief difficulties of the 477th under Colonel Selway centered around democratic use of officers' clubs first at Selfridge Field, Mich., Freeman Field and here at Godman.

6-30-45

Selway chose to ignore an Army order forbidding segregation in officers' clubs and mess halls. Matters came to a head on April 12 when the 477th was at Freeman with the mass arrest of 101 officers for refusing to acknowledge a base order restricting student officers to a separate club.

Next day the unit was transferred here to Godman and charges against the 101 were dropped after a War Department probe.

However, three of a group of 61 who were arrested for attempting to enter an officers' club on April 5 and 6 were charged with "jostling an officer" and are still restricted to the barracks and mess hall.

6-30-45

3 Still Restricted

They are: Second Lts. Shirley Clinton, Camden, N.J.; Marsden Thompson and Roger Terry, both of Los Angeles. The War Department has refused to comment on an investigation which has been completed for several weeks.

The assignment of Colonel Davis to Godman will virtually turn it into a colored base. Godman is part of huge Fort Knox which is nearly 40 miles from the nearest city, Louisville.

Besides the 477th, the 387th Service Units, all colored, are based here. The dozen or so white officers attached to the 477th are already moving out and it is expected that Colonel Davis will supplant them with picked men who returned with him from overseas.

White Officers Going

The white officers who served as commanding officers of the four squadrons of the 477th were replaced by colored officers several weeks ago. They are: 616th, Capt. Charles Stanton, Portland, Oregon; 617th, Capt. Fitzroy K. Newsome, N.Y.; 618th, Lt. J. Y. Carter, Durham, and 619th, Capt. C. I. Williams, Lima, Ohio.

Capt. John W. Rogers of Chicago replaced the white CO who headed the Combat Crews' Training School which is under orders to transfer to Walterboro Army Base, S.C.

Mistaken Identity Is Their Defense but Victims Point Them Out in Court

Two Negro privates, arrested during the period when it was charged a crime wave existed near their cantonment at Fox Hills, S. I., were found guilty of assault in Richmond County Court yesterday.

The prisoners, Curtis Williams, 24 years old, of Dallas, Tex., and Hayward Arrington, 25, of Norfolk, Va., were accused of having beaten and stabbed Sherman Ivory, 34, a civilian of Port Richmond, on Dec. 2, and of having assaulted Stephen H. Crowe, motorcycle patrolman attached to the St. George station. A jury of nine men and three women returned the verdict of guilty.

The maximum penalty for the crime is ten to twenty years. The defendants, who appeared throughout the trial in uniforms, were committed to the city prison by Judge Thomas J. Walsh for sentence on July 13.

The defense of the soldiers was mistaken identification. Both testified in their own behalf that they were miles away from the scene of the crime. Their testimony was corroborated by five witnesses, including two Negro Wacs. The principal witness for the State were Mr. Ivory and Patrolman Crowe.

6-27-45

Mr. Ivory testified that he and several friends were standing at the corner of Broad and Gordon Streets, Stepleton, waiting for a bus, when they were approached by seven Negro soldiers, including the two defendants, who without provocation attacked him. After he was knocked down, he was stabbed in the left side with a service knife.

He identified Williams in court as the man who had stabbed him.

Mr. Crowe, who was off duty and in civilian clothes, testified that he had gone to Mr. Ivory's assistance. The same soldiers attacked him and Williams fired two shots at him, he declared. Later, he testified, when the defendants were arrested, the revolver was found in Arrington's possession.

The two soldiers were defended by John McK. Minton, former assistant District Attorney under the late Gov. Charles S. Whitman, when he was District Attorney of New York County, and by Stanley J. Fuld, a former assistant District Attorney under Governor Dewey when he was prosecutor of New York County. They were assigned by Mayor La Guardia's committee on unity.

Godman Field Case Held Good War Dept. Strategy

Afro-American 7-7-45 Balt., Md.

Naming of All-Colored Court-Martial Board to Try Officers Seen as Face-Saving Move

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON — (NNPA) — The War Department "outsmarted" the colored people in the Godman Field case. Although it should be given credit for its strategy, the colored people should pierce the defense and strike back with clean, hard blows.

It was a smooth bit of strategy to put Col. B. O. Davis Jr., in command of the 477th Composite Group (Fighter-Bomber), and then four days later announce referral to a general court martial of the cases of three 477th officers.

The three officers, Lts. Roger Terry, Marsden Thompson and Shirley Clinton, have been held in arrest since April on charges of violating the 64th Article of War in connection with entering a "white officers' club."

All-Colored Court Named

It was even smoother strategy for Maj. Gen. Frank O. D. Hunter, commanding general of the First Air Force, to name an all-colored court, including Colonel Davis, to hear the charges preferred by Col. Robert Selway.

This is all designed, apparently, to take the heat off the War Department if the three men are convicted. They would then be convicted by members of their own race—so the cry of discrimination logically could not be made.

It is almost certain they will be convicted, for in the Army's court-martial procedures, extenuating circmustances do not count. The court will listen to the mitigating or extenuating circumstances, but will give them no weight in the decision.

No Objection Possible

Having accepted the transfer of command at Godman without insisting that these pending cases be cleared up first, we must admit that we were out-maneuvered. It will accomplish us little to object to the court-martial's decision.

However, there is a weak point in the War Department's defense. Are Major General Hunter and Colonel Selway to go scot-free, without being charged and court-martialed for having deliberately misapplied and misinterpreted Army regulations?

Such dishonesty is not becoming an officer of the United States and must certainly violate some of the Articles of War.

General's Orders Obeyed

Colonel Selway, carrying out General Hunter's orders and policy, issued a base regulation on April 9, and ordered all the colored officers to sign an endorsement to indicate they had read and understood it.

Refusal of 101 of the officers to sign is what led to their arrest and subsequent reprimand—which is still a part of their personnel files, so far as any of them know.

The base regulation set up separate facilities of all kinds for what it described as two different types of personnel—base, command and supervisory personnel in one group, and "trainee" personnel in another.

Already Trained Men

Both Colonel Selway and General Hunter must have known that the medical officers who had qualified as flight surgeons, having completed all the required Army medical training, and had behind them years of private medical practice, could not be classified as "trainees."

7-7-45

However, they were — because they were colored. Army justice in time of war is a grim thing—but it should work the same for everyone, regardless of race, creed or rank.

[illegible] AT GODMAN. Black Dispatch 7-7-45
by Harry McAlpin

Godman Field.- (NNPA)- "It's the best thing that could have happen for the men in this command as well as for the officers," is the way most of the enlisted men I talked to expressed themselves concerning the change of command of the 477th Bombardment Group from Col. Robert Selway to Col. B. O. Davis Jr. last week.

Terming the ceremonies attendant upon the transfer as the greatest thing they have seen since they came into the army, most of the men said they expected it would settle a lot of problems and give the fellows an incentive to work.

They pointed with pride to the noticeable spirit of the men during the parade and review staged for the new commander. The fact that negroes were part of the reviewing party and that for the first time they were being led by Negro officers had no little part in their feelings.

Everybody has been worrying this change for some time, they declared. As a result, they said, the morale will be better.

"Everything from segregation to rotten GOs has been our lot," one man declared. "We hope to see a change as result of the change of command."

"Since the change has come, I know we will succeed," said another.

JAMAICAN WORKERS GASSED IN NOTORIOUS CAMP MURPHY

Public Opinion The National Daily

Kingston, Jamaica 10-2-45

Eugene Thompson, returned worker from the U.S.A., gives an interesting account of his experiences at Camp Murphy.

"When the war was over, we were sent to Camp Murphy, the correct name of which is Fort Murphy," he said. "A crowd of us left on three buses on a Thursday night. We made five stops in all to change buses, travelling a distance of about 1,000 miles.

"At all these stops we were refused to be served a meal; we were told that 'this is a white man's country—no niggers allowed.' The drivers of the buses were O.K. and we sang right through the trip, hungry though we were.

"On Saturday afternoon we became desperate. We were now without food and water for about 40 hours. We appealed to the driver of our bus and he took us out of town twenty miles to a little restaurant where we had to go in the back. We were served milk and cheese sandwiches. The milk was sour.

BREAD FOR SUPPER

"We arrived at Fort Murphy that night and were given some bread for supper. We were then herded into barracks without beds or sanitary conveniences of any kind. The toilet was marked 'Out Of Use.' We had to get blankets or old bags the best way we could to sleep on that night. The next morning we were able to get beds that others had slept on.

Two days later when we were at the mess hall waiting to get a meal, there were some pushing and jostling. Someone said we should leave for the food was finished. We couldn't leave because it was only about 15 minutes since they had started to serve us.

"Suddenly I saw what looked like fog coming through the hall. My eyes started to burn, and everybody tried to get out as quickly as possible. We afterwards learned that they had used gas on us.

"On the day of the riot everybody as usual was pushing to get a meal at the Mess Hall when a fight started between a Jamaican and a Barbadian, and it developed into a free for all fight.

WORKERS BEATEN.

"The Manager tried to stop it, but had to call in the police. Order was restored quickly. The police then went in among the Jamaican barracks and beat up several men; quite a few of the lads were sick in bed and innocent of any part in the fighting, but they were beaten up just the same.

"One policeman went through the crowd and said, 'Take off your hats when the order is given' then BANG! he hit you over the head with his baton. Most of the hospital cases were caused from beating administered by the police.

"One Jamaican lad was hit across his back, then on his Head. He fell unconscious. He was subsequently taken to the hospital. 10-3-45

"While the police were beating up the Jamaicans, they said: 'You niggers are like the Japs and Germans—a set of bastards!"

Public Opinion-The National Daily

Kingston Jamaica 10-2-45

Eugene Thompson of 15½ Georges Lane, Kingston, a returned industrial worker from the U.S. in a statement to PUBLIC OPINION yesterday said that after six months of hard work in that country he was glad to be back home.

"I have paid more money for dues and taxes than I have been able to save," he said. "The least I pay for one week is $4 and the highest $6, plus Union dues, $10 to join and $1.50 per week, and of course, no Union Card, no work."

He had seen the slum areas of the Deep South, with their thatched huts, dilapidated homes, places where the farm animals and the people live together, He had seen white girls walking in the cow pens carrying pails of milk They were uncouth, ignorant, and they persisted in calling Negroes 'niggers'.

He had worked in a stone quarry, and had been gassed in the South in trying to get himself a morsel of food. "I have been refused to be served a meal unless I was prepared to have it sitting near to a latrine."

CAMP MURPHY

"I have seen my fellow-Jamaicans beaten up at Camp Murphy," Thompson said, "and I have been told that 'niggers', Japs, and Germans are the same. I have seen Jamaicans put their refuse on the staircase of their lodgings as a mark of protest, before better accommodation was provided for them."

He arrived in New York on January 29,1945, and with others was met by Capt Acheson who had recruited them in Jamaica. They travelled by train to philadelphia, and by truck from the station to an old hospital building on South Street.

There was no heating. The building was open and it was impossible for anyone to stay there, so they all took up their things and started to leave. A Mr. Radeing told them to take whatever sleeping things they could and follow him.

TERRIBLE FOOD

"Some of us sleep on his verandah, and others in a restaurant that stayed open all night. In the morning we were instructed to start working at the Franklin sugar Refinery. Some of us signed on and started working. That night our things were removed to lodgings where there weren't enough beds for all of us, and there was no heating in our rooms. Many of us had to sleep on the floor for quite a few nights, and to go to the sanitary department we had to walk through the dance hall which was kept open all night The food was terrible; nothing but sausages, stale meat, and sour milk."

Mr. Thompson said that they appealed to the Manager of the sugar refinery without any results. At the end of 3 months the Manager agreed to take $7 weekly from their pay (previously they had been paying $13 per week for their lodgings) and it wasn't compulsory anymore for the men to stay there if they did not wish to. The majority of them left and found lodgings elsewhere. 10-2-45

"I was fortunate to stay with a nice family who treated me as one of themselves", Thompson said. "They charged me only $6 per week.

WEEK WITHOUT WORK

"Our three months had now expired, and we had to renew our contract at the end of two weeks. After the renewal we were told that a meeting would be called to find further work for us. We stayed on for a week without any work before we were informed that some of us should report to work at Campbell's Soup Co., and the others to the War Man Power Office the next day."

They were told to go to the quarry the next day at a place called Kingston, to break stones. All of them refused and appealed to the WMP Manager for a better type of work. They were told that if they didn't work, they would be sent home. 10-2-45

"The majority of us went to the quarry," Thompson said, "to find it a place that no human being should ever be asked to live in. The mess hall was next to a pig sty, and all the mosquitoes in the world seemed to be there. The place was so stink that we could hardly breathe."

All of us decided to return to Jamaica. We were given the choice of returning or working in a Distillery plant. Of course we decided to work at the Distillery, where we remained until the war was over, (Tomorrow Mr Thompson's interesting narrative will be continued. when his experiences at Camp Murphy will be recounted)—EDITOR.

WEST INDIANS TERRORISED IN FLORIDA

By VENICE T. SPRAGG

Public Opinion

WASHINGTON—The Nazi like treatment accorded West Indian labourers awaiting repatriation at Camp Murphy, Florida, was revealed in a letter made available to the Defender this week. 10-12-45

Brought into the United States under a contractural agreement between the British government and the War Manpower Commission acting for the United States government, some 16,000 Jamaican, Barbados, and Bahamian workers whose labour is no longer needed here are being shipped back home. Camp Murphy is the chief repatriation center.

The letter, written by a former assistant camp manager at Camp Billy Mitchell Field, Milwaukee, Wis., was sent to fellow workers and warned "Do, do, for God's sake, tell the rest of men that its a friendly advice I am giving them: before coming to this camp ask to be sent to the worst jail in America."

HELLISH CONDITIONS

Describing the camp as "hell," the writer declared: "if you are tough as iron you would cry over conditions in this camp."

Written a few days following the recent riot at the camp in which numbers of the workers were severely injured the writer implored, "tell the others before they come down here strike and go even to prison, for you will not lose your life in prison, but its only God can save you here."

Local authorities attributed the flare up to a resentment on the part of the workers to being returned to their homes to face again low pay, and poor living standards. 11-11-45

NO INFORMATION

Although there is a WMC representative attached to the camp to date the agency has released no information on the riot although it is reliably learned that they are fully apprised of all the details.

In one quarter it is said that WMC is hopeful that all of the workers will be shipped out before full knowledge of the situation is obtained by the public.

There are indications that WMC officials are seeking to wipe their hands clean of the whole affair disclaiming any further responsibility for these foreign workers. However under the arrangements through which they originally were brought in, there are many who feel that the commission has a responsibility which ceases only when these men are properly repatriated and under conditions conducive to their orderly transfer and personal safety.

POLICE CRUELTY

At the time of the riot there were some 3,500 men in the camp awaiting transportation facilities. The author of the letter described the conditions under which they lived as follows:

"The police, them just come and order the boys to kneel down, and strike them in their heads with their baton."

He said, "One of our real nice boys, Rupert Johnson, was laying in bed durihg the riot, and ordered by police to get up, because he did not jump fast, they hit him in the head with the baton, and break his head, but its not very serious."

Kingston Jamaica

SHOT AT

Describing still another incident, he continued, "Worst of all—a fellow that came along with us this evening was trving to get something for his bed (as all of us did) and somehow he was fired at with a revolver which must have gone through his shirt sleeve, and was well battoned and taken to the hospital without even seeing the barrack he was going to stop in".

The writer indicated he was exercising extreme caution for his own personal safety. He said, "I won't go outside for they are trying to take the men for birds." He added, "The police told the men that they hate them more than the Japs and show them the machine guns, also hoping for a chance to mow them down."

Kingston Jamaica

BITTERNESS

Remorseful, he told his friends, "Its cruel to see we have played such a part in this their war (for we never had what to fight for) and now these are the treatment we get in return." 10-12-45

Then with a bit of homespun philosophy he concluded, "Anyway, I can only say, God bless his wonderful race, and help them to know that—the small stones that gill the crevices are as essential to the firm wall as the large ones—and so are races."

There still remains in the United States some 9,000 West Indian workers who must go through Camp Murphy under similar conditions.

Any workers who refuse to go through the center as directed will be picked up by the immigration authorities, but some feel they would be assured a more safe conduct to their homes, finally.

APPEAL TO BRITISH

Recently Bindley C. Cyrus, Chicago attorney, and president of the American West Indian Welfare Association, and Joseph R. Alvarenga, first vice president, also of Chicago paid a visit to the British Embassy here, urging the British government to take whatever steps possible to slow-up transfer of West indian workers until adequate transportation can be obtained.

Here in Washington, eyes are turning to the Foreign Labour Section of the War Manpower Commission, of which J. Dewey Coates is chief, to see what moves that office is going to make on behalf of these workers who are in the United States by arrangement of his office.

Mutiny Following Demotion Of V. I. Officer Averted At Camp Plauche (Louisiana)

Riot Squad Called Out; Articles Of War Read

Saint Croix, ~~Virgin Islands~~ U. S. A.

According to information received here from Camp Plauche, Louisiana, yesterday, Virgin Islands soldiers last week reached a stage of near mutiny following the unexpected demotion of First Sergeant Sigurd Petersen and Sergeants Horatio Millin & Joseph Francis. High tension and unrest were reduced only after the intervention of the Post Commander who conferred with non-commissioned officers and promised restoration of all the men's stripe. He also severely chastized the officer in command of the company.

According to the report by the Daily News Sgt. Sigurd Peterson of 872 Port Company, was informed that he would be retured to Puerto Rico. No reason for this action was given. It came as a blow to the company as Peterson had been serving in the capacity of 1st Sgt. ever since the company had been activated in Puerto Rico in 1944.

In Petersen's place was named Oliver Scatliffe, the ex-policeman. While the company held no prejudice against Scatlifee, its members found the situation ratter puzzling. Nevertheless, the routine of the company proceeded as usual. 7-23-45

Sgt. Petersen was demanded by the Company Officer, Lt. Imbeie to write a letter requesting that he be reduced in rank without prejudice, and that if this were not done he would be reduced to a private and transferred to the 873rd Port Co. Also to be reduced were Sgt. Horatio Millin, and Joseph Francis of St. Croix.

Tension then mounted, and non-commission officers torn off their stripes and returned them to the Company Officer. After severel incidents, things reached the stage where the Commanding officer of the post was summoned. He arrived and handled the situation in a most admirable manner. He dismissed the pressing officers and gathered all the non-commissed officers and held an informal meeting wiih them. He pried to the roots of the dissatisfaction. When the meeting was over he thoroughly reamed the C. O. for having such unrest going on in his command. He stated that he thought Petersen was a fine man, after interviewing him. 7-23-45

He promised restoration of all chevrons and that while he could not promise to keep Petersen over the head of his C. O. he would see to it he was returned to Puerto Rico with his 1st. Sergeant stripes.

Conscription- Nat'l Service Act

National Service ... Menace To Democracy

Pittsburgh Courier Pa. 1-20-45

President Roosevelt, the heads of many Federal departments, certain educators and many powerful daily newspapers are urging the passage by the present Congress of a national service act conscripting all labor and the drafting of 4-Fs for work in labor battalions under military regulations but without the veteran benefits accorded to citizens in the military and naval service.

The Pittsburgh Courier strongly opposes these measures, not only because they will all be administered on a jim-crow basis, like the present military and auxiliary war services, but, more important, because they are a definite and dangerous menace to the traditional American way of life which has made this the greatest country on earth for the ordinary human being.

A national service act, conscripting labor to work where and when the Federal bureaucracy wants it to work, is simply involuntary servitude or slavery, a system which this Nation fought a bloody four-year war to destroy.

In other words, the President and his supporters are advocating for all Americans in 1945, a status suffered by the majority of colored Americans prior to January 1, 1863.

Of course it is contended that this conscription of labor would only last until the war is ended, but no one knows when the war will end actually, and it does not end officially until the Government so states, which could be years and years hence.

Under the circumstances it is no wonder that both Capital and Labor strongly oppose a national service act. 1-20-45

Both realize that it would make a Federal bureaucracy the arbiter of all business and labor activities, and make totalitarianism supreme in the United States exactly as it is in Russia, Germany and Japan, thus defeating our war aim of destroying totalitarianism.

What profiteth a nation to wage a costly and devastating war against totalitarianism only to itself adopt the principal feature of totalitarianism?

Under the American system of free enterprise, this Nation has out-produced all of the other nations of the world combined.

Without American production both Great Britain and Russia would have been defeated long ago, and this production was made possible by free men in a free labor market and with business conducted on the time-tried profit-and-loss basis.

Since this American system has proved superior to all others in existence, why change it, unless mere centralized control is desired for its own sake?

Mr. Roosevelt tells us that labor conscriptions would "assure that we have the right numbers of workers in the right places at the right times" which persupposes an omniscience on the part of Washington bureaucracy which has been belied time and again by errors of judgment which have cost us heavily in lives and equipment.

If production has recently lagged, it has not been due to our free labor system, but to national complacence caused by unwarrantedly optimistic predictions of early victory by the bureaucrats themselves, concealment of military losses and difficulties, and exaggeration of the plight of our enemies.

If the people had been told the exact truth all along, instead of being fed sugar-coated stories by our propaganda bureaus, there would have been no lag in production. 1-20-45

Rightly or wrongly, the American people accepted compulsory military service on the assumption that it was absolutely necessary for the preparation for and prosecution of modern war against the totalitarian menace, but they never dreamed that they would be asked to submit to totalitarianism, and this is most definitely NOT what our boys are fighting for, nor what they expect to come back to.

The thought of American citizens being ordered from their homes by Federal bureaucrats and shipped hither and yon against their will is repugnant to every native of this land who possesses a spark of manhood.

For much the same reasons The Pittsburgh Courier is likewise opposed to the ruthless and indiscriminate drafting of the physically unfit into labor battalions under military command and denied veteran benefits.

This is discrimination of the worst sort—penalization of Americans because of physical unfitness for which they are not responsible.

A disproportionate percentage of these 4-Fs are Negroes who are physically unfit for strenuous military service because of poverty, malnutrition and lack of proper medical attention; and it would be a relatively simple matter to transfer to jim-crow 4-F battalions other men from active military service who became physically unfit, and thus deprive them of veterans' benefits.

The solution of the 4-F manpower problem is not to draft these men simply as laborers (regardless of their capacity to do other work), but to conscript them for limited, behind-the-front military service, which is often no more arduous than the work they are now doing in civil life, and give them the same benefits as other veterans. 1-20-45

Any other method is unfair, unjust and undemocratic.

We think it is significant that the Administration waited until it was safely in the saddle for four more years before it sprung these totalitarian proposals on the American public, knowing it would have been defeated otherwise.

Nevertheless, Congress still rules, and we believe the American people should insist that their Representatives and Senators reject the proposal of the President for compuslory national service of any kind, if they want to remain free Americans.

GIs Try Suicide at Dix Over Harsh Treatment

The People's Voice - N.Y. N.Y.

By JOHN HEWITT 7-28-45

POISON

Tales of outrageous treatment of the 1,400 Negro GIs at Fort Dix. N. J., that have been seeping thru the heavy. double-barrelled veil of Army censorship and whitewash for some time. came to a burning climax as PV learned exclusively of two men who found the situation intolerable and recently attempted to commit suicide in protest, while others petitioned Negro organizations for help. Sgt. Ralph Luckett, attached to the 83rd Signal Heavy Construction Battalion, who was in charge of quarters at a hospital dispensary June 29, took an overdose of sleeping tablets and put GI soap under his armpits. The soap was used because the belief that it would slow down heart action and render him more susceptible to the sleeping tablets. Discovered in a semi-conscious state about 10 pm by other men working in the dispensary, Sgt. Luckett was rushed to Tilton General Hospital where he remained in the same state until the following day. Upon regaining full consciousness, Sgt. Luckett is quoted as having said that he "would rather die than be a member of the 83rd." He didn't like the outfit because the officers "weren't interested in training the men," he said.

This is the first of a series of exposes on conditions at Fort Dix, New Jersey. More next week.

Luckett attempted suicide again on July 1, while at the hospital, by taking another overdose of sleeping tablets, and had to be revived. He is now reported confined to the psychopathic ward at Tilton General Hospital.

Pvt. Charles Coleman, assigned to Company A of the same battalion was given "company punishment" Sunday, July 1, because of a small infraction of the rules. His extra duty consisted of mopping mess hall, then digging a large trench beneath it.

DRANK POISON

Pvt. Coleman dug the trench Sunday and part of Monday. Finally as this was "the worst of a series of injustices," according to reports, Coleman decided he would rather end it all in preference to taking any more punishment.

He drank a bottle of gentian-violet, a poisonous antiseptic dye that is applied to the feet for prevention of athlete's foot. Coleman, like Luckett, said he would rather "end it all" and blamed the attitude of white officers toward Negro soldiers for most of the trouble at the camp.

Coleman was also taken to the hospital's psychopathatic ward where it is believed he attempted suicide again. The admitting officer at the hospital, a physician, had said there was an element of provoked hysteria in Coleman's condition, and that he should be carefully watched because he might try to commit suicide again.

While there have been no reports of drastic actions like suicides in the other battalions, many men of various units have complained of mistreatment and injustices against the Negro heavy construction battalions as a whole.

HELD 56 DAYS

Typical is the case of Pvt. Clarence Jackson of the 84th battalion. When stationed with a headquarters detachment under the command of Lt. Edmond Cain, he received a furlough in March and started for San Francisco. On the way he stopped in Philadelphia and got a partial pay of $32 at the finance office in the Customs Building.

Arriving in California several days later, he requested another partial pay of $40 at the finance office of Ft. Mason. In his claim he signed as his last pay day, February 28, 1945. Misintepreting the blank, he said he had not received a previous partial pay thinking that that meant at Ft. Mason.

Returning from furlough April 13 he signed his name on the payroll book against the two partials he had drawn. Immediately following, he was sent for by the battalion adjutant, Lt. Judson V. Kleoper, and was jailed. He was not told why.

7-28-45

During the time he stayed in the stockade, 56 days, he was visited by the investigating officer, Lt. William Green, who informed him that he was charged with "making false claims," a violation of the 94th Article of War. Court-martialed on June 14 and sentenced to six months in the stockade—under the charge of "false oath" instead of the original "false claim"—Jackson served about two weeks and was then transferred to the 80th battalion under guard.

It is a violation of Army regulations to confine a soldier for more than seven days before trial.

Of the 1,400 Negro soldiers assigned to signal heavy construction battalions, about 300 have been courtmartialed during the six months bteween January 1 and June 1, 1945.

Army To Avoid Former 'Errors' At All-Negro Medical Center

Chi. Def.

By VENICE T. SPRAGGS
(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON — Station I hospital at Fort Huachuca, Arizona, was given an unexpected reprieve from an Army death sentence by the timely pronouncement of victory in Europe.

The all-Negro-manned hospital, previously scheduled to go by the board will be used in the deployment of Negro veterans both for discharge and reassignment purposes, it is exclusively learned by the Defender. 5-26-45

Under plans currently developing in the War Department, the hospital will be reorganized on a basis approved by the Army Surgeon General. Full consideration will be given to race, seniority, and priority of the men presently assigned. Assurance has been given that errors built into the former organization and program of the hospital will be assiduously avoided in the new set-up it is said.

Army OK's Plan

The decision to use the hospital for deployment purposes is reported to meet the favor of the 9th Service Command.

While there is at present a decided lull in activities at the installation due to the removal of the bulk of Negro troops, medical officers who have elected to remain at this post are satisfied that a program is being worked out which should get under way shortly.

Some two months ago these medical officers were given a choice of resigning or requesting assignment for other duty. This opportunity was proffered after a rumor of a proposed wholesale dismissal of the Negro medical officers commencing with Col. Midian O. Bousfield, head officer was aired by the Defender. It did not come in time to prevent the removal of many of the officers to other points including some 25 who were shifted to Fort Benning, Georgia for infantry training.

Bousfield Shifts

An interesting sidelight in the Bousfield ouster move has recently come to the fore. Reports indicate that the Chicago Colonel, in an effort to catapult himself into a higher position, threatened time and time again to quit the Army and return to civilian practice. The Army finally took him up on his offer to resign and promised to help him get his dismissal expedited immediately. Whereupon, Bousefield began a backtrack, claiming he had decided there was too much in the Army for him to leave at this stage of the game.

He is now being considered by the Surgeon General's office for a national position in the Army Medical Corps, presumably to coordinate the work of young Negro medics throughout the country, although it is said he would prefer a post position in the 6th Service Command in or near Chicago.

All officers who have stated a preference to leave or remain in the Huachuca spot have had that preference respected— that is except Lt. Col. Roscoe Giles, and Major Maurice Shaw, both of Chicago. According to information Giles' request for discharge was held up by Bousefield, ostensibly on the grounds that an appropriate replacement could not be immediately obtained. Giles is an outstanding surgeon. In some circles it is charged that a neat game of Chicago "politicking" is really behind the delay.

Surgeons Ask Discharge

Giles, sure of favorable action on his discharge request had scheduled some civilian operations in Chicago where he enjoyed a lucrative practice before his entry into the Army. Bousefield was formerly health director of the Rosenwald Fund. Shaw, who had let it be known that he wished to remain at Huachuca is reported discharged for reasons not yet obtained, although he, like Giles, was also assigned to surgery. The Surgeon General's office could shed no light on the subject when contacted.

Station I hospital is one of two post hospitals at Fort Huachuca. It has been in existence now for almost three years. All orders for both Station Hospitals I and II have been issued by Col. E. B. Maynard, who is post surgeon and as such has had complete charge of both hospitals. In spite of the fact that Station I hospital has been staffed with top-flight Negro physicians with remarkable civilian accomplishments to their credit, Col. Bousefield's province has been decidedly limited.

Col. Huntington Commends Exploits Of Negro Soldiers Stationed At Fox Hill

N. Y. Age

Speaking before a joint meeting of the Kiwanis Club, Lions Club, and other service organizations of Staten Island, N. Y., on Thursday, Colonel F. W. Huntington, Commanding Officer of the Fox Hills Terminal, New York Port of Embarkation, lauded highly the work accomplished by Negro Port Companies which are and have been stationed there.

"Units trained at Fox Hills," he told the influential audience, "have served commendably, under fire, in every combat zone where U. S. Forces fight, and those which have not yet gone overseas have contributed greatly to the speedier ending of the war by helping to rush supplies to front-line troops.

7-28-45

"With the change in the war," Col. Huntington said, "no one can tell what the future holds for Fox Hills. But this I am sure of, whatever the colored sildners are called upon to do, they will continue to perform their work in fine manner as they have in the past and will do an outstanding job."

In speaking of the debarkation work which the Port Companies are doing at present at the New York Port of Embarkation, through which most of the wounded soldiers returning from overseas pass, the Colonel said:

"The Negro soldiers who have handled these wounded men have done their work in a gentle and compassionate manner. They seem to feel nothing is too good for these men who have given parts of their bodies to make this country a decent place in which to live." 5,658 patients were debarked at the Port in one day last month, he pointed out.

N. Y. N. Y.

Colonel Huntington, Brooklyn born soldier, who rose to his present position from that of a private in the ranks, holds the Croix De Guerre, the Silver Star, and other decorations for bravery in the former World War. He was Commanding Officer of the historic Jackson Barracks, in New Orleans, before taking up his post in New York, November, 1944.

Conscription Again

Military conscription is once more the most important subject of the day.

A number of high military and naval officials have been testifying to the necessity of a post-war draft Army and Navy. Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

Last week General Eisenhower insisted on the necessity of conscription of American youth if this country is to maintain its leading position in world affairs and to adequately prepare for future national defense.

President Truman has already placed himself on record as favoring some form of military training for the young men of this country.

Whether there should or should not be conscription is a moot question, especially in view of the fact that the atomic bomb has entirely changed the concept of warfare.

But colored Americans are principally concerned with whether this proposed post-war conscript Army is to be really democratic or jim crow.

We are all aware that American Army and Navy tradition has been jim crow from the beginning of the Republic. 11-24-45

The result of this policy has been extremely sad for Americans of color, and they do not want this policy continued.

World War I and World War II were headaches for colored Americans, with high officials of the two services insisting on maintaining the jim-crow setups.

Now that peace has come, American Negroes must insist that the old system be thrown overboard.

Whatever Army and Navy the United States has from now on will have to be voted by the Congress of the United States and supported by the taxpayers of this country.

It is now time that we insist that jim crowism must go in the Armed Services for which we are taxed.

Ominously no important official of the Government has said anything about doing away with jim crowism in the Armed Services, which leads us to believe that the intention is to continue the old jim-crow policy.

It had been demonstrated beyond doubt that there is no necessity for the continuance of this jim-crow policy and colored Americans are emphatically not disposed to support it.

To continue to do so would be a confession of our willingness to accept second-class citizenship.

We are willing to spend our money to defend the Nation and prepare it for adequate defense in a future war, but we are not willing to do so on a jim-crow basis.

Until such time as the President and his subordinates agree that the Armed Services shall be run on a democratic basis, we are opposed to compulsory military conscription.

Report on Military Training Held 'Entirely Unwarranted'

12-12-45

Declaring a report that "compulsory military training is approved by "most Negro leaders" to be "entirely unwarranted," a representative group of Negro citizens issued a statement yesterday through the Post-War World Council, 112 East Nineteenth Street, saying that as far as it knew "there has been no poll of Negro opinion to determine its position" on the question of military training. N. Y. N. Y.

"On the contrary," the council said, "a large number of colored people are definitely opposed to such legislation," not only to prevent the extension of "present military services on the traditional Jim Crow basis" but also because compulsory military conscription is a departure from past American policy. 12-12-45

Signers of the statement were the Rev. Shelton H. Bishop, St. James Church; Frank Crosswith, Negro Labor Committee; former Federal Judge William H. Hastie, dean of Howard Law School; Mordecail Johnson, president of Howard University; A. Philip Randolph, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; the Rev. Shelby Rooks, St. James Presbyterian Church; George S. Schuyler, writer, and Walter White, secretary National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Gibson Admits Not All 85-Point Men Released

Baltimore Afro-American 8-4-45

That not all soldiers with 85 points, even if they have served in combat are being discharged, was admitted to the AFRO this week by Truman K. Gibson, civilian aide to the Secretary of War.

Mr. Gibson's admission was in reply to a query by the AFRO following receipt of a complaint from a 42-year-old soldier serving at the Sierra Ordnance Depot, Heidlong, California. 8-4-45

Work Long Hours

The soldier, who said he had seen seven month in combat and was sick, revealed that he and his buddies, supposedly assigned to limited service, are "subject to seven days work and night work when necessary."

Asserting that no recreation facilities have been provided for them, he writes, "The Italian prisoners have more privileges than we do."

According to Mr. Gibson, the temporary ordnance ammunition companies, composed of limited service men, were organized at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., after it was found impossible to employ civilian labor.

Men "Screened"

The men, according to the War Department aide, were carefully "screened" as to physical qualification before being shipped to the desert ammunition depot.

Those found unfit after reaching California, Mr. Truman asserts, were returned to their previous station.

"While it is possible that some of these crews have worked approximately long hours during the period of emergency," explains Mr. Gibson, "it was not contemplated that such hours be continued once the backlog of freight cars to be unloaded has been cleared up.

Not Desirable Assignment

"There is no doubt," he continues, "that assignment to such work is not desired by any soldier, but it is necessary to the war effort that the ammunition load be handled as expeditiously as possible."

On the matter of Italian prisoners, Mr. Gibson discloses that "in order that the danger of friction" between them and colored troops be eliminated, the War Department has moved the prisoners to Oregon.

They have been replaced, he says, by two more colored ordnance companies from another depot.

8-4-45

To Provide Recreation

"Every effort is being made to provide adequate recreational facilities at Sierra Ordnance Depot," the civilian aide discloses, "but due to the time element involved, it was not possible to have such facilities provided before the troops' arrival."

Admitting that men with 85 or more points have been assigned to the gruelling task at Sierra, Mr. Gibson declares that "it is impossible to discharge them at this time as no replacements are available.

True Throughout Service

"This condition holds true throughout the Army Service Forces and is by no means peculiar to Sierra Ordnance Depot," he discloses.

President Roosevelt Releases Navy Boy To Dying Mother

Northwest Enterprise
Seattle Wash.

William E. Hayes, of Seattle, 24-year-old employe in the quartermaster section of the Army Service Forces, possesses a letter from President Roosevelt he treasures so much that it is under lock and key.

Hayes' mother received the letter from the President before she died three months ago. It told her that her son, William, would be released from service as a gunner's mate, third class, in the Navy, to come back to her.

"My three other brothers were killed in action in the European theatre and I guess my mother was afraid she would lose us all," Hayes, a Negro, explained. "So she wrote to the President, and he answered her, granting her request. I got home a while before she died.

1-31-45

The other sons were John, 32, a master sergeant; James, 24, a sergeant, and Eugene, 19, a privat. Their mother, Mrs. Alma Hayes, resided in Toledo, Ohio.

Hayes, now residing in Seattle, and his wife, Lillian, have two children, Earline, 18 months, and George, 3 years. Hayes served more than two years in the South Pacific zone.

FBI nabs youth for draft evasion

Los Angeles Tribune
4-30-45
Calif.

Stonie M. Montgomery, Jr., 20, of 2155 E. 105th st., was arrested today by agents of the FBI on a charge of furnishing false information to the Army Induction Station last May 16.

Montgomery admitted to the G-men that when he reported for his physical examination he scribbled his signature with his left hand in filling out induction form papers in an effort to deceive officials in charge. He admitted he lied about his education, claiming only a fourth grade education, when he had three years in high school. He admitted he lied when he said that he was a user of narcotics; when he is not, the FBI said.

Montgomery said that his purpose in furnishing this false information to the Induction Station was to create the impression that he was illiterate and thus would have less chance of being accepted into the army. He was successful because he was rejected for failure to meet minimum intelligence requirements.

Montgomery said he is now willing to join the army and positive he can pass the literacy test. The government may give him that chance.

Rejections

Mississippi Low In Draft Rejects

Commercial Appeal

Record Is South's Best, Kentucky Excepted

Memphis, Tenn

To The Commercial Appeal:

The rejection rates under Selective Service in the various states are shown in a survey recently released. The rates for whites and negroes are shown separately.

In the United States as a whole the rate for whites is 36 per cent and for negroes 56.9 per cent.

3-18-45

In Mississippi the rejection rate for whites was 32.9 per cent and for negroes 54.2 per cent.

Of all the states in the South and Southwest, Mississippi had the lowest rate for whites, which ranged as high as 46.9 per cent in Georgia and 49.2 per cent in North Carolina.

Of all the states in the South and Southwest, Mississippi had the lowest rate for negroes (except Kentucky, 49.7 per cent), which ranged as high as 71.5 per cent for North Carolina, and 70.9 per cent for Arkansas. 3-18-45

These rates represent the physical and mental qualifications of the male citizens of the states and it must be surprising to people who do not live in Mississippi to see that the state has such a splendid record. Mississippi has been described by some misguided individuals as the most backward state. 3-18-45

To produce, raise, nourish, and educate our younger generation to the point where we lead the other Southern and Southwestern States requires something. What do we have that other states don't have?

THE 'WORK-BUT-NOT-FIGHT' POLICY

Chicago Defender, Ill.

Why do Negro soldiers and sailors mutiny? 2-10-45

What is it in the Army and Navy that turns the amiable, friendly, freedom-loving Negro into a belligerent, desperate, bitter fellow who in wild anger is willing to risk a long prison term in order to protest his unjust status.

First it was the Navy which broke all court martial records with a widely-publicized trial of 50 Negro sailors for so-called "mutiny."

Now it is the Army which has suddenly announced the trial and conviction of some 73 Negro soldiers for "mutiny" in Hawaii.

"Mutiny" is a convenient word. It covers a multitude of sins.

But essentially it is concerned with refusal to obey orders, no matter what these orders may be. 2-10-45

For the great majority of Negro soldiers and sailors, these orders have been involved with common labor. The dirtiest jobs are done by the darkest soldiers in the Army and Navy.

Whether it has been glamorized with such terms as "engineers" or "port battalion" or "construction battalion," the job is still common labor.

The number of Negro troops and seamen in combat posts is negligible among the million colored men in the service. 2-10-45

A "work-but-not-fight" policy is stringently observed by both services as far as the Negro is concerned.

Why is this policy enforced? Not because the Negro has shown himself less than a good fighting man. Whenever and wherever given an opportunity the Negro soldier and sailor have proved they have all the gallant courage displayed by all our American fighting men, regardless of color.

But because America is a democracy in name only, because the Negro is less than a full American, because the brass hats who run the Army and Navy are more concerned at times with keeping the Negro in a servile, subservient place than in winning the war, Negro soldiers and sailors are armed with shovels, pots and pans rather than guns.

From slavery to slave labor has been the fate of the Negro who becomes a soldier or sailor. 2-10-45

As a slave, the Negro revolted—fought, bled and died to break the chains that bound him.

As slave labor in the Army and Navy, he is doing no less.

The iron-bound disciple of military law cannot break the Negro's back on the wrack of imprisonment any more than the threat of the lash under slavery.

"Mutiny"—refusal to bear the heavy, unjust load placed on the Negro's back has been the result.

It happened at Port Chicago, where Negro sailors—and Negro sailors only—were forced to sweat long, tiresome hours at the dangerous, unskilled job of loading ammunition.

It happened in Hawaii, where Negro soldiers—and Negro soldiers only—got the heaviest, hardest work of moving tons of earth and clearing airfields.

It will happen again as long as the flame of freedom burns in the hearts of men, whether their skins be black or white, yellow or red. The Negro will give his life for his country—but he will not be a slave. The Negro will fight gallantly in combat—but he will not be a coolie.

President Roosevelt has admitted that the Army has made "mistakes" in its racial policy. 2-10-45

Mutinies have been the result.

The President and his War Department should recognize that the Negro, since the earliest days of the American Revolution, never mutinied when called to defend his country. No Negro ever flinched when sent into battle with a gun in hand to uphold the American ideal.

Negro soldiers and sailors in combat never mutiny.

It is time the President put an end to "mutinies" by abandoning the Army and Navy "work-but-not-fight" policy.

Discrimination As I Have Seen It in Italy

Washington Tribune

2-3-45

"I was a member of the advance party that preceded the bulk of the 92nd Division overseas. When we arrived in Italy the 370th Infantry Regiment (92nd) which had already seen considerable action, had been instrumental in the liberation of many small towns.

"The advance party for the division was a small group and in each town we entered our 'Buffalo' insignia was a 'welcome' slip. The looks of admiration which we received from practically every civilian on the streets were limitless.

No Color Angle Taint

"In many of the towns in the rear areas we were invited to dine and in every way possible, made to feel that we were more than welcome. The trend of each conversation was always as one individual to another. In restaurants and places of amusement it was always the same. To many of us, this was a first taste of life free from the horrible taint of the color angle.

"Now that we have been here for quite a few months, the conditions are practically the same as we found them. I am convinced that the bulk of Italy knew no discrimination based on color.

"My first question was, 'Why isn't home be like this?' When one thinks of the issues involved in the segregation and discrimination set-up in America, he finds it hard indeed to suppress arising anger.

"The people of Italy are far more appreciative for what we have done for them over a period which does not cover a year, than America is for contributions of as equal a nature which cover centuries. These contributions have involved everything from the fruits of life-long endeavor to the spilling of blood.

J.C. Shipped from USA

2-3-45

"Discrimination as I have seen it in Italy was shipped here from America. There is constant evidence that little by little it is being introduced to the Italian populace. However, it will take a great number of years for it to reach the point it has back home. Those interested in seeing that jim crowism is set up in this theater to a marked degree will have to import more of the South over here.

"The incidents surrounding the attempts at bringing America to Italy are interesting and strangely enough, sometimes even humorous. 2-3-45

"I have been to social gatherings of a sort, which were frequented by soldiers (Southern element) tell Italian women present not to socialize with the colored soldiers. Their season was that they (the girls) were superior to the colored soldiers.

Superior? Meaning What?

2-3-45

"In one case, the young woman involved found this new and unusual doctrine hard to comprehend and replied with a curt, 'Io non capisco Superior' meaning 'I do not understand what you mean by "Superior."' Such attempts on the part of supposedly fellow soldiers aroused my indignation and also that of others present.

"On another occasion I was at a small dance where a similar group was assembled. One of the colored soldiers present walked over to one of the women and after a polite 'excuse me' to a white soldier with whom the

A few weeks ago we were moved from our old area to a new one. In our old area we had our own movie, post exchange and service club. In our new area we were given a movie which had been closed prior to our arrival. One evening about 200 Negro soldiers patronized the movie and about twenty or thirty whites. Before the film began, a white corporal informed us that the Negroes would have to sit on the opposite side of the theatre from the whites. He also told us that these were not his orders, but orders he was informed were to go into effect. 4-7-45

I ask you, man to man, can't something be done to stop this? We are all in the Army fighting for the same thing—which is democracy throughout the world. At least that's what I was taught in high school. 4-7-45

There has been a lot of talk about stopping segregation in the Armed Services, but as far as these boys are concerned, it's getting worse when the boys of this battalion can't even sit in a movie without being told where to sit, especially when the movie was opened for them!

I am not disclosing my name, because they would only make things harder. I am only a private who thinks that this should be brought to your attention.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE — (ANP) — Eight Negro soldiers, all members of the 923rd Engineer Aviation regiment, were reported to have been denied admission to the army's new officer candidates school in this area.

The eight soldiers, best in the 923rd, were sent to the new officer candidate school in response to a radio message under the date of Jan. 31 and Circular 13, dated Feb. 25. First Sgt. Harry White was in charge of the group.

He reported to the officer in charge of the candidates, a Mr. Gunthrop, WOJG, who appeared totally ignorant as to why "these colored fellows are here." Sergeant White reported to his superior, Capt. Walter G. Pfeil, Jr., that Mr. Gunthrop told him point-blank, "they were not accepting colored at the school."

Capt. Pfeil expressed his regret to the men and promised to "try and get an answer from 1X Engineer command as to why they sent the radio asking us to send men down. "The 923rd is 12 officers short

The situation was brought to the attention of Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis by one of the officers.

"Some 5,000 of them on one of the largest coast guard transports," the paper said, "were segregated from 'white' American officers and men. Separate quarters and mess were set up for them, from the commanding officer on down. A Negro coast guardsman on board (Negroes were also segregated) asked a chaplain why. The chaplain said he didn't think it was actually color discrimination, rather that the Brazilians were our cultural inferiors."

Gen. Douglas MacArthur was reported to have issued an order to correct treatment of Filipinos fighting with American forces. The order stated that our allies were to be treated as equals, not according to jim crow customs prevalent in the USA, the New Leader reported.

BANDAR SHAHPUR, GULF DISTRICT, Iran—By Courier, Delayed At the Gulf port of Camp Gifford, where the Trans-Iberian Railroad ends and climatic conditions are some of the most rugged in all of Iran, is another colored port battalion, the 482nd, unloading Lend-Lease supplies for Russia.

In the heat of summer the temperature hits around 170 degrees, and working conditions are made much tougher by the low humidity. In winter this area takes on the appearance of a desolate, upholstered mudhole. During their early days here over twenty months ago the men had only tents for living quarters; now they have comfortable barracks.

Finds Racial Segregation

Colored and white troops are quartered in separate areas. Each group has its own post exchange, recreation rooms and service club. Each has the privilege of using the other's facilities when necessary, but in the one theatre on the post, colored troops are forced to sit on one side and white troops on the other.

I also found the two colored warrant officers living in a partitioned-off section of one of the enlisted men's barracks. At the same time the post had mixed athletic teams representing it in all of the tournaments and also a mixed swing band. In the main, colored and white enlisted personnel appeared to get along without friction.

I talked with some of them, who were fraternizing and socializing in each other's area and the majority of them reported no objection to interracial mingling such as they had been enjoying. The nearby village has been declared "off limits" to military personnel, so the GIs must have all of their recreation here on the post.

White Soldier Pleads For Fair Play For His Negro Soldier Buddies

New Orleans, La. Louisiana Weekly 3-3-45

(By The Associated Negro Press)

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 28.—Criticism of white newspapers, which fail to tell the story of the part Negro soldiers are playing in the war, was voiced Wednesday by Pfc. Raymond J. Ross, a white soldier stationed here.

3-3-45

Writing under the heading, "Colored Soldiers Fight Too," Pfc. Ross, whose letter was published in the Lighthouse and Informer, asserted: "Where one read just what the press of my white world printed, it would seem that all the fighting is being done by the white men, while a little bit of investigating would show that the colored boys are doing their bit to set the sun of Japan and knock Hitler's world rule plan into oblivion. Let my white readers gain sense and read both sides of the story.

"As this is written, the colored soldier and sailor are standing on alert on some far outpost, guarding against any foe who would dare to harm his sacred America. The colored soldiers I have spoken to hold high hopes that they will return to a civilian life in which they can detect the rights they left home to defend. 'I want to walk the streets of Georgia, or the south and know that I may do so in the spirit of a free American,' one of them told me in the shadows of a cigar store in a restricted area in Columbia the other day. 3-3-45

"I hope this soldier gets his wish for his eyes have seen many big battles; he has seen his comrades fall mortally wounded to preserve liberty on the shores of the United States.

"After this bloody conflict is over the valor rolls will be bound before justice to possess the names of those brave Negro men who died because theirs and the white man's liberty was in danger.

"I burn when I see signs reading 'white only.' Since when do we whites defy the laws of our Creator? I thank God I may count my colored friends in the hundreds. It must be remembered that there is bad and good in all races and only the coward and those ignorant of facts will refuse to admit it."

Discrimination

Negro Officers Thwarted

92nd Division General Staff Shot Through With Prejudice

Pittsburgh, Pa. Courier

11-24-45

By COLLINS GEORGE, Formerly Attached to the Ninety-second Division

One of the major results of General Almond's refusal to recognize the existence of race problems in the Ninety-second Division was the growth of the most vicious type of Negrophobia in the general staff of the division and the accession to power in that staff of men with violent anti-Negro prejudices. The deputy commander of the division while I was with it was Brig. Gen. John E. Wood. Prior to coming to the Ninety-second, Wood, then a colonel, had been involved in racial difficulties attendant upon transporting Negro troops to Liberia. Short in stature, high of voice, he became one of the most thoroughly disliked men in the division, incurring even the dislike of General Almond himself.

"TREAT NEGROES LIKE DOGS"

Typical of his thinking is a lecture he delivered to what he thought was a group of white officers of the division, but which included one Negro officer, Major George Bowser of Xenia, Ohio. Advising these "white" officers as to how to get along with the Negro soldier, General Wood said approximately: "Now, I know how to handle the Negro soldier. Just treat him as if he were a big, happy dog."

Following the division's triumphant stay in Genoa, it was returned to its former area near Via Reggio, to find that a group of white Army nurses was also stationed there. On General Wood's orders, signs were posted about the nurses' area stating "This area off limits to Ninety-second Division troops." It is to General Almond's crdit that he ordered these signs removed and the area made off limits to all troops, but . . .

WOOD COMMANDS DIVISION

With General Almond's transfer from the division following victory, General Wood became and is now commanding general of the Ninety-second Division. 11-24-45

The "political" leader of the division while I was stationed with it was the chief of staff, Col. William E. McCaffrey of Connecticut, a West Point graduate with a pleasing, frank manner, but the wiles of a Machiavelli in fostering the racial policy of the division. Behind his pleasing manner lay opposition to the use of Negro officers in the posts for which they were qualified and the ability to look a questioner in the eye and assert that what was obvious truth was not so.

DENIES FACTS 11-24-45

I asked Colonel McCaffrey whether it was Army policy or Ninety-second Division policy that Negro officers were not to be placed in positions where they commanded whites.

"It is neither," replied the colonel, although both Army and division facts made the correct answer obvious.

I asked Colonel McCaffrey about Capt. Leroy Clay's arrest. "Oh, he isn't under arrest that I know of," he replied, although I had seen Captain Clay under arrest that day and he had told me that it was by Colonel McCaffrey's orders.

WINS SILVER STAR

As "political" leader of the ruling clique of officers below General Almond, Colonel McCaffrey was in position to recommend awards and positions for those white officers who best played ball with division policy. His own receipt of the Silver Star for bravery during the Cinquale attack is a typical such award. I do not know whether the colonel was actually at that ill-famed spot during the attack or not. As chief of staff he had little business there. But his citation is supposed to read that swimming a hundred yards in the icy waters of the Cinquale canal, when others refused to do so, the colonel rescued injured men.

I saw the continuous work of the medical corpsmen at the Cinquale. I also saw the Cinquale, and if Colonel McCaffrey swam a hundred yards in it he deserves a medal. At its widest I doubt whether the Cinquale is more than twenty-five yards in width and all the troops I saw cross it, waded through without getting wet above the waist.

MAJOR MOCK

The G-1, the personnel officer of the division, was Major Mock. It was Major Mock who was largely responsible for the operation of the segregated officers' club in the heart of the Ninety-second Division headquarters area in Via Reggio. It was he who, in the hearing of a Negro GI, confirmed the order that no Negroes were to be allowed in the building for any purpose. It was Major Mock who carried his anti-Negro prejudices to Genoa with him, and, despite the fact that the Negro Red Cross girls had entered the city ahead of the general staff of the division and selected a fine building for the GI Red Cross Club, Major Mock, entering a few days later, requisitioned the same building, already posted for the Red Cross, in order to establish there the same sort of segregated officers' club he had sponsored in Via Reggio.

The other general staff officers were either non-descript men who fulfilled their functions with the aid of the most brilliant Negro enlisted men of the division but followed along with the division anti-Negro policy as the best means of retaining themselves in office, or they were downright incompetents who kept their job in the same manner.

NEGRO STAFF OFFICERS

At the same time, there were about four Negro officers attached to the general staff of the finest calibre as soldiers, officers and intellects. Among them was Capt. Leroy Clay, first attached to G-1 where his uncompromising attitude against anti-Negro policies in personnel eased his transfer to the G-3, operations section. It was while serving in this section that he was court-martialed on charges that would not have stood test even in a Dixie court of law.

In G-2, intelligence, was Capt. Dan Taylor, Memphis, Tenn., a brilliant mind and a flawless soldier, who, while obeying orders, never bit his tongue as to the machinations of the general staff. He was continually thwarted frustrated and thrust into jobs not worthy of his talent by that staff and finally was transferred altogether. 11-24-45

NO NEGRO PROMOTIONS

In G-4 was Captain Johnson of Chicago, a supply officer who performed his functions capably, was brought into the position following MTOUSA inquiry as to the division use of Negroes on its general staff, and never allowed to get any further.

In the adjutant general's office was 1/Lieut. Bert Cumby, Washington, D. C., who finally was forced to ask for relief from his post because he could not fulfill his duties properly and at the same time handle the prejudiced affairs of the division.

POINTED OUT BY COMMAND

These men were constantly pointed out by the division command as evidence of the fact that "we have Negroes on our general staff." Not one was ever used according to his ability nor permitted the normal advancement which the least white officer could expect, especially if he demonstrated that his racial views were satisfactory to the division "political" command.

Captain Clay would have made an excellent G-3, operations officer, of the division. He was slated for it by virtue of experience and seniority, but when the division G-3 was wounded, charges were brought against Clay that resulted in his court-martial, dishonarable discharge and a sentence of fifty years at hard labor.

Instead of Clay, Lieut. Col. Edward Rowny, the most notorious race-hater of the division, was appointed to the position of division G-3, but Colonel Rowny's story is saved for the next and final article in this series.

CROATAN BLUNDER BLAMED ON ARMY

12-22-45

WASHINGTON — The Secretary of the Navy radioed a warning last week to all vessels at sea. He told Navy personnel that no discrimination was to be practiced against Negro members of the Armed Forces returning home aboard Navy ships.

NAVY SECRETARY'S RADIO MESSAGE

"Attention of the Navy Department has been called to a recent incident in which a question arose concerning accommodations aboard a Naval vessel for Negro Army personnel returning to this country for demobilization. In order to avoid any future misunderstanding on this subject the Navy's policy regarding various racial minorities is restated and summarized for information and guidance.

"In the administration of Naval personnel no difference shall be made because of race or color. This applies also to authorized personnel of all the Armed Services of this country aboard Navy ships or at Navy stations and activities.

"In their attitude and day to day conduct of affairs Naval officers and enlisted men shall adhere rigidly and impartially to Naval regulations in which no distinction is made between individuals wearing the Naval uniform or the uniform of any of the Armed Services of the United States, because of race or color. 12-22-45

This climaxed an incident occurring several days ago at the port of LeHavre, France, where 123 homeward bound Negro troops were denied passage on the aircraft carrier Croatan.

NOT THE FIRST TIME

After the Croatan sailed without the Negro troops, Stars and Stripes, Army newspaper, made it known that this was not the first time colored GIs had been left behind. The servicemen's paper revealed:

"On a previous occasion, Negroes were barred from a cruiser, it was reported, and at other times they were embarked over the objections of naval officers."

Arriving at New York Friday night, the USS Croatan commander blamed Army jim-crow practices for failure of the ship to bring the Negro soldiers home. 12-22-45

OFFICER FIXES BLAME

"I told Army authorities I would prefer not to have those people aboard because I had no separate facilities for them," Capt. Charles D. Griffin, commanding officer of the Croatan, said at Pier 13, S. I., after first denying all knowledge of the reported incident. "But I didn't issue any order," he quickly added.

"I knew from conversations with Army officers that they were accustomed to separation in the Army, and I had no such facilities," he went on. "Responsibility for their failure to get the men on the ship in LaHavre rests with port of embarkation authorities there. I didn't say I wouldn't take them. I only made a suggestion."

NO JIM CROW, NEGROES SAY

Seven Negroes already aboard the Croatan before the controversy arose were interviewed when the ship reached American shores Friday night. They agreed with Army and Navy officers on the Croatan that there had not been any discrimination on the ship.

Lieut. Richard B. Davis of Urbana, Ill., wearer of three Battle Stars, declared: "If I run into as much democracy in the States as on this ship, everything will be all right."

The six enlisted Negroes who agreed with the lieutenant were Pfc. Elihu Rhiney, Sparta, Ill.; Pvt. Fred J. Tilford, Chicago, Ill.; Pfc. Leroy Reynolds, Lyons, Ga.; Pvt. Vovius Miller, Kewanee, Ill.; Pfc. Aaron Williams, Houston, Tex., and Corp. Steve Williams, Detroit, Mich. 12-22-45

DENY CHARGES

Captain Griffin and transportation officer, Lieut. Cmdr. James T. Lillis, denied that an effort had been made to dislodge these seven Negro soldiers. Capt. Thomas Coates, Army transportation officer aboard the ship, supported the Navy officers in this statement.

Lieutenant Davis later stated that he slept in the same room with seven white officers and ate at the same mess.

Despite the explanation, Army and Navy officers showed little agreement explaining charges that the 123 Negro troops were left behind. Army Captain Coates, in the presence of Navy officers, said Captain Griffin told him that he'd "prefer not to have them (the 123 Negroes) aboard."

"MISUNDERSTANDING"

Captain Griffin tried to explain that it was a "misunderstanding" which might have resulted from a "personal conversation" with an Army embarkation officer, and added: "I have no authority to refuse admittance of any one the Army wants on board. I can only tell the Army how many persons the ship can accommodate."

On board the Croatan along with the seven Negro soldiers were 1,236 soldiers, nurses and Wacs.

First report from the Port of LeHavre said Army officers had insisted that the Navy take the 123 Negroes on board and that the Croatan commander refused. The report also stated that the Navy wanted the seven Negroes already on board to leave, but kept them after Army officers declared Navy officers would have to take the responsibility of putting them off the ship. 12-22-45

"PASSING THE BUCK"

Both Captains Griffin and Coates spoke with Southern accents as they talked nervously with members of the press. They appeared to be playing a buck-passing game as the press conference opened. At first they even denied any knowledge of the 123 Negro soldiers left behind to board a much slower ship.

The Secretary of the Navy's warning to naval personnel said: "In the adminisration of naval personnel no differentiation shall be made because of race or color. This applies also to authorized personnel of all the Armed Services of this country aboard Navy ships or at Navy stations and activities . . . no distinction is to be made between individuals wearing the naval uniform or the uniform of any of the Armed Services of the United States because of race or color."

NEW YORK.—Capt. Charles D. Griffin of Virginia Beach, Va., commanding officer of the aircraft carrier USS Croatan, on which 123 colored GI's were barred from sailing from Le Havre, France, blamed Army jim-crow practices for his action on arrival here Dec. 15. 12-22-45

"I told Army authorities I would prefer not to have those people aboard because I had no separate facilities for them," he said at a press conference aboard the Croatan at Pier 13, Staten Island.

No Order Issued

Capt. Griffin first categorically denied all knowledge of the reported incident, emphasizing that, although he told Army officials of his preference, he didn't "issue any order."

"I knew from conversations with Army officers that they were accustomed to separation in the Army, and I had no such facilities," the captain explained.

"Responsibility for their failure to get the men on the ship in Le Havre rests with the Port of Embarkation authorities there. I didn't say I wouldn't take them. I only made a suggestion." 12-22-45

Officers' Denials

Lt. Comdr. James T. Lillis transportation officer aboard the USS Croatan, also denied that an effort had been made to dislodge six colored soldiers who had actually arrived on the ship.

Capt. Thomas Coates, Army transportation officer on the ship denied that a colored lieutenant and six colored enlisted men aboard had been discriminated against during the trip, but recalled that both Navy officers raised the question of separating the 123 colored soldiers left behind.

Backs Officers

Lt. Richard B. Davis of Urbana, Ill., colored, confirmed both Coates and Griffin's statements that the colored soldiers were not segregated during the trip.

The six high-point colored casuals—one officer and five enlisted men—whom Army officers refused to remove, were among the 1,236 troops aboard the Croatan.

The 123 colored soldiers barred from the Croatan were put aboard the Thomas Johnson Victory, a slower ship. An investigation of the Navy discrimination at Le Havre is under way. 12-22-45

Navy to Probe Jim Crow Charge

P.M.

The Navy Dept. has promised to "investigate and take appropriate action" in the case of 123 Negro veterans who were barred from a Navy ship at Le Havre because it had no "accommodations for segregation." 12-7-45

The incident was reported by the Paris Bureau of the New York Herald Tribune, which said the Negroes were turned away by officers of an aircraft carrier and required to wait several days for passage to the U. S. A. abroad a Victory ship. New York, N.Y.

At Washington, the Navy emphasized that its policy is one of "no segregation." It said other Navy ships, including carriers, have brought home Negro and white officers and enlisted men quartered together. 12-7-45

Meanwhile, a group of Toledo mothers, members of the Bring Back Daddy Club, planned to visit Washington to stage what they called a "sit-down strike" before the Senate Military Affairs Committee in a drive to get their soldier husbands home by Christmas.

Anti-Americans Renew Senate Drive for Permanent Committee

12-29-45

WASHINGTON.

Viewed as a last minute effort to remove the death rattle from the throat of the fundless FEPC President Truman Thursday issued an executive order converting the agency into little more than a fact-finding body.

The order empowers the committee to continue its operations beyond expiration, but removes the only "teeth" it had—the power to issue directives. 12-29-45

The agency under Mr. Truman's new order, retains authority only to "make findings and recommendations" and "report to the President."

Activities of the committee will be confined now only to "take appropriate steps to obtain eliminate" of discrimination against minority groups in employment by Federal agencies and plants producing war supplies.

Federal Agencies Warned

In addition to issuing the order clipping the power of the committee, Mr. Truman requested the heads of all Government agencies to examine their personnel practices and assure him that they are "in accord with national law and policy."

Issuance of the new executive order brought sharp protests from both proponents and opponents of the FEPC.

Walter White, secretary of the NAACP, and Dean William H. Hastie of the Howard University Law School, sharply criticized Mr. Truman's move.

The new order also resulted in a threat by Southern Democrats of an "open break" with the President. Cong. John Gibson (Dem., Ga.) terming it a "political blunder," said:

"It was just like waving a red flag in our faces. He should have left well enough alone."

Move to Pass Bill

On the other hand, issuance of the new FEPC order has stimulated a new move in the Senate to speed up passage of permanent FEPC legislation.

Though Sen. Bilbo (Dem. Miss.) immediately reiterated his threat to filibuster any such move, notice was served Friday by Sen. Dennis Chavez (Dem., N.M.) that he will seek to bring the measure of which he is one of the authors, up for Senate consideration.

The participation of Republican Senators in the proceedings Friday was regarded as the beginning of the action they recently promised to force a vote on the bill soon after Congress returns on Jan. 14.

Sen. Chavez's announcement brought charges that Democrats were scuttling President Truman's legislative program, and counter-charges that Republicans were trying to turn the Government "into the hands of a bunch of mongrels."

Amendments Offered

Amendments have been offered to the bill by Sens. Joseph H. Ball of Oregon, Wayne L. Morse of Minnesota and H. Alexander Smith of New Jersey, Republicans, to exempt from its provisions businesses employing less than 25 persons and to broaden the powers of Federal courts to review orders of the commission to cease discrimination.

Although the legislation is on President Truman's "must" list, Sen. Morse said, Democrats in the Senate have shown "little evidence of following through on the measure." He added that Republicans were now ready to debate and vote on the bill.

Since V-J Day discrimination against minority group workers in layoffs and cutbacks due to reconversion of industry is reported to have been increasing.

Because of a greatly reduced appropriation for the current fiscal year, the FEPC is almost nonexistent. Under the provisions of the National War Agencies Appropriation Act, the agency will end June 30, unless Congress passes legislation creating a permanent FEPC.

Only $63,000 Left

Of the 250,000 appropriated in the War Agencies Act, the FEPC has less than $63,000 for its operations to the end of the fiscal year.

Only three of the nation's FEPC offices are operating. They are in Chicago, St. Louis and Detroit. Seven of the agency's field offices were closed down Dec. 15 because of the lack of funds.

"It has come to my attention," the President's new directive said, "that a considerable number of loyal and qualified employees have been refused transfer and re-employment by employing agencies solely because of race and creed. This is a violation of Civil Service rules issued by the President and of existing law."

A midwest hearing, possibly in Chicago, will be conducted by the agency in February to determine the extent of discrimination in reconversion hiring.

Full Text of Order

The text of the new Executive Order continuing the work of FEPC follows:

"By virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and statutes, it is hereby ordered as follows:

"The duties and responsibilities imposed upon the Committee on Fair Employment Practice by Executive Order 8802, dated June 25, 1941, as amended by Executive Order 8823 of July 18, 1941, and by Executive Order 9346 of May 27, 1943, shall be continued thereunder for the period and subject to the conditions stated in the National War Agencies Appropriation Act, 1946, (Public Law 156, 79th Congress, 1st Session, approved July 17, 1945).

As a part of its duties the Committee shall investigate, make findings and recommendations, and report to the President, with respect to discrimination in industries engaged in work contributing to the production of military supplies or to the effective transition to a peacetime economy."

The President's letter to department heads said:

"Cutbacks in government employment have resulted in a considerable displacement of wartime workers in Washington and the field. The Civil Service Commission, in the interest of retaining capable and efficient employees wherever possible, has established a set of principles governing reduction in force and transfer of employees to peacetime activity. It has come to my attention that a considerable number of loyal and qualified employees have been refused transfer and re-employment by employing agencies solely because of race and creed. This condition is a violation of civil service rules which have been issued by the President and in violation of existing law.

"I am writing to request that you make careful analysis of your personnel policies, procedures and practices in order that you can assure me that they are in accord with national law and policy and in order that all qualified workers in existing temporary war jobs will be considered fairly for appointments without distinction because of race, creed, color or national origin.

"In addition, your full co-operation with FEPC in all matters affecting the employment of minorities in government is requested."

Discrimination-

Whites Superior to Natives

People's Voice N.Y., N.Y. 2-17-45

General Advises in Pamphlet

By FLORENCE MURRAY

2-17-45

How to win brown friends and influence natives is set forth in a pamphlet for consumption of American troops in New Guinea under the command of the Hero of the Pacific, General Douglas MacArthur. We wonder, however, what the natives would think of what the general thinks of them. "The native is NEARLY, IF NOT QUITE, as good a man as you are," states the pamphlet on its first page. And this theme of superiority of the American white is carried throughout the booklet, which attempts to impress the GI's mind, that regardless of the native's inferiority, his friendship must be won if he is to be kept on the side of the allies. When PV obtained a copy of the pamphlet, entitled "You and the Native," and dated February 12, 1943 (ironically Abe Lincoln's birthday), we sent the Secretary of War the following wire: "The People's Voice received a copy of "You and the Native," prepared by Allied Geographical Section, Southwest Area, dated February 12 and published by command of General MacArthur, telling white troops to "always maintain your position or pose of superiority" in dealing with the New Guinea natives. Does this represent official policy of the War Department?"

A letter came in answer to the wire from Adjutant General J. A. Ulio, saying in part: "Since theatre commanders are in positions of greatest familiarity with local conditions, the War Department leaves with them the determination of policies which are most advisable in dealing with native populations. It is presumed that in this case the commander attempted to announce a policy which would lead to the most efficient handling of a local situation."

"MAINTAIN SUPERIOR POSE"

2-17-45

"The native has always looked up to the white man. He admires him because of the marvelous things that white men at large can do—make electric torches, fly in aeroplanes, etc. He is also rather afraid of the white men, with all the power of their civilization behind them. Therefore he is rather afraid of you."

"Always therefore maintain your position or pose of superiority even if you sometimes have doubts about it. It is flattering to the vanity and in the circumstances must pay us well. As for the native he will not resent it, because he has brought it about himself and he is used to it. Do not, however, ride the high horse over him. Act rather as if you were his superior, but only slightly his superior."

As if to excuse beforehand any physical measures that the American white soldier may exert upon the native, stoop (italics ours) to play, he becomes "insolent," the directions state: 2-17-45

"Don't curse and swear at him either. He detests that, and it is a fair go, for if he dares to answer you back you will call it insolence and proceed to stronger measures. Remember that it is in-[illegible] to swear at a man in the first place."

The white soldier is advised that with the native, as an adult with a child (italics ours), for "he (the native) likes that as much as you do." "But while you play the fool," it advises, "don't forget that you have to maintain that pose of superiority. Don't go too far."

NO LOVE-MATCH WITH NATIVES 2-17-45

The General admits that if the woman is "not consenting" intimate relationship is rape—whether the victim be white or brown. And he warns that under the laws of New Guinea it is a hanging matter.

"But if the men are not consenting, then it is a very serious interference" the pamphlet warns, and "if the men do not seek revenge, they will clear out and take their women with them and you will lose their cooperation."

2-17-45

"But in any case," AN AFFAIR WITH A NATIVE WOMAN IS NOT A LOVE-MATCH; IT IS A DEAL. You are expected to pay."

Furthermore, we quote: "The personal risks are granuloma, gonorrhoea and (where the Japanese have got there first) syphilis."

In other words, only if the Japanese, a darker race, has got there first, is there a chance of disease. American whites, we are led to believe, are all pure and clean.

Treatment of Negro Soldiers Reflects On Natives in South Pacific Theatre

Reports Voice N.Y., N.Y. 2-17-45

In a special article for the New York Post last Thursday, Walter White, NAACP executive secretary now touring theatres of war in the South Pacific, exposed a number of cases of discrimination against Negro soldiers at our bases in that area. One extreme case led to mutiny charges being preferred against 74 men, one of them being sentenced to 17 years in prison and 68, 15 years each. Five charged with being ringleaders and two arrested later now being tried. White said that prejudiced Southern officers, who refer to Negro soldiers as "niggers," and who are guilty of actual cruelty to the men, are not to be thought of as "typical." "There are many officers," he said, "a number of them of Southern birth, who are scrupulously just in their handling of Negro troops." He went on to point out that one of the worst effects of this mishandling of Negro troops, is the effect it is having on the native population. "The prejudiced ones," White commented, "are not only seriously hurting the war effort by causing Negro troops to wonder what they are fighting for, but they are causing bewilderment among loyal Americans of Hawaiian, Chinese, Japanese, Filipino, Puerto Rican and Portuguese stock at the mistreatment of men because of their color.

STAR CHARGES SNUB BY CAMP COMMANDER

Chicago Defender 1-6-45

By ALFRED E. SMITH
(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON. — Lena Horne learned this week that Nazi war prisoners in Dixie must be entertained before Negro soldiers.

Clashing head-on with Army's super-Jim Crow policy, the sepia screen star halted her USO-sponsored tour of Southern camps in protest against anti-Negro bias.

Miss Horne charged that the commanding officer of Camp Robinson, in Little Rock, Ark., felt it suitable for her to entertain prisoners but flatly refused to allow her the same facilities to entertain Negro soldiers on the post.

Snubbed and Jim Crowed from Mississippi to Little Rock, Ark., after walking out in protest against the camp race bias, Miss Horne charged that the commander of the officers of the camp, Major Camp Robinson had been unusually "rude and definitely unfriendly." Graham, whom she said had attempted to make her stay pleasant Arriving in Camp Robinson early in face of official frowns, last week, Miss Horne said that she proceeded with her arrangement to entertain the camp despite an "unfriendly and uncooperative atmosphere." She stated that the commander "unfriendly and unaide assigned to her, Capt. Rasley, forgivable." was equally "unfriendly and un-

Performs For Prisoners

Miss Horne performed first before an assembly of white officers and then later before the German prisoners. She said that she learned belatedly that there were 50 colored soldiers on the post and she asked if she could entertain them.

She was told that they could be seen assembled only at their mess. Then, in company with Horace Henderson, pianist, the screen star visited the colored personnel at their early morning breakfast in their mess hall.

It was here that German prisoners, who are allowed the freedom of the post theaters where colored personnel are barred, crowded in to the annoyance of the colored soldiers.

Miss Horne said she was unable to continue and asked that they be excluded. When this was refused, she left.

Previous to coming to Little Rock her plane was grounded in Jackson, Miss.

The army sent a plane to pick her up there after the row at Camp Robinson.

Speaking of the Camp Robinson incident, Miss Horne praised one of the officers of the camp, Major Graham, whom she said had attempted to make her stay pleasant in face of official frowns.

Although the post commander later called her and apologized, Miss Horne said she still considered the official conduct of the post "unfriendly and uncooperative."

She said that at all other camps the commanders were courteous and cooperative and even suspended rules to allow for inter-racial audiences at all entertainments. Only at the Robinson, the last stop, was there an "unfriendly and uncooperative atmosphere."

Miss Horne said here this week that the Camp Robinson was just an incident and said she planned to resume her entertainment tours to service posts under joint sponsorship of USO and the Hollywood Victory Committee.

Nazi Prisoners Admitted To Show But Colored Troops Shunned

Protests Humiliation

Segregate Nurses At Army POW Camp

Pittsburgh Courier

1-20-45

Pgh., Pa.

NEW YORK—Humiliation of Negro Army nurses in the presence of German prisoners, as a result of discriminatory orders issued by an officer in the Prisoner of War Camp Hospital in Florence, Ariz., was brought to the attention of the War Department by the NAACP in a letter to Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy.

The letter read: "We have received information from Florence, Ariz., that American Army nurses have been ordered by a Major Simpson to eat in a separate dining room. 1-20-45

PRISONERS OF WAR WITNESS HUMILIATION

"These nurses, we understand, are in a hospital at the Prisoner of War Camp at Florence. They feel especially humiliated and degraded because, even though in the uniform of the United States Army, they were set apart under the very noses of German war prisoners who serve as cooks and waiters in the hospital officers' mess.

"The nurses felt their humiliation so keenly that on the first day the order was supposed to take effect they seated themselves in their old stations in the dining room whereupon Major Simpson called the chief nurse and publicly told her that the separate arrangement had been instituted because it was the way he wanted it and the nurses must obey because they were in the Army and had sworn to obey orders of their superior officers.

ARMY NOT ANXIOUS TO INCREASE NURSES

"The German prisoners, of course, looked on this scene with great glee, and the Negro nurses went to their jim crow dining room boiling mad.

"We understand from announcements from Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, Surgeon General United States Army, that the Army is not anxious to increase the number of Negro nurses, but if incidents like the foregoing illustrate Army policy, I am sure you can understand that Negro nurses in their turn are not anxious to serve in the Army."

Natives Boycott Buses and Trams

Pgh. Pa.

Pittsburgh Courier

By GEORGE PADMORE

Courier War Correspondent

LONDON—Aroused by the Johannesburg race riots and the burning of the Bantu World, newspaper, 10,000 natives began the new year by staging a sit-down strike. The Africans refused to patronize municipal buses and trams as a protest against the killing of a native by a European tram driver five weeks ago.

Seventeen native lorrie owners then organized an emergency transport service, enabling Africans to travel to their jobs. As an effort to block this makeshift service, the transport board called owners of the lorries in and demanded that they give reason why they were carrying passengers when the petrol issued them was for other purposes. 1-20-45

CATER TO AFRICANS

The board then withdrew the petrol allowance, but the natives organized an emergency transport committee, giving drivers power to operate fleet horse-drawn vehicles. They cater only to Africans.

Finding that natives were not getting to their war jobs because of the strike, officials appealed to the government to reduce the fares. They were told that the government "wouldn't be cajoled by illegal action of natives, but promised to investigate their grievances."

Army Admits Point System Unfair to Negro

Philadelphia Tribune

WASHINGTON, D. C. —(NNPA)— The Army had admitted its point-discharge system is unfair to Negroes, according to a question-and-answer story appearing in Newspaper PM last week. Pa.

PM states complaints of unfairness and discrimination have been piling up ever since the Army started its demobilization under the point system. One of its reporters took a series of questions to the War Department and asked that the uncertainty be cleared up. One of the questions was: 7-28-

"Isn't it unfair to Negro soldiers that they are unable to earn discharge credits with combat stars—five points each — because for the most part they are on non-combat duty?"

The answer was: "Of course, it is unfair. The vast majority of Negro troops are in service groups and work battalions which are below the level at which non-combat soldiers can earn battle stars. 7-28-45 The fact that Negroes are in these groups is traceable to the Army policy, only partly broken down in this war, of retaining Negro personnel in non-combat echelons. Incidentally, this complaint is echoed by white soldiers in similar service battalions.

'Officer Slammed Door In My Face,' Lena Says

1-20-45

WASHINGTON—The War Department expects an early report of the Army investigation of the difficulties which Lena Horne, star of stage, screen and radio, ran into at Camp Joseph T. Robinson, Ark., while on an entertainment tour of Southern camps, an authoritative source said last Saturday.

Miss Horne made her charges of rude treatment to the Hollywood Victory Committee and the USO which were responsible for her tour. She said her reception at Camp Robinson was cool and the special service officer there was rude to her and slammed a door in her face. 1-20-45

According to her version of the incident, no arrangements had been made for her appearance. While entertaining white troops on the post, she said, she noticed admissions were being charged and no colored soldiers were in the audience.

Upon inquiry, she said, she was told admissions were charged to keep civilians out of the post theatres and that there were only 50 colored soldiers on the post and they would be reached later during her tour of the post.

She said she discovered at a USO Center in Little Rock that the colored soldiers did not know she was appearing at the camp. The next day she insisted that a piano be sent to the mess hall of the colored troops and she put on a full show for them at breakfast. White civilians drifted in during her performance but left after breakfast was served, she said. Upon seeing German prisoners of war in the audience, she refused to continue the tour of the post.

After she left the post, she said, a Service Club hostess called her to say the commanding officer wanted her to return to the post to discuss the matter, but she replied no discussion was necessary, at every other post or camp she had seen the commanding officer first, and she was returning to Hollywood.

In Wacs' Case

Col. Crandall Loses Post

Pgh., Pa.

Pittsburgh Courier

4-28-45

WASHINGTON—Col. Walter M. Crandall, commanding officer of Lovell General Hospital, Fort Devens, Mass., who was accused of making prejudicial remarks to colored Wacs assigned to that installation, will be relieved of his command, a War Department source has revealed.

At the request of the First Service Command, it was learned, Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, surgeon general, has been asked to designate another officer as commanding officer of Lovell General Hospital. 4-28-45

Colonel Crandall has been granted a month's leave of absence, and it is not expected that he will return to Lovell.

WACS TESTIFY

During the trial of four Wacs at Fort Devens in March for disobeying an order of a superior officer, the Wacs testified in their defense that Colonel Crandall said he did not want "black Wacs" in the motor pool nor as medical technicians. They quoted him as saying:

"They are here to mop walls, scrub floors, and do all the dirty work."

Pvt. Mary E. Green, Conroe, Tex., said the statements were made about twenty-four hours before she and fifty-three other Wacs went on a sit-down strike because they were allegedly being discriminated against in type of work and opportunity for training.

Her statements were corroborated by Pvt. Alice Young, Washington, D. C., a former Government employee. 4-28-45

FOUR SENTENCED

All of the Wacs involved were working as orderlies in the hospital. The four who refused to obey a direct order of Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles, commanding general of the First Service Command, were convicted of violating the Sixty-fourth Article of War and were ordered dishonorably discharged from the Army and sentenced to serve one year at hard labor.

Three of the cases were voided on the ground that the court-martial lacked jurisdiction and the fourth was disapproved in the interest of uniformity as the result of a decision by the Judge Advocate General that General Miles was disqualified to appoint the court-martial because he had brought the charges. All of them have been restored to duty.

Army Refusing To Enlist Any More Race Pilots

The Journal and Guide

Norfolk, Va.

12-29-45

NORFOLK — Roger Lomax Matthews, son of Mrs. Blanche Matthews, 755 Avenue A, Norfolk, has been informed by the War Department that his application for admission to the Army Air Corps has been turned down in accodrance with a directive prohibiting the enlistment of "Negro personnel" for aircrew or pilot training.

The 17-year-old student is a senior at Booker T. Washington High School and will be eligible for induction into the armed services next month.

He first applied for Air Corps on Nov. 2, 1945, to the Third Service Command in Baltimore, Md. 2-24-45

A native of New York, young Matthews has resided in Norfolk most of his life.

TEXT OF NOTICE

The notice that his application was rejected was forwarded this week from Langley Field, Va., by 1st Lt. Robert E. Noziglia, assistant adjutant, "for the commanding officer."

The communication read:

"(1) Application for pilot training is returned without action.

"(2) WD circular 221 dated 23 July, 1945, specifically excludes Negro applicants for aircrew training. Instructions received from headquarters, AAF, Washington, directs that the Negro pilot training will terminate when the present student load in the basic and advanced phases of pilot training graduate."

Army vs. Democracy

Since Pearl Harbor, the War Dept.'s first line of defense for Jim Crow discrimination in the armed services has been the argument that wartime is not the time for social experimentation. P.M.

Well, the war is over now.

If you want to do something about it, you might write Robert P. Patterson, Secretary of War, and tell him that the time has come for the Army to end its own social experiment of trying to impose the brutish social viewpoints of a backward South on men from all over the country. 10-21-45

You might remind him that the army of a democracy can only destroy the democracy it is supposed to defend if it continues to repudiate the fundamental democratic principle of equality of citizenship.

Army Jimcrow Condemns GIs To Role of Forgotten Men

Washington Tribune Washington, D.C.

10-16-45

By JOE SHEPARD

The fate confront thousands of Negro servicemen relegated to "non-combat" service as a result of Army jimcrow policies was spotlighted this week following a protest signed by 920 of the "forgotten men" of the 1310th Engineers.

The story of the 1310th was made public by New York's Rep. Adam Clayton Powell after he had sent a wire to Secretary of War Patterson describing the plight of the unit.

Representative Powell's wire was based upon the content of the protest which disclosed that the 27-month-old unit had spent 21 of these months overseas.

During that time they ducked buzz-bombs and also attacks while constructing vital installations in England, hit the beaches under fire at Normandy, and kept the front line infantry supplied during their drive across France. 10-16-45

In their spare time they built hospitals for the wounded and guarded German prisoners. At all times they did the tasks assigned them conscientiously and skillfully.

Three months after V-E Day they found themselves aboard ship, heading by direct route for the Pacific in one of the longest troop movements in history.

News of the Japanese surrender found them still on the high seas and halfway on their journey around the world. Thirty-seven days from the time that they left the ETO they landed in Manila, after having covered nearly 16,000 miles.

An Excerpt

What follows is an excerpt from what the 920 "forgotten men" of the 1310th—80 less than a battalion—wrote:

"We have been on these islands since then and we have been idle here as we have been for the past three months.

"We hesitate to introduce into this plea—a plea of human beings for human justice—the subject of color, but it is a vital issue of our story. Because we were Negro troops we were indiscriminately created engineers. Because we were Negro troops we have had to fight with our emotions, with our mentalities and even with our fists the age-old battle of the prejudice of men of one color against men of another.

"Humiliating Experiences"

"We have had to undergo the most humiliating experiences, not only from those without, but also from those within our organization. The white soldier fought Hitler and Hirohito. We fought Hitler, Hirohito and all their stooges who infest our ranks—officers and enlisted men.

"We are weary of this battle against forces which often seem stronger than we will ever be. We are still facing these conditions here in the Philippines. We are resolved that we will not submit to degredation and humiliation and we know, because of that resolve, that the hazard of death still faces us although the flag of surrender has been raised. 10-16-45

"Our morale is non-existent, our spirit is whipped and our hearts are full with the longing for home, the kind words and the gentle touch of those we love.

"We believe in obeying orders and we do not believe in making idle threats, but we know that we are on the road to some great tragedy if something is not done—and soon—to improve our condition.

"We are appealing to you, the hope of thirteen million black Americans, the proponent of justice for one hundred and thirty million—the champion of the hundreds of millions of colored peoples throughout the world—to bring our case before those who will listen, consider and render justice. 10-16-45

"Many Over Age"

"There are a large number of men among us who are over the age limit proscribed for discharge. There are many among us who qualify under the high-point system. There are a large number of us with disabilities and illness and those of us who have pressing personal and emergency problems of finance and domestic life which make it imperative that we see once again—and soon—the shores of our native land.

"We appreciate what the armed forces are doing to demobilize men, but in frankness and honesty, we do not believe enough is being done for us and thousands like us with long and loyal service and the qualifications for being freed to return to civilian life.

"May share in the realization of the fruits of the peace."

Tell Southern Vet Delegation Gen. Bradley Opposes Jimcrow

Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

By VIRGINIA GARDNER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Col. R. T. McDonnell, assistant to Veterans' Administration chief Gen. Omar N. Bradley, told an inter-racial group of veterans today that "the general is against discrimination."

Policy is being formulated now on some of the chief complaints discussed by the vets, McDonnell told them—as related later by the veterans, all of whom represented the Southern Negro Youth Congress. They were interviewed by reporters at the National Negro Women's Congress headquarters. 10-20-45

This is the first inter-racial group to protest to Gen. Bradley, but many Negro groups have been to see him about the inadequate and Jimcrow servicing of veterans in hospitals. The southerners told how inadequate the provisions for Negro veterans are. One all-Negro hospital in Tuskegee is available and four Negro wards in other hospitals which are staffed with Negro nurses but Negro doctors

In Atlanta, for instance, there are only two beds for Negro vets, called emergency beds., If they are filled a vet no matter how ill must travel to Tuskegee, a matter of six hours by car. 10-20-45

The delegation included Lucia Pitts, Negro WAC, Frank Hale, Negro Navy pharmacist, Alvin McNeil, of Jackson, Miss., Negro Army private, and Malcolm Dobbs, second lieutenant and holder of a DSC and Purple Heart with oak leaf clusters, and Lt. Carey Eldridge, of the Navy, of Chapel Hill, N. C., both white.

After the interview the four southern men joined the picket line in front of Sen. Theodore Bilbo's home initiated by the Purple-Heart veteran, Edward Bykowski, who resented Bilbo's racist incitations.

The inter-racial group planned to visit congressmen and let them know that 75 per cent of the Negro inductees were from the south, with from 700,000 to 800,000 veterans scheduled to return there.

Nonfraternization In the U. S. A.

New York 10-22-45

Dear Editor:

I received a telephone call in my office one Friday afternoon. It was from a friend of mine, a WAC, who had just come back from overseas duty to be separated from the service. Since the weather was not too good, we decided to meet at a place in Wrightstown for our little chat.

Wrightstown is just outside the gate at Fort Dix. During the course of the conversation another patron at the bar called me over to tell me that I was about to be "ganged." I thanked her for the information, looked around, and to be sure, I saw hostile faces not only inside the building, but outside the building. For the next few minutes, both my guest and myself were annoyed with insulting remarks made from time to time by some of the patrons of this bar. But what "topped the cake" was the entrance of three members of the Military Police.

The Sergeant in charge ordered us both to return to our barracks which we refused to do, pending the reason for such an order. We were then informed that we had violated the fraternization order. Since we refused to leave, he threatened to bring the MP officer to eject us. We promised him that we would wait.

Later the MP officer appeared in the doorway. After listening for a few seconds to what was going on, he offered to escort us home—an offer which we accepted in order to avoid any violence, because by this time a formidable group had gathered and trouble appeared to be brewing.

When I asked him just what the fraternization order stated, he said: "It states that blacks and whites won't mix."

I informed him that the fraternization order had even been abolished in Germany, but that made no impression on his mind. As far as he was concerned it was in effect in America.

You see, I, Sgt. James Moss was black, and my guest, the WAC, was white.

Navy Uses Negroes but Not on an Equal Basis

P.M.

Urban League Official Reports on Discrimination

N.Y., N.Y.

By Charles A. Michie
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2.—The U. S. Navy is kindly allowing Negro Americans indoors these days—but they still have to use the servant's entrance.

11-2-45

That's the sum total of a report made to Secretary of the Navy Forrestal by Lester Granger, executive secretary of the National Urban League, who just has returned from a tour of Navy bases in the Pacific to view first-hand conditions of Negro sailors.

Granger made it clear at a press conference yesterday that Navy policy has been revised radically in the right direction in the past few years, but that there still remains a lot to be done before Negroes are accepted on an equal basis with whites.

He gave great credit to ship commanders who display little or no discrimination aboard ship, but shore bases, he said, are something else again. Most serious handicap to Negroes in the Navy is lack of Negro officers, he added. He met only a dozen or so in a month in the Pacific theater.

Morale Problem

There are 45,000 Negro servicemen shore-based at Navy installations in the Pacific, Granger said in his report to Forrestal.

"On the whole," he declared, "the morale of Negro seamen is about the same as among whites. They both want to come home; they're both bored and homesick. But conditions are intensified among Negroes. They are inclined to exaggerate conditions of discrimination."

11-2-45

Granger said he found plenty of instances of discrimination during his trip, most of it due to the personal feelings of some "not so intelligent" commanding officers.

The highest morale among Negroes in the Navy is on vessels of the fleet and at air fields, Granger reported. Careful pains are taken on both to avoid discrimination and "there is a minimum of difficult."

He took occasion to blast the policy aboard the Boreas, a refrigerator ship he visited at Pearl Harbor, where the mixed crew showed considerable "strain" and where a definite effort was made to maintain segregation.

The reason for low morale among Negroes in Seabee groups was that headquarters detachments were all white and the stevedore crews were all Negro.

The Final Answer

"Somewhere between the best and the worst are the Marines," he said. "There they have strict segregation." He said that of five Negroes sent to Officer Candidate School of the Marine Corps, not one received a commission. Resentment among Negroes in the Marines against this obvious discriminatory ruling is running high, he said. Negroes are not even allowed to re-enlist in the Marines in the Pacific, he added.

Granger also said there was intense competition among all shore-based Navy personnel in the Pacific for the attention of native women.

"And now they're worried about what's happening at home," he declared. "They are irritated by strikes and the slowness of Congress in doing anything toward reconversion. They're also worried by increasing civilian indifference toward what will happen to them when they come home. The final answer to the whole problem of a democratic Navy is the abolition of all types of segregation," he said.

Charge Benning Ignores Orders

Atlanta, Ga. Daily World

11-28-45

WASHINGTON—In violation of War Department Order No. 97, the commanding officer at Fort Benning, Ga., has allowed rigid jim crow practices against Negro soldiers, it was charged here last week by the NAACP in a letter to Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson.

The NAACP letter charged that Negro soldiers 'have been bodily thrown out of the camp cafteria" and that in the soda shop they may only purchase ice cream cones to take out. Other charges are:

Negro soldiers are discouraged from using the main post theater which is a modern, air conditioned building seating 1,500 persons: a small 409 seat auditorium on a segregated basis is the only place they can use for viewing motion pictures; theater Number 3 which seats nearly 1,100 persons is entitled closed to them.

SMALL BUILDING

The only service club available to the 3,000 Negro troops is a small building inconveniently located in the woods. After a two-year delay cafeteria facilities were finally obtained last year. The facilities were in operation for one month when the PX which obtained control of service club sales on food and drinks closed it. As the PX does not serve Negro soldiers. soft drinks have been available to these men only through machines.

Negro soldiers are not allowed to ride in the camp's all-white bus system and Negro officers have been forcibly ejected from them The bus system set up for Negroes usese a different route from the reuglar bus line, and, while white buses run every twenty minutes, Negro buses are not able to keep even an hourly schedule. They may not use the main bus station.

In post headquarters there are separate sanitary facilities for Negroes and whites 11-28-45

The NAACP requested an immediate investigation and a correction of the conditions. A protest was sent simultaneously to President Truman.

"ACTING ON ORDERS"

The questioner then asked why the "jim-crowed" sleeping arrangements couldn't have been sprinkled throughout the companies of all three student battalions rather than have all colored confined to one company on the campus. He was told that there was the "little matter" of "administration," especially that as related to a venereal disease rate check specifically requested to be kept on colored troops. 12-22-45

The captain excused all other questions by saying he was acting on orders from higher authorities.

al Students Segregated

The Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

LONDON—The U. S. Army even segregates Negro students attending the Army's Shrivenham American University, in England. The 119 colored GIs attending the university are concentrated into one company of the first of three battalions.

A company commander, Captain Yandell, when questioned by one of the colored students, said Negroes were given separate sleeping facilities "in order to minimize racial friction." This is being done, although most of the 4,035 white students hail from Northern States in America. 12-22-45

British Club 'Off Limits' To Tan Yanks

The Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

PARIS—High Army officials here have received a complaint from 181 members of the 500th Port Battalion. The complaint charges that the NAAPI Club in Antwerp, a British establishment commonly known as the 21 Club, has been placed "off limits" to Negro troops, although Tan Yanks have been admitted on other occasions.

The battalion is stationed about ten miles outside Antwerp.

Upon arriving at the club, Nov. 30, several of the troops said an American military policeman met them at the door and informed them that it was "the wishes" of the British members that Negro troops be barred from this club, and that it had been placed off limits to all Negro troops."

The MP backed up his statement with a signed order, the protesting soldier declared.

The soldiers said they had been attending the club for the past two years. 12-23-45

The Tan Yanks were even more indignant because the club was declared off limit to Negroes only.

Military Jim Crow Rapped

The Atlanta Daily World
Atlanta, Ga.

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — A scathing denunciation of America's jim crow policy during World War II was made here last week by Monroe Sweetland, an American Red Cross field supervisor who served 23 months in the Pacific war theater.

12-16-45

The segregation of Negroes in separate army and navy units was a "tragic blunder in the policy of a democratic nation," he said, and emphasized that no such discrimination was practiced against Mexicans, Puerto Ricans, Chinese, Koreans, American Indians or citizens of Japanese extraction.

He has never seen or heard of a single incident engendered thru "pan-racial" policies, he remarked in citing numerous examples of non-segregation in Red Cross activities. Red Cross hospitals libraries, canteens, recreational facilities and athletic tournaments were conducted on non-discriminatory basis by white and Negro supervisors, he said. 12-16-45

Jim Crow Won In Pacific War

P.M.

12-12-45

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Monroe Sweetland, who served 23 months in the Pacific war theater as American Red Cross field supervisor, yesterday condemned both the Army and Navy for their undemocratic policy with respect to Negro troops.

He termed the segregation of Negro personnel in separate Army and Navy units as a "tragic blunder in the policy of a democratic Nation," and emphasized that no such discrimination was practiced against Mexicans, Puerto Ricans, Chinese, Koreans, American Indians, or citizens of Japanese extraction.

New York, N.Y.

Sweetland cited numerous examples of non-segregation in Red Cross activities and emphasized that he never had seen or heard of a single incident engendered through this "pan-racial" policy. Hospital libraries, canteens, recreational facilities, and athletic tournaments were all conducted on non-discriminatory basis by both white and Negro supervisors.

The Army-Navy segregation policy was particularly tragic, Sweetland said, in the light of the experience of the Nisei interpreters who lived and fought with every Army and Marine combat unit in his theater. He stated that in his opinion every soldier returning from that theater would fight any mistreatment of this group in the U. S. A., and he added that this would also have been true in the case of Negroes if the Army and Navy had employed intregated units in that theater to a similar extent.

Sweetland added a footnote to his statement when he noted that in the 90 days he had worked in a hospital in Okinawa, he never had known a wounded soldier to inquire as to the source of blood plasma being used for transfusions.

Jim Crow Prevents "Rochester" From Army Tour With Jack Benny

Atlanta (Ga) Daily World

Letter From Orson Welles Reveals Point

HOLLYWOOD — (ANP) — Jim crow is the real reason why "Rochester" did not make a tour of the various fronts with Jack Benny.

That information was disclosed in a recent letter to Jack Benny by Orson Welles in which Welles pointed out how Benny informed a general that he and "Rochester," Eddie Anderson, were friends.

Said the Welles letter:

"A friend of ours who's toured with you tells me that a general asked you that question ('why doesn't Jack take Rochester?') in North Africa and that you answered something like this:

HE'S A NEGRO

"Well, I'll tell you sir, Rochester would like to come and I know the boys would like to see him but you would like to see him but you see, general, he's a Negro."

"The general said he couldn't see why Rochester should be embarrassed. 'Suppose he were here, for instance,' said the general. 'We could put him up very comfortably in the Negro barracks. He'd get every consideration.'

"Then, our friend says, you told the general very politely, why that wouldn't do at all. 'Rochester is a part played by Eddie Anderson,' you said. 'Rochester is my servant but Eddie Anderson is a member of my troupe. We've worked together and lived together for years. When Eddie's with me, I don't go any place he isn't allowed to go. That means that if you didn't invite him here to the officers' mess for dinner, I couldn't come either. I'd have to stick with Eddie because we're friends, and that's the way it is.'

GENERAL SURPRISED

"You mean,' said the general, 'that Rochester would expect to eat and sleep in the same places that you do?'

8-3-45

'I mean that I'd expect him to,' you told the general, and that ended the conversation.

"Jack, I'm writing you to ask the general's question and the GI's question all over again: 'Jack, where's Rochester?'

NEGRO PEOPLE WRONGED

"Without meaning to at all, you and Eddie have been doing the Negro people a grave wrong. These gags about gin-drinking and crap-shooting are usually good gags, and Eddie makes them sound hilarious, but through the years they've helped perpetuate a dangerous myth. You and I and Eddie know very well tha orgeN tswher ief very well that Negroes aren't chronically irresponsible stooges born to shine shoes and steal neckties. But Rochester is one of your most valuable comic properties and it's Eddie's livelihood.

"I'm not asking either of you to give up Rochester, I'm suggesting that you put him to work in a good cause. You can undo all the harm you've done innocently at home by very deliberately taking him overseas.

8-3-45

"Sure it's easy for me to sit here by my typewriter and ask you and Eddie to endure all the strain. It's easy, but you and Eddie are the kind of men it's easy to ask a lot because you give a lot without taking any bows. Here's a chance to give more."

Welles extended his love "to Mary," then signed off.

White Soldiers Denounce Jim Crow

The Black Dispatch Oklahoma City, Oklahoma 9-15-45

Two letters, recently published in "Yank" magazine, are so filled with brotherhood and democracy, the Black Dispatch feels they should be elevated to our editorial column. We want our readers to note these letters, written by white soldiers who have fought for the past several months beside Negro troopers, and who feel jim crow ought to die at home just as it died on the battlefield under the barrage of death.

Truly there are profits in war when the heart of a Mississippian can be touched and tempered as indicated by this message from a Southern youth taught from childhood to hate black people.

The letters follow:

* * * * * *

Dear Yank:

I received a copy of your magazine and read that the AMG is letting the Germans go back to school. After that I read in the Mail Call about the jim crow treatment of colored American soldiers.

Now I am from Mississippi. Until I came into the Army I hated Negroes. It wasn't anything they did to me; I just didn't like them. Since I have been in the ETO I have fought from D-Day to V-E Day with Negro soldiers. I was wounded twice in one foxhole and a Negro saved my life by using his first aid kit on me. Then he carried me to where a doctor could work on me. This was under heavy fire. Later he died. He was from New York and he knew I was from the South where he had no freedom.

Many Negro soldiers have died on the front for American soldiers who thought jim crow was right. So if Germans can have freedom after they have caused so much suffering and destruction, why not let the Negro race have what they fought for? I feel that they should, and a lot of Southern GIs feel the same way.

Germany. T-SGT. WILLIE JONES.

* * * * * *

Dear Yank:

The other night we had a jam session with some colored boys from a Quartermaster trucking outfit quartered near us. This morning we were read an order which prohibits us to associate with the colored troops "except on business."

A colored tank outfit fought side by side with this regiment clear to Steyer, Austria, and we were never ordered not to fight alongside the American troops of the colored race, so why should we be forbidden to associate with other American soldiers because of color?

Germany. PVT. DAVID ICHESON.

Navy Racism

Daily Worker N.Y., N.Y.

THE Commander-in-Chief of the U.S. Army and Navy, President Truman, and Secretary of the Navy Forrestal should not have to be told their duty in the case of the Negro quartermaster company and the aircraft carrier Croatan. This company of 123 high-point veterans, according to a Herald Tribune story Wednesday, was refused passage at Le Havre because, as the carrier's commander explained, over the protest of Army officers, the Navy's general policy was "not to mix the races."

It should not be necessary to tell Mr. Truman and Mr. Forrestal that their duties are to investigate that incident, fix the blame and punish the guilty.

We take the liberty of reminding these officials of their duty because, knowing that they have been so busy of late shouting for democratic practices in other countries, they might overlook this episode in their own.

Speaking of reminders, may we remind the President and the Secretary of the Navy to remind the officers commanding the Croatan of these pertinent facts: that it has been the Navy's official and announced policy since 1943 to "mix" Negro and White personnel; that examples of this "mixing" are shown on the Hawaiian Island of Ohhu, where there is the Kaneohe naval air base; on Treasure Island in San Francisco Harbor, and on certain ships, specifically the refrigerator ship Arctic, at Pearl Harbor. At all these places Negro and white personnel, men and women, have mixed in all relationships, work and social.

The people expect the Navy to enforce its non-discrimination policy and to punish those who violate it.

ST. LOUIS CITIZENS ACT FOR LOCAL FEPC SETUP

The Worker N.Y., N.Y. 12-9-45

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Negro and white residents of this city in an emergency meeting last Sunday formed an inter-racial committee "for minority rights" to campaign for passage of the Caston Fair Employment Practice Ordinance.

The measure, known officially as Aldermanic Bill No. 242 and introduced into the St. Louis Board of Aldermen by Jasper C. Caston, Rep., Sixth Ward, provides a $500 fine for discrimination because of race or creed or color in hiring or firing or job grading.

Approximately 125 Negro and white representatives of labor fraternal, civic, professional and religious organizations, meeting in the Central YMCA, formed the committee. John Rossen, presiding, emphasized the importance of the measure as guarding the job rights of all persons during the city's reconversion program. 12-9-45

Oliver Thornton, well-known official of the Elks, heads the continuation committee of 28 members. He announced that the group meet within a few days at the Caston FEPO headquarters, 1041 N. Grand Blvd.

LILY WHITE FLAG DEAD AHEAD!

Chicago Defender

Jim Crow Drops Anchor At Maritime 'USO

Chicago, Ill.

By THYRA EDWARDS
(Defender New York Bureau)

NEW YORK—Jim Crow has established beachheads in merchant marine recreation centers throughout the country from San Francisco to Baltimore.

The growing lily-white policy of the United Seamen's service was blasted this week by Oliver Boutte, Jim Drury and Clyde Gannaway, port agents at San Pedro, Calif., San Francisco, Calif. and Mobile, Ala., respectively.

The USS was launched in 1942 by the maritime unions, ship operators and War Shipping administration to provide recreation and residence facilities for merchant seamen. The organization operates much as the USO serves the armed forces.

9-8-45

Policy Sabotaged

The USS constitution guaranteed equal accommodations to all seamen regardless of politics, race or religion in all of its 130 facilities, including 21 residential clubs, 10 recreational lounges and seven rest centers in U. S. ports.

Local representatives were recruited as board members and local advisory committees set up to implement the program in each port. Through the manipulation of these local groups the national policy of equality has been deliberately sabotaged—so far, with passive acceptance from the national office, of which Douglas Faulkner is executive director.

In the Los Angeles USS local, anti-Negro, anti-Semetic, anti-Mexican and anti-labor Municipal Judge Leroy Dawson was recommended for board membership by Executive Director Van Buscurk. Judge Dawson is reputed to spend his spare time working over suspects in the city jail, wringing "confessions" from them by the well-known rubber hose method.

Movie Star's Wife Anti-Negro

In this same area, Mrs. Pat O'Brien, wife of the movie actor, and chairman of the USS recreation committee, ejected all Negro hostesses building up a hostess unit inhospitable to Negro seamen. San Francisco presents a similar situation.

9-8-45

In New Orleans seamen share identical facilities in the National Maritime Union hall and aboard ship, but return to port to be housed Jim Crow De Luxe in two separate buildings side by side, one for Negroes, one for whites. In Mobile, Ala. separate residences are under way in seperated locations.

In Baltimore, a busy port with many Negro seamen shipping, USS facilities are exclusively for white. Philadelpha, locally a Jim Crow town, and New York are cited as examples of complete racial integration in all the facilities.

Say Negroes Ask Segregation

At the National Headquarters of the USS at 39 Broadway, New York City a staff member admitted that once a separate facility is set up the tendency is to use it as an example and an excuse for extending the practice in other localities.

In some areas, they say, the Negro advisory committee requests separate facilities. According to the National Office, the USS will not set up separate, Jim Crow facilities where the Negro advisory committee resists.

"The State of Louisiana and the City of Norfolk are the only localities in the U. S. with laws against housing Negroes and whites jointly," this executive said. "The local committees have not chosen to take up the fight to repeal these laws."

Seamen Don't Object

9-8-45

Objections to joint facilities in all cases have arisen from the local people who do not use the facilities. In no case have the seamen for whom the service is operated raised objections to sharing them with any seamen.

Joe Curran, president of the National Maritime Union, is national vice president of USS. At the union's convention in New York City recently seamen demanded that Curran take these complaints before the national board of USS and get a housecleaning.

Members of the National Negro Advisory Committee of USS include Dr. Channing Tobias, Judge Hubert T. Delany, Judge William Hastie, Roy Wilkins, Max Yergan, Lester Granger and Ferdinand Smith.

Army Jimcrow Kept 'Rochester' From Touring With Jack Benny

By ANN SEYMOUR

Jimcrow prevented Eddie (Rochester) Anderson from joining Jack Benny on his recent eight-week entertainment tour of the European fronts.

The details of this shocking act of discrimination against the popular Negro actor are disclosed in a letter sent to Jack Benny by Orson Welles.

Said the Welles letter in part:

"A friend of ours who toured with you tells me that a general asked why you did not take Rochester with you to North Africa and you answered something like this:

"'Well, I'll tell you, sir. Rochester would like to come and I know the boys would like to see him but you see, General, he's a Negro.'

EDDIE ANDERSON

"The General said he couldn't see why Rochester should be embarrassed, 'Suppose he was here, for instance,' said the General, 'We could put him up very comfortably in the Negro barracks. He'd get every consideration.'

"Then, our friend says, you told the General very politely, why that wouldn't do at all. 'Rochester is a part played by Eddie Anderson,' you said, 'Rochester is my servant but Eddie Anderson is a member of my troupe. We've worked together and lived together for years. "'You mean,' said the General, 'that Rochester would expect to eat and sleep in the same places that you do?'

"'I mean that I'd expect him to,' you told the General, and that ended the conversation.

"Jack, I'm writing you to ask the General's question and the GI's question all over again: 'Jack, where's Rochester?'

Congressional Medal Of Honor Given No Negro

Journal & Guide
Norfolk, Va.
12-15-45

NEW YORK — Declaring that President Truman has awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor "litreally in batches" to white heroes of the war, The Crisis magazine remarks editorially that it seems "strange to Negro Americans" that not one out of nearly a million of their men in the service have won the nation's highest honor. The editorial in the December issue entitled "Not One Out of a Million," follows:

12-15-45

"Brave white heroes in our armed services have been awarded the nation's highest decoration, the Congressional Medal of Honor, literally in batches by President Truman. The Crisis would not take one ounce of credit from these men whose citations suggest that the honor they have won, high as it is, is not adequate thanks for their sacrifices and heroism. Yet it does seem strange to Negro Americans that out of the nearly one million of their men in the armed services not one should have performed in such a manner as to be cited for the Congressional Medal of Honor."

On the Anti-Semitism Story

Had an interesting conversation this afternoon with a friend of the paper's about our story of last Sunday on anti-Semitism in the Army and Navy. The story was the one in which we charged that until two months ago soldiers and sailors were taught officially by the U. S. Armed Forces Institute that the genuine American is essentially Nordic, preferably Protestant—and that the Jew is an offensive fellow unwelcome in this country.

Our story said that the anti-Semitism was taught in a USAFI correspondence course in College English. As part of this course, students were given an anti-Semitic chapter from a book written by Andre Siegfried and asked to sum up his ideas.

We gave the story a big play and headlined it Army, Navy Taught Aryanism until 2 Months Ago. We explained down in the story that the course containing the lesson in anti-Semitism was listed in the USAFI catalog issued in March, 1944. We quoted the USAFI's spokesman as saying that the outfit began moving in October, 1944, toward eliminating this material, but made the point that we knew of one soldier who received it as late as April, 1945.

Later in the week we learned that a soldier in Maryland, enrolled in the course had received the anti-Semitic material as late as the week of June 17. So we printed that, and apologized for having accepted at face value the USAFI's statement that the material had been withdrawn.

Our friend called up to talk about the story after he had spoken to an Army officer in the Army Division of Information and Education in Washington under which USAFI operates.

He said his talk with the officer had raised these principal points:

Hats Off!

Hats off to Sen. Harley M. Kilgore and to his committee investigating Germany's war potential (see editorial on page 2, chart on page 3 and story on page 4). His investigation already has unearthed an amazing story of German industrialists' plans to prepare for World War III, and to finance German underground activities against the Allies.

That our publication amounted to an advertisement that the Army sanctioned anti-Semitism as a matter of Army policy, whereas this course was not Army policy, but a blunder.

That our story, while technically correct, conjured up in the reader's mind a picture of every soldier being taught anti-Semitism, although only 2609 actually had received the course. (We reported this fact as soon as we learned it, on Friday.)

That the emphasis and play we gave the incident might be dangerous, because anti-Semites could use our story to show that even the Army approved.

To take them up in order:

PM didn't say that anti-Semitism was a matter of Army policy. We did say that the Army taught anti-Semitism to the soldiers. The Army policy on anti-Semitism undoubtedly is good. As a matter of fact, in one of our stories on the anti-Semitic lesson we quoted an Army orientation sheet, which we accept as Army policy, which contained a clear and ringing denunciation of racism as a device of fascism. However, there are frequently serious gaps between Army policy and Army practice. This was one of them.

The most striking example of

such a gap is in the treatment of Negro soldiers. All Army statements of policy on the subject that I have seen are severe and correct in insisting on full equality for Negro as well as white soldiers. In practical application, however, the Army in many cases imposes a Jimcrowism on colored soldiers that is more onerous than that in civil life.

The point that only 2609 soldiers actually received the course is an attempt to measure anti-Semitism on a quantitative basis—the Army was only being slightly anti-Semitic. Actually, at the time we ran our first story, we didn't know how many had received the course. When we went to the Army Public Relations Office to inquire about the matter, we were told that the course had been withdrawn for "academic reasons" and later the PRO called back to say that the Division of Information and Education of the Army had said that "a few" of the courses had gotten out, but that all of these had been recalled.

We knew that last statement was false, for we had been in correspondence with soldiers who had received the course and it had not been recalled from them. Subsequently we learned of at least one incident in which the course was received by a soldier during the same week in which we were told that all of this course had been recalled. The fact was that the course was advertised in the USAFI's catalog and was available to all soldiers—all this, months and months after Army officials in Washington knew it was bad and had ordered this material taken out.

PM is willing to believe that this course was not Army policy, but a blunder. However, Army spokesmen to whom we went for information—the PRO in Washington speaking for the Division of Information and Education and Lt. Col. Carl W. Hansen at Madison, Wis., officer directly in charge—didn't raise the point that the course was a blunder. Instead, they attempted to defend and "cover up."

It probably is true that anti-Semites can take the story and point to the Army to bolster their fascist position. The basic responsibility, however, is the fact and not the publication of the fact. In any event, anti-Semitism doesn't thrive on publicity, but on secrecy.

Terrifying evidence of this comes from Lt. Col. Hansen himself, who informed PM that USAFI received only one lone complaint against the course before we took it up, and that from a civilian. So far as the 2609 soldiers who studied the lesson are concerned, it indicates that the propaganda was effective, or that they accepted it as Army policy which they were not to protest.

PM makes no pretense at infallibility—we don't claim that our thinking is always right, or that we can always get a complete picture, particularly in the face of an official "cover-up" policy. All we say is that we try our damndest, and if we think there is danger that we might be wrong, we prefer to err on the side of going to bat over an issue such as this one, rather than letting it go by default.

We would be pleased to print a statement from the Army that this incident was a tragic mistake and doesn't constitute Army policy. That undoubtedly is the fact, but until Army practice up and down the line is made to conform to Army policy, we will not be lulled into silence. Actually, our experience with the Army "cover-up" and the continued use of this course long after the date on which Army officials would have had us believe that it had been recalled, is pretty good evidence that if we hadn't yelled it might still be going out.

If the Army really wants to clean up this situation, it will bring disciplinary action against those responsible, whether by design or incompetency or failure to do a thorough job. PM joins with the National CIO War Relief Committee and the Committee of Catholics for Human Rights in asking that action be taken against those responsible, at least to remove them from any connection with education of the Armed Forces.

That is the way Army policy against racism really can be made.

Army Segregation Must Go, Says Mrs. Bethune

Chicago Ill.

Chicago Defender

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—"Segregation in the United States Army serves to demoralize the spirit and soul of the Negro American soldier, setting up a cancerous bitterness which we can little longer afford to evade."

7-19-45

These were the words of admonition which Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune gave to the advisory committee of the women's interest section of the War Department at the close of an official tour of the Fort Dix, New Jersey Army Separation Center.

The occasion was a farewell service for some 400 GIs recently returned from the European Theater, who were about to be released from the army.

The entire contingent was white. However, Mrs. Bethune said she was informed that from 8 to 10 per cent of the men processed through that center were Negroes.

Mrs. Bethune told the women's interest group that they have the responsibility for influencing the community for the acceptance of these returning veterans—that a spirit of good will must be built up which will offset the effects of the numerous hardships which they have been forced to face while in the Army.

"I know what our Negro boys go through," she said, "but we've got to recognize these uniforms and the men who wear them as American soldiers no matter what the color of their skin.

"Negro soldiers coming back from this war will not take what soldiers took following World War I," she warned. "They have more courage and a deeper appreciation for what the Constitution of the United States means to them.

"The final acceptance of the United Nations Charter at San Francisco has tended to spur Negro Americans on to achievement of his own sphere."

7-7-45

She then soberly declared: "We women, Negro and white, must be advocates for this freedom in our community life and in our personal contacts."

The women's interest section is comprised of heads of national women's organizations with a membership greater than 500,000. Miss Margaret Bannister represents the War Department on that committee.

Miss Bannister is responsible for relaying to the War Department the recommendations of the group following each officially designated tour of inspection.

Mrs. Bethune said that this group of women shared her views regarding discrimination levied against Negroes by confining them to segregated units and advocated the elimination of this army policy.

JIM CROW BARS NEGRO SEEKING OFFICER POST

Eight Soldiers On West Front Denied Admission To Candidates' School

WITH THE ALLIED ARMY IN FRANCE — Eight Negro soldiers, all members of the 923rd Engineer Aviation regiment, were reported to have been denied admission to the army's new officer candidates school in this area.

The eight soldiers, first in the 923rd, were sent to the new officer candidate school in response to a radio message under the date of June 21 and Circular 15, dated Feb. 25. First Sgt. Harry White was in charge of the group.

Didn't Know Heroes

He reported to the officer in charge of the candidates, a Mr. Gunthrop, AUS, who appeared totally ignorant as to why "these colored fellows are here". Sgt. White reported to his superior Capt. Walter O. Pfeil, Jr., that Mr. Gunthrop told him point blank, "they were not accepting colored men at the school."

Capt. Pfeil expressed his regret to the men and promised to "try and get an answer from IX Engineer Command as to why they sent radio message asking us to send men down! The 923rd is 12 officers short.

The situation was brought to the attention of Brigadier General Benjamin O. Davis by one of the officers.

"We would appreciate very much if the general would take this up as a personal matter," he said, "because as aviation engineers we stand among the first, but because of 'color' we are denied the rights and privileges of American soldiers."

GI Mother Rallies 2,500 Against Senator Eastland

Afro-American-Baltimore, Md. 7-31-45

PHILADELPHIA

Mrs. Marie A. Williams of 4076 Filbert St., inspired nearly 2,500 persons in three cities to send protest letters to Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, against Senator Eastland's fascist attack upon the integrity of colored soldiers in Europe.

This quiet, active churchwoman, mother and grandmother was stirred to action when the Mississippian, allied with Senator Bilbo in a fight to "bury" the FEPC, charged colored GI's with being an "abysmal failure," and colored officers as being "incompetent."

One-Woman Crusade

Mrs. Williams first wrote Eastland a strong letter, presenting all the facts on the contributions of colored soldiers, and registering her protest to his unwarranted attacks "below the belt."

Next, interpreting Eastland's attack as one also against all American soldiers, Mrs. Williams addressed a letter to General Marshall, urging officially to repudiate the Mississippian's charges. Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson did so last Thursday.

She had 1000 of these mimeographed, called several ministers, spoke in the churches and obtained the signatures. She telephoned her daughter, Miss Hattie Williams, YWCA executive secretary in Patterson, N.J., who secured 1200 additional letters of protest.

G.I. Families Rally

The idea spread to Princeton, N.J., where hundreds signed a single letter to General Marshall. The majority of those signing the protest petitions were parents with sons and daughters in the armed forces and GI wives.

Mrs. Williams has a son in the South Pacific, Lt. Judson B. Williams Jr., four daughters—two of whom are local teachers—and is a grandmother of three. She is an active member of Monumental Baptist Church.

She said: "I keep up with the news and follow important commentators. What I don't agree with, I try to take in my stride—but I couldn't take Senator Eastland's unfair, untruthful and hateful attack."

SENATORIAL INDISCRETION

Montgomery Advertiser 8-1-45

Most of the fine people of the South, and by far the greater majority of Southerners belong to this group, will doubtless join in assuring a Brooklyn woman, Miss Josephine Piccolo of 93 Garfield Place, that some Senators who presumably speak for the South are not true representatives of Southern culture and courtesy. Miss Piccolo recently petitioned a Southern Senator to support a bill which is generally in ill-favor in the South, and which the Senator had picked for a particularly disgusting display of his bad manners and noisome opposition. In reply to the petition the Gentleman from the Deep South addressed an offensively discourteous letter to the petitioner, the salutation of the reply being typical Bilbo-ese, added insult to discourtesy in that it was to 'My Dear Dago.'

In all fairness to the Senator, Miss Piccolo's ignorance is inexcusable. She should have known better than to expose herself to cauculated insult. Had she been following the career of this Southerner as closely as most of us down here in Dixie she would have known that intelligent people simply ignore this particular Senator as much as possible. Of course she has a perfect right to petition members of Congress on any point she may choose since the right of the people to petition Congress for redress is guaranteed in the organic law of the land. But the Constitution fails to provide that any petitioner shall not be subjected to villification, insult, and abuse at the pleasure or discretion of the petitioned.

No one would deny that a Southern senator has a right to insult a lady if her name happens to reflect a Latin euphoniousness, especially if she is not a member of his constituency. Nor does the fact that the lady has two brothers in the military service of our country at the moment and one other who has already paid his life on the altar of democracy soften the Senatorial contempt for foreign sounding names — it would have been the same had one of those brothers been "Eisenhower."

Not many of us in the South would restrict the rights of our Congressmen to express themselves as they please, either in or outside the halls of the Congress. And if they choose to abuse and to insult each other no particular harm is done. But we do insist that no Senator may so grossly misinterpret his congressional immunity as that he will deliberately insult a lady. Montgomery, Ala.

People's Voice N.Y. N.Y. 8-4-45

SEATTLE (ANP)—"Show us where the niggers eat, and we will eat with the niggers," That statement was made by Charlie Barnet, popular band leader, to a Navy lieutenant at Whidboy Island Naval Base, after his band had finished entertaining officers and refreshments were announced for all but Peanuts Holland, only Negro member of the outfit.

The officer is supposed to have asked Barnet: "What are we going to do with the nigger?" The hot-tempered band leader asked, with much indignation, what was meant by that remark, whereupon the lieutenant answered: "Why that nigger can't eat in the officers' mess." 8-4-45

Barnet, who has in times prior to this, gotten into fist fights in the south about his Negro members, in no uncertain terms, told the lieutenant he and his band would eat with the Negro members of the base and did just that, leaving the much surprised officer explaining limply that he was only carrying out orders from higher ups.

J-C Stops Volunteers

Pittsburgh Courier Pa.

WASHINGTON—Negroes who attempted to volunteer in response to Army recruiting appeals in Atlanta, Ga., found themselves unable to cross the dividing line in the Federal office in which the recruiting station had been set up.

In Atlanta, as in other Southern cities, the United States Employment Service operates separate offices for white and Negroes. The recruiting office for the Army in Atlanta was placed on the white side of the USES office. As a result, Negro youths could not volunteer. 12-15-45

The Pittsburgh Courier has called the attention of the War Department to this practice.

Army Objects To Navy Racism

Call Kansas City, Mo.

PARIS. —(ANP)— Army officers here protested loudly last week to the navy's race code in the shipment of Negro troops to America. 12-14-45

While yielding in the transfer of a Negro quartermaster truck company from the U.S.S. Croatan to the Thomas Johnson Victory on racial grounds, the army refused to compromise on the right of one Negro officer and five enlisted men to sail on the Croatan for the states.

The six high point Negro soldiers sailed over the objection of navy officers, who said that the navy's general policy was not to mix the races. Army officials replied that the men would not be removed, unless they were removed by navy personnel.

The clash between members of the two branches of the service on the race question is said to have resulted in bad feeling. The 123 men in the Negro truck company were snatched off the Croatan, a baby flattop, because there are no segregation facilities on the flight deck of the ship. Only the large, roomy hangar could accommodate the 1,226 men.

NEWS-TRIBUNE

An O. P. A. Incident

Reminds Us to Comment That There Is a Serious Lack of Responsible Leadership Among Oberlin Negroes

Several people called our attention to an article in the Cleveland Call and Post for July 7 under the bold, four-column head "Widespread Ban on Negroes Cripples Ohio's OPA Boards." The article singles out Oberlin for special condemnation as a community "once recognized as one of the most liberal spots in the country" which now "bans" Negroes from its price and ration panels and ration office staff.

However, the article points out that Oberlin has plenty of company, that 90 other boards in 19 northeastern Ohio counties "absolutely refuse" to employ Negroes, even on volunteer panels. Cleveland is the only exception, though Canton and Massillon will accept Negro volunteer workers, the article states; and it declares that this situation is in direct opposition to the official policy of OPA as announced by Chester Bowles. "According to OPA regulations, there should be a member of a minority group on every panel . . . (but) despite this fact the northeastern area is completely 'lily-white,'" reports the Call and Post.

It declares that, "In Oberlin, the chairman, Bob Fauver, has made the public statement that he and his staff will resign rather than serve with Negro panel members . . . (that) this biased opinion is quite in contrast to the liberal views expressed in the town . . . (but) no effort has been made to remedy the condition in the town."

———o———

Doubting that Mr. Fauver was correctly quoted in the Call and Post, we have waited until his return from a vacation in Canada before commenting on the article, in order to get his side of the story.

In the meantime, replying to our inquiry as to when, where and to whom Mr. Fauver made the statement attributed to him, the Call and Post informed us that, "He (Fauver) made the statement twice, once during a personal interview in your city and once over the telephone," both times to Herman Burrell, a Negro information specialist employed by the district OPA in Cleveland.

———o———

Fauver Denies Statement; Calls It Ridiculous; States Willingness to Appoint Negroes

Mr. Fauver absolutely denies having made the statement attributed to him by the Call and Post, or any statement which would indicate an unwillingness to serve with Negroes on ration panels or an unwillingness to appoint Negroes to serve.

He says that he did talk to Mr. Burrell twice, first on the telephone and later in person. He states that on the first occasion Mr. Burrell, a total stranger to him, called him long distance, inquired whether there were Negro members on Oberlin's ration panels, and upon being told that there were none, then brusquely and arbitrarily ordered Mr. Fauver to appoint some Negroes. Mr. Fauver says that he was irritated at the officious manner of the stranger who called him and that in reply he called attention to the fact that his (Fauver's) job as local OPA Chairman was strictly a volunteer duty, that he was paid by no one and did not have to take orders from anyone, particularly from total strangers about whose authority he knew nothing, and that if district OPA officials were not satisfied with the way things were going in Oberlin, he would gladly quit, and so would the other panel members.

"It would be ridiculous," declares Mr. Fauver, "for me, or for any of us in Oberlin, to say that we would not serve with Negro members on a ration panel, because there are dozens of civic committees and boards here that have Negro members, on which I, and other ration panel members, have been serving for years. I have worked with Negroes in civic activities in the past and I expect to continue to do so in the future, and I have absolutely no objection to doing so.

"Nor do I have any prejudice against appointing a qualified Negro. The Negro population certainly is large enough to deserve representation on the ration panels," Mr. Fauver told the News-Tribune.

He also declared that in his second talk with Mr. Burrell, in person, he told the latter that the first appointment soon would be made, to give Negroes such representation. He stated Monday that had not his vacation intervened, the appointment would have been made by now.

"The truth is," Mr. Fauver said, "I was astounded to learn that anyone wants a ration panel job. My trouble from the start has been to find qualified, responsible people who would accept the appointments. These voluntary jobs pay nothing and are a terrible headache. They take time and worry and trouble and all one gets is kicks and criticism. Yet, this morning (Monday), a Negro told me that a petition is being circulated asking, or demanding, that I appoint a Negro. Why do they go about it in such a roundabout way? Why hasn't someone interested just come to me and said so? Not a single local person has ever come to me to suggest that a Negro be appointed; and, frankly, no Negro had ever occurred to me as a potential appointee. It never occurred to me to think of the appointment in terms of Negroes and whites, I've been interested only in finding people who have shown in the past that they could accept responsibility and carry it.

"If there are Negroes here willing to take the time and accept all the trouble and do a good job, I certainly would have been happy at any time to appoint them."

———o———

No one familiar with the News-Tribune's editorial policy in the past will doubt where we stand in this matter. We agree thoroughly with Mr. Fauver's statement that, "The Negro population certainly is large enough in Oberlin to deserve representation on the ration panels," and we urge that a Negro, or Negroes, be appointed as soon as possible.

Our only criticism would be of Mr. Fauver's failure to recognize sooner that Negroes deserve representation. However, we are in no position to voice this criticism, because neither had we been conscious of the lack of Negroes on ration panels until it was called to our attention several months ago; and even then we said nothing publicly, because we have recognized that administering the rationing system is a thankless task and that anyone like Mr. Fauver who has been willing to shoulder it deserved pretty much to "run his own show"—providing he did it efficiently and fairly.

Perhaps we have been blind and deaf, but we have yet to see or hear of any serious irregularity or case of favoritism or discrimination chargeable to the Oberlin panels. We believe they have "bent over backwards" to do a conscientious, honest job; and we have not had the slightest desire to throw any unnecessary brick bats their way.

If anyone can cite to us an authentic, serious case of unfairness by the ration board, presumably because of racial prejudice, we certainly will be interested to hear of it.

We do not imagine that the rationing could have been done any more fairly, even had there been Negroes on the panels right from the start—but possibly we just don't know what has been going on. Let's hear it! But certainly let's have the Negro representation; it is obviously the right thing to do, and we believe Oberlin public opinion would be overwhelmingly in favor of it.

———o———

Raising a Question of Bureaucratic Ethics

We sympathize with Mr. Fauver's tendency to "blow up" when a stranger begins to give him orders over the phone; and we see in that part of his account of his dealings with Mr. Burrell the source from which grew the story published in the Call and Post. As stated above, we could not believe from the start that he would be so foolish as to take the position attributed to him by the Cleveland paper.

We question the propriety of Mr. Burrell's action in releasing the story concerning Oberlin to the Call and Post, even if it were true. Here is a question of ethics in a bureaucracy. When one bureaucrat has a complaint or criticism of another in his own organization, is it ethical for him to arrange an attack in the press, or should he take up the matter with their mutual superior officers? Doubtless in Washington by now the proper procedure in such cases is well established; but out here, on the fringes of bureaucracy, rule by boards and panels and appointees is still too new for us to be sure. The basic democratic principle which requires that a public official administering local governmental affairs should be elected by and be directly responsible to the people over whom he has authority, is notably lacking in this business of government by appointees. We tolerate it of course, during a war emergency, as a makeshift that seems necessary; but we do not like it.

Responsible Negro Leadership Is Lacking Here

This whole discussion brings to mind an important impression that we have gathered as we have attempted to study the problems of Oberlin's Negro citizenry.

We are impressed with the serious lack of adequate Negro leadership here. We are increasingly surprised at how few Negroes there are, considering the relatively large proportion living here, who are generally recognized, even by the Negro population, as persons capable of accepting community responsibility. We are convinced that this lack of recognized leadership, and the lack of economic opportunities in Oberlin, are the two prime problems for Oberlin's Negroes—and that ultimately they can be solved only by the Negroes themselves. Moreover, they are closely related problems.

Oberlin Negroes, if one were to judge entirely on a population basis, should be expected to have representation not only on the ration panels, but on the Village Council and Board of Education, and in other similarly important local councils.

But no one merits election or appointment to any of these places of responsibility merely because he is a Negro—no more than because he is blonde or brunette or red headed. Community leadership is won, and is deserved, only on more important grounds—for demonstrated ability and energy, and honesty and insight and imagination and capacity for hard, steady work, and willingness to make personal sacrifices of time and convenience, and willingness to accept complaints and criticism and to get along with people. These are only a few of the qualities which may deservedly attract public recognition and confidence to an individual and place him in positions of influence. The fact that such an individual might be a Negro, should be no more than an incidental consideration. And yet it is an important fact that there are in Oberlin all too few Negroes recognized for such qualities, and the position of the Negro group is seriously weakened because of this fact.

This situation is revealed when it occurs to no one to appoint Negro representatives to the ration panels, or when an attempt is made to find a representative Negro to thus serve, or to run for the Council or the Board of Education. Undoubtedly many have the talent, but in too few has it become publicly recognized.

We realize that racial prejudices still play an important part in creating this situation, and that lack of equal job opportunities (and therefore of money for better educational advantages) is also an important cause; but these are too easily used as excuses—it is all too easy to complain cynically about a "once liberal" Oberlin. It is a much more important fact, and any honest observer will recognize the truth of it, that Oberlin still is liberal enough so that there exists here today a real opportunity for a Negro to obtain to important positions of community leadership, if he demonstrates that he has the other necessary qualifications—necessary in any race.

But, we suggest that such leadership will not develop here except from the initiative of the Negroes themselves. No spoon feeding, have-it-on-a-silver-platter favors from other groups will help them much in the long run.

—o—

Negroes Split by Petty, Personal and Factional Jealousies

We suggest that unnecessarily petty personal and factional jealousies within the Negro group itself are the chief stumbling block in the way of their progress to greater influence in Oberlin—and only they can cure that condition.

Until the Negroes themselves develop a degree of unified pride and confidence in certain of their own leaders, and these prove that they deserve that pride and confidence, and moreover that they have a broad viewpoint concerning the welfare of the whole community—until then, such leaders can hardly expect recognition from other groups. The first step must be greater unity in the Negro group, and a new group pride—not of the chip-on-shoulder sort, not a pugnacious, insulting, strutting or complaining pride; but a well-earned pride in responsible citizenship, and able, responsible spokesmen.

Oberlin Negroes certainly are capable of developing that type of unified, vigorous group morale, and developing able leaders—the talent is here, but is there the will? The situation presents a challenge which no one else can answer for them.

New Bilbo Blast Revives Old Ku Klux Techniques

By VICTOR RIESEL

Some of the most virulent anti-Semitic propaganda techniques of the old Ku Klux Klan organizers are being revived by Sen. Bilbo of Mississippi, it was learned today as protests against his attacks on minorities spread in religious, liberal and labor circles.

In a letter to Benjamin Fischler, a New York accountant, Bilbo asserted that the Jews "denied and crucified Christ," and that Jewish "business relationships" are not based on "square dealing."

Bilbo's note was sent to Fischler in reply to the New Yorker's protest against the Mississippian's efforts to block a Senate vote on the FEPC.

"It is true that your (Jewish) race gave to us Protestant Gentiles, the Bible and the story of Jesus Christ, who died on the Cross for sinners like you and me," Bilbo wrote, "but the sad commentary about your race is that you denied and crucified Christ, our Saviour.

"It ill behooves you as a member of that race to speak of your race being the origin of the greatest moral system of truths, justice and morality as enunciated by Christ, since you orthodox Jews have repudiated this same Christ and throughout the world rumor has it that you do not practice this Jewish code of square dealing, especially in all your business relationships . . ."

"Move to Palestine"

Bilbo then suggested that Fischler move to Palestine.

The Mississippian's note, written as usual on official Senate stationery containing the names of such Senators as Millard Tydings (D-Md.), Pat McCarran (D-Nev.), Styles Bridges (R-N.H.) and others who with Bilbo are members of the Senate Committee on the District of Columbia, attacked the Jews' "mental processes."

"Your mental processes and style of diction are certainly most characteristic of that type of Jew that is lined up with the Negroes and other alien elements in the great metropolis . . ." Bilbo wrote.

Bilbo's attacks on Catholics, Jews and Negroes, for their advocacy of the FEPC, have ignored the energetic support of anti-discrimination legislation by Protestant churches and churchmen throughout the U. S. Among these are the Federal Council of Churches, representing 25 denominations with a membership of more than 26,000,000, and the United Council of Church Women, which speaks for 10,000,000 members.

Prayed for FEPC

Resolutions in favor of the FEPC have been passed by the General Conference of the Methodist Church, General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, the Council for Social Action of the Congregational Christian Churches, the Evangelical and Reformed Church, and the American Unitarian Assn. On June 26, at the height of Bilbo's assault on the anti-discrimination bill, Protestant Churches observed "a day of prayer for the FEPC."

Meanwhile the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions, led by Jo Davidson, sculptor, telegraphed to Sens. Wagner and Barkley that "Bilbo's most recent attack on minority groups climaxed a disgraceful Senatorial career of name-calling and hate-spreading. Because they are aimed at creating disunity and dissension his words and actions cannot be dismissed as irresponsible. We have seen this same method . . . used . . . to pave the way for fascism. We call on you . . . to take the necessary measures to censure the Senator from Mississippi and to force him to discontinue his scurrilous attacks on the American people."

FORMER LOCAL YOUTH GRANTED DEATH STAY

White Plains, N.Y.

Execution For Alleged Mutiny Is Delayed, Judge Advocate Informs Rep. Gamble

Home News

Execution of the death sentence imposed overseas on Pvt. Daniel Jones of Yonkers, formerly of North Central Avenue, Elmsford, has been stayed pending receipt of "clemency materials," a letter from Judge Advocate General Myro C. Cramer to Representative Ralph Gamble states.

The letter answers Representative Gamble's inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the alleged mutiny with which Jones and ten other Negro soldiers have been charged. Seven, including Jones, have been sentenced to death, and four to life imprisonment.

"Every safeguard provided by the laws of the United States is assured to the accused before final action is taken," the letter asserts. It says that there is every reason to trust the judgment of the military court, "which experience discloses to be just and fair."

8-14-45

Friends of the Jones family, which lived for a time at 44 North Central Avenue, Elmsford, and members of organizations interested in the case appealed to Representative Gamble after hearing about the letter the 20-year-old soldier wrote from Mannheim, Germany, telling that the group had been given an unfair trial and all were the victims of a "Negro-hating captain."

Born in New Rochelle December 5, 1924, the soldier was drafted from Elmsford by Board 744 in June, 1943. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Jones of Yonkers. A sister, Mrs. Dorothy Powell, 108 Orchard Street, Yonkers, received the letter informing her of the sentence. Enclosed was a statement by Pvt. Harrison W. Smith, address not given, one of the others involved, backing Jones' claim to innocence.

Discrimination

Jim-Crow---America's Most Expensive Export

A Negro veteran writes on the problems of discrimination in our armed forces as he found them on the war fronts and when he returned home.

Eisenhower Orders No Jimcrow

When our transport landed in Bristol, England, all troops were mustered in their quarters for an orientation talk from Eisenhower's headquarters. The voice over the loudspeaker, in addition to giving us a picture of England made a special plea for inter-racial unity. The speaker in the name of General Eisenhower, stated emphatically that there would be no discrimination against Negroes in that theatre. The Negro soldiers aboard were in high spirits listening to that talk. At last, we thought, there was some one in authority who dared say the right thing. We were also informed that an order to that effect had been sent to all commanders.

But, as an officer said to me once, you can't expect the Army to solve all the problems which have their origins at home. And, of course the problems were not solved. Indeed, there was an intensification of the problems in some cases.

English Resent Jimcrow Rules

The very organization of the Army with its separate Negro units made those towns where Negroes were stationed "colored towns." In such towns white soldiers were not allowed. In other towns colored troops were off-limits. So we had the anomally of breaking England up into colored sections and white sections. Stratford-on-Avon, for example, was a "white town" and colored troops could only go there on conducted tours. Once a group of men from my battalion went on pass to visit the home of Shakespeare, a half day's travelling time from our post. Arriving at the shrine hungry after the long truck ride the group was refused service in the Red Cross Canteen because of "orders from so-an-so."

The English resented this attempt to graft our racial customs on to their social life and kept up a running debate on it in the press. They took sides violently.

In the larger cities which could not be placed "off limits" to either whites or Negroes there were those who were for the dark Yanks and those who were for the white Yanks. Jimcrow made our soldiers ineffective peoples' ambassadors and exposed to view the seamy, divisive side of our democracy.

In Army hospitals and hospital communities Jimcrow did not prevail and one got a chance to see how a non-Jimcrow army would work. Fine! Negroes and white ate, slept, played and took light training together. Many inter racial friendships sprang up among the men. But even these were thwarted and the spontaneous goodwill sometimes turned it into friction.

As an example of this: I left the hospital for a reinforcement depot with a mixed detachment of enlisted men. The noncomissioned officer in charge was a Negro sergeant. When we arrived at the depot the sergeant turned in our records and we waited to be assigned to quarters. Soon a depot sergeant began calling a roster and lining men up for billets. He called the names of all the white soldiers in the group and turned to the Negroes and yelled:

"All of you colored boys over this way in column of twos!"

There went the friendships. In their place was bitterness and resentment. Many white soldiers who had before had no ideas of white superiority were made to think along such lines.

This depot was the Tenth Depot, already cited in the press as the post where brutal treatment was meted out to imprisoned American GIs.

The press didn't mention the fact that white troops on this post slept in brick barracks and Negroes slept in an adjunct known as "Tent City." There was a dance Channel did the jobs they were broke out without the loss of work there.

Although the Negro soldiers fought well they were able to see how Jim Crow wasted the lives of their white comrades and hampered the conduct of the war. During those days around Christmas, 1944, the Germans had broken through our lines and the whereabouts of the enemy was not always known. Foot soldiers were at a premium. Many divisions had to attack with companies of less than 50 percent normal strength.

The very organization of the Army with its separate Negro units made those towns where Negroes were stationed "colored towns." In such towns white soldiers were not allowed. In other towns colored troops were off-limits. So we had the anomally of breaking England up into colored sections and white sections. Stratford-on-Avon, for example, was a "white town" and colored troops could only go there on conducted tours. Once a group of men from my battalion went on pass to visit the home of Shakespeare, a half day's travelling time from our post. Arriving at the shrine hungry after the long truck ride the group was refused service in the Red Cross Canteen because of "orders from so-an-so."

We knew that back around Paris in the reinforcement pools were many Negro soldiers who could not become foot soldiers because mixed units were not allowed and there were not enough men to make up another division. To us who had witnessed our troops go in at a disadvantage Jimcrow seemed a terribly expensive luxury. Some had to pay for it with their lives. And they were mainly white lives.

Again there were the cynical remarks: "If they want to do all the dying, it's O.K. by me." And from those who were in the rear: "Why in the hell did they bring us over here, anyway?"

How It Affected Negro Soldiers

Having experienced the racial laws enforced in parts of America and having been segregated in every country of Europe the Negro GI chuckled when he read in Germany the American Military Government's Proclamation. One of the first proclamations abrogated all of the Nazi laws relating to the purity of the German blood and those laws which referred specifically to a person because of race, creed or national origin. If such a proclamation is good enough for the Germans whom we have defeated, they would say, then it is good enough for the United States.

But even in Germany where we had abolished racism for the Germans the Army went ahead with its program of establishing Jimcrow rest camps. And these camps applied to the Negroes who had volunteered to fight with mixed divisions toward the end of the war.

The hatred of Nazism which our experience in Germany engendered was somewhat softened by the fostering of Jimcrow patterns. To the German civilian the Negro was a curiosity with cigarets and chocolates. So they exhibited no particular animosity toward colored troops, with the resulting gain in prestige of the Germans with the Negroes.

Fort Dix— Jimcrow Again

On the boat coming home most of the Negroes aboard talked of their German friends as a form of protest against the discriminations they had experienced. As we reached New York harbor we got the anti-Negro harangue of Bilbo along with the musical welcome which the city furnished.

The pay-off came when we reached the separation center at Dix. Again all of the white troops were serviced, fed and given quarters leaving all of the Negroes in the group to the last.

And again a sergeant yelled, "All colored boys on this side (indicating on which side to form). You will all go to —— company."

One soldier remarked: "Well here we go right back to second class citizenship again." Another said, "America had better wake up."

America stands on the threshold of greatness. This greatness must not be based on economic or military might. We must be able to exercise moral leadership in the world we are to build after peace. We cannot attain such greatness by hanging onto the outworn ideas spawned from slave pens. In this epoch of atomic power it is time to "wake up."

Demote White Officer Who Backed FEPC

Chicago Defender 9-15-45 Ill.

SHREVEPORT, La. — (ANP)— Capt. Thomas F. Hoult, a white army officer at the Camp Livingston station hospital, is reported to have been reduced in rank for championing the cause of the Negro and the FEPC bill.

Captain Hoult is said to have lost his captaincy following an article he wrote to the Shreveport Times People's forum against an anti-FEPC editorial appearing in that paper on August 2. Reports reveal that he is now a lieutenant.

In his article to the Times, he championed the cause of the American Negro as well as gave an intelligent and scientific analysis of darker peoples in other parts of the world. He charged that his station hospital practiced racial discrimination and segregation against Negro army officers.

"The colored officers in this hospital have no swimming pool, for example," he wrote, "but white officers have an elaborate club and pool." 9-15-45

Capt. Thomas F. Hoult, a former social scientist, pleaded for fair play and justice for darker people all over the world.

Jim Crowism in North

Dear Editor: P/M N.Y., N.Y.

When we were assembled at the Separation Depot in Hawaii to await transportation to our respective discharge centers, I noticed the absence of any color segregation of troops. Negro fellows ate with us, bunked with us, washed with us. Nor was this policy changed aboard the boat bearing us across the ocean, or at Camp Anza, Cal., a reception point for men coming in from the Pacific. The procedure was the same during the trip to Fort Dix. For almost three weeks, colored and white soldiers had lived together without a single troubled incident. However, upon arrival at Fort Dix, we learned that Jim Crow had returned from his brief holiday. 11-26-45

Fort Dix, for the uninformed few, is in New Jersey, and a glance at a map will indicate that New Jersey is definitely above Mason and Dixon's line. There exists an all too prevalent tendency for those of us living in the North to decry the unjust treatment meted out to Negroes in the Southland while we smugly and complacently believe that we are showering them with benevolence and equality up here.

Let us put a halt to this patting ourselves on the back, and let us cease this unqualified hypocrisy. Basically, the Negro is as void of economic and social equality in the North as he is down in the South.

The New Republic

A Negro quartermaster truck company that had been scheduled to sail for the United States on the U. S. S. Croatan . . . was unexpectedly transferred to another transport today following objections by Navy officers. The Navy's position, as explained by Army officers who protested but bowed to the decision of the rival service, was that there were no segregation facilities on the flight deck of the baby flattop. – *William J. Warning Text Radioed To Ships At Sea

The Atlanta Daily World Atlanta Ga. 12-16-45

Wave Of Protests Follow Bar Of 123 On "Croatan"

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) —The Secretary of the Navy issued a warning to all navy personnel that no discrimination was to be practiced against colored members of the armed forces returning home aboard navy ships. The warning was radioed to all navy vessels at sea. The text of the radio follows:

"1. Attention of the Navy Department has been called to a recent incident in which a question arose concerning accommodations aboard a naval vessel for Negro Army personnel returning to this country for demobilization. In order to avoid future misunderstanding on this subject, the Navy policy regarding various racial minorities is restated and summarized for guidance.

NO DIFFERENTIATION

"2. In the administration of naval personnel no differentiation shall be made because of race or color. This applies also to authorized personnel of all the armed services of this country aboard Navy ships or at Navy stations and activities. 12-16-45

"3 In their attitude and day-to-day conduct of affairs, naval officers and enlisted men shall adhere rigidly and impartially to naval regulations in which no distinction is made between individuals wearing the naval uniform or the uniform of any of the armed services of the United States because of race or color."

WAVE OF PROTESTS

The warning came as a result of a wave of protests after Navy officals had barred 123 colored soldiers from returning home on the aircrat carrier Croatan, because they could not be segregated on the ship's deck.

The Navy has promised a complete investigation of the incident upon the ship's arrival.

Resented Insult--"Bread & Water"

Red Cross Worker Describes Incidents Aboard "Cracker" Boat; Steward Jailed For Five Days

The "Cracker Boat" finally docked at New York Harbor the other day and those who survived the incredible mental oppression aboard the SS General Patrick, a troopship returning officers and Red Cross workers to the United States from the China-Burma-India theatre of war, report it was in reality a "floating Georgia," for the Negro personnel aboard.

All the pent-up hatreds the white southerner has for Negroes came out in the open during the 30-day trip from India, through the Indian Ocean, the Red Sea, the Suez Canal, the Mediterranean, and across the Atlantic, reported Red Cross Worker Geraldine Smith, beauteous Chicago schoolteacher and socialite, who volunteered for the Red Cross and who put in four months overseas. Miss Smith came directly to the office of the Amsterdam News upon arrival in New York and unfolded an almost unbelievable story—substantiated with facts.

Fed, Quartered With Whites

Miss Smith and Boyd Overton of Cincinnati, supervisor of the Red Cross Cosmos Club in Calcutta, India, were the only colored Red Cross workers aboard the SS General Patrick, and consequently were quartered and fed with commissioned white officers and white Red Cross workers. There were Negro troops aboard, but they were below deck, Miss Smith said. The ship stewards were all colored, and the court martialing of one of them (navy men call it Captain's Mast) because he objected to being called "boy" by a southern white colonel was a highlight of the experiences aboard the ship.

The white officer was a Col. Powell, Miss Smith reported, who had been a medical officer in charge of the China area. Victim of the Captain's Mast, she said, was Steward's Mate First Class Louis Elander, who got five days in solitary confinement on bread and water diet. The Captain's Mast was held at 11 a. m., Aug. 9, 1945. It came about through Colonel Powell's insulting continuously the mess hall attendants by calling them boy in a nasty tone of voice. He set the pace for the other southerners who wanted to follow suit in embarrassing the Negro stewards, Miss Smith declared. It got so, she said, that the stewards and messmen would not give immediate service such as bringing coffee, etc. Elander's refusal to serve Col. Powell also resulted in his telling the colonel why in the respectful military way required when addressing superior officers.

How Charges Were Brought

The charges against Elander were published as follows: "Louis Elander (n—meaning Negro and spelled with a small 'n'), STM 1/c, Steward's Division: Offense and punishment:

"Punishment: 'To solitary confinement for a period of five (5) days B. & W. (bread and water). Offense: 1. Insolence to passenger officer. When Colonel called boy get some coffee, this STM corrected the colonel in an insolent manner. 'Don't call me boy. Call me sailor. 2. Slow and disrespectful in carrying out orders.—Signed: F. C. Rice Executive Officer."

Captain Farley of the SS Patrick an Annapolis man, according to Miss Smith, who is said to be independently wealthy and whose two sons are navy captains, called all the stewards together for a talk. He told them, she said, that he wanted them to be "more respectful," because after all, if it were not for the passengers, there wouldn't be any need for steward's mates.

It came out at the hearing, that Colonel Powell's loud yells, "boy," resulted in none of the attendants showing up to serve him. Exasperated, the southerner finally had to get up and procure his own coffee. Elander, it was reported, weathered his confinement in the filthy, and suffocating brig pretty nicely, although the bread and water diet was torturous. All the while the ship was proceeding through some of the world's hottest climate.

Wanted to Help the Boys

Miss Smith, who teaches at the Forresville School on Chicago's South Side, was assistant director for four months at the Cosmos Club in Calcutta, because she "wanted to do something to help the colored boys overseas." She sent in her letter of resignation because of the discriminatory attitude of the India Branch Red Cross, implying that the army swimming pool policy in Calcutta made it impossible for her to do an effective job with the service.

The newly built palatial swimming pool in Calcutta was to be run on a strict Jim Crow basis. Miss Smith said, according to the policy laid down by Brig. General Robert Neyland's headquarters. Negro troops (who make up about 65% of army personnel in the India-Burma theatre) were to use the pool two days a week and every third Sunday. All other days were reserved for white troops. Though the specific order making the ruling did not state "Negro troops," every camp and Red Cross installation directed to use the pool on these two "exclusive days," were "100% colored," Miss Smith said.

Reasons advanced for the policy, it was reported, was because of "fear of a wave of friction between Negro and white GIs, especially since a number of American white women stationed in that area were to use the pool. Because of the intense Indian heat, the swimming pool was a necessity for troop morale. The army built the new 140x 240 foot tank for GIs, all of them. In the past, however, the Calcutta Swim Club and the Marine Club, both British, accepted only whites. The only provision for Negroes by the Red Cross was the so-called "Crystal Pool" which is comparable to the "ole swimmin' hole" in a muddy creek. White troops stationed in New Delhi and Calcutta are sent to cool mountain rest camps. Negro troops are sent solely to the filthy and disease-ridden rest camp for colored on the outskirts of Calcuta.—Dan Burley.

Negro GIs Slighted in Army Films

Daily Worker New York, N.Y. 8-28-45

Miss Thelma Dale, acting executive secretary of the National Negro Congress, charged yesterday that the War Department was keeping the Negro soldier from the film as well as from the radio.

While the wires leading into the War Department were still burning with protests over its cancelling The Glass, written by Cpl. Arnold Perl for the "Assignment Home" series featured by the Columbia Broadcasting Co., the Daily Worker learned yesterday that Honorable Discharge and Diary of a Sergeant, film shorts shown at the 135 St. branch Public Library last Thursday night, almost totally ignored the Negro GI.

Members of the audience protested, the Daily Worker learned, that neither film gave more than a fleeting glimpse of a Negro soldier, although both were exhaustive in their discussions of what the ex-service man should do in making use of all aids offered by the War Department. 8-28-45

The white officers and the Negro enlisted man in charge of the films at the library showing were asked to explain why the Negro GI, returning, for instance, to the South, was not shown adjusting himself to his community after months or years in the Army. The audience wished especially to know why the only Negro in one of the films was blissfully asleep among alert white soldiers in a railway car.

The officers replied that no "disrespect" was intended.

"This neglecting the Negro soldier is particularly unfortunate, in view of the fact that the Negro ex-serviceman has special problems," Miss Dale said. "Despite the fact that the officers in charge of the show tried to smooth over ruffled feelings by saying that the Army treats Negro and white soldiers alike, we know that it simply is not true." 8-28-45

She said the people had a right to know whether the Negro GI in the South would get the same benefits under the GI Bill of Rights as the white ex-soldier. Though the films were supposed to explain those benefits, she said, she was as much in the dark before as after, as far as the Negro veteran's treatment in the South is concerned.

NO COMMISSIONS

Five Kept in Dark About Future Duties

PHILADELPHIA

Five colored Navy V-7 students who were denied commissions when the program was abandoned at the University of Pennsylvania shortly after Japan's surrender have taken their case to the NAACP.

In a complaint filed last week with the association's Philadelphia branch they charged Navy officers at the university with discrimination and unfairness in carrying out orders dissolving the program and disposing of the trainees.

Trainees Still Idle

At the same time, it was learned that the trainees who were sent to the Philadelphia Navy Yard to await reassignment to general duties are "simply lolling around" in the receiving station.

Meanwhile, most of the whites who met similar fate have been assigned specific duties at the Navy Yard coinciding with their ratings. They are also getting subsistence pay so that they may live in the city, it was revealed.

The colored trainees openly fear that they may be assigned to labor battalions or given other duties that will not be in keeping with their ratings.

Refused Commissions

Among those denied commissions were:

Victor O. Morris, S1/c, of West Monroe, La.; Lee Brown, S2/c of West Port, Conn.; Edward Gibbs, SK1/c, of Cecil, Ala.; James A. Ruffin, S1/c, of Washington, and David Sloan, S1/c, of Baltimore.

One hundred and nineteen white trainees were transferred to Bainbridge (Md.) Naval Separation Center to be placed on inactive status and receive direct commissions in the U.S. Naval Reserve.

V-7 training was an academic refresher course in which one-year survey courses in college physics, mathematics, engineering drawing and English were taught in four months. At the end of this period the trainees were sent to Midshipman's School to complete their work for commissions.

Navy authorities at the university said that four of the colored trainees were not recommended for commissions because of "weak" academics, and the fifth could not meet physical education requirements because of his weight.

Jews also Denied Bars

In their complaint with the NAACP the trainees denied that they were failing academically and charged that some whites recommended for commissions had received failing grades in some subjects. Most of the whites who were denied recommendations of commissions were of Jewish faith, they added.

Both Storekeeper Gibbs and Seaman Ruffin had been in training successfully for more than eight weeks; Seaman Sloan, veteran of overseas service, for a similar period, and Seamen Morris and Brown for a shorter period, but had successfully passed an aptitude test.

White Army Officer Persecuted For Championing Negro Cause

"The colored officers in this hospital have no swimming pool, for example, he wrote, "but white officers have an elaborate club and pool."

Capt. Thomas F. Hoult, a former social scientist, pleaded for fair play and justice for darker people all over the world. In behalf of American Negroes, he said:

"On the local level, the United States has the opportunity to demonstrate to the colored people of the world that it intends to be democratic in fact as well as in name. Our own country is the proving ground for what we will support and do in the world. If we cannot demonstrate an inherent spirit of good will here, we will continue to be mistrusted by the colored men in other nations, and continued war and misery will be the inevitable result."

Following the appearance of his article in the local Times, the captain is reported to have been reduced to a lieutenant on some flimsy technicality.

A New Idea In Segregation

The U. S. Army seems pretty well wedded to the idea of segregation.

OK, let's let them have it.

Only instead of Jim Crow segregation by which the War Dept. has been trying to establish a second-class citizenship for those of our people who are colored, why not change the pattern of segregation more in line with the real facts?

Instead of segregating Negroes in the Army, why not segregate those of our white Southern military caste who hold to the fascist racial belief that one race is superior to another? In that way, the Army will have its segregation, and still get out of its present uncomfortable position of maintaining an undemocratic army to defend a democracy.

The racists should be satisfied, for they would be segregated off in their own little compartment of the Army, well protected from and uncontaminated by democratic influences. There they could observe the rites and rituals of racism, with nary a Negro or a white who believes in the equality of men in a democracy to disturb them.

That would free the rest of the Army to operate as an Army should operate, on the basis of only one consideration: the ability and willingness of each individual soldier to do his job without regard to distinctions of race and creed.

Whether you like this particular idea for a solution or not, you may want to write to the Secretary of War, Robert P. Patterson, and tell him what you think of the present Army idea of segregating soldiers in Jim Crow units on the basis of color.

Congress delegation who protested to the Veterans Administration against Jim-crow facilities, woefully inadequate at that, the reply was made that VA had to follow local customs. But a few days earlier, Mrs. Mable Staupers of the Association of Colored Graduate Nurses, of New York, wrote VA pointing out that it was hardly consistent. There are only four wards in which Negro nurses are employed, outside of the all-Negro hospital in Tuskegee. She pointed out that in California, New York State and elsewhere Negroes are admitted to practice medicine and nursing, but that in those states VA hospitals do not follow local customs in employing Negro nurses.

Chicago Defender (National Negro Newspaper Bureau)

NEW YORK—Harlem is host to 115 brown-skinned Indonesian merchant seamen this week.

Chicago, Ill.

The sailors are on strike here from a Dutch ship loaded with munitions intended for use by the Dutch government against the Indonesian people. Church and civic groups and the USO Center are taking care of them during the protest.

10-27-45

The Dutch subjects, in an action unparalleled since World War I when British workers refused to work on ships carrying munitions for the war of intervention against Soviet Russia, are out solidly. They are holding up five Dutch ships which were slated to sail for Holland or Indonesia with the materials to put down the independent movement of the brown people.

Among the seamen are Christians, Mohammedans and Hindu Indonesians, all solidly united not to aid their Dutch masters in smashing their Indonesian brothers and sisters.

Defender

Know of U. S. Jim-Crow

The National Maritime Union, which is wholeheartedly supporting the Indonesians, has helped to quarter the men. The Indonesians themselves — suspecting the overtones of color prejudice in America —desired quartering in New York's Negro community, according to one Negro merchant seaman. The Maritime Union said that numerous considerations made it desirable to station the men in Harlem. White seamen said that it was significant that the Indonesians were being quartered in Harlem, in so far as it pointed to growing unity of colored peoples in all lands; that the fact that Harlem is entertaining the men will mean something around the world.

Meantime, the Political Action Committee of the National Maritime Union announced that an American Committee for Indonesian Independence is being formed. It will have nationally prominent sponsors, and it will function as a means of supporting the strikers and also as a long-range body to mobilize American interest in the independence problem of Indonesia's 70,000,000 peoples.

The Indonesian seamen are not organized. They serve on board the Dutch ship with white Dutch seamean. A few individual white seamen joined the strike, it was reported, but the Indonesians went out solidly. Included among the strikers are eight men who spent four years in German concentration camps, a chief electrician and an engineer. The men told the Defender that they had been carrying munitions and other goods throughout the war in the fight against fascism, and that they now felt that this cause was being abandoned—hence their independent action.

10-27-45

The National Maritime Union has protested to the Dutch and British Governments and the American Government in defense of the right of the strikers to get off the ships and against their being returned to the Dutch Government at the end of thirty days when their right to stay here legally ends. The Union is asking for the right of the seamen to be returned to ports of their own choosing where they would not be subject to oppressive action by the Dutch Government.

The National Maritime Union is also arranging for the legal attachment to the crew of the ships to prevent their being able to sail.

Funds to help take care of the strikers, who left all their valuables on board the boats, has been coming in from Dutch soldiers, merchant seamen, American soldiers and others. They have received contributions at the American Committee for Indonesian Independence, 103 West 110th street.

SEPARATE NAVAL TRAINING ENDED

St. Louis Argus — Mo.

Equality In Training Of All In USN

GREAT LAKES, Ill., June 29—The policy of maintaining a special training program and camp at Great Lakes for Negro general service recruits will be discontinued July 1 in accordance with the provision of a directive issued by the Bureau of Naval Personnel. 7-6-45

Pursuant to this directive, induction centers will assign Negroes to recruit training on the same basis as white personnel. Illiterates, both Negro and white, will be ordered to the Naval Training and Distribution Center, Camp Peary, Williamsburg, Va. Previously all Negro general service recruits were sent to Great Lakes.

Change Is In Effect

The recruit training commands have been directed to assimilate Negro and white enlisted personnel alike. At the Naval Training Center, here, Negro and white recruits will be assigned to the same companies. The barracks, recreation halls and other facilities of the Center will be available to all personnel. Already, Camp Robert Smalls which heretofore was used exclusively for the training of Negro personnel, has both Negro and white recruits. Negroes are also in training in Camps Downes, Hull and McDonough which formerly had only white recruits.

The Bureau of Naval Personnel directive was issued in order to obtain the maximum utilization of Naval training and housing facilities and in execution of the Navy's established policy of nondiscrimination and equal handling of all personnel wearing the Navy uniform.

NAACP Leader Tells of Disillusionment of Negro Soldiers in Pacific Area

Des Moines, Iowa

Iowa Bystander

Cincinnati, Ohio — In an Army and Navy approved broadcast, July 7 over the Columbia Broadcasting System, Walter White. NAACP secretary told of the despair and disillusionment of American Negro soldiers in the Pacific as a result of the perpetuation of the same racial theories they are supposed to be fighting to eliminate in other parts of the world. 6-12-45

Examples were cited of friction between whites and Negroes, and of discriminatory treatment against individuals and whole company units by those determined on transplanting overseas the racial patterns practiced in the most backward sections of the United States.

Experiences responsible for dampening morale in general, were those similar to the case of white Marines who, without provocation heckled and fired upon Negro Navy base company camps on at least four occasions. Forced finally to defend themselves after one of their number had been killed, the Negroes were later charged with rioting and unlawful assemblage.

"For weeks," he related, "a few marines had been throwing bricks, empty beer bottles and, upon three occasions, hand grenades and smoke bombs into camps occupied by Negro navy men.

"When no attempt was made by the authorities to stop the attacks or punish the attackers, the colored men in despair deterimned to defend themselves when next attacked.

"The next assault took place a few days later on Christmas eve," White said.

Negroes Shot

"On Christmas day one Negro serviceman was shot and killed and another shot by white servicemen.

"These and other assaults infuriated the men who had been attacked to the point that twice they attempted to go into town to take vengeance.

"On one ocasion they were turned back; on the second they were arrested, charged with rioting and unlawful assemblage."

Wanted to Help U. S.

Another instance cited by Mr. White was that of a Negro youth who enlisted on his seventeenth birthday, "in order to serve my country and help my race."

During later inquiries, however, it was brought out that this same lad had been twice found guilty and convicted by a court-martial of five days solitary confinement on bread and water; first, for sitting in the only vacant seat immediately under the sign dividing Negroes from whites in a bus in Virginia; second, for entering a "white" Virginia restaurant to purchase food.

"The point I wish to make," declared Mr. White, after a review of these circumstances, "is not of such clashes which race prejudice has caused unfortunately in many theaters of war. I want to personalize the corrosive effect of ignorance, bigotry and proscription. As a result of this the spirit of many men particularly Negroes has been dampened and in some instances wholly crushed. 6-12-45

Has Effect on Natives

"The perilous effect of such manifestations of race prejudice," Mr. White pointed out further, "extends beyond American Negroes to the natives whose aid we need now in winning the war and whose friendship we will need after the war if we are to have peace."

On the brighter side White reviewed the performance of the 93rd Division commended by General Dunckel of the American Division; the role of Negro GI's in the construction of roads, airfields on Guam and Saipan, together with their handling of thousands of tons of supplies close on the heels of invasion troops.

Realization, according to Mr. White has come to many white men in the Army, Navy, Coast Guard and Marine corps that the problem of race is neither a sectional nor a national one in the United States, but an increasingly important world problem. 6-12-45

Can't Be Same Again

"Men cannot be quite the same

"It is tragic that it took a war costing millions of lives and billions of dollars to teach us this lesson. Says Hitler Theories Plague GI's in Pacific

EXAMPLES CITED

U.S. Prejudice May Void Frisco Charter

CINCINNATI, Ohio — In an Army and Navy approved broadcast July 7 over the Columbia Broadcasting System, NAACP Secretary Walter White told of the despair and disillusionment of colored American soldiers in the Pacific as a result of the perpetuation of the same racial theories they are supposed to be fighting to eliminate in other parts of the world.

Examples were cited of friction between white and colored troops and of discriminatory treatment against individuals and whole company units by those determined on transplanting overseas the racial patterns practiced in the most backward section of the United States. 7-14-45

Experiences responsible for dampening morale in general, were those similar to the case of white marines who, without provocation, heckled and fired upon colored Navy base company camps on at least four ocasions.

Forced finally to defend themselves after one of their number had been killed, the colored men were later charged with rioting and unlawful assemblage.

Case of 17-Year-Old Youth

Another instance cited by Mr. White was that of a colored youth who enlisted on his seventeenth birthday "in order to serve my country and help my race."

During later inquiries, however, it was brought out that this same lad had been twice found guilty and convicted by courts-martial to five days solitary confinement on bread and water:

First, for sitting in the only vacant seat immediately under the sign dividing colored from whites in a bus in Virginia; second, for entering a "white" Virginia restaurant to purchase food.

Says Bias Affects Natives

"The perilous effect of such manifestations of race prejudice," Mr. White pointed out further, "extends beyond colored Americans to the natives whose aid we need now in winning the war, and whose friendship we will need after the war, if we are to have peace." 7-14-45

Realization, according to Mr. White, has come to many white men in the Army, Navy, Coast Guard and Marine Corps that the problem of race is neither a sectional nor a national one in the United States, but an increasingly important world problem.

No Prejudice in Foxholes

"Men cannot be quite the same again," he declared, " in their opinions of each other when they have seen their comrades die for an ideal commonly held. Race or religious prejudice is seldom present in a foxhole."

"It is tragic that it took a war costing millions of lives and billions of dollars to teach us this lesson. But some of us are awake to the fact that to date in this war 180,000 human beings have died for each of the 991 pages of Hitler's hymn of hate, 'Mein Kampf'; that 300 men, women and children have died for every word in that infamous volume."

Hope for a better future based on a new attitude as exemplified in the case of returning colored veterans whose white comrades stood ready to "break up the joint" when they were refused food in a Washington department store, was seen by White.

In this situation, MP's summoned to the scene (themselves World War veterans) said: "If these men who have fought together overseas, seen their buddies die, themselves wounded, want to eat together, we don't have a damn thing to do with it."

White Turns Prophet

Mr. White concluded prophetically, "The ten years after the war is finally over will unquestionably be the most critical in all human history. We will have to demonstrate then whether we are in earnest in pledging at San Francisco that there shall be no discrimination on account of 'race, religion, language or sex.'

"If the example of the veterans in the Washington department store characterizes our post-war racial attitude at home and abroad, then there is hope of lasting peace.

"If, however, the majority of the people of the world, who are colored, see in the United States a recrudescence of organizations like the Ku-Kluz Klan, of riots, of lynchings and of racial proscription, then their faith in us will be reduced and their fear of us will grow to the point of explsion. 7-14-45

Vets Must Enjoy Freedom

"We cannot afford the dangerous fatalism of accepting the inevitability of post-war riots. We cannot afford to let 700,000 colored Americans now overseas return to find that the freedom for which they fought is not shared by them. Many of them have reason to fear just that.

"A few days ago a colored soldier in the China-Burma-India theater wrote me that the soldiers of a white regiment near his own greeted the news of German's surrender with joyous shouts of 'Two down—one to go.' But the colored soldiers' comment was 'Two down and two to go—Japan and race prejudice back home.'

"Will the overwhelming majority of Americans who are willing to give their lives and fortunes for preservation of democracy arouse themselves in time to defeat the bigots at home and abroad who are sowing the seeds of racial hate? In the answer to that question lies in large measure the fate of us all."

Negro GI's Jim Crowed In India; Red Cross Worker Quits In Protest

Chicago Def 7-7-45

By DETON J. BROOKS
(Defender War Correspondent)

NEW DELHI, India — Dixie tradition won a smashing victory when it was announced last week that the palatial swimming pool, newly-built in Calcutta, would be run on Jim-Crow basis.

According to the policy laid down by Brig. Gen. Robert Neyland's headquarters, Negro troops will use the pool two days a week and every third Sunday. All other days will be reserved for white troops.

Though the specific order making ruling does not state "Negro troops" every camp and Red Cross directed to use pool on these two "exclusive" days is 100 per cent colored.

Morale Fades

When announcement was made the morale of Negro troops at the Calcutta base, which had considerably improved recently as a result of modifications of discrimination policy strictly adhered to by Neyland's predecessor, Maj. Gen Francis Cheeves, struck a new low.

Intensely incensed, the colored GI's openly proclaimed determination to organize a mass demonstration in protest against this policy. Only the strongest pleas by more level-headed Negro soldiers and civilians stationed in this area prevented tragic consequences which would result from this action.

In view of the temper of the soldiers, Red Cross workers are refusing to conduct tours to the new pool. Rodney Higgins of St. Louis, Mo, director of the Negro Rest Camp Red Cross club, in a letter to Red Cross headquarters pointed out this policy violated American principles of democracy and warned that in view of the temper of the sun-tan GI's, his staff could not comply with request to conduct parties to the pool. Mild-mannered Boyd Overton, director of the Cosmos club and stationed overseas for 18 months was forced to take a similar stand. 7-14-45

Asked to Accept Jim-Crow

Both directors were called in by National Red Cross Headquarters and requested to use every means possible to force acceptance of the policy by their staffs. As Thomas W. Irving, acting national director, is reported to have stated in an interview with Overton: "The Red Cross is adjunct of the army and as such cannot afford to buck policies laid down by theater command."

At least one Red Cross worker has resigned in part for this policy She is Geraldine F. Smith, Chicago school teacher at Forrestville school, who took a leave of absence to become assistant director of the Cosmos club "because she wanted to do something to help colored boys overseas." The former school teacher stated in her letter of resignation that the discriminatory attitude of the India Branch Red Cross among other things implied in the army swimming pool policy made it impossible for her to do an effective job. She is at present awaiting acceptance of resignation and transportation home.

In answer to queries by this correspondent top-flight officers of the base command give as a reason for this policy, "Fear that there will be a wave of friction between Negro and white GI's especially since a number of American white women stationed in this area will use pool."

Southerners Influence Policy

It is believed however that the personal attitudes of a number of the staff officers, many of whom are southerners, have gone a long way in influencing their advice to Gen. Neyland causing them to evince far more concern about racial friction than facts warrant. There have been no serious outbreaks between white and colored soldiers in this theatre. In fact along the Ledo Road where discrimination has not been practiced there has been the friendliest feeling between the two groups.

Because of the intense India heat, decent swimming facilities are a great booster of troop morale. It was the realization of this need which prompted the army to build its new 140x240 foot tank for GI's though in the past white troops have not been entirely devoid of decent facilities. Through the generosity of two British swim clubs, the Calcutta Swim club, and Marine club, both of which refused permission for Negroes to enter, they have been allowed attendance under supervision of American Red Cross. The only provision the Red Cross made for Negro troops was at so-called Crystal Pool, which could be compared only to "old family swimming hole."

While white troops stationed in comparative luxury of New Delhi and Calcutta may go to cool in mountain rest camps to rebuild morale and physiques during this intense heat, colored troops who have admittedly had the toughest job, building the Ledo Road through malarial infested jungles of Burma and have done a magnificent job, are only allowed to come to a rest camp near filthy disease-ridden Calcutta and by this latest ruling are deprived of complete use of facilities provided there.

Says Mistreatment Embitters Negro Service Man

Daily Worker

CINCINNATI, July 15. — Walter White, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said in a broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System here that Negro soldiers whom he met in the Pacific told him of their disappointment and dissatisfaction over continued practice of "those racial theories they were supposedly fighting to destroy." The broadcast was approved by the Army and the Navy.

White cited the cases of a white Marine who, "without provocation, heckled and fired upon Negro Navy base camps on at least four occasions." Negroes who were forced to defend themselves were later charged with unlawful assemblage and rioting. 7-16-45

"The point I wish to make," White said, after reviewing other similar cases, "is not of such clashes which race prejudice has unfortunately caused in many theaters of war. I want to personalize the corrosive effect of ignorance, bigotry and proscription."

He charged that the spirits of many Negro soldiers had been adversely affected.

"The perilous effect of such manifestations of race prejudice," White declared, "extends beyond the American Negro to the natives whose aid we need now in winning the war." 7-16-45

There was a brighter side, however, he said, referring to performances of the 93d Division, commanded by Gen. Dunckel, the role of Negro GIs in constructing roads and airfields, and of Negro troops' handling thousands of tons of supplies close on the heels of invasion troops.

He said that many white men in the Army, Navy, Coast Guard and Marine Corps now realized that "the problem of race is neither a sectional nor a national one in the United States, but, increasingly, an important world problem."

"Men cannot be quite the same again in their opinions of each other when they have seen their comrades die for an ideal commonly held," he said, adding that it was "tragic that it took a war costing millions of lives and billions of dollars to teach us this lesson." 7-16-45

He estimated that, to date, 180,000 men have died "for each of the 991 pages of Mein Kampf" and that 300 men, women and children have died for every word in that infamous volume."

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Your Voice of the People column of July 14 contained several exceptionally interesting letters. I should like to add my opinions to those expressed in that issue.

First, I agree that the Jim Crow segregation laws are obsolete here as well as in my home State of Texas. 7-21-45

Second, as to the Negro soldier's record in this war, from what I saw in Europe, he has done what has been asked of him—and more. It is a shame that there are oft-times irresponsible men in responsible positions who will show such narrow-minded prejudice and poor judgment as did the Senator from Mississippi in his remarks about the Negro soldier.

Third, I think that to make FEPC a permanent part of our government would be a mistake. I thoroughly endorse its high motives, but I oppose its methods. Neither decency nor fairness can be legislated. The problems of the Negro and of fair employment without discrimination are problems with a long historical background, and the solutions must evolve through education and understanding. The answer does not lie in the dictates of a governmental bureau. To tell a man whom he can or cannot hire is a definite infringement upon his rights. 7-21-45

Representatives Of 25 Groups Join In Appeal

BUTLER, N. J. — (SNS — Meeting over the weekend at Goodwill Camp, representatives of 25 national organizations, of all racial and religious affiliations formed the National Committee to Abolish Segregation in the Armed Services and addressed a resolution to President Harry S. Truman urging that as Commander-in-Chief he issue a proclamation abolishing every vestige of segregation in the armed services.

Gathered together at the invitation of A. Phillip Randolph, president, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL; Willard S. Townsend, president, United Transport Service Employees, CIO; Morris Milgram, national secretary, Workers Defense League, and Wilfred Kerr, chairman, Lynn Committee to Abolish Segregation in the Armed Forces, the delegates voted to form a permanent organization known as the National Committee to Abolish Segregation in the armed Services, to cooperate with all existing organizations presently engaged in the fight, and to enlist the support of organizations all over the country in the campaign.

DEMANDS EQUALITY

5-5-45

A feature of the conference was an address by Mayor N. D. Mace of the Borough of Butler, himself a veteran of World War I, who declared that "the only way to stop future wars is to treat mankind equally." He said that "no matter who you are, or where you came from, you have a right to equal opportunity on this earth."

Named as members of the planning committee to perfect plans for the organization were, in addition to Mr. Randolph and Mr. Kerr, Layle Lane, Merrit C. Brown, Morris Milgram, Louis B. Greenberg, Robert L. Carter, Ezra Parrott, Sol Stetin, William E. Hill, Ludlow Werner, Mrs. T. D. McNeal, Guichard Parris, Theodore Griffin and Clara Clayman.

5-5-45

DOCTRINES FALSE

The conference resolution, unanimously adopted, read as follows:

"At a time when the armed forces of the United States are engaged with the United Nations in the total defeat of governments predicated upon military despotism and wholly false doctrines of racial superiority, and

"At a time when there are vast numbers of the armed forces of the United States fighting and dying for a freedom which they have not been accorded in their native land, and

"Whereas it is totally inconsistent with the great sacrifices which all elements of our nation are making to establish, preserve and perpetuate freedom upon this earth that the Negro soldiers and soldiers of other minority groups should be subjected to segregation and other discriminatory practices, and

"At a time, too, when the United Nations are engaged in establishing the structure for a permanent organization to insure world peace and in the words of the Dumbarton Oaks proposals, to 'promote respect for human rights and fundamental freedom,' and

"Since racial equality and the complete integration of all groups are essential for real peace and international cooperation,

"Therefore we call upon you Mr President, as Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces of the United States, and we call upon the Military Staff and the Congress of the United States to abolish every vestige of segregation and discrimination now practised. Only in this way can the United States maintain an unassailble positoin of world leadership in the fight for freedom."

No Mention Made Of Navy Barrier

Atlanta World.

1-11-45

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—While the Navy persists in its total exclusion of Negro nurses and the Army takes only a handful and uses all those sent overseas to minister to German prisoners, President Roosevelt made a plea to Congress, in his message on the State of the Union, for amendment of the Selective Service Act to provide for the induction of nurses into the armed forces.

"One of the most urgent immediate requirements of the armed forces," the President declared, "is more nurses." Last April the Army requirement for nurses was set at 50,000. Actual strength in nurses was then 40,000. Since that time the Army has tried to raise the additional 10,000. Active recruiting has been carried on, but the net gain in eight months has been only 2,000. There are now 42,000 nurses in the Army.

"Recent estimates," he continued, "have increased the total number needed to 60,000. That means that 18,000 more nurses must be obtained for the Army alone and the Navy now requires 2,000 additional nurses."

He went on to point out that the present shortage of Army nurses is reflected in undue strain on the existing force. More than a thousand nurses are now hospitalized, he stated, and part of this is due to overwork. "The shortage is also indicated by the fact that eleven Army hospital units have been sent overseas without their complement of nurses." At Army hospitals in the United States, he continued, there is only one nurse to 26 beds, instead of the recommended one to 15 beds.

"It is tragic that the gallant women who have volunteered for service as nurses should be so overworked. It is tragic that our wounded men should ever want for the best possible nursing care," the President emphasized.

He cited figures to show that the inability to get the needed nurses for the Army is not due to any shortage of nurses. 280,000 registered nurses are now practicing in this country he said. It has been estimated by the War Manpower Commission that 27,000 additional nurses could be made available to the armed forces without interfering too seriously with the needs of the civilian population for nurses for nurses.

1-11-45

At no point, however, did the President recommend that the Army and Navy discard their discriminatory policies toward Negro nurses.

White Officer Pleads for Justice to Colored GI's

ATLANTA, Ga. (ANP)—Declaring that it has been his experience as an officer that colored men make first-rate soldiers, Lt. Jerome Chaiken, just returned from combat and now assigned to Fort Benning, in a letter to the Atlanta Journal asks, "Why don't we treat them as first-rate citizens?"

3-3-45

"Despite what cynics say," he continues, "I like to feel we are at death grips with the Nazis and Japs because they tried to deny man his fundamental right to be free. Yet there are those among us, soldiers and civilians, supposedly at odds with the enemy, who unconsciously or intentionally refuse to grant certain segments of this nation their inalienable right to be free.

"If we allow justice and reason to govern our thinking, the day will come when the spirit of Lincoln will not be just a dream but a reality. On that day the seeds of peace will transplant those of war. For then men will prove they can live together in harmony, regardless of race, color or creed."

Eastland of Mississippi

(Cleveland Call and Post, July 21)

WHEN U. S. Senator James Oliver Eastland of Mississippi tried on the floor of the Senate to besmirch the record of Negroes serving in the armed services of this nation, he stepped too far. The reaction of the press of the nation has been unanimously against him.

The Ohio State Journal of Columbus was representative of the nation when it said: "His (Eastland) attack on our Negro soldier in Europe was both uncalled for and unfair." Papers all over the nation have branded Eastland for the liar and charlatan that he is.

Until the political intelligence of the South is raised to a higher level than Eastland, America cannot do too much boasting about its democracy. Senator Eastland is elected from a state that is the second lowest in the number of votes cast in elections. Less than 20 per cent of the people in his state voted in 1944. He embodies all the backwardness and bigotry of the South. His state has a $2 poll tax. Eastland is one of the best reasons as to why the South is the nation's number one problem.

'Officer Slammed Door In Her Face,' Lena Says

Pittsburgh Courier Pa.

WASHINGTON—The War Department expects an early report of the Army investigation of the difficulties which Lena Horne, star of stage, screen and radio, ran into at Camp Joseph T. Robinson, Ark., while on an entertainment tour of Southern camps, an authoritative source said last Saturday.

Miss Horne made her charges of rude treatment to the Hollywood Victory Committee and the USO which were responsible for her tour. She said her reception at Camp Robinson was cool and the special service officer there was rude to her and slammed a door in her face.

According to her version of the incident, no arrangements had been made for her appearance. While entertaining white troops on the post, she said, she noticed admissions were being charged and no colored soldiers were in the audience.

1-20-45

NAZI IN AUDIENCE

Upon inquiry, she said, she was told admissions were charged to keep civilians out of the post theatres and that there were only 50 colored soldiers on the post and they would be reached later during her tour of the post.

She said she discovered at a USO Center in Little Rock that the colored soldiers did not know she was appearing at the camp. The next day she insisted that a piano be sent to the mess hall of the colored troops and she put on a full show for them at breakfast. White civilians drifted in during her performance but left after breakfast was served, she said. Upon seeing German prisoners of war in the audience, she refused to continue the tour of the post.

After she left the post, she said, a Service Club hostess called her to say the commanding officer wanted her to return to the post to discuss the matter, but she replied no discussion was necessary, at every other post or camp she had seen the commanding officer first, and she was returning to Hollywood.

Ensign Giles Smith, one of twelve colored men commissioned by the Navy, is back in Great Lakes after less than a day's assignment to New Orleans.

Upon his arrival there, he was told that he couldn't stay because he might be killed. Dixie, it was said, is "not ready yet" for colored Naval officers. He was shipped out the same day he arrived. He now has detachment orders for the Southwest Pacific.

Ensign Smith's original transfer to New Orleans was punishment for asking his senior officer, one Captain Fields, for tickets to the Sonja Heine ice skating show in Chicago.

Taboos

The original twelve colored Navy ensigns were ordered not to visit the officers' club at Great Lakes, and not to associate with white officers, even when whites extended the invitation.

When studying for their commissions, they were segregated in one barracks, not the Mainside regular officers' schools.

White seamen are brought to colored camps to train colored boots (recruits), to become familiar with colored personnel, get commissions, and take colored drafts out to base companies.

Promotion Limited

For dozens of colored seamen with high college degrees, lawyers and businessmen of experience there has been no chance to file papers for officer procurement.

Ratings are pegged. Only a certain number may go to colored sailors. No matter how useful he may be, he remains a striker.

The Army has over 5,000 colored officers; the Navy fewer than 50. The Army has 247 colored nurses, the Navy none.

Attempts to Incite Riot on SS Murphy Foiled by Crew

AFRO-AMERICAN
Baltimore, Md.

By D. R. RICHARDS

NEW YORK.—The story of the prevention of a race riot by the crew aboard the S.S. John H. Murphy in February was brought to the attention of the AFRO, this week.

5-5-45

It all began when a white Army lieutenant, backed up by a white Navy officer, went looking for trouble aboard the ship by calling colored officers names, using profane language, and challenging them to fight.

The incident occurred on the night of Feb. 21, 1945, and only the cool-headedness of the colored officers prevented a battle royal. The crew got together, appointed a committee to investigate, and presented a report of the case to the commanding officer of the armed guard.

5-5-45

Army Officer Arrested

As a result, the Army lieutenant was arrested pending a court-martial, and the Navy officer submitted an apology to the crew.

The text of the report made by the committee and signed by Ensign Maxie J. Broughton, USMS, is as follows:

"Around 22:15 on the night of Feb. 21, 1945, the chief steward and second assistant engineer entered my room and reported to me that the Army lieutenant was in the officers' saloon starting trouble by insulting the officers of this vessel.

5-5-45

'The steward called the Navy lieutenant also because some of the armed guard were involved. I went down to the saloon and looked for the Army lieutenant, but did not see him. I then went to the gangway and the Army lieutenant was going down the gangway with some enlisted men of the Army.

Challenged Men to Fight

"This lieutenant started pulling off his field jacket and calling the ship's officers names. When he got off the gangway, he began using profane language to the ship's officers about what they did to colored in Texas and inviting them on the docks to fight.

"It seemed as if this lieutenant was trying to start a race riot by the remarks he was making, with the backing up he got from the armed guard yelling: 'Call out the Navy.'

"When he heard that, it seemed to give him more power to curse and insult the officers of this vessel, but as officers and gentlemen of this vessel, we are referring this case to higher officals for action immediately."

Navy Officer Apologized

After the case was brought to light, the Navy officer who was the chief co-instigator with the Army lieutenant of the provocation humbly apologized for his actions to the crew.

He stated that he realized that his remarks of that evening were cowardly and that they could have well led to bloodshed and the breaking down of authority aboard the ship. He promised to rectify his mistake by his perfect behavior in the future.

Several days later, Col. Perry E. Euchner of the Inspector General's Department, came aboard and took sworn statements from officers involved in the incident and from members of the ship's committee.

Upon leaving he said that the Army officer had been arrested and would in the near future be court-martialed. Colonel Euchner also promised an apology from his section of the U.S. Army.

The committee on the ship which investigated and reported to the commanding officer included Harry Allison, boatswain; Raymond Grandy, carpenter; Joseph Thomas, deck engineer; and Hyman Hodes, seaman.

Beaver, Pa., April 3

The Nation

Dear Sirs: I recently had the misfortune to meet a high-ranking American officer who boasted that he had been "transferred" from three commands because of his openly expressed anti-Semitic views. This officer has not been dismissed from the service; he has merely been transferred. By its "attitude of non-intervention" the army has helped perpetuate existing prejudices. Prejudice is not instinctive; anti-Semitic and anti-Negro attitudes are developed in growing citizens by the deliberate anti-democratic propaganda of an adult minority. Incidents involving racial prejudice should be reported to the proper authorities whenever possible, and should be widely publicized. Attempts should be made to educate the guilty toward a more democratic way of life.

Segregate Nurses At Army POW Camp

Pittsburgh Courier Pa.
1-20-45

NEW YORK—Humiliation of Negro Army nurses in the presence of German prisoners, as a result of discriminatory orders issued by an officer in the Prisoner of War Camp Hospital in Florence, Ariz., was brought to the attention of the War Department by the NAACP in a letter to Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy.

The letter read: "We have received information from Florence, Ariz., that American Army nurses have been ordered by a Major Simpson to eat in a separate dining room.

PRISONERS OF WAR WITNESS HUMILIATION

"These nurses, we understand, are in a hospital at the Prisoner of War Camp at Florence. They feel especially humiliated and degraded because, even though in the uniform of the United States Army, they were set apart under the very noses of German war prisoners who serve as cooks and waiters in the hospital officers' mess.

"The nurses felt their humiliation so keenly that on the first day the order was supposed to take effect they seated themselves in their old stations in the dining room whereupon Major Simpson called the chief nurse and publicly told her that the separate arrangement had been instituted because it was the way he wanted it and the nurses must obey because they were in the Army and had sworn to obey orders of their superior officers.

1-20-45

ARMY NOT ANXIOUS TO INCREASE NURSES

"The German prisoners, of course, looked on this scene with great glee, and the Negro nurses went to their jim crow dining room boiling mad.

"We understand from announcements from Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, Surgeon General United States Army, that the Army is not anxious to increase the number of Negro nurses, but if incidents like the foregoing illustrate Army policy, I am sure you can understand that Negro nurses in their turn are not anxious to serve in the Army."

War Dept. Refuses to Make Report Public

DISPUTE HINTED

Balt., Md.

Fate of Col. Selway, Storm Center; in Doubt

WASHINGTON

The report of the investigation into the arrest of 162 flying officers at Freeman Field, Seymour, Ind., in connection with the attempted use of an officers' club by colored commissioned personnel while stationed there, is under consideration in the War Department.

Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson disclosed this information at a press conference Thursday in reply to an impertinent question imputing bad faith to the War Department in not making public the report immediately.

5-26-45

Refusal Defended

The refusal to make public the report, Mr. Patterson said, "is not a deliberate attempt on the part of the War Department to suppress news and it is not a delay caused by bickering in the War Department."

He stated that "there is a report, made by the Inspector General's Department; it is here, it is very voluminous, and it is under consideration." He added that "the matter is being thoroughly considered."

Disagreement Suspected

Failure of the War Department to make public the report may most likely be attributed to disagreement in the War Department over recommendations contained in it.

5-26-45

The report is a classified document, meaning it is secret, restricted, or confidential, and its contents will not be made public until it has been declassified.

Just who is in disagreement with the report could not be learned. It may be Gen. H. H. Arnold, commanding general of the Army Air Forces, Assistant Secretary John J. McCloy, or Truman K. Gibson Jr., civilian aide to the Secretary of War.

It was understood at the time the investigation was begun that the report would go to the McCloy committee for its concurrence or recommendation. This committee is concerned with policies affecting colored troops.

The primary issue involved in this investigation is very simple. It concerns the right of any officer at any post, station or camp to be admitted to any club established for the use of commissioned personnel.

5-26-45

An Army regulation states that no officer shall be denied admittance to any officers' club at any post, camp or station.

After the arrival of the 477th Medium Bombardment Group at Freeman Field, the stratagem was adopted of setting aside an officers' club for instructor personnel and an officers' club for student personnel. It happened that all the teacher personnel were white officers and all the student personnel were colored officers.

Only 3 Still Held

The first attempt of colored officers to use the teacher-officers' club occurred on April 5 and 6. A number of them was arrested. All were released except Lts. Marsden Thompson, Roger C. Perry and Shirley R. Clinton, against whom charges were preferred for the alleged jostling of an officer while attempting to enter the club.

A week later 101 colored officers were arrested for refusing to obey a direct order of their superior officer.

5-26-45

They were charged with refusing to certify that they had read a base order issued by Col. Robert R. Selway Jr., the commanding officer of the base and also of the bomber group. This order specifically set aside one club for teacher personnel and the other for student personnel.

Selway's Fate in Doubt

Also necessarily involved in the investigation is the question of the further usefulness of Colonel Selway as commanding officer of the bomber group. The officers under his command have had similar trouble at both Selfridge Field, Mich., and at Godman Field, Ky.

The antagonisms aroused among the colored officers by his efforts to impose race segregation is known to have had an adverse effect upon them.

When the War Department ordered an investigation of the trouble under the supervision of the Inspector General of the Army, all further action was frozen. However, the 101 officers arrested for refusing to certify that they had read the base order was released.

INDIANTOWN GAP, — Pa. The War Department has put an end to segregation at mealtime of patients in the Army hospital here.

5-26-45

Although there has been no segregation in the sleeping quarters which the men occupy, hospital attendants, contrary to Army orders, had directed colored soldiers to certain tables and white soldiers to others.

Following an official investigation, patients are now permitted to sit wherever they please in the mess hall.

Colored Flyers Barred From Squadron's Party

SANTA MARIA, Calif. — Although they helped support the party and veterans' memorial dance — an all-squad party — Squadron C (colored) were not permitted to participate in the dance April 19, at which Benny Carter's band played, on orders of the commanding officer.

When after reading the notice on the bulletin board, signed by the commanding officer, members of Squadron C, only colored squad on the field, asked their CO about it, he said a group of outside girls had remarked that they would not attend if Squadron C attended.

Flagrant Discrimination

New York Age

Editor: The New York Age:

I am an officer returned back from a tour of duty overseas. There I had occasion to work with and hear about the heroic work of our Negro troops.

N.Y. Age

At Atlantic City, those who have completed their tour of duty are allowed rest and recreation. Negroes are given the same privileges as the white boys in the Air Force hotels. However, there are still flagrant cases of discrimination.

5-26-45

The other day, several men, including two Negroes, took an Army bus to a private gold club that was enjoying the benefits of Army patronage. The two Negroes had just returned from overseas and had several ribbons on. One of the boys had a Purple Heart. The boys were curtly told that Negroes were not allowed on the course and were not allowed to play. This on the day when the victory they had helped bring about was announced.

5-26-45

This club at which this happened was the Ocean City Country Club, at Somers Point, N. J. I understand other clubs in the vicinity have the same policy. If the Army cannot dictate the policy of the clubs because they are private, the least they can do is NOT make these places available to our soldiers by running buses to the grounds. What can a Negro soldier think of a democracy for which he had risked his life, but which slaps him in the face so cruelly?

Wounded Vets Urged to Play Golf, But No Negroes

Washington Tribune

Washington, D.C.

By Calvin News Service

5-26-45

According to the rehabilitation program of the Professional Golfers' Association, following a special meeting in the Washington offices of Colonel Augustus Thorndike, Medical Corps, U.A.A., where the swanky country clubs like Chevy Chase, Woodmont, Indian Springs, and Virginia Beach of Washington, D.C., plus some from Baltimore, were represented, a grand program is in the offing for golfing for wounded vets with no mention being made of the Negro golfers, who were sent back to the United States in pieces.

The reason for bringing up the Negro question is due to the fact that the pros attending Colonel Thorndike's meeting know full well that few, if any, ever play on the links of the exclusive clubs around Washington and Baltimore.

In Baltimore, most Negroes frequent the Carroll Park Course and in Washington they flock to the Langston Hughes Course (adjoining the project) and go to the Rock Creek Course which is partially or wholly municipal.

L Efforts are Being Made L

5-26-45

Leo Diegel is the national PGA rehabilitation director. He is doing wonders at making golf available for wounded vets at the Valley Forge Hospital near Philadelphia and Forest Glen and Walter Reed Hospitals in the D.C. area.

Information reveals that wounded Navy men use the Woodmont course while the ritzy Chevy Chase has abandoned its usual high-toned attitude. The facilities of Columbia, Indian Spring, and Kenwood are supposed to be available to all injured servicemen.

The pros made a generalized statement in remarking, "We can't do enough for those boys," but few Negroes have turned out and which can be a matter of serious or non-serious conjecture. The $64 question is "How much is considered enough for a Negro — especially by borderline residents of D.C. and Maryland?"

The Wacs and the Seabees

Highlighting the news of the past week was the action of the Army's Judge Advocate General's office in voiding the sentences of four Wacs at Camp Devens, Mass., and the action of the Navy Review Board in changing from "dishonorable" to "honorable" the discharges of fourteen members of the 80th Naval Construction Battalion.

The Wacs, who had each been sentenced to a year at hard labor, plus dishonorable discharge, because they refused to perform menial tasks at Lovell General Hospital on the ground that white Wacs were not so assigned, are now back on duty. This is as it should be and as predicted here two weeks ago. afro-American

The case against them is closed but not so is the case against Col. Walter M. Crandall, hospital commander, whom they charge with saying that he did not want "any black Wacs" as hospital technicians or in the motor pool at Devens.

In our book, Colonel Crandall's offense, if proved, is far more serious than that of the four young women. His words, if true, libel every colored woman in the United States and indicate definitely that he is not fit to be in command. 4-14-45

It does not seem reasonable that the Army should let him off without trial. In spite of its segregated pattern, the Army, by recent directives, has made it clear that discrimination, such as is charged, will not be countenanced. It can prove that it means business by having Colonel Crandall answer the charges leveled at him, just as the Wacs were required to answer. Baltimore, Md.

The case of the Seabees indicates that the Navy, which has been slow to adopt in practice the democratic ideal which it has preached, is now willing to admit that there are two sides to every question. The Navy has been noted for its mass trials and convictions.

The Port Chicago mutiny trial in which 50 men were sentenced to serve prison terms of from five to fifteen years, is still fresh in the public mind and efforts are still being made to have these sentences reviewed.

The NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund is still accepting contributions toward the defense of these men for whom there is still a ray of hope. The trial record and briefs are now being reviewed by the Judge Advocate General of the Navy and his decision will be reviewed by Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal.

There is evidence that when the facts are brought to the attention of proper and responsible authorities there is reason to believe that the ends of justice will be served. Too often, it must be admitted, such authorities have not been reached.

Patriotism on the part of colored Americans has never been questioned and records do not reveal the conviction for treason of any colored American. This is a record of which we are justly proud.

We ask that the Government complement this record by building a record of fairness and square-dealing. None can deny we are entitled to it.

And while on this subject, let the Navy bear in mind that while it now has around 160,000 colored men serving, it has less than 35 colored commissioned officers, some of these warrant officers.

Since every "incident" reported by the Navy has been traceable to a conflict involving enlisted men and white officers, might not they be materially reduced by placement of more colored officers in responsible positions?

Atlanta Ignores Negro Citizens in Celebration Honoring Gen. Hodges

The Call 6-8-45

ATLANTA. — (ANP) — Although many Negroes from Georgia were members of Gen. Courtney H. Hodges' First army in the European Theater of Operations including those who for the first time in modern history fought side by side with white Americans, Atlanta officials in arranging for the gigantic welcome party for the returning Georgia-born commander chose to ignore them.

No Negro faces were seen among the score or more officers and enlisted men flown to Atlanta for the celebration and no Negroes were included in the line of march.

The Booker T. Washington high school band was called at the last minute to stand and play at the tail end of the procession, but did not march. The Atlanta Naval Air base band, composed of Negro musicians with a white commander, played a brief concert in the heart of the city. 6-8-45

Chief Specialist Graham W. Jackson of the navy was called upon to perform on the piano and his accordion at the Hotel Biltmore at the formal reception tendered Gen. Hodges Thursday night. Kansas City, Mo.

The whole affair left a bitter taste in the mouths of many Negro Atlantans who knew their sons, too, had fought with Gen. Hodges to achieve the victory the city celebrated.

Assert Hospital Segregates Its Negro Nurses

Segregation of 10 Negro cadet nurses at U. S. Marine Hospital was protested today by the Cleveland branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

According to Dr. N. K. Christopher, branch president, the Negro cadets, who were assigned to the hospital May 1, live in a housing unit separated from other occupants of the building.

"We ask all citizens to take cognizance of this threat to improved inter-group relations," Dr. Christopher said. Adding that the NAACP had voiced its first protest to Dr. A. R. Sweeney, commanding officer at the hospital, shortly after the arrival of the student nurses, the only cadet nurses assigned to the hospital.

"After a week's consideration, Dr. Sweeney informed us that he was not willing to change any of the facilities provided for the Negro cadets," Dr. Christopher said.

He added that the group had sent protests to Congressman Frances P. Bolton, Senator Harold Burton and Surgeon General Thomas Parran of the U. S. Public Health Service.

A letter received yesterday from the latter's office indicated that "it has been a policy in all hospitals to group cadet nurses together."

'To Hell With Bilbo' Meeting Puts Fear in Miss. Senator

AFRO-American
Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON

Asserting that his attitude toward colored people, Catholics and Jews was being misrepresented, Sen. Theodore G. (The Man) Bilbo (D., Miss.), declared Friday that he is not as narrow or bigoted as he had been made out to be. 7-14-45

Bilbo was provoked by a newspaper item which stated that a "To Hell with Bilbo" mass meeting was being held at the Abyssinian Baptist Church in NYC to demand his impeachment for his vilification of racial and religious groups during the Senate filibuster against an FEPC appropriation.

Double Talk

He defied anyone to find in his two-day tirade "any denouncement of Jews as Jews, Catholics as Catholics, or colored people as colored people."

"Others may do it, but I do not denounce them as a class, or as races," he said. "God knows, I am not that narrow or bigoted."

Some of his best friends are Catholics and Jews, Bilbo said. Nearly all Catholics in Mississippi vote for him, he added. "Jesus Christ was a Jew," he said, adding that "Some of my associates are Jews."

Slaps at Randolph

Bilbo said he was talking about individuals, "for example, A. Philip Randolph, who threatened to bring 200,000 colored people into Washington and in that way persuaded the President to issue the original executive order which created the damnable FEPC."

While professing great admiration for Jews, Bilbo could not refrain from applying an epithet to them. He said there "is a certain class of 'kike' Jews in New York, organized with the CIO and the colored people in a drive to cram this piece of legislation (FEPC) down the throats of the American people." He added that that is the class to which he refers.

Dewey "Doomed"

Evidently beginning another tirade, Bilbo declared that Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York "is dead politically." He said "when the people of New York finds out what he has put over on them in the form of the FEPC law, he will not be able to muster a corporal's guard to vote for him for President."

Before Bilbo could get warmed up, the president pro tempore, Sen. Kenneth D. McKellar (D., Tenn.), admonished him that it was against Senate rules for Senators to speak during the morning hour when the Senate is transacting routine business.

Bitter Race Hatred in Navy Bared by Veteran Chaplain

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md. 12-25-45

BOSTON—Bitter racial hatreds aboard the ship to which he was assigned were vigorously condemned by Lt. Comdr. Harvey Swanson, Naval chaplain of Lancaster, Pa.

Charging enlisted men with being guilty of "the most bitter forms of race hatred," he asserted, "the moral rottenness, deep-seated, dangerous and widespread, is still on the increase, and covered with a conspiracy of silence that I for one can no longer condone."

"All this talk about the beautiful comradery of the men is untrue. One colored man with a college education, by the policy of the Navy, could not advance to petty officer rank, because other sailors would not tolerate his being their superior."

Negro Soldiers Military Civilian Police In Early Tuesday Morning Incident

Atlanta World Ga. 3-9-45

JACKSON, Miss. — Negro soldiers and military and civilian police were involved in an incident here early Tuesday morning that rapidly became the subject of many conflicting rumors and reports throughout the city.

The incident took place at the Illinois Central Railroad Station between six and seven o'clock. According to reports, a group of Negro soldiers had arrived in Jackson aboard an earlier train and while awaiting the departure of the train on which they were to continue their journey to Camp Shelby, Mississippi, began fratenizing with white soldiers whom they met upon arrival in Jackson in the lobby between the White and Negro waiting rooms. 3-9-45

When military police sought to break up the fraternizing which was somewhat loud, probably due to a little drinking among some of the group they are said to have been threatened with a weapon said to have been in the possession of one of the soldiers.

While the soldiers and military police were engaged, word of the engagement reached the civilian police. In the meantime, however, the Negro soldiers had all returned to their car which had been set out on the station tracks to await being attached to the south bound train.

According to reports, upon arrival at the station the squad of uniformed and plain clothes police, who were heavily and unusually armed, went up the stairs to the car where most of the soldiers were still undressed and in bed and ordered them out of the car, lined them up along its walls and proceeded to search them. 3-9-45

While the military police stood by and looked on and some of the civilian police searched, several of the soldiers were beaten with black jacks and clubs by the civilian police, several being left bloody followed the beatings.

None of the soldiers were arrested, according to reports, but were ordered back to the car where they remained until the departure of the train. 3-9-45

A report that the soldiers had just returned to America, and were enroute to Shelby on the Army Furlough Plan, after more than 24 months in the South and Southwest Pacific was not confirmed.

Meantime, members of the Jackson Negro Chamber of Commerce in their meeting Tuesday night were endeavoring to have the matter brought before the Interracial Committee which is composed of Major W. Calvin Wells, Mr. Guy Lowe, Dr. Gillispie, President of Belhaven College and Mayor Leland Speed, of the White Chamber of Commerce, Prof. I. S. Danders, Jack Harvey Young, and Walter H. "Duke" Williams of the Negro Chamber of Commerce.

The Navy Opens The Door To Its Holiest of Holies

THE NAVY last week, a bit reluctantly, let down the bars to its last stronghold of racial bias and opened the door to its holiest of holies by admitting to the nurse corps for the first time an American woman of African descent. She was Miss Phyllis Mae Daley, R.N., native New Yorker who on Thursday was commissioned an ensign, along with four young white women, at the office of Naval Officer Procurement in New York City. 3-17-45

3-17-45

MR. HINTON

The move "culminated" a lengthy fight against the discriminatory practice of the Navy in excluding Negro Americans from this branch of the naval service. The score now stands at one up, and 2,499 to go since, by its own statement, the Navy Nurse Corps is in urgent need of 2,500 additional nurses by June 30.

Slowly, but surely the walls of Jericho, intolerance and interracial misunderstanding are tumbling down—not by a fighting Joshua—but through the medium of an enlightened public opinion—and the grim necessities of total war.

In the absence of any evidence to the contrary I believe it may be safely taken for granted that this latest gesture on the part of the Navy is designed to counteract, at least partially, the bad taste left in the mouths of millions of Americans who read about that tragic hunger strike of a thousand Negro Seabees at the Port Hueneme Naval Base near Oxnard, Calif., last week, and the nationwide repercussions from the Port Chicago "mutiny" trial of 50 Negro Americans wearing the uniform of the United States Navy.

DEMAND FOR REVIEW OF CASE GROWS

It will be recalled that the NAACP has filed an exhaustive brief on behalf of the fifty convicted sailors in the latter case asserting that the verdict should be set aside as there could not be any reason for a mass trial "other than a deliberate attempt to discredit Negro seamen."

As the demand grows for a review of the cases of these fifty men who declined to go back to their tasks of loading ammunition after 322 of their buddies had been blown to bits in the worst disaster of its kind in naval history, additional facts surrounding the circumstances of their arrest as well as on the court martial which sentenced them to a total of 588 years at hard labor, are gradually coming to light. 3-17-45

For example, the American Civil Liberties Union—NEWS of San Francisco, Calif., alleges that 258 of the 338 men who were destined to star in the grim drama at Port Chicago, previously refused to load ammunition on Aug. 9, 1944. Under the circumstances it would seem that the seamen who were court-martialled and herded off to jail were victims of some kind of discrimination. This tends to show that the defendants were simply picked at random, instead of the entire 258 who allegedly refused to work.

Some of the men, according to the American Civil Liberties Union-NEWS, said that they were all lined up with naval officers asking indiscriminately, "Do you want to work?" Some of the seamen said "no," but were never court-martialled! In addition, it has been charged, the men who worked at the Navy supply depot were put to work as operator-handlers and laborers regardless of their past experiences, qualifications—or Navy ratings.

But the Navy picture is not all dark, nor is it quite hopeless; definite progress IS being made. To cite just one case in point. Last Thursday almost at the same hour Miss Daley was being commissioned an ensign in the Navy Nurse Corps in New York City. Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal in Washington was declaring his intention of pursuing vigorous steps toward the integration of Negro Americans into all branches of the Navy.

GRANGER INTERVIEWS NAVY HEAD 3-17-45

The assurance was given to Lester B. Granger, executive secretary of the National Urban League, who said that Mr. Forrestal had shown an "encouragingly fresh attitude toward the whole question of racial inequality and discrimination in the armed forces," following a conference with the Navy head.

In addition to emphasizing the need for a thorough investigation of the real conditions under which Negro Americans live and serve in the Navy, Mr. Granger recommended wide assignment of Negro nurses to duty in Naval hospitals; programs for training and commissioning of officer personnel and their assignment to a broad spread of responsibility; correcting unsatisfactory employment conditions in many shipyards and other naval establishments, and wider publicity for Negro Americans engaged in combat in other naval services.

War-Wounded Capt. King Awarded; Platoon Company Gets Presidential Honors

7-14-45

BIRMINGHAM (ANP) — Home on furlough, war-wounded Capt. Beauregard King, nephew of the Rev. B. G. King, prominent local clergyman, was notified of the "Award of Bronze Star medal," by Gen. McAuliffe "for heroic achievement in action."

This citation, ironically, was received by the battle-marked hero of the 614th Tank Destroyer Battalion on the day Sen. Eastland of Mississippi was libeling Negro soldiers in the Senate under immunity.

A comrade of Capt. King wrote him a letter in which was packed this striking comment:

Presidential Ribbons

"Gen. McAuliffe, who has gone back to the States, came out and gave the third platoon 'C' Company the Presidential Unit Citation ribbons, the Silver Star to Capt. Smith and Sturckey and Sorreo Nelson. Nelson's platoon, with a platoon of light tanks from the 761st attached, tangled with the Krauts after we broke through the Siegfried line and had quite a hand to hand battle and did a lot of good work.

"Sgt. Spencer banged one German over the head as the German was trying to shoot Nelson, and all in all, there was a lot of fighting, and good work on the part of our men." 7-14-45

The Citation

The citation to Capt. King reads, "On March 15, 1945, Capt. King planned and organized a small task force for an attack on France. Leading his men in the attack, Capt. King was severely wounded by enemy automatic weapon fire. After falling to the ground, he called to his second in command and urged him to continue the attack, which resulted in the capture of the village and the taking of a number of prisoners. Capt. King's outstanding leadership reflected the highest tradition of military service."

NAACP Asks Navy Probe of Bias in Seabee Outfit

Negroes Overseas 21 Months Say Promotions Are Withheld

3-7-45 P.M. N.Y.

By JOHN T. MOUTOUX

PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, Mar. 7.—The NAACP (National Association for the Advancement of Colored People) has asked the Navy to conduct an immediate investigation of alleged racial discrimination against Negroes in the 34th Construction Battalion, 1000 of whose members went on a two-day hunger strike last weekend. It is an all-Negro Seabee battalion, except for white officers.

The battalion, after 21 months service at Tulagi and Guadalcanal, now is stationed at Port Huenme, Cal., awaiting reassignment overseas.

If the Navy cannot make an immediate investigation, the NAACP asked that the outfit's commanding officer, Cmdr. J. P. MacBean of Meriden, Miss., and his executive officer be detached from the battalion pending a full-fledged probe.

No Promotions

3-7-45

Roy Wilkins, with the NAACP's New York headquarters, said that Norman Houston of its Los Angeles office made a firsthand investigation of the situation at Port Huenme last week, prior to the start of the hunger strike. He found, Wilkins said, that the primary cause of the trouble was that the enlisted men (Negroes) were being passed over in the matter of promotions, which were being given to white men brought in from other outfits.

"More than 50 of the enlisted men are college graduates, and they feel that their experience in addition to their education makes them better qualified for the petty officer ranks than white men from the outside without such experience," Wilkins said. This feeling, he added, is shared by all of the Negroes in the battalion.

The enlisted men blame MacBean and his executive officer for the general dissatisfaction in the outfit.

Houston's findings, as reported to PM by Wilkins, are supported by a large file of letters received over the last nine months by NAACP offices here and in New York from members of the battalion.

The complaints became so numerous and convincing that last Dec. 11 Leslie S. Perry, of the NAACP's Washington office wrote to Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal summarizing the complaints and asking the Navy to investigate.

A month later Perry received a reply from Vice Admiral B. Moreell, Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Decks, submitting a categoric denial from MacBean to all of the accusations, and a letter from Capt. W. Sihler, officer in charge of the Port Huenme Naval base, supporting MacBean.

Perry said he assumed that the trouble had been straightened out until he heard of the hunger strike.

"That hunger strike brought to a head the trouble that had been brewing for a long time, for which there appears to be no solution except to remove the officer in charge, Cmdr. MacBean, who apparently doesn't seem able to forget that he is from Mississippi," he declared.

Discrimination

In his letter to Forrestal, Perry summed up the complaints in the letters as follows:

"Uniformly, these men complain of gross mistreatment and discrimination on account of their race.

"First, they charge that even while serving abroad they were subjected to the most brazen and humiliating forms of segregation. Not only were they required to wait until white enlisted men were given food, but even the drinking water tanks were set up on the basis of color. It is reported that one Negro Seabee was kicked by Lieut. ——— for drinking from a tank set aside for white personnel.

"Second, it is alleged that Negro enlisted men were confined to the brig on the least pretext.

"Third, that although many of them (the Negroes) are ill, the naval physicians, because of indifference or racial prejudice, refuse to furnish them with proper medical care. On occasion, we understand, naval physicians have accosted men in the hospital with 'what's wrong with you, eight ball?'

"Fourth, these men are unanimous in their complaint that Negroes in the battalion are systematically denied promotion."

Perry added that most of the alleged discriminations "appear to reflect the wishes of Battalion Commander J. P. MacBean. We are informed that MacBean has stated openly that 'as long as I am commander, there will be segregation.'"

3-7-45

Cross-Section

MacBean denied each of the accusations, and charged that the complaints originated "from a small minority estimated to be less than 5 per cent of the enlisted men." He said the battalion had made "a fine record overseas and the officers share my views that these Negroes are fine boys and workers." He declared there existed "no outrage to correct and a continuation of the present administrative policy is recommended."

Capt. Sihler wrote Admiral Moreell that he had made a firsthand investigation of the charges by talking to "a cross-section of the men in the battalion," as the result of which he found:

3-7-45

¶ He was unable to confirm charges of segregation or discrimination. Some of the men, he said, thought that the food served white members of the battalions was better than that served the colored men; but he explained that by saying that the food for the white men was supplied from a different galley, and it was better prepared because it was handled in smaller quantities.

¶ He was unable to verify the charge that a Negro had been kicked by a lieutenant. He said it was suggested that the incident might have referred to a rebuke administered to a colored man who reversed the spigot on a Lister bag, using it as a drinking fountain contrary to instructions.

¶ He was "unable to obtain even a hint as to the origin of the report that men were 'confined to the brig on the least pretext.'"

Sick Call

3-7-45

¶ He found no "serious complaint" about the way the men were treated by the Navy medical officers, but he did "detect a feeling that proper attention was not being given to men who appeared at sick call with vague aches and pains."

Capt. Sihler said that conversations with MacBean convinced him that he has "an enlightened and fair attitude toward the colored race, that he respects their personal dignity, that he is genuinely interested in their welfare, and that he is in all respects an excellent leader. Cmdr. MacBean has a fine military and personal character."

WHITE MARINES ASK HIGHER RATINGS FOR NEGRO BUDDIES

Chicago Defender

By ENOC P. WATERS

(Defender War Correspondent)

TENTH ARMY HEADQUARTERS, OKINAWA — Calling for the immediate advancement of Negro marines to higher non-commissioned ranks from which they are presently barred, a group of 16 white marine sergeants here have addressed a petition to Marine Corps Headquarters in Washington. 6-30-45

Though the Marine Corps, in line with its policy of advancing Negroes to higher non-com ratings as they qualify, will eventually advance the Negroes to the higher grades, the whites now holding the posts in most of the companies here feel promotions have been too long delayed.

"It is the opinion of us who work closest with the Negroes here that the greatest majority of colored non-commissioned officers (holding the rank of corporal and sergeant) are qualified for further promotion and are fully capable of replacing the white staff. There is little hope of advancement for the colored personnel in accordance with present TO's so long as we are here and it is our sincere opinion that the units involved could function more efficiently if this condition were remedied."

In conversation, the white non-coms declared that many of the Negro non-coms are college-trained men who held positions of leadership before coming into the servece.

In many companies, they admitted, Negroes are already acting unofficially in the positions denied them and that they have been able to get better results than the whites.

The Negroes, too, are anxious for the promotions and declare there is little incentive for working hard when promotions are frozen.

"We naturally agree with the white non-coms," a Negro marine who was a school teacher and athletic instructor studying for a master's degree, said.

6-30-45

"The trouble is probably that the people in Washington are unaware of our ability to catch on and of what the situation is out here. Many of us have been in the corps since June 1942 and with some of us now about to graduate from officers training school it seems only logical that there should be many of us ready for higher non-com ratings."

Prejudice Is Against Production

Northwest Herald

The war manpower situation is getting tough. So War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes is getting tough, too. Earlier this week he reported to the President and to Congress that he had frozen civilian production at approximately current levels. He proposed possible industrial draft for Army 4Fs able to work. He banned horse racing (that really is tough).

Seattle, Wash.

Such is Director Byrne's program. 1-16-45

It is a program for scraping the cask and ignoring the barrel.

The population of this country includes 22,000,000 Catholics, 13,000,000 Negroes, 5,000,000 Jews. A lot of these are now soldiers overseas. The remainder constitute a reservoir of manpower which—to varying degrees with each group—is not being fully tapped for war production because of racial or religious prejudice.

This is not a new fact. It is so old, so well established, that there is not the slightest vestige of excuse for Director Byrnes to have forgotten it. It is why the FEPC (Fair Employment Practices Committee) was organized originally. It is why everyone in this country today who wants the war won in the shortest possible time, in the quickest possible way, is asking that the FEPC be put on a permanent basis and its hand strengthened.

Almost everyone, that is, except Director Byrnes, who comes from South Carolina, and who failed to mention the FEPC in his report to the President and to Congress.

It is worthwhile, at this stage, to re-examine the barrel which Director Byrnes ignored.

WHAT'S TO COME IF PREJUDICE CONTINUES

The bulk of manpower now stultified by prejudice in this country is Negro. But it is not exclusively Negro. And it may be even less exclusively Negro when the war is over if prejudice, and not need, is to continue to govern our use of manpower.

A few months ago, the Rev. John A. Ryan, of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, testifying before a Senate committee, predicted that anti-Catholic prejudice would increase after the war unless the FEPC was given a stronger hand. 1-16-45

A few weeks ago Charles C. Bulkley, of the State War Council's Committee on Discrimination in Employment, said publicly:

"War industries call employment agencies and order: 'Send us the kind of workers we usually use.' The word kind usually means 'white. Protestant.'"

Pretty, isn't it?

I now call another witness, a very expert witness indeed—Director Byrnes himself. Here is what he said in his report to Congress and the President:

"We cannot be complacent yet. We must man our war plants to the fullest extent necessary to meet the requirements of our military leaders." 1-16-45

A noble sentiment. He does NOT say that war plants must be manned by white Protestants. He says: "Man them!"

All right, Director Byrnes:

In the huge cotton textile industry in the South, almost no Negroes are being used except in custodial jobs—and a lot of GIs are sleeping beneath tin tents because there is not enough canvas being produced in this country.

NEGROES BARRED IN MIDWEST WAR PLANTS

In the war plants of St. Louis and Cincinnati, practically no Negroes are employed in production jobs.

In the Reynolds company of Macon, Ga., makers of shells, and the Consolidated Vultee Corp. of Ft. Worth, Tex., makers of bombers, Negroes are used only as common laborers.

The Western Cartridge Co., of Alton, Ill., across from St. Louis, has not one Negro among its 10,000 employes.

The Houston Shipbuilding Corp., of Houston, Tex., imports white welders from other parts of the country, while Negro graduates of a Houston welding school must go to the East or West Coast to find jobs. 1-16-45

The WMC (War Manpower Commission) has charged the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., of Kearny, N. J., with "restrictive hiring practices" which disrupt war labor supply in the Newark area.

The railroads, which are crying for manpower continually, are railroading Negro firemen out of jobs—jobs which must be taken by whites who could be doing other jobs.

Mexicans are discriminated against in the copper mines of the Southwest, handicapping production and morale.

All this is not your fault, Director Byrnes. Nor is it always the fault of the industrial plants. Union such as some of the railroad brotherhoods, the boilermakers, the machinists, the electrical workers, and here and there a CIO union local—they are at fault, too.

But how can Director Byrnes ignore this picture when he talks of manning our war plants "to the fullest extent necessary to meet the requirements of our military leaders?"

Nor is this picture complete.

The U. S. Army needs 10,000 nurses desperately. There are 9000 Negro registered nurses in this country. Only 300 are in the army.

FEWER THAN TEN NEGRO DOCTORS IN NAVY

The Navy has fewer than ten Negro doctors in its whole medical division. The Army is discharging some Negro doctors. But the Navy, which needs doctors, is not taking on any of the former Army men.

It is bad enough that discrimination should be permitted to hinder the production of tanks, planes, munitions. What can be said of a situation in which a man must lose his lifeblood lest the hand that applies the tourniquet be black?

These are questions which all of us as Americans, carrying on our shoulders the awful responsibility of war—the responsibility, literally, for the life and death of millions of men—must weigh with clarity.

They are questions which must be weighed along with moral questions—the principles of democracy and freedom in which we profess to believe, the principle that along with equality of sacrifice must also go an equality of rights.

Even within its limited score, the FEPC has been weighing those questions and has been coming up with the right answer. Six months after the President created the Committee, the total number of Negro workers in war plants reporting to the WMC was barely more than 3 per cent of all workers employed in such plants.

Today the figure has risen to more than 8 per cent. 1-16-45

It is true that the figure should be far higher. It is also true that the 8 per cent does not convey the true picture of Negro participation in production. does not show the overwhelming proportion of Negroes who are confined to manual and custodial jobs and barred from actual productions or from semi-skilled and skilled trades.

Such factors make the creation of a strong and permanent FEPC necessary.

Such factors, presumably, led the President a few days ago to inform Malcolmn Ross, FEPC Chairman, that the White House was supporting creation of a permanent FEPC.

After that, it is up to Congress—which means that it is up to you—whom Congress represents.

NEW YORK ROUNDUP

Northwest Herald

Alarmed over the continued discrimination and jim crow practices against Negroes in the armed forces, leaders of various national organizations have issued a general call to other groups to join with them in a huge conference to formulate a program of action to bring about an end to these evils. 4-10-45

The conference is set for Sunday afternoon, April 29th, at Camp Goodwill, Butler, New Jersey.

In the Conference call which was issued over the signatures of A. Philip Randolph, President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Willard S. Townsend, President, United Transport Service Employees of America, and Morris Milgrim, National Secretary, Workers Defense League, cited the cases of seventy-four Negro soldiers, members of an engineering unit in the Pacific who were given 15 to 17 years each for "mutiny" because they refused to work in December 1944; of a thousand Negro Seabees who went on a hunger strike, March 1, 1945; and fifty Negro sailors, survivors of the Port Chicago disaster, who were given 8 to 12 years each for "mutiny" because they refused to work in September, 1944, as examples of growing unrest among our troops because of the intolerable conditions under which they are forced to go because of their race. It charged that the Administration policy of segregating Negro and white troops breeds racial discord and humiliation among Negroes who are asked to give their lives equally with the whites.

Each organization is asked to send two representatives to the meet. Wilfred Kerr, director of the Lynn Committee Against Segregation in the Armed Forces is serving as Conference Secretary.

The fight to bring about an enactment of a Fair Employment Practice Law in New Jersey is being opposed by "powerful, hidden and sinister forces," which are attempting to kill the legislation by prolonged hearings, liberal citizens group charged this week.

In a statement endorsed by more than ten groups, including the New Jersey League of Women Voters, N. J. Urban League, and N. J. Independent Citizens Committee, the Legislation is in danger of being "killed by kindness and talked to death." Harold Lett, Urban League executive secretary, charged that the sinister forces were recaltitrant employers and employee groups. This writer is reminded that it was these same groups that tried to kill the New York Bill and were stopped by mass public opinion. 4-10-45

It is the consensus of opinion that the Republican-backed Hill Bill has the best chances of passage in the Republican controlled legislature. Therefore, concerted efforts are being made to strengthen this measure which liberal groups say in its present form is not strong enough and does not provide strict means of enforcement.

ARMY OFFICERS FORCE NEGROES TO EAT MEALS WITH GERMAN PRISONERS IN ALABAMA CAMP

White Workers Have Meals in Reserved Section of Dining Room While Nazis Are Crowded Into Segregated Section

DRAWS GUN WHEN PROTEST IS MADE

By H. D. COKE

HUNTSVILLE, Ala.—(ANP)—A white waitress employed at the cafeteria of the Huntsville arsenal, was fired this week following a report that she was caught with a German prisoner of war. The girl, frequently seen by Negro employees talking to the prisoner, was not identified. German prisoners are used in the government owned and operated arsenal to clean the cafeteria, pick up paper, move lumber, etc. They are given excellent treatment and working conditions, with some of them used as guards for the group under supervision of white soldiers. 3-10-45

Negro employees of the arsenal, reported to be the largest in the world, have on occasions been forced to eat with the German prisoners. More than a dozen Negro employees reported that on one occasion a white officer ordered those who were having their dinner in the cafeteria's segregated corner to make room for the German prisoners. When they failed to understand that the "white" prisoners were to eat at their tables, and did not move to other tables, the white officer of the U. S. army pulled his pistol and ordered them to move under a threat to shoot. The German prisoners were then seated in the section reserved for Negro employees. All of this was done in the sight of white fellow workers who occupied seats on the "white side." The German prisoners have enjoyed their meals in the Negro side of the government operated cafeteria on several occasions to the disguest of the Negro employees. 3-10-45

Several thousand prisoners are employed at the large arsenal that occupies 40,000 acres. German prisoners move freely about the arsenal, anyone of them having the opportunity to do damage and endanger war production and the lives of the employees.

AFRO-American 1-20-45

NEW YORK—Humiliation of colored army nurses in the presence of German prisoners as a result of discriminatory orders issued by an officer in the Prisoner of War Camp hospital in Florence, Arizona was brought to the attention of the War Department by the NAACP in a letter to Assistant Secretary of War, John J. McCloy.

The letter read in part:

"We have received information that American Army nurses have been ordered by a Major Simpson to eat in a separate dining room in a hospital at the PW camp at Florence. They feel especially humiliated and degraded because, even though in the uniform of the U.S. Army, they were set apart under the very noses of German war prisoners who serve as cooks and waiters in the hospital officers' mess.

1-20-45

"We understand from announcements from Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, Surgeon General, U.S. Army, that the Army is not anxious to increase the number of colored nurses, but if incidents like the foregoing illustrate Army policy, I am sure you can understand that colored nurses in their turn are not anxious to serve in the Army."

Army, short of doctors, turning down Negroes

Los Angeles Tribune Cal.

1-29-45

NEW YORK—The Army has all the Negro doctors it needs although there are numerous white doctors serving in the Army overseas who have never had a leave because the Army is short of medical replacements.

That contradictory situation exists, according to Albert Deutsch in the newspaper PM, because of Army jim crow which confines Negro doctors to all-Negro hospitals. "With the shipment of large numbers of Negro troops overseas, according to Deutsch, "the patient load in all-Negro hospitals in the U. S. A. has been reduced", and "the Army faces the dilemna of either reducing its Negro medical staff at a time when military doctors are badly needed or of integrating Negro doctors into its general medical program".

1-29-45

That it is taking the first of the alternatives is indicated, Deutsch charged, by its recent notification of 15 Negro doctors who have just finished their interneship at Harlem Hospital that they would be discharged, rather than commissioned.

Colo. Camp Bars Negro Vets From Play Facilities

Chicago Defender

COLORADO SPRINGS— (ANP) —A recent order from higher ups at Camp Carson has forbidden Negro veterans from taking part in reconditioning activities in Colorado Springs. 6-2-45

The lily-white policy regarding Negro veterans applies to roller skating, excursions, swimming and other activities which are included in the reconditioning program.

Negroes are now confined to the post at Camp Carson which in itself offers little in the way of entertainment since all post exchanges, dances and programs are operated by white personnel.

Negro troops have recently been barred from attending certain of the Colorado Springs downtown theaters and one drug store carries the sign: "We reserve the right to refuse service to anyone!"

A German prisoner of war, working in a mess hall of the Second Battalion of the Reconditioning section, laughed at a Negro veteran and said, "Now you see what you black Americans are fighting for."

Vets at Colorado Springs Barred From Recreation

by Will V. Neely

Pittsburgh Courier

6-9-45

COLORADO SPRINGS-(ANP) The old story of gold is where you find it, can be vetoed and changed to prejudice is where you find it.

Colorado Springs, world famous resort town, is fast becoming the 'Mississippi of the Rockies.' Last week it was learned that its noble white citizens had let it be known that Negro veterans weren't wanted at the Broadmoor, Antlers and other local hotels, whether they were returned veterans or not.

It has been the custom to allow returning veterans to skating, golf, swimming and other activities at Colorado Springs as a part of the Camp Carson reconditioning program.

Negro veterans have been barred and no explanation has been forthcoming from Army officials at Camp Carson.

The Negro grievance committee headed by Sam Hunter is attempting to control the spreading race prejudice in the city.

Other members of the committee are L.C. Smith and A.B. Turner, who is in charge of the recreation center.

The grievance committee has been investigating the reason veteran Negro troops are forced to sit in the balconies of local theatres and also why drug stores "reserve the right to refuse service to anyone," according to signs placed conveniently in the front part of the stores.

Army Effort to Jim Crow GI Blocked by White Friends

AFro-American Md. 3-10-45

By RICHARD DIER

NEW YORK—Although officers at Army camp wanted to segregate Pfc. Charles Nelson from the white soldiers with whom he had flown from Hawaii to California, his comrades refused to permit the separation and Nelson subsequently slept in the same room with them. Nelson, who is on a 30-day furlough to visit his sick mother here, told the AFRO in an exclusive interview that colored service men in the Pacific are getting fed up and disgruntled because they are denied furloughs. 3-10-45

Pfc. Nelson

Their indifference, he explained, is due to the fact, that although many have been there longer than the two years required before furloughs, they are unable to get them and are not being helped by their chaplain whose hands are tied.

Because they know what they will have to face when they return, he continued, "plenty of colored service men will settle in other countries after the war, especially in South America and Mexico."

Most of the Hawaiian population of Japanese ancestry, their minds poisoned by newspapers and motion pictures, look down on colored people although many have settled and operate businesses there, he declared.

Not too hopeful about the future, the soldier, who has served with a port battalion, says that he and the others expect to get jobs on qualifications alone and will not accept second-class citizenship any longer.

4 SHIPYARDS END JIM CROW

Chicago Defender 4-7-45

WASHINGTON — Four West Coast shipyards have agreed to halt jim crow hiring practices in compliance with directives issued by the Fair Employment Practices committee, Malcolm Ross, FEPC chairman, announced this week.

The four companies, which employ more than 90,000 workers in the construction of ships for the government, are the Western Pipe and Steel Co., and the Consolidated Steel Corp., both of Los Angeles, and the Oregon Shipbuilding Corp., and Kaiser Co., of Portland, Ore.

The action of the four companies was a direct blow at the auxiliary jim crow unions fostered by the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Ship Builders and Helpers of America, AFL.

Sets Up Jim Crow Auxiliaries

The union would not accept Negro workers as full members and the companies fired those who refused to join the auxiliary unions. After a series of public hearings in November, 1943, FEPC ordered the companies to cease firing workers who failed to become members of the jim crow union. The Boilermakers' union was told to grant full membership to Negroes without discrimination. 4-7-45

Five companies involved in the original directives asked for rehearings last December. FEPC at that time reaffirmed its original directives and requested early compliance. No compliance report has yet come from the California Shipbuilding Corp., of Los Angeles.

The companies were ordered to ignore the union clearance system as long as the discriminatory membership procedure was maintained by the union.

Jim Crow Hits Brazilian Troops

Kansas City Call Mo.

NEW YORK. — (ANP) — Those Brazilian troops now fighting in Italy, all anti-Fascist volunteers, had a frist-hand experience of racial discrimination on the boat going over, according to a story appearing in last week's New Leader. 2-2-45

"Some 5,000 of them on one of the largest coast guard transports," the paper said, "were segregated from 'white' American officers and men. Separate quarters and mess were set up for them, from the commanding officer on down. A Negro coast guardsman on board (Negroes were also segregated) asked a chaplain why. The chaplain said he didn't think it was actually color discrimination, rather that the Brazilians were our cultural inferiors." 2-2-45

Gen. Douglas McArthur was reported to have issued an order to correct treatment of Flipinos fighting with American forces. The order stated that our allies were to be treated as equals, not according to jim crow customs in the U. S. A., the New Leader reported.

Rome Paper Is Rebuked For Cartoon Of Negro

Birmingham News Ala.

ROME—(AP)—The Army newspaper Stars and Stripes editorially rebuked Monday a Rome weekly which published a cartoon showing an American Negro soldier wearing shiny combat boots surrounded by Italians barefoot or with battered sandals. 2-6-45

The Negro was represented as saying, "And to think that I, who am not used to them, am forced to wear them."

Stars and Stripes said the cartoon, published in Pettirosso, a subsidiary of the Socialist daily, Avanti, was "offensive and shocking to Americans." The editorial added:

"The thousands of Negro soldiers in Italy are citizens of the United States. Many of them are living in the cold and discomfort of the Italian front and some are being wounded and killed. 2-6-45

"The Negro soldier is fighting, like all other Americans, against fascism and nazism and for a peaceful, democratic world. He is fighting and dying to help liberate the rest of Italy.

"The American Negro is not a stranger to shoes, literacy or ideas of democracy. If Italians don't have shoes, it is certainly not because any Allied soldier has them."

Sudden Return of Drivers Questioned

STAYED 2 DAYS

Scheduled Recreation Leaves Canceled

By FRANK E. BOLDEN

NNPA War Correspondent

KUMMING, China—(By Cable)—Rumors that colored soldiers are not desired for service in China were denied by both an American Army representative and a Chinese Government spokesman here in China this week.

The rumors, already rife, followed the return of the ten colored soldier drivers who entered China with the history-making Ledo Road convoy after only two days leave in China. 2-17-45

When the convoy first left Ledo, India, no colored personnel was represented. The matter was brought to the attention of ranking officials, as colored troops had played an important role in the construction of the road.

Ten Join Convoy

As a result, ten Tan Yanks joined the procession at Myitkyina to make the first trip. During the journey they were reportedly worried by rumors that they would be denied entrance into China.

However, all the American troops who crossed the border en route were well received and hospitably entertained by the Chinese without discrimination.

Promised Recreation Leave

The drivers had been promised by their superiors that they could have a few days' leave for recreation after completing the rugged 1044-mile drive. 2-17-45

Instead, without explanation, all the American drivers, colored and white, were ordered back to their respective bases in India by the first available transportation.

When the rumor spread that this action was caused by the presence of colored troops, the matter was called to the attention of Maj. Gilbert A. C. Wedmeyer, commander of U.S. Army Forces in China at Chungking.

No Biased Policy Planned

He denied that there was any policy exercised either by American authorities or the Chinese Government against colored troops being based in China, nor were there any existing commitments. Commenting further, he said:

"For military reasons we are trying to keep the number of service of supply troops in this theatre at a minimum and doubt whether additions will be made.

"We plan to train and use Chinese drivers for Burma Road convoy duty, as American troops are needed elsewhere. Further traffic, I understand, will include colored personnel, heavily represented."

Cites Own Record

"I know that the most experienced convoy drivers in India are colored. My record shows that I have used colored troops many times in previous command and know they are good soldiers.

"I recently assumed command here and am working with personnel found upon arrival. As for any drivers being ordered back to India, this is the first time I have heard of it. I have personally issued no order to that effect."

As to the Chinese Government's attitude on the subject, the only available statement at present appeared in the newspaper Chung Chen Pao of February 8.

Use in China Questioned

At a foreign press conference on that date, over which General Chen Cheng, Minister of War, presided, one correspondent asked whether the Chinese Government intends to reject colored GI's as Army truck drivers over the Stillwell Road, or in other capacities.

One government spokesman, P. H. Chang, replied, "We have not yet heard of this kind of rumor. The Chinese Government will make no racial or color discrimination."

It is hoped by both sides that rumors of this kind prove groundless in the best interest of international harmony.

Colored Soldiers Uused as Garbage Collectors in Va.

AFro-American 5-26-45

NEWPORT NEWS, Va.—Colored soldiers, members of a service company, have for some time been furnished by the Army to help in the collection and disposition of garbage here.

Because of the increased garbage generated by the various installation of the Hampton Roads Port of Embarkation, the city found it necessary to enlarge its incinerator, but was faced with a manpower shortage in operating it. 5-26-45

An arrangement was subsequently made between Army authorities and city officials whereby the Army would provide approximately the same number of men furnished by the city.

Under this plan, the Army has funished from 8 to 12 soldiers 6 days a week and 5 or 6 on Sunday. 5-26-45

For a short period, German prisoners of war were used, but because of the danger of sabotage, this practice was discontinued.

Colored soldiers assigned to this work are said to be men of limited physical capacity. They complain, however, that to date, no white soldiers have been similarly assigned.

Opinions of the People:

In regard to the article written in your paper of May 21st concerning Negroes Charge Demobilization Discrimination, I would like to ask the question as to why the Negro shouldn't ask President Truman to wipe out the inequalities for them. The Negro doesn't want to come home any sooner than anyone else. He just wants an equal break when coming home time comes. Why should the Negro do the most of the fighting? What will it mean to him when the war is over?

The same discrimination he has always had? Why shouldn't he yell about it? I think the Negro is doing his part. Visit Mare Island Hospital and you'll see a few empty trouser legs belonging to Negroes. You should be the Proud Mother of a Sailor Son. The end of the war will mean everything to your son. What will it mean to the Negro? When the account of this war is in print will a Negroe's name be in the history books? Considering everything, don't you think he's doing his part?

Rankin, Gibson Love Negro Veterans—Segregated

Want Jim-Crow Hospitals Provided for Wounded Veterans

By CHARLES A. MICHIE
PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 2.—Reps. John E. Rankin (D., Miss.) and John S. Gibson (D., Ga.), a brace of fine old Southern gentlemen, just love the Negroes. They keep saying so every chance they get during House Committee hearings on defects in veterans' hospitals.

Of course, Negroes must be segregated in Veterans Administration facilities . . . white nurses should not be allowed to attend Negro veterans . . . it would be a fine thing if every State had an all-Negro hospital . . . Negro employes have just about ruined the Library of Congress.

Rankin and Gibson beamed at each other and agreed on these things. But they love the Negroes.

"I think I know niggers," said Gibson pontifically. "I grew up with them, played with them and I know they're not happy if they must associate with white folks. They're not at ease."

Rankin smiled happily at his cadaverous colleague.

Want to Be Alone

Gibson was testifying about a veterans' hospital (all-Negro, from manager to mess attendant) at Tuskegee, Ala., when the subject came up.

"You oughta see those niggers there," declared Gibson. "They're as happy as can be. Strawberries at every plate during meals. They're living better than they ever did in their lives before."

Of course, these "niggers" are war veterans, hospitalized for injuries suffered fighting for the right of Rankin and Gibson to talk that way. But they should not contaminate the pure whites of the Old South by being in the same hospital for treatment.

The Committee's last two witnesses brushed a thin coat of calcimine over charges published in PM and Hearst's Cosmopolitan that veterans did not receive the best of care in VA hospitals. But the truth showed through. Rep. Bernard W. Kearney (R., N. Y.) and Errett P. Scrivner (R., Kan.) confirmed published findings the day before.

Gibson and Rep. A. S. J. Carnahan (D., Mo.) found "nothing to justify criticism" on their tours of veterans' facilities throughout the South. Gibson went so far as to suggest that Albert Maisel's charges in Cosmopolitan were made with "an ulterior motive" and suggested he be called back to face the Committee and explain himself.

Full of Praise

Gibson had nothing but praise for the administration of the Tuskegee VA hospital. "One of the best operated I ever saw, if not the best," he praised. He was loud in admiration of Col. E. H. Dibble, Jr., Negro Harvard graduate, who is manager of the hospital.

At Lake City, Fla., Gibson was horrified to find that white nurses were in attendance on some Negro soldiers.

"Knowing Negroes as I do, I think they'd be happier if they had colored nurses and attendants," he declared. "I recommend to the Committee that this situation be corrected."

In answer to questions respecting the Atlanta, Ga., veterans hospital, Gibson couldn't remember that he had heard a single complaint of any consequence. This was in marked contrast to evidence given by Kearney and Scrivner earlier. They had complaints, some major and some minor, from every hospital they visited.

Gibson added that Col. Dibble agreed with him "in toto" on the business of segregation. Furthermore, he said, Dibble agreed that Negroes do not have to be mixed with whites to be able to "improve themselves." Throughout his testimony, Gibson referred to the Tuskegee Hospital as "the nigger hospital."

Just 'Agitators'

"Only the people who want to destroy segregation are the agitators who are trying to promote themselves through the niggers," he said.

Rankin said anybody was crazy who tried to knock down segregation. The Negroes in Government are inefficient and today "bitterness and hatred such as we never knew a few years ago exist," he said.

Meanwhile, before the House Appropriations Committee, Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Veterans Administrator, said the lack of nurses and doctors was "the big difficulty" in operating VA facilities. However, he said, we're over the peak now and "everything will work out all right."

Calls It Attack'

The Administrator told the Committee there was a "definite attack" on the VA in a recent Cosmopolitan article (by Maisel) and that "the basis was laid for it through PM." He added that the Cosmopolitan article was reprinted in Reader's Digest and that it hurt VA morale and destroyed confidence in its institutions. He said they got many letters from mothers "who accepted the statements at face value and were very distressed."

"Even if it were all true, it should not have been published in that manner," he concluded. "If there are deficiencies, they should be corrected, but that can be done without publicity so disturbing to those not in possession of the actual facts."

Opinions of the People:

After reading your paper of May 21, I want to call attention to an article written by A Proud Mother of a Sailor. Her statements were concerning the Negroes—about discrimination in the Army's point system for demobilization of American soldiers in Europe and they intend to call upon President Truman to wipe it out.

Now, my thoughts about this mother stating if she was of the Negro race just what she would do. Now my thoughts about that is this: You are not doing the right thing in your own race. If you were, you would speak and publish the good things our people do and not the bad things. Now about who are doing most of the fighting. The reason you give your boys the credit of doing the most of the fighting is because your people carried bad news over there about the Negro. It was your kind who wanted your people to win the war without our boys, but you soon found out everything you attempt to do there will be a Negro in it. So dear writer, let's keep our chins up and win the war without looking at our black face. It isn't the color that makes a person. It is the things in which one stands for. If your boys who have been punished so badly by the Japs and Germans, loosing limbs, they shouldn't worry about color, they should be better men. They should have better conduct to help make other boys and girls live better lives. Now think, mothers of America, the hand that rocked the cradle was the hand that ruled the world. That hand didn't only mean my hand and your hand, but the mother of Jesus whose hand was laid on that wonderful manger where Christ the babe was lying there. So the hand that rules the world now is the hand of God.

Pacific GIs Save Color Line For 'Negroes Only' In Philippines

Chicago Defender Ill.

3-3-45

LEYTE — White GIs here have dropped the color line against dark-skinned Allies — unless they happen to be American Negroes.

The excellent behavior of U. S. servicemen towards liberated Filipinos was reported this week by Walter White, Chicago Defender columnist and New York Post correspondent.

While many Filipinos openly feared that the return of Americans would bring a return of "white supremacy," the manner of American behavior here has thus far been exemplary.

This excellent conduct, of course, is not lavished on their Negro fellow fighters. 3-3-45

For Natives Only

A Mississippian playing with a group of dark-skinned children on Guam was asked, "I wonder if you'd be as nice to kids of that color back home?"

He answered indignantly, "These kids are not niggers!"

On one occasion it was reported that an office boasted of his pleasant relations with natives in a number of Pacific islands and paid high tribute to the capacity of the U. S. Army to transform quagmires overnight into beautiful roads and airstrips.

But when a Negro soldier passed the officer bitterly remarked that "those are soldiers we could well do without — they're useless." Much of the building he had praised was done by Negro engineers.

Only occasionally, however, are unfriendly remarks made at Filipino officers. Most of the white Americans go out of their way to be friendly. While the Japanese have spread news of Los Angeles "zoot suit" riots during which young Filipinos were beaten by mobs, the effect of such propaganda seems to have been negligible. 3-3-45

On the other hand the conviction that Negro soldiers are all right for manual labor but unsuited for combat duty appears to be deep seated in high officials here, it was reported.

The basis for such opinions, usually expressed with considerable feeling, is the report that one of the few Negro combat units in the Pacific did not do as well as it might in its first and only engagement with the enemy. It is almost invariably futile to point out that many divisions and regiments, now famous for bravery cracked up in their first battle.

The Negro Church Denounces Jim Crow

Miami Whip Florida 1-13-45

Calling attention to the Negro soldiers' heroic role in many war theatres, Dr. W. H. Jernagan of the Bureau, Fraternal Council of Negro Churches, voiced the sentiment of the Negro people all over the nation in a public statement last week.

The statement called attention to irritating prejudice and injustice continuing to subject Negro soldiers to narrow Jimcrow limitations and mistreatment in the army, the navy, and even in some of the government plants of war with which to defeat the enemy are being manufactured.

It is alarming to notice how systematically the Jimcrrow pattern of the deep South has been adopted. Hitler and Nazi belivers in the doctorine of master racism must take courage in the support they are getting from some of our army officials who encourage separation, not so much of races but of colors, skin colors in the army.

We know that our commander-in-chief in and outside of Continental United States has had cause for great embarrassment in our Post-war conscription campaign, based on the same unteneble premise of Jim Crowism which is increasing the length of the war and adding to unrest and confusion in many conquered nations.

Too often we hear muttering about the spread of Communisim in our nation and how it seeks to destroy our present form of government. It is not Communisim that is the termite chewing at the foundation of our government. It is that element within the government who deny to some of the citizens the rights and privileges they themselves hold as their heritage.

Some American soldiers who are helping to administer the crushing blow to Hitler, realize that when the battle cry becomes a murmur, or a memory, and the homeward trek begins to a reward of persecution—to their homeland, the home of Abraham Lincoln and Fredrick Douglass, Lovejoy, and all those who loved liberty better than life.

We, however, are determined that we shall have not fought in vain.

We are fighting to conquer Nazism in Europe and America. We have abiding faith in Franklin Delano Roosevelt. We believe that his position as head of this nation at this time is God's decree, and that while the victory may be slow in coming we are nevertheless on the highway to that victory.

While there is no actual physical struggle in the United States, as of now, there is a seething battle against racial strife and bitterness that must be won completely. And this must be done before we sit down at the peace table. — California Eagle

5 Wacs Shun Unpleasant Task; Put in Guard House

AFRO-AMERICAN Md.

CAMP BRECKENRIDGE, Ky. (ANP)—When five colored Wacs refused to repair bed springs in a damp and cold barracks here last week, white MP's led them away from the detachment center into the guardhouse at the camp hospital, charging them with insubordination.

Although the barracks had been declared unfit to work in since there was no heat, orders were given to place the women in the guard house where they must remain pending further notice.

The Wacs are Pfcs. Eleanor Brown and Edith Youth and Pvts. Ruth Sanders, DaVetta Butler and Geneva Pipkin.

A lieutenant immediately reported them to the commander when they refused to obey orders, and while two of these Wacs apparently had been guilty of other offenses this was the first for the other three, who feel that the order is being unfairly handed down to them as an example to other Wacs.

INDIANTOWN GAP, Pa. (ANP) —Determination to continue racial segragation practices and failure of white officers here to abide by the war department's directive to outlaw such conditions are held responsible for unrest and discontent among colored troops here.

Although there is no discrimination in the station hospital and though white and colored soldiers enter the mess hall in the same line, they are separated when seated. 1-13-45

On one occasion two enlisted men and two officers were posted in the hall to enforce the segregation seating order. The practice cannot be attributed to desire to obey State laws, for Pennsylvania has an equal rights law.

LOS ANGELES (ANP) — Two Los Angeles women filed a complaint last week with the FEPC charging that they were denied employment as operators with the Southern California Telephone Company because of their race.

Mrs. Della T. Young and Mrs. Pauline McMillan, the complainants, applied for jobs in answer to advertisements appearing in local newspapers and said that they met the prescribed qualifications.

Company Needs Operators

In response to an inquiry made by reporters last week, the company admitted that it needs employees in the classifications sought by the two applicants.

The telephone company, which has long refused to hire colored people in other than menial capacities, recently opened an office on Central Avenue where telephone bills may be paid and at which colored girls are employed.

Kansas City, Mo. Plaindealer, Mo.

Washington. — It was revealed here last week that Lena Horne, popular movie star and actress quit her USO tour when she could not stand the Army jim crow setup where Nazi prisoners are permitted to see performances in preference of Negro troops.

Clashing head-on with the Army's super Jim Crow policy, the sepia screen star halted her USO-sponsored tour of Southern camps in protest against anti-Negro bias.

ment to entertain the camp despite an "unfriendly and uncooperative atmosphere." She stated that the aide assigned to her, Capt. Rasley, was equally "unfriendly and uncooperative."

Performs for Prisoners

Miss Horne performed first before an assembly of white officers and then later before the German prisoners. She said that she learned belatedly that there were 50 colored soldiers on the post and she could entertain them.

Miss Horne said she was unable to continue and asked that they be excluded. When this was refused, she left.

Previous to coming to Little Rock last week, Miss Horne said that she was told that they could not proceed with her arrangements.

Miss Horne charged that the commanding officer of Camp Robinson, in Little Rock, Ark., felt it suitable for her to entertain Nazi prisoners but flatly refused to allow her the same facilities to entertain Negro soldiers on the post.

Snubbed and Jim Crowed from Mississippi to Little Rock, Ark., after walking out in protest against the camp race bias, Miss Horne charged that the commander of Camp Robinson had been unusually "rude and definitely unfriendly."

Arriving in Camp Robinson early last week, Miss Horne said that Rock her plane was grounded in Jackson, Miss.

The army sent a plane to pick her up there after the row at Camp Robinson.

Speaking of the Camp Robinson incident, Miss Horne praised one of the officers of the camp, Major Graham, whom she said had attempted to make her stay pleasant in face of official frowns.

Although the post commander later called her and apologized, Miss Horne said she still considered the official conduct of the post commander "unfriendly and unforgivable."

She said that at all the other camps the commanders were courteous and cooperative and even suspended rules to allow for interracial audiences at all entertainments. Only at the Robinson, the last stop, was there an "unfriendly and uncooperative atmosphere."

Miss Horne said here this week that the Camp Robinson was just an incident and said she planned to resume her entertainment tours to service posts under joint sponsorship of USO and the Hollywood Victory Committee.

Negro Seamen Protest Racial Discrimination

N.Y., N.Y. Peoples Voice

PORT HUENEME, Cal. (ANP)—The secretary of the Navy may soon have a petition from Negro members of the 34th US Naval Construction unit, regardless of consequences to the signers, regarding jimco practices against them. That revelation was made last week to the Associated Negro Press by Negro members of the outfit who declared that four things must be done to alter the situation within the ranks of the unit:

- a new commanding officer should be assigned immediately. He should be a man without the race traditions of the South;
- the assignment of northern white officers and Negro officers to the outfit; 1-13-45
- the assignment of Negro chaplains rather than white chaplains to the unit.

Charges that the commanding officer violated his trust by his failure to select an all-Negro enlisted personnel were made. His staff is composed of all Southern white officers.

"The white enlisted personnel in our battalion is responsible for all the segregation and discrimination," the men said. 'They got all the promotions, which keeps the Negro enlisted men from being advanced in rating. Not a single Negro has been made a chief petty officer."

1-13-45

Although there are qualified Negroes in the outfit that have been intentionally overlooked for chief petty officer ratings, only a few have been promoted as high as first class petty officer. "We have Negroes with good records in all ratings as low as first class seaman that have not received a single rating since this battalion was organized more than two years ago," the Negro seaman pointed out.

1-13-45

The inequalities of racial discrimination in the navy were further spotlighted when they mentioned that "the white enlisted men have always had a separate chow hall and living quarters, with better facilities than those provided for Negroes." Not even white chaplains can be trusted to fight for racial equality and equal justice for Negroes, the men declared.

Military Jim Crow

P.M., N.Y., N.Y. 4-12-45

Dear Editor:

I tried to enlist in the U. S. Coast Guard recently. When I applied at the Recruiting Office they told me enlistments were closed, but just to make sure I phoned them and they told me the enlistments were still open. So I went back to see why the recruiting officer had told me enlistments were closed. I said I would like to enlist as an apprentice seaman. She said I was a Negro and they don't take Negroes as apprentice seamen. She said that was for white boys only.

In the first place, I was enlisting as an American citizen, not as a Negro. I was not representing any race, color or creed, and as an American citizen I feel that I am entitled to the same treatment and training the white boys receive.

New York LEE F. WOLF

4-12-45

This is more military Jim Crowism. It would have more place in Nazi Germany than in the U. S. A. We phoned the Coast Guard Recruiting Office:

Q.: "Can a Negro enlist in the Coast Guard now?" A. "No, there's nothing open for them right now."

Q.: "Well, how about any enlistments?" A. "There are enlistments open for young men as apprentice seamen 17 and over. But they have to be white."—ED.

. . . Evidently the trial at Fort Devens was fair. The four WACs were guilty of violating the Articles of War. But just who is going to place on trial the rotten, senseless, prejudice-ridden system . . .?

True or not, every Negro in or out of uniform believes that Negroes are assigned almost entirely to labor duties, that advancement is retarded on account of color and that in any controversy the Negro will get the worst end. . . .

Newark WILLIAM P. BURRELL

On Apr. 4 we reported that the WACs' sentences had been commuted and they had been returned to duty. This, together with the recent Navy reversal on the discharges of 14 Negro Seabees, indicates that the armed forces are beginning to wake up to the situation. There's still a long ways to go.—ED.

4-12-45

I have just received a registered letter from the Naval Board of Review which states that I am to receive a Certificate of Discharge Under Honorable Conditions. I am one of the 19 Seabees discharged under dishonorable conditions in October, 1943, after protesting against segregation and discrimination because of race.

. . . I expect to finish law school in September and I have been informed by a reliable authority that I will have no difficulty now in being accepted by the New York Bar's Character Committee. All of us tender our thanks to you, and wish you to know that we are much interested in your continued fight against racial intolerance of every kind.

GIs Say Bias Must Go When They Come Home

AFRO-AMERICAN 3-17-45

By EARL THARPE

IN ITALY — I asked several members of the 92nd Division this question "How do you think your service in the armed forces will affect your reaction to racial discrimination in post-war America?

From the outset, most of the GIs interviewed displayed an air of indignance toward the possibility of returning home to meet racial discrimination.

T/Sgt. Cleo T. Gaines, former heavyweight pugilist of indianapolis, Ind., now with the 92nd Signal Company, said:

"I am willing to fight just as hard for racial equality after the war as I am now fighting to suppress the type advocated by the Nazis' Germany."

3-17-45

Square Deal

Sgt. Sumner Lovelace, former insurance salesman of Atlanta, Ga., now clerk with the Division Casualty Section, gave as his reply this doubtful quotation from Theodore Roosevelt:

"Any man who is good enough to offer his life in defense of his country is entitled to a square deal from that country. No man should ask for more; no man should receive less."

Sgt. Lovelace admitted that he did not know to what point he would be provoked. He felt sure, however, that he would deal with such a situation as rationally as has always been his habit under similar circumstances.

Will Do Something

Highly noticeable was the fact that nearly 100 per cent of those questioned expressed the intent of doing something definite and concrete about the unpleasant situation they left upon entering the service. Equally as noticeable was the fact that most of them discount acts bordering on violence as means of dealing with the situation.

Cpl. Guyton Swann, formerly of St. Louis, Mo., stated, "I will definitely be more aggressive in the fight against racial discrimination. This war is teaching me that upon the role of the individual depends the success of the whole."

Most of the returning vets will have seen living examples of countries where no color bar exists. It is a psychological conclusion that they will do their utmost toward helping home fall into this much-to-be-desired group.

The Hunger Strike

Pittsburgh 3-17-45

For the first time in American military and naval annals, an entire battalion of men, 1,000 strong, has undergone a two-day hunger strike for a principle.

They were protesting against the policy of color discrimination, which the Navy Department has continued throughout the war period with callous disregard for the feelings of either the men themselves or their folks back home.

These men were helpless against the treatment they received, and yet again they were not entirely helpless.

They did not dare disobey orders which, indeed, would have defeated their purpose; but they could make a protest which would be heard around the world, and they did.

Their unique method of calling to the world's attention their mistreatment succeeded.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has investigated their complaint and found it more than justified.

Remedial measures will undoubtedly follow, whereas letters and telegrams would have netted no more than a few courts-martial.

This incident should be a warning to those in authority that they are dealing with a New Negro who is willing to suffer for what he deems to be right.

Entertainment? Our Sailors Get None in Washington State

Afro-American 4-17-45

Barred from White USO's; Civilian Men Overrun Tiny Room Used as Colored USO; and Girls? What Are They?

By SEAMAN JAY SMITHSON

BANGOR, Wash.—At our naval base here, there has not been any type of entertainment for quite sometime. We are 10 miles from Bremerton, 40 miles from Seattle, and about 150 miles from Vancouver, Canada.

Recently we saw a dated movie called "Wildcat," which was shown three nights a week. The other nights featured "Margin for Error." I saw those pictures five or six years ago. To see pictures we pay 10 cents, when we are supposed to be admitted free of charge.

We have a large stage in our recreation hall, and the USO and other organizations have promised us shows. But if we have had a stage show, we have swum the Pacific Ocean.

Some Satisfied

Some of the boys are satisfied with this, and also with the entertainment in town. We pay 40 cents to ride to town on a navy vehicle. 4-14-45

There are many places—theatres, restaurants, stores—to spend big money. Prices are over what we make a week. It is understood that we are not wanted in these places, so we try to make ourselves contented with some joints.

One is supposed to be exclusive, but who would take his friend into a place where women aren't respected? Where the owner's wife curses worse than a man? Where a common street walker approaches you and before you can bat an eye, tells you that to talk to her costs 10 and 2 ($10 for the body and $2 for the room).

Another joint has the same business, only it's a lot worse. A respectable girl is afraid to walk the streets after dark. We often wonder what a respectable girl looks like.

If we pay the price, we can have entertainment here.

There are several USO's and other service organizations but we can't even go into them.

The colored USO is about eight feet wide and fifty feet long. There are newspapers, magazines, a radio, piano and a few sheets of music. They are so far dated that they are antiquated.

There are no girls to entertain us here—only civilian men looking for women or a dime to buy a drink.

We can stand outside any other USO and see food, dancing and lots of pleasure. But if we want a cup of coffee in "our" USO, try and get it.

Girls? What are girls? We would like to know.

That is Bremerton. Seattle is worse. Do you think some towns-people would invite us out to dinner? Out here the service man is worse than a cow.

Those of us who know what finer things life has to offer have to stay on the base and read 25-cent novels. There is not a decent book on the whole base.

In my hometown of Pittsburgh, Pa., service men are welcomed in my home. But that is Pittsburgh.

Air Heroes Barred From Hospital

Afro-American 6-2-45

NEW YORK—Extension of the Air Command's jim-crow policy to exclude colored airmen from the Plattsburg Convalescent Hospital was protested last week by the NAACP when it was discovered that the ruling was based on the alleged "unhappiness" of four colored patients.

In a memorandum of May 13 from Brig. Gen. Ray L. Owens, Deputy Chief of the Air Staff, to Truman K. Gibson, civilan aide to the Secretary of War, the general said: 6-2-45

Alibi for Bias

"During the early part of February, this year, four of the colored patients were interviewed, and it was found that the colored personnel assigned there were very unhappy . . . due largely to severe winter climate and . . . the fact that there is a neglible colored population in that vicinity . . . one family.

"As a result of the above findings, the hospital recommended to the Personnel Distribution Command on February 10 that no more colored patients be sent to that hospital. This recommendation was accepted and adopted as policy by the PDC and put into practice."

Reasoning Scored

This "fallacious reasoning" of the Air Corps was scored by Thurgood Marshall, special NAACP counsel, in a letter to Secretary of War Stimpson, condemning the handling of colored personnel on the basis of race or color.

Mr. Marshall declared: "It is unbelievable that the Air Command . . . should suddenly assume that colored men are 'unhappy' because of the winter climate at Plattsburg. There is no doubt that many white patients from homes in Dixie might also be unhappy in Plattsburg."

NAACP PROTESTS JIMCROW ORDER FOR NEGRO AIRMEN IN HOSPITALIZATION FACILITIES

Hospital recommended to the Personnel Distribution Command on 10 February 1945, that no more Negro patients be sent to that hospital. This Distribution Command and put into practice."

In his letter to Secretary of War Stimson, NAACP Special Counsel Thurgood Marshall hit the fallacious reasoning of the Air Corps in setting policy to be adhered to in the handling of all Negro personnel, on the basis of race or color. He declared, "The explanation for this policy is another example of the fallacious reasoning of the Air Corps. All Negroes in the Air Corps eligible for convalescent treatment are excluded because of the alleged opinions of four Negroes to the effect that they were 'unhappy' in the northern climate.

"It is unbelievable that the Air Command in charge of air bases with Negro personnel in northern sections of the United States as well as in areas of other countries with severely cold climates should suddenly assume that Negroes are 'unhappy' because of the winter climate at Plattsburg. There is no doubt that many of the white patients from homes in lower Florida, Louisiana, Texas and California might be 'unhappy' in the winter climate of Plattsburg. This is the same type of reasoning used in an unsuccessful effort to justify segregation.

"The policy of the Army Air Corps is excluding Negroes from convalescent hospitals used by white servicemen is without justification. The determination of the Army Air Corps to perpetuate and extend its policy of segregation will increase friction between the races and is destructive of our peace. We therefore urge you as Secretary of War to issue an order countermanding the action of the Air Staff in excluding Negroes from Plattsburg and other convalescent hospitals solely on the ground of race."

Affront to the Uniform

It is our feeling that any restaurant which turns away a Negro wearing the uniform of the United States—any Negro, of course, who conducts himself decently—deserves to be boycotted and destroyed.

J. C. Plankinton, who should know, states in a letter on this page that exclusion of Negroes in service is not the policy of the restaurants of Portland but that at least one restaurant is so conducting its business—the latest complaint being in regard to a Negro girl in the uniform of the Wac.

Such a restaurant does not deserve to exist.

A man who is good enough to fight beside our sons in battle, or a woman who is good enough to nurse beside our daughters in the hospitals, is good enough to eat beside you and me in downtown Portland.

J.C. Railroad Station at Godman Field

Evidence that the War Department order ending segregation on army posts was not put into effect at Godman Field, Ky., can be seen in the above photos which show entrances to the railroad station plainly marked COLORED and WHITE. This station is on the post. Violations like this are expected to end under Col. B. O. Davis, Jr., who is now commanding officer of the post and the 477th Composite Group. He replaces Col. Robert C. Selway, Jr., white.

Dixie Born Commander's Idea

Negro Fliers Seen Victims Of General's Planned Segregation

Pittsburgh Courier
6-2-45

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Right or wrong, the woes which have beset Negro flight officers at Selfridge Fiedl, Walterboro Air Base, and more lately the bombardiers of Godman and Freeman Fields, are being traced to the doorstep of Maj. Gen. Frank O'Driscoll Hunter, commanding general of the First Army Air Force.

The Associated Negro Press has attempted to probe into some of the background of the general, a product of Savannah, Ga., but not of West Point Military Academy, to answer some of the curiosity about the man. After all, one who enjoys the huge responsibility attendant upon the commander of the First Army Air Force certainly needs explanation when he will stand before a group of men under his command, insult them and injure their morale.

BORN IN GEORGIA

Hunter was born in Savannah fifty years ago, studied in Connecticut and at Lausanne, Switzerland. He enlisted in the aviation section, signal reserve as a flying cadet on May 18, 1917, and was commissioned a first lieutenant in the section four months later. He was called to active duty Sept. 22, 1917 and was honorably discharged on Feb. 24, 1919. He was commissioned a first lieutenant in the regular Army Air Service in 1920, and has been strutting ever since.

Maj. Gen. Hunter came up through the ranks to the position he now holds. His permanent rank is that of lieutenant colonel, to which he was elevated Oct. 9, 1940.

The 332nd Fighter Group was organized Nov., 1943, at Selfridge Field, Mich., a part of the First Army Air Force. Col. William T. Colman, who shot his Negro chauffeur, was commanding officer of the base. He was reduced to the rank of captain and transferred from the post as a result. He is now out of the Army.

The next base commander was Col. William L. Boyd, who apparently was an easy-going sort of individual, but who, homehow, saw reason for establishing separate officers' clubs for Negroes and whites in the free Northern State of Michigan. Commanding the fighter group itself, and deputy commander of the base was Col. Robert L. Selway Jr.

The men of the group protested vehemently. An investigation by the inspector general's office was conducted last year, and General Hunter visited the field presumably to rectify the grievances. Standing before these men one day in April, 1944, he told them, among other things: 6-2-45

CONDEMNED "AGITATORS"

"This country is not ready or willing to accept a colored officer as the equal of a white one. You are not in the Army to advance your race. Your prime purpose should be in taking your training and fighting for your country and winning the war. In that way you can do a deal for both your race and your country. As for racial agitators, they shall be weeded out and dealt with."

Apparently it concerned neither the general nor his Selfridge Field subordinates that Michigan has a civil rights law. Seemingly they went about establishing a Southern jim-crow pattern at a Northern Army post, contrary to the local custom. It is the same thing which Southern whites object strenuously to in the South, but are quick to do themselves in the North and even abroad as events have shown. The seeds of discontent then were well sown.

The 332nd had been shipped overseas. Another squadron, the 553rd, was being organized at the field. Suddenly on the night of May 5, 1944, they entrained for an unknown destination. This turned out to be Walterboro, S. C., and they were no longer the 553rd Pursuit Squadron but rather replacements for the 332nd group. Their commander was Lieut. Col. Sam P. Triffy, also not without the taint of the Selfridge Field unpleasantness.

Organization of the 477th Bombardment Group on May 27, 1944, found Colonel Selway in charge. This group was assigned to Godman Field, Ky. Incidentally, in connection with the 477th, the outfit was to have been staffed by all Negro officers before commitment overseas. Whereas the unit is about ready, this objective has not yet been achieved. 6-2-45

UNIT MOVED SOUTH

At Waterboro almost immediately after their arrival, the fighter replacements were told they could not use a common officers' lounge, and that they were to be segregated in the post theatre. They had no alternative with the lounge matter since they had to eat. However, they refrained completely from attending the theatre. All of this, according to Col. William M. Prince, post commander, was in accordance with the laws of South Carolina.

Segregation remained effective until the War Department order abolishing jim-crow arrangements and facilities on Army posts was issued in June, 1944. This correspondent spent two and a half days at Waterboro inquiring and learned that soon after the transfer, General Hunter had appeared before the men and declared:

"I spend more time wrestling with the problems concerning this base than any other five (like) bases in my air force."

Before the final article in a series had appeared, Colonel Prince had been replaced. After their conclusion, Colonel Triffy was transferred.

At Godman Field much the same situation had developed.

Some time around April 1 the bombardiers were moved over into Indiana to Freeman Field, Colonel Selway still in command. On April 8, 101 men were placed under house arrest for attempting to use a common officers' club. Later when others read a statement promising to remain out of the "white" club, and were asked to sign it, sixty-two refused and were also arrested. Protests mounted and all but three of the 163 men were released.

The group was returned to Godman Field where they were compelled to use separate facilities. Godman Field adjoins Fort Knox where there are no Negro officers with which to contend. But whites from Godman are welcomed at the Fort Knox Club and Negro officers are not. The excuse is still valid that each must use the facilities of the field at which he is based.

PLANNED SEGREGATION

Two things have become evident in this long history. They are that Colonel Selway, even while deputy to his predecessors at Selfridge Field, had been the chief needler of the other men on the jim-crow question; and that General Hunter not only has been in accord with the segregation policy, but has repeatedly indicated that his own thinking runs so much in that direction that he might have been the direct inspiration for the jim-crow policies that have hampered morale of the 332nd and the 477th.

Note should be taken that in the Selfridge Field instance the answer to protests was the transfer of the units to Southern areas—South Carolina and Kentucky. In the Freeman Field instance the answer was a transfer, this time from the State of Indiana, which has a civil rights law and not a few mixed schools, back to Kentucky, which frowns seriously upon race mixing.

Oddly too, the area covered by the First Army Air Force, over which General Hunter presides, takes in twelve States. These include South Carolina, Michigan and Indiana, but do not include Kentucky. It does cover Godman Field in Kentucky, however.

In all the rowing, the inspector general's office has made two investigations, and the last of which, at Freeman, being undertaken by Maj. Gen. Virgil Peterson, the I.G. himself. In at least one of the reports filed, the conclusion was drawn that General Hunter is just opposed to social equality for Negroes in any way, and that he is determined to see that his views prevail.

Wounded Soldiers Barred by Excursion Boat to Va.

Afro-American
6-9-45

WASHINGTON—Virginia jim crow raised its ugly fangs against three wounded soldiers Friday when they were refused permission to accompany their white comrades aboard an excursion boat to Mount Vernon, Va.

The men, from the Fort Meade recuperation center, were among fifty patients being given an all-day outing by the Salvation Army unit of the USO.

They were refused admission aboard the Mount Vernon, owned by the Wilson Boat Line, which also operates the Robert E. Lee, on which colored Washingtonians spend thousands of dollars a season.

First Inkling Given at Pier

The first refusal was made when the company arrived at the pier and boat officials told Capt. Rayford Osborn, white, of the Salvation Army, that colored people were not allowed on the Mount Vernon.

Capt. Osborn then told Lt. Eugene Beam, white, the officer in charge of the group, of the attitude of the boat company and asked what should be done.

Captain Osborn and Lieutenant Beam then went into the office of the Wilson Line and asked that an exception be made in this case because of the military contingent involved. Two of the trio were on crutches. 6-9-45

Officers Offer to Drive

The officials flatly refused to give the white officers permission to take the three men aboard, whereupon Lieutenant Beam and Captain Osborn offered to take the colored men to Mount Vernon in their car rather than let them be disappointed.

The men refused to accept this alternative and told the officers that if they could not go on the boat they would remain in town and join the group at the ball game at 7:30 in the evening.

Boat Line Sole Culprit

In statements to the AFRO, both Army and USO officials stated that they wished the public to know that the discrimination was not on their part but on the part of the boat line.

The men were Pvts. Clarence Adams, 38, Detroit; Freddy C. Johnson, 23, Jacksonville, Fla., and James E. Lang, 19, also of Detroit. 6-9-45

In a statement to the AFRO, Pvt. Lang charged that it was his second experience, inasmuch as he had been taken off a bus at Fort Meade because of his color the night before.

Whites Only Wanted

Lieutenant Beam explained that this was done because the group sponsoring the Wednesday night affair had requested "white only." 6-9-45

When the second incident occurred, Pvt. Lang's emotion reached such a state, he admitted, that he cried when he could not get on the boat.

"I just could not stand any more humiliation," he explained.

How Jim Crow Disheartened Negro Division

Roi Ottley Looks Into Causes of 92d's Troubles

By Roi Ottley
Special Correspondent
(Copyright, 1945, by The Newspaper PM, Inc.)

PM Exclusive

ROME, June 9.—The war brought death to European fascism. But it failed to drive a nail into the coffin of an American brand of fascism—within the framework of the U. S. Army. I refer to the handling of the all-Negro 92d Division.

Ottley

The unsatisfactory showing of the 92d Division, the all-Negro outfit commanded by Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond, has documented clearly this development. But few have stopped to analyze the reasons.

Everyone I talked with, both Negro and white, were convinced that the division was one of the poorest in the Italian theater. Even some of its members said so.

I found no convincing evidence that the outfit was any worse than others in the theater, nor has there been any official statement as to the failure of the division. But the negative stories persist.

These stories say that Negro "patrols melted away under enemy fire," Negro officers were inefficient, the division had a high rate of AWOLs, it had no spectacular victories, it had the highest venereal rate in the Italian theater.

Magnification

Admissions by Truman Gibson, Negro civilian aide to the Secretary of War, concerning certain failures of the division have been magnified here. No one has bothered to quote the explanations he made for the poor showing.

It is almost an unwritten law among the Allied correspondents not to report any show of flinching. The High Command and war correspondents know white patrols have "melted away under enemy fire." They know that there are inefficient white officers. They also know that there are outfits without spectacular victories.

To be sure, much of the criticisms of the Negro division from white troops, is a form of sublimating. They are frustrated and homesick. The complex reasons for their being here escape them. Therefore, they seek a scapegoat. The Negro soldier seems to be the handiest whipping boy. So, with the flimsiest information, they gripe about the failures of Negroes.

Courage

No one here actually questions the courage of Negro soldiers. Their white officers are unstinting in praise of individual acts of heroism. The division's casualties have been high. Few ever were taken prisoner. Stars and Stripes, the GI newspaper, recently praised the men of the division. But all this has failed to offset the misinformation that is being circulated.

The 92d Division probably would not have been singled out for criticism if the War Dept. had not sent Truman Gibson to Italy. What the motive was seems vague at this distance, because no noticeable change has been made in the outfit. In any case, the expose has boomeranged. It has placed blazing focus on a disgraceful situation in the U. S. Army. Even the GIs are beginning to ask the reason.

I went up with the Ninety-second to gather some facts. The men had been fighting on the front for a long time, having been activated in October, 1943. They were moving swiftly toward La Spezia, the formidable naval base. They were taking a terrific shelling from the coastal batteries of the Nazis—but they were moving forward steadily.

What I learned saddened and discouraged me—but hardly more than the discouragement and frustration the men themselves were experiencing. For the press reports, particularly those appearing in Time and Newsweek magazines, in addition to their day-to-day problems, were hard on morale.

Comments

This is the sort of comments that punctuated their conversations:

"I know I'm not going to get a break when I get home!"

To which another would say, "Yeah, so I don't want to be a hero."

The general feeling was, "This is Mr. Charlie's fight"—meaning the war is a white man's affair.

A certain inevitability threaded through their comments: "When I return I'll have to fight this war all over again," was the way they put it.

"No matter what we do, nobody pays us any mind," was the final conclusion.

The fact is, even the most uninformed Negro GI I talked with questioned the usefulness of risking his life.

I asked one of the Negro chaplains what he said to the men to stimulate their morale. He shrugged helplessly.

When I talked with the Chief of Staff, Col. McCaffery, he offered no solution to this distressing morale. The Negro officers frankly admitted they were helpless, except to stir the men with "racial patriotism." They said the men would go to the death for each other, but not for any abstract slogan. They were clearly cynical about the announced objectives of the war.

As it turned out, what actually I discovered in the ranks of the 92d Division reached deep in the social patterns of U. S. life. Neither whites nor Negroes were ultimately responsible. They were all caught up, victims of an ugly condition. For what was wrong with the division could never be corrected in Italy.

So, with this discovery, I sought the facts. I know I have them and I will try to put into perspective a sad chapter in our military history—one that has embarrassed us with our troops, caused racial conflicts and misunderstanding among them, embarrassed us with our Allies, and produced a certain cynicism among the liberated peoples as to the ultimate meanings of America's participation in the war.

These were the first Negro troops to arrive in Cherbourg, France.

FHA Says It Is a Business Proposition

6-15-45

PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 15 —If you are a veteran of World War II and want to settle down here with your family in a new home of your own, with lots of sun and trees in the yard, the government, through a housing project called Paisley Forest, has just the thing for you.

Provided, of course, that you didn't fight the war as a member of the 332nd Fighter Group, say, or in the 92nd Division of the U. S. Fifth Army in Italy. It isn't that any military shame is attached to either outfit; both, in fact, have been cited for valor.

They just aren't taking any Negroes in Paisley Forest, which (to quote an advertisement in the Washington Star) is a "beautiful new subdivision created for U. S. veterans . . . a community of highly restricted detached brick homes," which is "approved and financed" by the FHA (Federal Housing Administration).

Highly Restricted

At the offices of Frederick W. Berens, Inc., real estate firm which ran the Star ad under a "V" symbol wrapped in "GI Bill of Rights" in pretty script, it was explained that "highly restricted" meant that a Negro veteran, even if he had a government loan for a down payment on $8750 required for one of the FHA-financed houses, wouldn't be accepted.

"And how about Jewish veterans?" the girl who answered the questions at the Berens office was asked.

6-15-45

"Well," she said with some hesitancy, "we just can't restrict them."

At FHA offices here it was explained that the housing agency is strictly a business proposition, and that the only criterion for putting up the taxpayers' money for home-building purposes is whether or not the investment looks good and sound—no social conscience, or anything like that—and the government-mortgage owner can do what he pleases in his choice of occupants.

So if you are a veteran, have some cash from the GI Bill of Rights borrowing facilities, want to work and live around here, and have the right color, you can get a dream house, financed by the taxpayers, out in Paisley Forest near Arlington, Va.

6-15-45

You go across Memorial Bridge, honoring all war dead, hit Wilson Blvd., run down Washington Blvd. to McKinley Rd. and there you are.

At Washington offices of the NAACP, (National Association for the Advancement of Colored People), it was reported that there were no known projects, FHA-financed or otherwise, for the development of any new housing restricted to Negro heroes of the war.

Presumably these veterans can come home to Washington's "colored district," which visitors in the Capitol note with interest on their way down town from the Capitol and Union Station in taxis. The sights are as quaint as those in Harlem or on Pittsburgh's Hill.

There has been talk in recesses of corridors of the Capitol about requiring the FHA to write into its home contracts something that would bar discrimination on a basis of creed, color, or race, but nothing ever has come of such conversations.

The NAACP wrote the late President Roosevelt last October that regulations and policies of the FHA actually operated to spread and reinforce racial and minority prejudices, against which the war is being fought in part. There had been no reply from the White House, although a couple of years earlier Mr. Roosevelt had said he was confident that FHA policies were "applicable to all transactions and citizens alike, regardless to race, creed, or color."

Play Along

The official FHA Underwriting Manual, distributed as a guide to government housing officials, says differently. Rather than instructing FHA agents to keep their minds and hands off of such troublesome questions as "restricted" developments, keeping their attention fixed only on security of loans, it tells the agents to play along with racial prejudices.

6-15-45

The Underwriting Manual works up in its instructions to "adverse influences." These, it says, include "unharmonious racial groups" which may become a factor in FHA housing, and it tells FHA agents that one of their responsibilities is the "prevention of infiltration" by such elements in government-approved-and-financed projects.

The "stability" of housing communities financed by the FHA demands, the official manual says, on the continuance of occupancy by the "same social and racial classes" to which they are accustomed.

And in "unoccupied" real estate territory, the Underwriting Manual says, projected plans of developers would be buttressed and made more secure, financiallq if papers covering leasing or buying of homes included provisions for:

"Prohibition of the occupancy of properties except by the race for which they are intended."

Just to make this perfectly clear to its representatives in the field, the FHA in its Outline of Protective Covenants offered a model clause:

6-15-45

"No person of any race other than the . . . . . shall use or occupy any building or any lot, except that this covenant shall not prevent occupancy by domestic servants of a different race domiciled with an owner or tenant."

Meanwhile, do you want to get in on the FHA-fianced Paisley Forest Housing project down Arlington way? If you are a veteran, just step up with your dough under the GI Bill of Rights, and you'll be fixed up.

You had better make sure, though, that your skin is white before you get any ideas about taking advantage of such a fine proposition, backed thought it is by money paid by all U. S. citizens.

Army Rips Race Hate As Menace To World Peace

Chicago Defender

Chicago Defender 6-9-45

WASHINGTON—The War Department has launched a hard-hitting attack against American race prejudice.

6-9-45

Branding Negro haters and "Jew-baiters" as "enemies" of America, the army has issued an open blast denouncing race, color and religious prejudice as dangerous to the morale of its 10,000,000 men in uniform.

"Consideration for the Negro, the Jew, the Catholic, the foreign born, or for any other minority group; rests not merely on the grounds of humanity and justice; it rests on the solid base of self-interest," points the document listed as Orientation Fact Sheet No. 70 and issued on May 5, 1945.

The manual issued by the Information and Education Division of the Army Orientation branch headed by Chief of Staff General George C. Marshall flatly states that "discrimination on the basis of race or color" is "fatal to military efficiency." The manual declares, "Racial and religious prejudice alienates the confidence of the vast non-white populations as well as other peoples, thwarts their hopes of peace and freedom and ultimately creates the conditions from which future global wars can develop."

6-9-45

In the army's boldest analysis of the growth and destructive development of race prejudice, the scientifically - prepared document bluntly continues:

"We do not inherit our prejudices . . . We may have a stereotyped picture of Negroes as lazy, stupid, happy-go-lucky . . . These stereotypes are being constantly reinforced through newspapers, movies, conversations and jokes, books and radio. A single story comic strip, or movie may not make too deep an impression. However, when time after time the Negro is presented as a crap-shooting, shiftless character—then deep and lasting impressions are made which go to form attitudes and prejudices."

6-9-45

The army pointed out the use of the "Hate the Negroes," and "Hate the Jews" technique by Nazi Germany and warned that Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels had claimed: "Nothing will be easier than to produce a bloody revolution in America. No other country has so many social and racial tensions. We shall be able to play on many strings there."

"Any American who 'plays on these strings' by spreading prejudice against minorities—Catholics, Jews, Negroes, foreign-born, and others—is, whether he knows it or not, playing the Axis game."

Defining the word "Minority" the Army stated that "everyone in America belongs to a minority.

"America, like the rest of the world, is made up of minorities—religious, racial and national. Let us remember that a minority group, like the Poles or the Negroes in America, may be a majority group elsewhere (say in Poland or Africa) and that a majority group today may become a minority group tomorrow—or vice versa," it stated.

Cites FEPC

In what is perhaps the first recommendation of the Fair Employment Practice Committee made by the armed forces, the pamphlet stated:

"Through the years there has been a sustained effort to abolish discriminations and prejudices which deny a person his fundamental rights as a citizen in a democracy. Discriminations and prejudices are not products of—but rather challenges to—the American way of life. And each of us has a personal responsibility to see to it that the American way of life prevails . . .

"A great advance was made in June 1941 when President Roosevelt issued Executive Order 8802 and declared 'It is the policy of the United States to encourage full participation in the national defense program by all citizens of the United States regardless of race, creed, color, or national origin.' The order requires that in all war contracts there is no discrimination 'because of race, creed, or national orgin,' and sets up the Fair Employment Practice Committee (FEPC) to enforce this provision.

Hails New Trend

"At the same time, many Americans are beginning to realize that racial and religious prejudices menace our war efforts and our hopes for world peace. More and more Americans are becoming convinced that every person, regardless of his race, religion, or national origin, should be judged on the basis of his own merit . . . Many are learning that democracy cannot work for some unless it works for all . . ."

Vets to Tackle Racial Problem, Says Navigator

* * * * * * * * *

FED UP ON JIM CROWISM IN ARMY

Jim Crowism in the army and the south, seen for the first time by thousands of northerners when they got into the army, has given them new determination to try to erase it and solve racial problems.

That was the report of Raymond L. Palm, 27, of Portland, Ore., speaking from a discharged veteran's point of view as one of 60 educators and social workers at the workshop of intercultural education in session today at the University of Minnesota continuation study center.

Palm, who served as a lieutenant navigator in the air corps, criticized the army for "assigning colored boys to jobs as waiters, latrine orderlies and cooks around enlisted men's and officers' quarters. The only place where they had a chance to show their equality was at drill, and they were tops at that—the best I've ever seen," he declared.

Without army sanction, southern Jim Crowism got the same results around Ellington field, Texas, where he was stationed, Palm said. He described how Negroes stood aside when lines formed at soft drink machines and waited until all the white troops were through. "The northern white soldiers didn't like it, but the situation was a little too strong for them."

"Soldiers who have seen this sort of thing and yet who know that the Negroes and members of other races can do just as good a job of soldiering as anyone when they are given the chance will take a new interest in erasing prejudice," he predicted.

He cited the university's intercultural workshop, meeting through August, as an example of the kind of steps that will help solve the problem in the postwar world. "More interest means more education and eventually more understanding," he said.

Vida Lewis, principal of Park Rapids, Minn., high school, said drastic measures were needed to cure Indians from White Earth reservation, forming a small percentage of her school enrollment, of "feeling inferior."

"If they were more willing to mix in, I think the other students would co-operate," she said. "I don't know of any who look down upon them."

3 Pacific-Bound Outfits Drop All Colored Troops

Volunteers For Frontline Infantry Sent Back To Kitchen

By EDWARD B. TOLES
(Defender War Correspondent)

PARIS.—It was back to pots and pans this week for the hundreds of Negro volunteer infantrymen who went into the front lines in Germany to help the final push on Berlin in the last weeks before VE-Day.

Like discarded worn shoes, the heroic colored doughboys, who joined white front line divisions in an unprecedented cracking of Army Jim Crow, have been dropped out of these white combat units and are now back on their menial kitchen and labor jobs.

Of the three divisions which welcomed Negro volunteers and have been redeployed to the Pacific, all were carefully purged of Negroes before proceeding back home to the States.

All Left Behind

These divisions—the 2nd, 8th and 104th—warmly greeted Negro combat aid last winter when there was a critical replacement shortage following the Ardennes thrust by the Nazis and the Battle of the Bulge. The Negro soldiers, many of whom gave up higher rank in order to get into the fighting, performed valiantly, earning many decorations and commendations from ranking commanding officers.

But when the divisions were processed out of the European Theater of Operations enroute to the U.S.A., all Negro volunteers were withdrawn to await reassignment to their former truck driver, kitchen, port battalion jobs in non-integrated units.

Atcually when they volunteered there was no complete integration since the Negro soldiers went to the front as separate platoons and rifle companies serving with white GI's in 1st, 2nd, 8th, 9th, 69th, 78th, 99th and 104th infantry divisions in General Courtney Hodges' 1st Army. But when casualties thinned the ranks of the white divisions, all fought side by side together.

8-11-45

Lauded By White GIs

General Patch's 7th army got Negro volunteers not as platoons but these colored soldiers were organized and designated as so-called "provisional companies." They were assigned to the 12th and 14th armored divisions.

No volunteers reached General Patton's third Army but he had agreed to accept all.

What the white "regulars" thought of the Negro Volunteers' performance and the white GI's willingness to have the Negroes completely integrated was scientifically told in a carefully guarded army information and education survey which polled various "regulars."

Most revealing and encouraging were the results showing complete lack of bias and strongly advocating continuation of mixed units.

Charges Army Rule Blocks Discharge of Negro GIs

Daily Worker 8-21-45

Victory over Japan "brought once more to the front—and sharply—the unfair manner in which colored men in uniform are being treated as to discharges from the service," according to a Victory statement by the National Association of the Advancement of Colored People.

"Colored Americans rejoice with the rest of our nation and the world that the enemy has been beaten and that organized killing has ceased," the statement said, "but we cannot forget that while millions of servicemen and their families are looking forward to release from uniform, our men, for the most part, are being held in the services, either by unfair rules or by arbitrary administration of the rules."

The statement said the great bulk of Negro soldiers was blocked "from the very beginning" by the point system, "which put a premium on combat service." 8-21-45

"Everyone knows that our boys were kept from combat service through no fault of their own," said the NAACP. "The combat requirement in the point system ignores the long service of hundreds of thousands of service troops and condemns them to remain in uniform while white troops with one-fourth the length of service are discharged."

The statement asserted that many Negro soldiers in the infantry had been changed into service troops and were being held, before V-J day, in Europe, to be sent directly to the Pacific to do construction and maintenance work there.

"We have not been able to get absolute proof of discriminatory treatment of our men in the staging areas in Europe while awaiting transportation to America," continued the statement, "but a number of reports from returning Negro veterans all tally as to poor accommodations, least desirable locations, and abuse by military police."

The statement also called for quick passage of the bill for unemployment insurance of $25 a week for 26 weeks, as recommended by President Truman, pointing out that unless this amount were guaranteed by federal law, many unemployed colored workers would get little or nothing under their various state laws.

"A permanent FEPC must be set up by Congress without delay," the statement concluded. "The postwar period will not begin next Christmas. It is here now. There are great problems to be solved and Negro Americans want no special privileges, but they want no special handicaps, either. Let the regulations be fair to all, and be applied fairly to all without discrimination."

V-J Day Shows Up Unfair Discharges for Negroes

Philadelphia Tribune Penn- 8-25-45

NEW YORK— Victory over Japan brought once more to the front— and sharply— the unfair manner in which colored men in uniform are being treated as to discharges from the service, according to a Victory statement issued August 15 by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"Now that the war is over, our men, like all others, want to get back to their families and civilian activities. They should not be penalized because of their color, or made the victims of rules which do not mention color, but which operate unfairly against Negroes."

The statement also called for quick passage of the bill for unemployment insurance of $25 a week for 26 weeks, as recommended by President Truman, pointing out that unless this amount were guaranteed by federal law, many unemployed colored workers would get little or nothing under their various state laws.

Say White Army Officer Demoted for Championing Cause of Negro and FEPC

The Call Kansas City Mo. 9-21-45

SHREVEPORT, La. — (ANP) —Capt. Thomas F. Hoult, a white army officer at the Camp Livingston station hospital is reported to have been reduced in rank for championing the cause of the Negro and the FEPC bill.

Capt. Hoult is said to have lost his captaincy following an article he wrote to the Shreveport Times People's forum against an anti-FEPC editorial appearing in that paper on Aug. 2. Reports reveal that he is now a lieutenant.

In his article to the Times, he championed the cause of the American Negro as well as gave an intelligent and scientific analysis of darker peoples in other parts of the world. He charged that his station hospital practiced racial discrimination and segregation against Negro army officers. 9-21-45

"The colored officers in this hospital have no swimming pool, for example," he wrote. "but white officers have an elaborate club and pool."

Capt. Thomas F. Hoult, a former social scientist, pleaded for fair play and justice for darker people all over the world. In behalf of American Negroes, he said:

"On the local level, the United States has the opportunity to demonstrate to the colored people of the world that it intends to me democratic in fact as well as in name. Our own country is the proving ground for what we will support and do in the world. If we cannot demonstrate an inherent spirit of good will here, we will continue to be misunderstood by the colored men in other nations, and continued war and misery will be the inevitable result."

Following the appearance of his article in the local Times, the captain is reportd to have been reduced to a lieutenant on some flimsy technicality.

Lynn Committee regarding Segregation

The Lynn Committee To Abolish Segregation In The Armed Forces

Northwest Herald
Seattle, Wash.

"The Naval decision to grant discharges 'under honorable conditions' to 14 Negro Seabees is the first attempt of the Navy to meet the mounting criticism against naval policy of racial discrimination," declared Wilfred H. Kerr, co-chairman of the Lynn Committee to Aabolish Segregation in the Armed Forces. For a whole year the Lynn Committee has carried on an unceasing fight to win honorable discharges for a group of Negro Seabees, who had been dismissed by the Navy on October 22, 1943, as "undesirable" because they had protested against segregation and discrimination by white officers while stationed at a base in the Caribbean. 4-17-45

This decision followed a hearing demanded by the Lynn Committee last December. The Committee succeeded in getting Arthur Garfield Hays and Gerald Weatherly to represent four of the Seabees.

Isaac McNatt, of the Seabees represented at the hearing, praised the Lynn Committee for its courageous conduct. "As a personal matter, the restoration of full G. I. rights means that I can now reestablish myself in civilian life without the unjust handicap of a dishonorable discharge," Mr. McNatt, who at present is completing his studies at St. John's Law School, declared.

"But the issue has always been bigger than what happened to me and the other Seabees who had been summarily kicked out of the Navy," he continued. "Practically all colored Americans and an increasing number of white Americans realize that the treatment of Negroes in the armed forces is a blot on democracy. 4-17-45

"This is the real meaning of our struggle to redress the wrong done us in the Navy. Far from being an isolated instance, our case has been typical of the lot of thousands of colored boys in uniform.

"The Lynn Commitee tdeserves every credi for taking up the case last spring, when it looked utterly hopeless. Cooperating with the Lynn Committee were the NAACP, the Civil Liberties and the CIO War Relief Committee. Now the case has been decided in our favor, but I think that the fight has just begun. It will not end until Jim-Crow conditions are abolished forever in our Army and Navy."

Mr. Kerr pointed out that the case of Mr. McNatt and the other eSabees, as well as the whole problem of discrimination and segregation in the armed forces was not simply a war-time issue. He said:

"There seems to be little doubt that a large permanent standing body of men in uniform will be maintained by our country after the war. In that standing Army and Navy and in its training camps, the problem of race relations will continue to be important. If the present discrimination and segregation policies are permitted to remain, the result will be a permanent center of racial discord which will spread the poison of racial distrust and hatred throughout our country. 4-17-45

"Just recently 1,000 Negro seamen went on strike on the west coast against intolerable conditions. Had not the Navy acted as it did in the eSabee case, we would have believed that those in charge of naval policy were determined to make all Negroes in that branch of the service the despised servants and laborers.

"Ous success in this case only confirms our opinion that militant struggle and publicity will bring results even in the teeth of military bureaucracy. 4-17-45

"We intend to carry on and to redouble our efofrts to abolish segregation in the Army and Navy, for we believe that segregation is the evil force from which all discrimination flows. We will continueue to fight as many such cases of discrimination as come to our attention."

MP Brutality

White MPs Beat Negro Sailor On Alabama Train

Chicago Defender 6-2-45

MOBILE, Ala. — Apparently encouraged by a harsh Army jim crow policy which has permitted almost everything in the book, two prejudiced-crazed and power-drunk white military policemen viciously assaulted a Negro sailor on a northbound Louisville and Nashville train early last Tuesday morning. 6-2-45

The attack took place in a smoking compartment of the second coach in the Pan-American, New Orleans-Cincinnati train, between Mobile and Flomaton. The victim's name was given at Woodrow Reed, who was en route to Florida from a California naval base, and was removed from the train at Flomaton by the MPs.

A demand for army and railroad investigations with proper disciplinary action in order against the MPs and the train conductor have been made by the NAACP.

According to witnesses interviewed each of the MPs hurled invectives and took turns at intervals in beating their helpless prisoner in the face and about the body in the smoking compartment of L. & N. coach No. 1867.

Passengers pleaded with the train conductor who was in the forward car, to go back to the next coach and stop the military policemen from beating the sailor, but he continued to punch tickets and manifested no interest in the plight of the defenseless victim of MP brutality.

56d-1945 Nat'l Committee to bolish Segregation in the Armed Forces

Form National Committee to Abolish Segregation in the Armed Services

The Case

5-11-45

BUTLER, N. J. — Meeting over the weekend at Goodwill Camp, representatives of 25 national organizations, of all racial and religious affiliations, formed the National Committee to Abolish Segregation in the Armed Services and addressed a resolution to President Harry S. Truman urging that as Commander-in-Chief he issue a proclamation abolishing every vestige of segregation in the armed services.

Gathered together at the invitation of A. Philip Randolph, president, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL; Willard S. Townsend, president, United Transport Service Employees, Cio; Morris Milgram, national secretary, Workers Defense League, and Wilfred Kerr, chairman, Lynn Committee to Abolish Segregation in the Armed Forces, the delegates voted to form a permanent organization known as the National Committee to Abolish Segregation in the Armed Services, to cooperate with all existing organizations presently engaged in the fight, and to enlist the support of organizations all over the country in the campaign.

A feature of the conference was an address by Mayor Thomas N. D. Mace of the Borough of Butler, himself a veteran of World War I, who declared that "the only way to stop future wars is to treat mankind equally." He said that "no matter who you are, what you are, or where you came from, you have a right to equal opportunity on this earth."

Named as members of the planning committee to perfect plans for the organization were, in addition to Mr. Randolph and Mr. Kerr, Layle Lane, Merrit C. Brown, Morris Milgram, Louis B. Greenberg, Robert L. Carter, Ezra Parrott, Sol Stettin, William E.E Hill, Ludlow Werner, Mrs. T. D. McNeal, Guichard Parris, Theodore Griffin and Clara Clayman.

The conference resolution, unanimously adopted, read as follows:

"At a time when the armed forces of the United States are engaged with the United Nations in the total defeat of governments predicated upon military depotism and wholly false doctrines of racial superiority, and

"At a time when there are vast numbers of the armed forces of the United States fighting and dying for a freedom which they have not been accorded in their native land, and

"Whereas it is totally inconsistent with the great sacrifices which all elements of our nation are making to establish, preserve and perpetuate freedom upon this earth that the Negro soldiers and soldiers of other minority groups should be subjected to segregation and other discriminatory practices, and

5-11-45

"At a time, too, when the United Nations are engaged in establishing the structure for a permanent organization to insure world peace and in the words of the Dumbarton Oaks proposals, to 'promote respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms,' and

"Since racial equality and the complete integration of all groups are essential for real peace and international cooperation,

"Therefore we call upon you, Mr. President, as Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces of the United States, and we call upon the Military Staff and the Congress of the United States to abolish every vestige of segregation and discrimination now practised. Only in this way can the United States maintain an unassailabe position of world leadership in the fight for freedom."

Army Admits Responsibility for Keeping Jim Crow in Blood Banks

Washington Tribune 4-28-45

By HARRY McALPIN

The War Department has admitted in writing its responsibility for separate labeling and segregation of the blood of Negroes from that of whites in the Red Cross blood plasma banks.

It says it deems it inadvisable to modify, change, or reverse the policy. It admits there is no scientic basis for the practice of plasma segregation.

These facts were contained in a recent letter from the Office of the Surgeon General, signed by Maj. F. N. Schwartz, who said the Surgeon General, Maj. Gen Norman T. Kirk, had directed him to write the letter.

Delegation Protests

4-28-45

He was answering a letter from Dr. M. P. Lawrence of Long Island, N.Y. The American Red Cross had previously informed Dr. Lawrence that the segregation of blood was not its ruling, but a Government ruling.

Based on this correspondence, a delegation called on the Office of the Surgeon General to protest the un-scientific and un-American policy of the Army. In the delegation were:

Doxey A. Wilkerson, representing the National Negro Congress; Robert Sherman, white CIO Industrial Union Council; Mrs. Beatrice Reed, NAACP; Miss Charlotte K. May, National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses, and the writer, representing the legislative committee of the National Bar Association

Rank(in) in Army Too

4-28-45

The committee was referred to Brig. Gen. F. W. Rankin, adviser to the Surgeon General.

General Rankin did not hesitate to admit that the segregation policy is the Army's. "The War Department has to take these responsibilities and it is perfectly willing to take them," he said. He admitted, however, that there is no scientific basis for the segregation.

He expressed the sentiment expressed in the letter written by Major Schwartz, in which he said:

4-28-45

"Unfortunately, there is a disinclination on the part of many whites, which you of course recognize, to have Negro blood injected into their veins. Whether that disinclination is the result of prejudice or ignorance, it nevertheless exists, and is a factor with which this office reckon in carrying out the plasma program for the Army."

General Rankin added:

Mythical Majority

"It is a decisive index of democracy that the majority rules. That is what democracy indicates. We believe in the rule of the majority." 4-28-45

But the general refused to answer how he had determined that the majority of the American people wanted the unscientific, un-American policy of the Army followed. Instead, he said:

"I don't think we need debate whether there are people who object to having the blood of Negroes injected into their veins."

An assistant to the general then added:

"Something put into the veins scares people. They are very superstitious. It is something which seems to be ingrained at the moment in enough people to keep up from changing the policy."

At the conclusion of the conference, the general said:

Not a Dead Subject

4-28-45

"This is never a dead subject. Don't think you are the only group which had talked to me about it. I have ample correspondence on the other side. There is quite a bit of objection to changing the policy. I think you are perfectly within your rights to come and lay your arguments on the table and ask consideration of them. I am glad you came. And I represent the Surgeon General, and he is glad to have you, too.

"But, I don't think you expect me to recommend to Secretary Stimson tomorrow that the policy be changed."

N.Y. Company Faces Suit for Rejecting Blood Donor

AFRO-AMERICAN

By D. R. RICHARDS

NEW YORK — Charging the manufacturing chemical firm of Sharpe & Dohme, with prejudice and discrimination, John Randall, an unemployed construction worker, has instituted a $25,000 lawsuit against the company for refusing to accept his blood because he is colored. 4-28-45

Randall, who lives at 200 W. 144th St., went to the company's downtown office in response to an advertisement for healthy blood donors which appeared in the N.Y. Daily News on April 4.

Following consultation with the law firm of Jackson & Pharr, 200 W. 135th Street, action for suit was begun against Sharpe & Dohme for "breach of contract."

In an exclusive AFRO interview, Harrison S. Jackson, attorney, revealed that a summons was served the company on April 16.

Borderline Case

"It is sort of a borderline case," he explained. "It actually is not a written contract that was violated but an advertisement in the newspaper to the general public asking for public blood for a fee. The essence of the contract is what consideration did Randall give?

"He went down there, gave up his time, and offered his services. That makes up the contract and he went down to accept what was offered, and they backed out."

No Prejudice in Ad

He said that since prejudice was not evident in the company's ad, proceedings cannot be brough under the Civil Rights Law. Also, since the Ives-Quinn law does not become effective until July 1, the company cannot be sued for unemployment discrimination under the act. The only thing to do was proceed under theory of "breach of contract."

Randall has donated his blood to the Red Cross several times.

Commenting further on the case Mr. Jackson said:

"Here is a private firm which discriminates at a time when we are at war and are trying to carry out the principles of democracy. This portrays what we can look forward to as the essence of another war in the future.

"Our battle is not to go through the back door of socialization with whites by expending our blood, but principally to do a patriotic and humanitarian duty toward all mankind."

Sharpe & Dohme, which is well known as a manufacturer and distributor of vitamins and other products, could not be reached for comment.

Army Takes Full Blame For Jim Crow Blood Bank

Chicago Defender

WASHINGTON. (NNPA)—The War Department has admitted in writing its responsibility for the separate labeling and segregation of the blood of Negroes from that of whites in the Red Cross blood plasma banks.

It says it deems it inadvisable to modify, change or reverse the policy. It admits there is no scientific basis for the practice of plasma segregation.

These facts were contained in a letter of March 24 from the Office of the Surgeon General, Army Service Forces, signed by Major F. N. Schwartz, who said the surgeon general had directed him to write the letter. The surgeon general is Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk. He was answering a letter from Dr. Michael B. Lawrence of Long Island, N. Y. The American Red Cross had previously advised Dr. Lawrence that the segregation of blood was not its ruling, but a government ruling.

Protest Delegation

Based on this correspondence, a delegation called on the Office of the Surgeon General to protest the un-scientific and un-American policy of the Army. In the delegation were Doxey A. Wilkerson, representing the National Negro Congress; Robert Sherman (white), representing the CIO Industrial Union Council; Mrs. Beatrice Reed, representing the NAACP, and Miss Charlotte K. May, representing the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses. They were referred to Brig. Gen. F. W. Rankin, adviser to the surgeon general.

Gen. Rankin did not hesitate to admit that the segregation policy is the Army's. "The War Department has to take these responsibilities and it is perfectly willing to take them," he said. He admitted, however, that there is no scientific basis for the segregation.

He repeated the sentiment expressed in the letter written by Maj. Schwartz, in which he said: "Unfortunately, there is a disinclination on the part of many whites, which you, of course, recognize, to have Negro blood injected into their veins. Whether that disinclination is the result of prejudice or ignorance, it, nevertheless, exists, and is a factor with which this office must reckon in carrying out the plasma program for the Army."

"Majority Rules"

Gen. Rankin added to this: "It is a decisive index of democracy that the majority rules. That is what democracy indicates. We believe in the rule of the majority."

He said: "I don't think we need debate whether there are people who object" to having the blood of Negroes injected into their veins.

An assistant of the general then added: "Something put into the veins scares people. They are very superstitious. It is something which seems to be ingrained at the moment in enough people to keep us from changing the policy."

At the conclusion of the conference, the general said: "This is never a dead subject. Don't think you are the only group which has talked to me about this. I have ample correspondence on the other side. There is quite a bit of objection to changing the policy. I think you are perfectly in your rights to come and lay your arguments on the table and ask consideration of them. I am glad you came. And I represent the surgeon general, and he is glad to have you, too.

"But, I don't think you expect me to recommend to Secretary Stimson tomorrow that the policy be changed."

Red Cross' Policy On Blood Still Unchanged

Memphis World — Tenn. 2-9-45

Must Abide By Gov't Orders, Says Officials

NEW YORK (SNS) — Although it may be true, as reported by some war correspondents overseas that in actual practice Negro blood plasma is not separated from that of whites, the American Red Cross is still following its declared policy of segregation and separate labeling.

This policy was regretfully reiterated by Miss Ella Mae Vanderboget of the New York Chapter of the American Red Cross in a letter to the NAACP. 2-9-45

Miss Vanderboget, chairman of the social and employment agencies division in the annual Red Cross Drive scheduled for March, wrote the National Office of the NAACP asking that an office chairman be appointed and solicitations made for the Red Cross Fund.

In reply, Roy Wilkins, acting secretary, asked whether the Red Cross had changed its blood plasma policy. Miss Vanderboget wrote: "I am sorry the question of Blood Plasma has come up again. I hoped that the decision made in the War Department would be satisfactory to all of you concerned.

"I can only repeat to you that the Red Cross must abide by the instructions given by the Government. We have created no policy and have had no say in the making of it."

Anybody's Blood Will Do When a Life Is at Stake

NEWPORT, R.I.—I was on duty in the operating room of this navy station hospital when a call came for me to report to the laboratory for a blood test. The result was that my blood type was compatible with that of a patient who needed a transfusion. Technicians were elated because after eight hours, they had finally been successful.

While I waited for the doctor to return, I talked with the Wave in charge of the laboratory. "Are you white or colored?" When I told her, she was startled, and said she didn't know that when she sent for me.

Church Against It

She was quick to add that it made no difference as far as the navy was concerned, but the WCTU and the churches were against colored giving blood to whites. If this were known, she would probably get a deck court martial, she told me.

Then she asked that I tell the doctor that I was Mexican, Spanish or Cuban if he asked. I replied that I would never deny my heritage and laughing, I offered to settle the issue by not giving the transfusion because I thought too much of myself to have my blood flowing through a white man's veins.

Not Marked

Humbly the Wave said that a life was at stake and that she had been trying for eight hours to get a donor. She explained that she was a native of Texas, and thought the idea of segregation of blood very foolish.

I gave one pint of blood for the transfusion, but refused to say I was anything but colored. They needed it then, so it wasn't marked "colored." I have often heard if one has a drop of colored blood in him, he is colored. I wonder now what the color is of the patient who got my blood.

Army Takes Responsibility For Separate Blood Policy

Army Stands Pat On Jimcro Blood

Peoples Voice N.Y., N.Y.

4-28-46

WASHINGTON—Brigadier General F. W. Rankin, adviser to the Surgeon General of the Army, virtually spurned Negro blood for building plasma banks for the armed forces, thereby chosing a policy of jimcro as against saving the lives of soldiers on the fighting fronts, it was learned this week from a delegation which conferred with him and other War Department officials. The blame for the segregation of white and Negro blood plasma was therefore directly placed on the shoulders of officials of the War Department, rather than on the American Red Cross directly.

The appointment with War Department officials was arranged by Congressman Adam Clayton Powell of New York.

The delegation consisted of Doxey Wilkerson, representing the National Negro Congress; Beatrice Reed, administrative secretary of the Washington NAACP; Robert Sherman, president of the Washington Industrial Union Council of the CIO; Charlotte May, National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses; and Harry McAlpin, National Bar Association's legal committee. 4-28-46

As spokesman for the group, Mr. Wilkerson pointed out to Brigadier General F. W. Rankin and Major F. N. Swartz of the Surgeon General's office, who received the group, that they had come as friends of the Administration and supporters of the war effort. He said that it was the opinion of Negroes and millions of white citizens that a new attitude toward Negroes had developed during the war and that whites would fall in line with a non-segregation policy of administering blood plasma, just as they had in war plants, on the fighting fronts, and in other circumstances.

HAS "AMPLE BLOOD"

After reiterating to the delegation that the War Department maintained a segregated policy, Brigadier General Rankin made the surprising statement that the department was getting "ample blood." "We have never failed to come up with our quota of blood we have needed," he said.

The General, who said he spoke as the adviser to the Surgeon General, agreed that "there is no biological incompatibility in Negro and white blood," but declared that the practice must be continued because many whites "out of prejudice or ignorance" object to having Negro blood inserted into their veins, and that a change in the policy would "greatly militate against the successful conclusion of the program for collecting blood plasma for the armed forces."

He declared that in a democracy the majority rules. When questioned by members of the group as to how he knew that the majority of whites objected to having blood from Negroes injected into their veins, he declared that he would not debate that question.

When asked whether he meant that a dying soldier would stop a transfusion to ask from whom the blood was taken, the General replied that a dying soldier would not object, but that a great many people out of the Army would object.

DAVIS SCORES DEPARTMENT

Several days before the conference was held, Councilman Benjamin J. Davis, jr, wrote to Major Swartz, in reply to a letter the latter sent to Dr. Michael P. Lawrence of L. I., upholding the segregated policy, that he was "astounded to read that the Army Service Forces is responsible for the white supremacy policy of segregating blood plasma," instead of the American Red Cross, as has been generally believed. We called the practice "an appeasement to pro-fascist, racist pressures which stem from Hilter and Japanese fascists." 4-28-46

"What of the Army Service Forces boldly proclaiming such an anti-United Nations policy at the very moment when the United Nations—colored and white—'ll be our guests to help form a world security organization to prevent wars and to formally establish the equality of races and peoples in the human family?" he wrote.

"I have confidence in our military leadership and believe that this policy will be rectified." He urged that the policy be immediately abrogated and a public announcement made to the effect.

It is the consensus of the members of the delegation that General Rankin has no intention of recommending a change of policy to Surgeon General Kirk and that strong pressure from the public will be necessary to effect a change. They urge that all pressure be placed upon the War Department to have this humiliating and detrimental practice abolished.

Jim Crowism Is Rampant At Pennsylvania Camp

Atlanta World 1-12-45

INDIANTOWN GAP, Pa.—(ANP) — Determination to continue racial segregation practices and failure of white officers here to abide by the war department's directive to outlaw such conditions are the nuclei for unrest and discontent among colored troops here.

at the station hospital with no regard for color and though whites and Negro soldiers enter the mess hall in the same line, when the boys are given their food they are seated in jim crow sections.

Recently confusion reached a high point when a technician 4th grade, a mess sergeant, an army nurse and another officer were posted in the mess hall for the purpose of enforcing the segregated seating order. Both white and colored personnel resented this action.

One cannot attribute such jim crow practices to the fact that they are in keeping with state laws for Pennsylvania, unlike Mississippi, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, and others, has long boasted of an equal rights law.

Sailor Accuses Institute Of Discrimination

Torpedoed Veteran Depicts Conditions At New York Site

NEW YORK — (Calvin's News Service) — Samuel Seaborn Lawson, a New Yorker, who received serious injuries when his ship, the "Mission Solano," was torpedoed, charged that the noted Seamen's Institute, which receives huge donations for the work it is carrying on ,definitely discriminates against Negroes. He found this to be true when he and other merchant seamen aboard the Mission Solano were injured, he said.

"Foreigners to our shores," expressed Lawson, "and even the waterfront bums, get more consideration and better facilities and accommodations than those of us who have given our all for democracy."

2-10-45

REFERRED TO INSTITUTE

Lawson, who holds both the Pacific and Atlanta War Zone Bar commendations confirming active service with the US Merchant Marines overseas, indicated he had been referred to the Seamen's Institute, 25 South Street, in New York, by the Gladstone Rest Center in New Jersey (where he had been a convalescent) for quiet quarters until he could be transferred to a marine hospital for treatment.

"The clerk in charge was most discourteous," Lawson relates, "the quarters were dirty and when I asked if I could check my things, I was told 'at your own risk.' The Negroes seemed to all be thrown together in the noisiest and dirtiest part of the place and they didn't seem to be too particular whether you went or stayed.'

PLATES AND BRACE

A former singer with Lucky Roberts' Orchestra, the seaman has two steel plates in his leg, which was badly crushed, and wears a brace. After his argument downtown, Lawson, thiryish and angry, came to Harlem. He found most of the downtown service centers stay open all night, but those uptown close early. "I won't call any names of the various agencies I went to and nobody was around but the elevator man," he continued, "but I do think the Negro social service centers ought to be more interested in all phases of a man's needs. Providing hostesses to entertain us is only a small part of the issue. The boys desire courtesy and consideration and immediate service when they need it. We shouldn't have to be celebrities to get kind treatment. After all, we merit what we get, and our service to the country on the high seas on the good ship Solano is a living tribute to our manhood."

Lawson concluded that the expose he had made of the Seamen's Institute was a valid one and if an investigation was conducted they would find he didn't lie.

NEGRO SOLDIERS GO ON HUNGER STRIKE

New York Times 3-4-45

LOS ANGELES, March 3 (AP)— Approximately 1,000 members of a Negro construction battalion who had served for twenty-one months in the South Pacific and are now stationed at Fort Hueneme, near Oxnard, Calif., are on a hunger strike.

Norman O. Houston, a local member of the board of directors of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said today that the demonstration was in protest against the alleged addition of white enlisted men to the battalion for eventual elevation to chief petty officers, and that the Negroes, because of their training and overseas experience, felt qualified for these ratings.

Commodore William M. Quigley, commander of the advance base depot at Port Hueneme, was quoted by Navy spokesmen here as saying:

"I knew them and admired them at Tulagi and Guadalcanal. However, they have no basis whatsoever for complaint, since there has been absolutely no color line and no discrimination against members of the battalion by its own officers or by the naval base.

Army Jim Crow Policy Ironic As It Discharges Negro Doctors At A Time When Need Is Most Acute

N.Y. N.Y.

New York Age 1-6-45

More than a dozen Negro doctors, finishing up their internship at Harlem Hospital, preparatory for active Army service, received notices almost at the eleventh hour that instead of commissions in the Army they would receive discharge papers because the Army had all the Negro doctors it needs.

Most of the young doctors finished their medical schooling under the Army Student Training Program in Grade A medical schools and upon finishing their internships at Harlem Hospital were scheduled to be commissioned as medical officers in the U. S. Army on January 1st, along with a number of white interns with whom they were working side by side at the hospital.

The announcement to them by the War Department left the Negro doctors speechless. All of their plans revolved around their duty with the Army, and many of them were some three months short of internship requirements for many states. That had not worried them when they knew they were going into the Army because the last three months of internship would be completed in Army hospitals under the ASTP, and they would therefore be qualified for examinations in all states.

City authorities came to the rescue of many of the Negro doctors, and 6 of them were kept on at Harlem Hospital under an expended intern quota. The other doctors were fortunate in being placed, three of them getting appointments as resident physicians at Sea View Hospital, and the others in other hospitals.

But at a time when medical doctors are badly needed, the action of the War Department in giving discharges to these highly qualified Negro doctors is ironic, to say the least.

TROUBLE IN STATEN ISLAND

New York Age

A GREAT hue and cry has been raised in Stapleton and other Staten Island towns that in recent weeks there have been robberies, muggings and molesting of civilians by Negro soldiers stationed at the Fox Hills cantonment. Petitions have been circulated askng the removal of the Negro troops, and the daily press has played up the story to the fullest.

The New York Age has no excuse, nor would it attempt to make one, in behalf of lawlessness on the part of anyone, either Negro or white, servicemen or civilian. Lawlessness must not b tolerated, condoned or excused, no matter who the perpetrators might be. N.Y. N.Y.

The New York Age, however, rises to the defense of Negro soldiers in general who are being victimized as a result of lawlessness, or alleged lawlessness. on the part of a few individual soldiers. It is known that in any large body of men, women, or children, that there are bound to be some "rotten apples." But because there are one or two tainted ones, that does not mean that the whole group is tainted.

3-24-45

By the very nature of the draft, Selective Service officials have taken able-bodied men according to the needs of the armed forces. Good men, and bad men, are taken into the service of their country. Some of the very habits that were theirs in civilian life they have carried with them into the branch of the armed services to which they have been assigned. N.Y. Age

No doubt there are some Negro soldiers in Staten Island who are "rotten apples". No doubt some of the crimes complained about have been committed. But, granted that the picture is as dark as even some of the Staten Island residents paint it, that still does not excuse them for allowing their prejudices to come to the fore with the demand that the Army station the Negro soldiers elsewhere. The same crimes, probably a great many more, would be committed if the soldiers happened to be white. Would the same demand be made if the soldiers were white? We doubt it.

Fact of the matter is that the Negro soldiers in the Fox Hills cantonment did not ask to be stationed at the cantonment; many of them do not relish the fact that they are assigned to work as stevedores despite their abilities to do other work; some of them are resentful of the fact that they are members of the Army which has a well defined pattern of discrimination; others are resentful against the restrictions imposed on them and the lack of proper facilities to enjoy themselves after they have put in a hard day's work. 3-24-45

For the Army to accede to the demands of the Stapleton residents and transfer the Negro soldiers out of the area, is giving way to bigotry and prejudice, even though it announces that the soldiers being transferred are innocent of any wrong-doing.

What the Army should realize, but doesn't, is that it must expect trouble from any group of men, regardless of their color, when they are stationed in territory which is unfriendly or resentful against them, and particularly in an area where facilities for recreation and enjoyment of good, wholesome fun, are sadly lacking. Recreation, alone, will not stop some soldiers from showing themselves to be the "rotten apples" that they are. But proper recreational facilities will help to minimize the possibilities of anti-social acts being committed. 3-24-45

If all humans were perfect, there would be no wars. But all humans are not perfect, and we do have wars. And all soldiers are not perfect and we do have some of them committing crimes. Those are the facts of life and we might as well face them as they are, and not as we dream they should be.

Germans Get Excellent Treatment At Huntsville Ala., Arsenal, Report

By H. D. COKE

HUNTSVILLE, Ala., (ANP)—A white waitress employed at the cafeteria of the Huntsville arsenal was fired this week following a report that she was caught with a German prisoner of war. The girl, frequently seen by Negro employes talking to the prisoner, was not identified. German prisoners are used in the government owned and operated arsenal to clean cafeteria, pick up paper, move lumber, etc. They are given excellent treatment and working condtions, with some of them used as guards for the group under supervision of white soldiers. 3-10-45

Negro employes of the arsenal, reported to be the largest in the world, have on occasion been forced to eat with the German prisoners. More than a dozen Negro employes reported that on one occasion a white officer ordered those who were having their dinner in the cafeteria's segregated corner to make room for the German prisoners. 3-10-45

When they failed to understand tnat the "white" prisoners were to eat at their tables, and did not move to other tables, the white officer of the U. S. Army pulled his pistol and ordered them to move under a threat to shoot. The German prisoners were then seated in the section reserved for Negro employes. All this was done in the sight of white fellow workers who occupied seats on the "white side." The German prisoners have enjoyed their meals on the Negro side of the government operated cafeteria on several occasions, to the disgust of the Negro employes.

Several thousand persons are employed at the large arsenal that occupies 40,000 acres. German prisoners move freely about the arsenal, anyone of them having the opportunity to do damage and endanger war production and the lives of the employes.

GIs Report Jim Crow At The Front Responsible For 'Killing GI Joes'

New York Amsterdam News

6-16-45

By CAROLYN DIXON

With rare exceptions here and there, U. S. Army officers carried out America's traditional Jim Crow policy to a point of downright stupidity during the Italian phase of World War II . . . and on many occasions GI Joe went to his death only because GI Sam was seldom allowed to engage in combat.

That story and countless others was being told in Harlem this week as thousands of soldiers arrived daily from Europe, following the most devastating war in world history.

2,000 Back Since V-E Day

It was estimated that 2,000 Negro troops were among those who had arrived in the United States since V-E Day.

Many came back by plane, but most of them were transported across the Atlantic by ship. The journey back had obviously been tiresome, mainly because many of the GI Sams were in doubt as to whether their services would eventually be required in the Pacific.

It was also a journey into fear, a kind of anxiety over the future; speculation as to whether the war had really been fought for freedom.

6-16-45

If GI Joe is white, our boys are convinced, GI Sam is still most certainly black.

Latest Arrivals

Aboard the U. S. General W. P. Richardson, for instance, more than 250 Negroe soldiers returned last Thursday and, for some reason, was the last unit to go ashore. "That is no accident," one GI Sam said as he walked down the gangplank, "and don't think that we don't realize we've got to start fighting all over again for the right to become first class Americans."

These particular soldiers had served overseas in Italy for 28 long months, each was in possession of the required 85 points; but there was still fear and doubt and speculation.

6-16-45

First Harlemites to take a stretch on the pier at 44th Street and the North River was Pvt. George H. Moses, of 205 West 148th Street.

Harlemites Speak Out

Don't ask me if I'm glad to be back," he told the AMSTERDAM NEWS, "just find out when they're going to let me out."

Then there was Sgt. Charles Bennett, of 1322 Fifth Avenue, who said that Italy was a nice country to visit but no place to live. "The people over there are beat," Sgt. Bennett said. "They are licked in spirit, and I believe it's going to take them 100 years to get straight."

None of the men showed any signs of combat, but they remembered when the Germans bombed Naples. . . shortly after British and American troops had invaded Italian soil.

"If you don't think that was combat," Pvt. Howard Alexander, of 101 W. 140th Street, said, "start thinking all over again. Them Germans kept us ducking every night for a month."

Most calm of all the soldiers seemed to be Pvt. Louis E. Amory, of nearby Peekskill, who had spent three years in the Army. "I'd like to get out," he admitted, "but Uncle Sam's the boss and I'll just have to wait."

6-16-45

Other N. Y. Arrivals

Other New Yorkers arriving on the Navy Transport were Sgt. Samuel James, of 354 Seventh Ave., Mount Vernon; Pvt. Marvin Lane, of 17 May Street, New Rochelle; Sgt. Isaac Colclough, of 23 Dewitt Pl., same city; Pvt. James B. Martin, of 800 Home St., the Bronx, whose brother is serving in the Navy.

The 200 other members of this outfit were from such far away places as Chicago, Kansas and Texas.

Aboard the transport was Corp. Ernest Scales, of Chillicothe, Ohio. He had spent 26 months overseas and was wearing the Purple Heart for bravery in action during an air raid on Oct. 21, 1943.

He Has His Doubts

Corp. Elliott Murray, of St. Louis, was wearing the Purple Heart also. "There are about six colored boys aboard wearing this ribbon," Corp. Murray said, "but I doubt that it will be recognized when we return home on furlough."

Following a trip to Camp Shanks, they were reassigned and given leaves until August. Some of them hoped to be released permanently baceuse of their age, but their white officers had praised them so much for the service they had rendered in the Fifth Army's laundry units that it was believed many would be sent to the Pacific theatre.

6-16-45

He Heard Good Reports

Conspicuous among the civilians aboard the incoming transport was Congressman Lyle Boren, of Seminole, Okla., who spent six weeks visiting in Italy, France and Germany.

As ranking member of the House Aviation Committee, Representative Boren said that he had not visited Col. Benjamin O. Davis' flying "hell-raisers" in Italy.

"I heard plenty about them," Mr. Boren said, "and the reports I got were good. What they accomplished in demonstrating that Negro aviators could fight like anybody else will help in bringing about better racial understanding in the future."

Says Negroes Are Pushing Too Fast

Pittsburgh Courier Penn. 2-10-45

Senator Taft Refuses To Back FEPC With 'Teeth'

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NNPA)—Sen. Robert A. Taft (Ohio), Republican leader in the Senate, has struck what may prove to be a death blow to the FEPC. He has completely reversed his pre-election attitude and apparent commitments on FEPC.

He bluntly told a delegation of white and Negro constituents from his State on Friday that he is not in favor of the bills now pending in Congress because of their compulsory features. He is introducing his own bill to provide for voluntary methods.

For the bills now pending in Congress, he told the delegation "You won't have the enthusiastic support of many Republicans and no Southerners."

COLORED PEOPLE MAKING MISTAKE

"I don't believe in a compulsory bill," he said. "I think the colored people are making a mistake."

At one point he said the present bills would deprive people in smaller offices of their right to hire who they choose. He stated he had some question that it might be limited to larger firms of 500 or 1,000 employees, who, he felt, had some public obligation. Later, however, he said he would not support that now because he had decided the voluntary method is better.

Lecturing the group in patronizing fashion, most of them being Negroes—the Senator declared: "I think you are pushing too fast. The colored people are much better off than they were 10 years ago."

He said he felt a voluntary bill is "better for the colored people." At another point of his lecture, he said he did not think Negroes could make all their progress over night. He sounded just like George of Georgia, Russell of Alabama, or Bilbo of Mississippi, with whom he has formed a coalition to control the Senate.

GOP PLATFORM NOT FOR COMPULSION

The Senator lost his poise when Judge William Hastie, invited by the delegation to accompany them, challenged his good faith on the FEPC issue. Taft tried desperately to place the blame on "the colored people."

Hastie told the Senator: "One other thing disturbs me. The Senator mentioned that last year the Education and Labor Committee voted out this bill without having any idea in mind of passing it. The Senator also mentioned the (Republican) platform did not mean a compulsory bill.

"Certainly the country got the idea a compulsory bill was intended in both instances. They are going to get the idea they have not been dealt with in good faith."

Taft reddened behind his ears, assumed his full Senatorial dignity, importance and forcefulness. He pounded on his desk and pointed his finger as he answered.

NEGROES SHOWED "BAD FAITH" 2-10-45

"I think if there is any bad faith," he stormed, "it is on the colored people who presented the platform and failed to tell the people what was in the bill they presented. No one mentioned a compulsory bill. I certainly did not intend the platform to mean a compulsory bill. If there has been bad faith, it is on the colored people."

In answer to previously asked question, however, Taft had told the delegation that he had voted in favor of reporting to the Senate a bill for an FEPC, which bill did contain compulsory powers. He said he did so with the understanding that it would not be acted on by the Senate.

That was before the convention in Chicago where the Republican platform was adopted. The only FEPC bill pending in Congress before the time of the convention contained compulsory powers—the same bills Taft is now opposing—and extensive public hearings had been held on them in the House Labor Committee. 2-10-45

When the "compulsory" FEPC bill was reported to the Senate on Sept. 20, 1944—just before the election in which Taft squeezed through by only 17,000 votes—Senator Chavez, its sponsor, stated that the bill was being favorably reported by unanimous vote without amendment. He said several members had indicated they might submit amendments to the bill before it was considered. He mentioned that it was also suggested that the bill be not taken up before the election.

HASTIE COMMENTS

Turning to Taft on the floor of the Senate, he said: "I ask if that meets with the approval of the Senator from Ohio."

Taft replied: "It does."

Before the election Taft's only objection to the pending FEPC bills was on a question of judicial review.

This attitude is set forth in the printed report of the Senate Education and Labor Committee.

Commenting on the delegation's conference, Judge Hastie said: "My impression is that it was worse than I could conceive it could be. And it was so bad the rest of the Republicans cannot go along with Taft's idea."

Taft Introduces FEPC Bill Without "Teeth"

WASHINGTON —(NNPA) — Sen. Robert A. Taft (R. of Ohio), in a move reminiscent of the methods he used to kill the Federal Aid to Education bill two years ago, has introduced a bill for a Permanent FEPC which is based on the committee being limited to voluntary methods of eliminating discrimination in employment. Fear has been expressed here that Taft's bill will split the forces favoring a permanent FEPC and cause defeat of the measure entirely.

Negro Group Approves Fair Employment Bill

FEPC Acts on Charges That Bay Area Car and Bus Jobs Are Barred to Negroes

3-5-45

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 4—The President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices will hold a hearing in Oakland March 19 on complaints that the Key System, a transit company operating in the East Bay area and across the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge, has refused to employ qualified Negroes for some jobs because of their race. 3-3-45

Named with the company in the complaints is Division 192, Amalgamated Association of Street Railway and Motor Coach Employes, AFL, which has a union shop contract limiting employment to union members.

Conferences on Spot Failed

The controversy has been in progress for a year and a half, with the Regional FEPC seeking an adjustment. Failure of these discussions led the regional committee to refer the case to the national FEPC. In forwarding the case it said that since May 27, 1943, the union has had "a policy and practice of denying membership to Negroes because of their race."

Complaints have been filed by twenty Negroes that the company refused to hire them for "platform jobs," as motormen, conductors, and bus drivers. In reply to the complaints the company cited its union contract and has stated also a belief that the use of Negroes as platform men would "cause difficulty and result in uneconomic operation for the company."

Negroes in Maintenance Jobs

3-3-45

The company employs Negroes for other than platform jobs and those in maintenance work belong to another division of the same general union. The transit lines in San Francisco have about 700 Negroes operating street cars and buses and, as a result of an FEPC hearing there in August, the transit companies in Los Angeles have begun to hire Negroes for platform jobs.

The national FEPC has named Mrs. Evelyn Cooper, an attorney of its staff, as examiner to conduct the Oakland hearing and has assigned A. Bruce Hunt, its western counsel, to be trial attorney.

Maryland FEPC Bill Introduced

AFRO-AMERICAN-Md.

ANNAPOLIS, Md.—A Maryland State FEPC bill was introduced in the House of Delegates of the State Legislature on Monday by Leon A. Rubenstein, (D), 4th District.

The bill designed to "prohibit discriminatory employment practices based upon race, creed, color, national origin, or ancestry," calls for the establishment of a State commission against discrimination. 3-24-45

The bill was referred to the judiciary committee where a measure to repeal the Maryland jim-crow transportation law is now pending.

Two Camp Sibert Wac's Beaten by Ala. Policeman

Girls Refused to Give Up Seats to Whites on Bus; 2 Agreements Follow Investigation

By JOE SHEPHARD

WASHINGTON

Strong and immediate War Department action was requested by the AFRO this week following an eye-witness account of the brutal beating of two Camp Sibert Wacs by a Gadsden, Ala., policeman on the day before Christmas Eve.

According to the AFRO's informant, a white Gadsden resident, the two Wacs boarded a bus owned by the Crescent Motor Lines and sat down in the rear seat which was then vacant.

Refused to Move

A few minutes later, after the bus began filling up with whites, the driver ordered the girls to stand so that the white passengers might be seated.

The Wacs declined to do so, and the bus driver refused to move.

A white woman passenger, who was in a hurry to get to the bank, left the bus and called a civilian officer, who went to the rear of the bus and pulled one of the Wacs, Pvt. Roberta McKenzie, from her seat.

Pleas for MP Ignored

The other Wac, Pfc. Gladys Blackman, then pushed the policeman and told him to get an M.P. since he had no authority to put his hands on military personnel.

Ignoring their protests, the cop dragged the two girls from the bus to the accompaniment of yells of "kill 'em, kill 'em," from white passengers, the eyewitness said, and forced them into a police scout car which had arrived on the scene.

The beating of Pfc. Blackman continued in the scout car and at the jail, where the cop allegedly pounded her forehead against the wall until she was in a semi-conscious state.

Pvt. McKenzie was also severely beaten by the cop, the AFRO was informed, and the two Wacs were then placed in a cell where they remained until they were taken back to Camp Sibert by two MPs.

Pfc. Blackman, who was still semi-conscious when she arrived at the post, was treated at the post hospital for bruises and scratches of the head and face before being confined to her bed at the barracks approximately a week.

Transfer of Wacs Asked

The AFRO's informant was unable to furnish the name of the arresting officer or to state whether any action had been taken by the military authorities at Camp Sibert.

He stated, however, that the WAC commanding officer, Lt. Aurelia Harris, had requested that all of the colored Wacs be transferred from Camp Sibert.

War Department Investigates

A War Department investigation revealed that the policeman, W. P. Baker, had taken the Wacs off the bus, and that force had been used.

Upon intercession of the commanding officer of Camp Sibert, a representative of the Judge Advocate General's office conferred with the mayor of Gadsden and the manager of the bus company. These conferences resulted in two agreements:

1. That civilian policemen were not to interfere in matters involving military personnel, but would call military police;

2. That the bus company manager would issue a directive to all bus drivers to be courteous to all passengers and not, under any circumstances, to call civilian police or attempt themselves to handle "incidents" involving military personnel.

Charges Quashed

The two Wacs were originally charged with disorderly conduct and restraining, arrest. These charges were quashed when the Wacs were turned over to military authorities.

Change in Policy Agreed on

The AFRO was unable to learn whether any further disciplinary action was taken against either the deputy sheriffs, testified that the prisoner had been killed while resisting arrest.

A little more than a year ago, a group of civilian police officers and deputy sheriffs had arrested a colored soldier by the name of Raymond McMurray and were taking him back to Gadsden from Camp Sibert.

A few miles from the camp, the soldier was shot through the head and killed. His slayer, one of the

Two West Coast Shipyards Notify FEPC Of Their Compliance With Directives Against Discrimination

New York Age 3-3-45

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Two West Coast shipyards, employing over 30,000 workers in construction of ships for the Government, have notified the President on Fair Employment Practice of their compliance with FEPC Directives against discrimination in employment, Malcolm Ross, Chairman of FEPC, announced Wednesday March 28. 3-31-45

Mr. Ross said notifications were received from the Western Pipe and Steel Company and the Consolidated Steel Corp. (Shipbuilding Division), both of Los Angeles, after the Committee had issued a decision on rehearing, December 22, 1944, reaffirming its original directives and requesting early reports on steps taken toward compliance.

Five companies involved in the original directives were all granted a rehearing on petitions and decisions were issued on each. No compliance report has yet been received from the Oregon Shipbuilding Corp., the Kaiser Co. Inc., both of Portland, Oregon, and the California Shipbuilding Corp. of Los Angeles.

All five of the companies have been involved in lengthy negotiations with FEPC since public hearings on complaints were held by the committee in Portland and Los Angeles in November 1943. The principal complaints alleged that qualified Negro workers were discriminated against because of their race by the existence of a closed shop contract, and by refusal of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Ship Builders and Helpers of America, A. F. L., to admit Negroes to full memberships. 3-31-45

The committee found that refusal of the union to grant Negroes membership other than in auxiliary lodges was discrimination in violation of Executive Order 9346. The union was directed to grant Negroes full membership rights without discrimination.

The companies were directed to cease discharging Negro workers who refused to accept inferior union status and to ignore the union clearance system as long as the discriminatory membership procedure was maintained by the union.

FEPC Probe Wins Jobs in St. Louis

AFRO-AMERICAN 3-24-45

ST. LOUIS (ANP)—The General Cable Corporation last week offered sixteetn coored applicants jobs by telegrams, agreed to consider upgrading five employes discriminated against previously, and advised the USES it would accept qualified workers regardless of race, creed, or national origin.

Swift action by the company followed a recent partial probe by the FEPC, at the Civil Courts building, when it was charged with discrimination against colored workers in employment.

The telegraphic message to the sixteen workers instructed them to call at the company's office and file an application with Miss Wise if they were still interested in employment there and could meet the necessary qualifications.

FEPC Reserves Right

It concluded: "This telegram is sent to you pursuant to an agreement reached with the FEPC." The company agreed to remove all causes for complaint as cited by the committee at a conference between its officials and Simon Stickgele, Washington FEPC counsel. 3-24-45

Lest the company fails to comply with the agreement, the FEPC reserves the right to intercede any time before April 9 when the hearing will be continued. A 100 per cent war plant, it employs more than 4,000 persons.

83% Of Southern White Veterans Favor FEPC

Philadelphia Tribune 4-14-45

While Americans here at home quibble over the value of establishing fair employment practice commissions, an equal number of white soldiers from the north and south voted 91 per cent in favor of such principles. The northern men were 100 per cent in favor and the southerners 83 per cent, according to the poll of opinion taken of returning white veterans by Pvt. Elmer L. Clark, Tulsa, Okla., and Cpl Norman S. Ellington, Fulton, Mo.

The general attitude after foreign service as to whether white men feel a deeper appreciation for their fellow Negro combatants was found to be 77 per cent yeas; 83 per cent north, 67 per cent south. The closer the contact the higher the percentage of understanding.

Hire Race Woman After FEPC Order

Atlanta World Ga.

1-25-45

ZANESVILLE — (ANP) — Regardless of race, creed or color, Line Material, a war plant here, will hire additional workers, officials agreed last week after the FEPC interceded. This promise, which primarily concerned the hiring of Negro women, must become a reality by February 28th or the committee will resume its probe. Emmanuel Block, hearing commissioner, revealed.

The Line Material company which is engaged is the production of shells and radar components, had steadfastly refused to consider the employment of Negro women. Action against this practice began in early '43 when the United Electrical Workers, CIO, at the suggestion of John Thornton, former Columbus labor organizer, gathered a group of women together and suggested that the apply for jobs at the plant. 1-25-45

Immediately a group of 35 women went to the plant, one half in the morning and the others in the afternoon. After a long delay these women were finally given forms to fill out. When a period of three months passed and the women had received no answer to their applications they wrote Paul V. McNutt, war manpower commissioner, who in turn gave their letter to the FEPC. 1-25-45

At an all day meet Friday between plant officials and representatives of FEPC, Ernest Snell, U. S. employment head, Zanesville, testified that all of the other war plants in that area employed Negro women, and declared that those Negro women worked alongside white employes in perfect harmony. The contention on the part of company officials that the FEPC had no jurisdiction in the the case, was overruled by Block.

Attention was called to the fact that while Line material gave employment to a Negro woman of fair complexion. The woman's employment, however, was terminated when it was learned that she was colored.

Chavez to Push FEPC Bill, Confident of Quick Passage

PM New York N.Y. 1-1-45

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—Sen. Dennis Chavez (D., N. M.) predicted that the new Congress would speedily approve legislation providing for a permanent Federal Employment Practices Committee to protect minorities against discrimination in employment.

Chavez

In view of the fact that the Republicans adopted a platform plank indorsing a permanent FEPC and the Democratic platform condemned discrimination generally, Chavez said he could foresee no reason "for encountering difficulties in the passage of the bill."

Several Southern Senators, however, are strongly opposed to such legislation. 1-1-45

Chavez said he would reintroduce on the first day of the new Congress a bill which was approved by the Senate Education and Labor Committee and reported to the Senate last Summer.

More hearings may be held on the bill by a Subcommittee of which he is Chairman if witnesses ask to be heard. Representatives of the CIO and a National organization sponsoring a permanent FEPC testified previously in favor of the Chavez bill, as did a number of church group representatives. The House Labor Committee has approved a similar bill. PM

"I think in justice to campaign promises of both parties plus merits of legislation of this type this bill should be passed immediately," Chavez told reporters. "One of the last statements made by the President prior to election was in favor of a permanent Committee for Fair Employment Practices. I can't see any difficulties to passage."

Historic N.Y. FEPC Bill Traveled Rough Road

The Worker N.Y. 3-11-45

By MAX GORDON

The Ives-Quinn bill, which sets up the first permanent commission to fight job discrimination in the nation's history, will be written into New York's statute books Monday afternoon, when the Governor is due to sign it. It was passed overwhelmingly by the State Senate last Monday night, following approval by the Assembly several days earlier. In both houses, foes of the bill, confined entirely to the Republican side of the respective aisles, made futile attempts to emasculate it by amendment.

JACK A PIONEER

Its enactment into law follows four years of effort to pass legislation designed to set up a FEPC with adequate power to enforce its findings. Back in 1942 and 1943, Assemblyman Hulan E. Jack, Harlem Democrat, proposed such a commission for the war period. His measures, backed by the Democrats, were stalled in the Republican-controlled legislative committees.

Then, in 1944, the Condon-Crews bill to set up a permanent FEPC, sponsored by the American Jewish Congress, was introduced. Popular pressure for its passage reached a high stage but the Republican legislative leaders, despite lip-service to the principle, displayed considerable reluctance toward moving it out of committee. 3-11-45

Suddenly, less than three weeks before the end of the 1944 session, Sen. Arthur Wicks, Ulster Republican who heads the powerful Senate Finance Committee, threw two measures into the hopper "by request." One provided for a comprehensive permanent FEPC with broad powers to combat discrimination in industry. The other would set up a civil rights bureau to combat all other forms of discrimination.

The request for these bills came from the State Anti-Discrimination Committee, originally set up by Gov. Lehman as a war agency and continued with changed personnel by Gov. Dewey. The commission made it clear that the bills had been drafted after months of study and discussion.

PUBLIC REACTS

The pressure developed for the Crews-Condon bill was immediately transferred and multiplied for the Wicks proposals. For days the capital was bombarded with letters, wires, petitions, resolutions and delegations. Yet nothing moved.

On the last day of the session, when Democrats were threatening to demand that the bills be brought out of committee and pressure became frantic, the Governor suddenly sent up a message saying there was not enough time for adequate consideration and proposing another commission to "study" the matter further. 3-11-45

The state was aroused by this patent bit of political treachery. Eight prominent members of the Governor's committee resigned.

It was later revealed that while the Governor was in the process of "knifing" his own commission's measures, his Lt. Governor, Joe R. Hanley, was clinching the support of the North Carolina GOP delegation for Dewey's presidential bid.

Recognizing that the Governor's move had cost their party wide support, GOP legislative leaders proceeded to mend their fences. Assemblyman Irving M. Ives, majority leader, took over the chairmanship of the new commission. Early in December, the Ives Commission released the draft of a permanent FEPC bill and called a series of public hearings throughout the state. The hearings again revealed the extraordinary popular backing for such a measure.

The bill was introduced Feb. 1 with bi-partisan backing. But its proponent made the serious error of assuming that because there had been little opposition to the principle expressed at the public hearings, there would be none in the Legislature. They permitted the initiative to fall into the hands of its opponents who, led by the State Chamber of Commerce and the New York Board of Trade, organized a furious campaign against it. The campaign received a ready response from reationary GOP circles within the Legislature. 3-11-45

Differences were evident among the GOP legislative leaders. While in the Assembly, Ives and Speaker Oswald D. Heck fought consistently for its passage, in the Senate the leadership hesitated. As a result opponents broke through there and forced another public hearing.

It boomeranged badly. Paralyzed up to then by complacency, the people were suddenly aroused to the danger of the measure's defeat and staged a demonstration for it that probably topped anything this highly vocal state has ever seen.

During his election campaign, Gov. Dewey had been compelled to emphasize support for an FEPC to overcome some of the effects nationally of his New York action. But up until a few days before the hearing, he maintained a discreet silence on the Ives-Quinn measure. 3-11-45

The Governor has until July 1 to appoint the five-man commission. Since the calibre of his appointments is expected to effect the workings of the law, he is being watched closely on this and is expected to be extremely careful.

It is not thought likely the commission will have to resort to its enforcement powers overmuch unless there is deliberately organized resistance to the workings of the law. The expectation is, rather, that armed with the threat of these powers, it will be able to compel compliance through "conciliation"—if it is the right kind of commission.

Prejudice Has Power to Hurt Its Possessor

Detroit Free Press Mich 4-1-45

BY EDWIN A. LAHEY

WASHINGTON—The legislation pending in Congress to create a permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee is attacked with plausible assertion that you cannot legislate racial prejudice out of the minds of men. 4-1-45

This is quite true, but the criticism fails to make an important distinction between prejudice and discrimination.

Let's see what happens when prejudice is permitted to be translated into action, where it becomes discrimination.

The city of Washington, which is sometimes called the capital of the world, has perhaps the worst transportation facilities in the United States. The Capital Transit Co. says there's a war on, you know . . . manpower shortage and all that sort of thing.

But the company refuses to hire Negroes as bus and street car operators.

The company says that the employees now operating the equipment will go on strike if Negroes are hired.

At a recent hearing held by the FEPC, it was revealed that the Capital Transit Co. had 785 busses scheduled, but that 52 of them were idle, for want of operators. There were 732 street cars scheduled but 45 of them were idle, for the same reason. 4-1-45

Lahey

Within recent weeks the company has announced plans for still further reduction in service because of the "manpower shortage."

But during one four-month period last year, 105 Negroes applied to the Capital Transit Co. for jobs as operators and were refused employment because of their color.

A few hundred men have unworthy prejudices. The public utility company for whom they work dignifies these prejudices by translating them into action.

Prejudice, which concerns only the men who are prejudiced, becomes discrimination, which has its impact on a whole city.

Millions of man hours are lost by the workers of Washington monthly, and a simple ride downtown becomes a harrowing experience for the public, because prejudice has been translated into discrimination.

IT IS INTERESTING to note, while Congress shies away from a decision on the FEPC legislation before it, that the Alaskan legislature has just enacted an anti-discrimination bill.

ACTION OF SOME kind is expected on the permanent FEPC bill soon after Congress reconvenes on April 10.

Mrs. Mary Norton, New Jersey Democrat, who is chairman of the House Labor Committee, is nursing plans to force the Rules Committee to send the bill to the floor for debate. 4-1-45

Every members of Congress eventually will have to stand and be counted on the question of discrimination. The issue has an irritating way of staying alive.

As to the Red Cross Drive

AFRO-AMERICAN 2-24-45

Since the Red Cross is campaigning for memberships, now is a good time to bring up the jim-crow blood bank question.

The Red Cross takes the position that it is not responsible for the separation of colored blood donors, the segregation of colored blood plasma and the marking of colored plasma containers with a "c."

This, the Red Cross says, is an Army and Navy order and the Red Cross, as middleman, is not to blame for it.

The facts are that the Army, Navy and Red Cross sat down to a table and agreed to jim crow colored blood. All three are tarred with the same stick. All three are equally at fault.

Moreover, the Red Cross at the beginning of the war was socially so highbrow that for a long time it turned down any colored blood donors.

The society crowd of bluebloods was in charge, some of it not so hot, as, for example, one Norman Davis, a banker to whom the Supreme Court paid its respects.

However, the Red Cross has changed; so has the Army, which has thrown out some "Cabbage Heads," and if the war lasts, will discard others.

There was one high Army officer who forgot the old days when the Irish were persecuted as widely as colored people. He's not Surgeon General any more.

Another change has taken place abroad. Faced with a shortage of nurses and the care of thousands of wounded men, the Army hospitals overseas are paying no attention to the "c" on the jim-crow Red Cross blood containers.

Wounded soldiers are getting plasma out of the first bottles that come to hand.

The Red Cross has made a mistake. Why doesn't it admit it? All blood is the same, and no jim crow is defensible.

2-24-45

If the guys at the head are big enough, they will take the curse off the organization before the war is over and treat everybody alike.

The soldiers, black and white, who come back from the hell of war will not be patient or gentle with organizations that prolonged it.

PLAN HEARINGS ON NEGRO BAN BY TRANSIT LINES

Chicago Tribune 3-5-45

Washington, D. C., March 4 (AP).—The President's committee on fair employment practice will hold hearings in Oakland, Cal., March 19 on complaints of discrimination against Negroes for transit jobs.

3-5-45

The FEPC said complaints filed with the agency charge that the Key [transit] system, operating in Oakland and other cities, has refused to hire Negro applicants as bus drivers or as street car workers. Other complaints allege the AFL Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America has "rejected Negro applicants.

For a Permanent F.E.P.C.

Courier-Journal Ky.

To the Editor of The Courier-Journal.

You say that discrimination against a man's right to work based on race or color cannot be removed by legislative fiat; but the federal government removed by fiat chattel slavery based on race and it helped a lot, too.

2-24-45

If a permanent F.E.P.C. is not adopted now, then after this war is over almost any Nazi or fascist with a white face who has shot at our flag and who may not be even naturalized will be given a job in preference to a well qualified Negro overseas veteran. While difficulties of every nature would arise in connection with any attempt to enforce fair employment practices, just as such things arise in connection with attempts to enforce any justice, yet these difficulties would not compare with the mass of embarrassment, inconvenience and humiliation that would come to 13,000,000 Negro Americans seeking work, if they were denied fair employment practices because of the accident of color.

2-24-45

If after this war we would assume the world leadership to which we aspire, we first must rid ourselves of color prejudice; and I do not believe that certain powers would be willing to stand by and wait patiently for us to take our time in ridding ourselves of color prejudice in order to qualify for world leadership.

If any white person who objects to a permanent F.E.P.C. could be a Negro for a day, he would want a permanent F.E.P.C. for the rest of his natural life. If we cannot assure our minorities of fair employment practices after this war is over, we have lost the war already and likewise the peace.

"FAIR" IS WRONG WORD

The use of the word "Fair" in the title of the FEPC (Fair Employment Practices committee) is quite strained when some of the main features of this act are considered.

The Negro population of the United States is about ten per cent of the total and it would seem natural that this proportion should have some place in the organization of such a committee.

But the proportion is quite different.

The facts in the case are clearly set forth in a letter to the News and Courier by Julian Mitchell, Esq., distinguished lawyer of Charleston.

Following is an extract from Mr. Mitchell's letter:

I wonder how many employers know of the composition of the committees who would pass on their cases if complaint was filed against them because they refused to promote or to hire or discharge an employe because of such employe's race, creed, color, national origin or ancestry?

The committee itself is composed of five whites and five negroes, but the division of field operations which will make the examination of their cases is composed of nine persons, of whom three are white, five are negroes and one is Japanese-American, and the case will then be reviewed by the review and analysis division in Washington, consisting of eight persons, of whom six are negroes and two are white. What a travesty is the use of the word "Fair" in the employment practice bill.

Of all the vote-getting schemes of the manipulators of the New Deal this one stands near the top as vicious and dangerous. It would cause great trouble and be of no benefit to the great mass of colored people.

The FEPC Test Case

Pittsburgh Courier-Re.

As these lines are written, the entire country is watching the fight in New York to enact the Ives-Quinn bill into a law preventing discrimination against workers because of race, color or creed.

Tremendously powerful economic forces, representing both Capital and Labor, are fighting the enactment of such a law, while almost equally powerful political and social forces are battling on the other side.

The bill is not the strongest bill that could have been written.

Indeed, it is weaker than the measure proposed last year, but even then it will find no easy sailing.

Many powerful employers do not want this law because it will sound the death knell of jim crow in industry and commerce, which is the foundation of all the other inequalities which make monopoly of the good things of life by a few thousand families possible in our society.

2-24-45

Many powerful labor organizations are against such a law for very much the same reason.

A consideration which the politicians cannot ignore is the large Jewish, Italian, Negro and Latin-American vote which will certainly be used against any legislator who casts his vote against the bill.

This is a test case, because once such a law is on the books of New York, one of the most liberal States in the Union, the stage will be set for similar battles in other States.

Already a bill similar to the Ives-Quinn measure has been introduced in the Pennsylvania Legislature by a colored Representative, Homer S. Brown, and like measures will probably be introduced in other legislative bodies.

2-24-45

If the Ives-Quinn bill is defeated, it is unlikely that such an act will be passed elsewhere, either in Washington, D. C., or in any of the other States.

FEPC Report Shows Rise In Complaints During Nov.

Afro-American Balt. Md.

WASHINGTON

Refusal to hire minority group workers in war industries continued during November, 1944, as the most frequent complaint on the docket of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, Malcolm Ross, chairman, said this week.

An analysis of the report for that month showed that 55 per cent of all complaints docketed during the 30-day period involved such allegations, more than four-fifths of them from colored complainants.

Cases charging discriminatory dismissal and refusal to upgrade showed a slight drop during the month.

2-10-45

Industrial Cases Rise

The over-all report shows a rise in the number of cases docketed over the previous month's total, 239 to 286. The 277 cases closed totaled two less than the October closings. Fifteen of the November docketing were reopened cases, making the total of new cases for the month 271.

Cases involving private industry increased during November from 66.5 to 76.4 per cent. Government complaints dropped from 28.5 to 19.6 and union cases decreased from 5 to 4.1 per cent.

Mr. Ross cited two cases of adjustments through the FEPC in New England and Pennsylvania, pointing out that "cases involving only one worker frequently result in a change of company policy and a subsequent opening of job opportunities to many badly needed war workers."

"Test Of The FEPC"

1-23-45

It seems to me that your editorial today respecting the plight in which the Capital Transit Co. finds itself with regard to particular employment of Negroes quite misses fundamental considerations.

True, Capital Transit is a public utility operating under public franchise. Its primary obligation is to provide continuous, adequate, efficient, safe and courteous service. However, it is a private enterprise and hence must be the judge as to how and in what way it may discharge its obligations to the public.

The Government has not seen proper to enact a public law defining the duties of transit employes to remain at work under all circumstances until released by public authority.

1-23-45

While the Government will not permit me to engage and use a chauffeur who does not hold a driver's permit, still it does not attempt to tell me whom I shall employ.

The real issue is: Shall private enterprise be allowed to determine within fair and just laws how and in what manner it shall discharge its obligations to the public, to the employes of the enterprise, and to the owners of the stock and securities which represent the capital used?

In these days of vanishing personal liberties the real issue must not be overlooked.

NATHAN BOONE WILLIAMS.
Washington, Jan. 18.

Your editorial on FEPC in The Post of January 18 was most heartening to all of us colored citizens of Washington. The fact that you do not have to be urged to state your position unequivocally on such questions is all the more commendable. Often the press waits to see what course of action is expedient. The Post never does. You state your position on current questions as you see them. In this respect you naturally become a leader of public opinion.

1-3-45

I am sure this morning's editorial will stiffen the backbone of some of our citizens who otherwise would waver in a decision.

Again we are most grateful to you in your efforts to bring democracy to Washington. Please continue your good work for all the citizens of Washington.

CLYDE C. McDUFFIE.
Washington, Jan. 18.

All fair-minded citizens in America cannot help being spiritually uplifted when reading the forthright editorial on the FEPC in your paper. It is hardly conceivable that the thousands of warworkers must be late to work, stand shivering at car and bus stops, and be on their feet swaying and jostling in the packed conveyances after a hard day's work, solely because of the prejudice and hatred of the few.

1-23-45

If in the Capital City of a Nation that deeply concerns itself about the ELAS and the Lublin Polish government, we set the example of submission to the prejudices of a few hoodlums who don't care whether we win the war or not, what sort of influence can we have in the councils with other nations? E. B. HENDERSON.
Falls Church, Va., Jan. 18.

Your editorial, "Test of the FEPC" might better be titled, "Dictatorship vs. Democracy."

If 2000 workers, for reasons valid to their own consciences, do not wish to associate with a handful of Negroes as coworkers, please tell me what is democratic in overriding the views and wishes of the 2000.

1-23-45

Theoretically this Nation is a democracy, but in the past few years, through the acquiescence of a President who will court political support from any source, even from the Communists, our democracy has become just another word in the dictionary.

The FEPC is a creature without foundation in law as was clearly demonstrated by the railroads of the Southeast. And those railroads, as well as their union employes, succintly told the autocratic, strife-fomenting FEPC its "directives" were without legal authority. It is to be hoped the Capital Transit Co. exercises the same good judgment. Mc L. SMITH.
Washington, Jan. 18.

After reading the reports on hearings conducted by the FEPC on the Transit Co. hiring policy my honest opinion is that the company is just using the "walkout threat" as a screen for their unwillingness to hire Negroes as platform workers.

1-23-45

Everyone in the city realizes that the most important thing is to have the buses and streetcars moving on time to get the thousands of essential workers to their jobs. Hiring of Negroes would help that situation. This is the most important point in the whole controversy and I frankly don't think there are enough transit workers who are so unpatriotic and so blinded by prejudice as to stand in the way of getting the people to work with as little delay and inconvenience as possible.

Thousands of people feel strongly that Negroes are fighting and dying in this war and they also have a right to jobs for which they are qualified.

FEPC Affirms Directives To Coast Shipbuilding Companies

Firms Ordered To Hire Qualified Negroes For Work

Atlanta World
Atlanta, Ga.
2-23-45

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(SNS)—President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, after rehearings held August 7, 1944, in Los Angeles, California, and October 18 and 19, 1944, in Portland, Oregon, on charges of violations of Executive Order 9346, has affirmed directives issued to five West Coast shipbuilding companies by the committee in December, 1943, Malcolm Ross, Chairman of FEPC, announced Thursday.

The companies involved are the Kaiser Company, Inc., and Oregon Shipbuilding Corp., in the Portland, Oregon, area and the California Shipbuilding, Western Pipe and Steel corporations, in the Los Angeles, California, area. Eoch of the firms has been requested to report, within 30 days, the steps taken toward compliance. 2-23-45

REHEARINGS GRANTED

The rehearings were granted by the committee on petitions from the companies. The first petitions were filed shortly after issuance of the directives. In granting the rehearing requests, the FEPC pointed out that the directives were not being set aside but their operation merely suspended until opportunity was given the companies to offer their additional arguments.

The original direcitves, based on findings from public examination of complaints against the five firms in November, 1943, called for halting of the practice of firing or refusing to hire qualified Negro workers who refused to accept discriminatory membership in the Boilermaker's Union (AFL.) The companies contended that provisions of a "Master Agreement" between them and the Boilermakers gave the union a closed shop, requiring union membership as a condition to employment, and the companies could not be held responsible for discriminatory policies of the union.

REJECT ARGUMENT

In rejecting this argument, the rehearing decision stated:

"A labor union's failure to perform its duty (under the Executive Order) does not excuse or mitigate nonperformance by an employer, even though the employer may be a party to a closed shop contract with the derelict union."

A second argument of the companies, that any atempt by them to avoid complying with physicians of the Master Agreement would render them guilty of violating the National Labor Relations Act was rejected by FEPC, which cited two recent decisions of the U. S. Supreme Court and another from the Supreme Court of California (Wallace Corporation v. National Labor Labor Relations Board; Steele v. Louisville and Nashville R. R. Co.; and James v. Marineship, respectively) as persuasive uspport" of the FEPC position that compliance by the companies with the directives does not constitute a violation of the National Labor Relations Act.

CENTRAL STATES Race Issues Stirred by Debate Over FEPC Bill

New York Times

By LOUTHER S. HORNE

CHICAGO, May 19—The question of racial discrimination attracted considerable public attention this week in Illinois.

Interest in this widely debated topic was heightened when the State Senate Judiciary Committee at Springfield sounded the death knell, at least so far as the present Legislature is concerned, of a bill to establish a Fair Employment Practices Commission modeled after the measure now on the New York statute books.

The act, which was designed to eliminate consideration of race, creed, color or national origin in employment, was shunted to a subcommittee by a vote of 10 to 8. Senators so voting freely admitted their purpose was to kill the bill.

Charles F. Hough, counsel for thirty-eight employer associations, urged further study of results of the New York FEPC law and said that such legislation would "make it possible to throw citizens in jail or pay fines without the time-honored protection by the courts." He warned that the bill would stir up racial and religious discrimination, rather than curb it.

Advocates of the FEPC plan told the committee that discrimination "against any one group threatens the basic security of all."

Arnold Aronson of the Chicago Council against Racial and Religious Discrimination, speaking for the bill, said: 5-20-45

"I know you can't legislate prejudice out of existence, but we want to outlaw the excesses of prejudice. This bill provides for hiring on qualifications without regard to race or color."

News Notes: The Wisconsin Senate concurred in an Assembly bill requiring operators of hayrack or sleigh ride parties in Milwaukee to be of "good moral character." The measure imposes a one-dollar annual license fee and specifies operators must carry liability insurance. . . . The Civil Awards Board chairman, James F. Mulcahy, disclosed here that suggestions by civilian employes of the War Department had saved the Government $91,228,266 since June, 1943.

FEPC Viewed With Alarm By Rep. Hays

He Says He Fears Minorities Would Be Worse Off

By CHARLES A. MICHIE
PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, Apr. 24.—It's a funny thing, but whenever a Congressman opposes passage of a bill to create a permanent FEPC (Fair Employment Practices Commission) he dilutes his arguments with loud anti-discrimination noises.

So it was with Rep. Brooks Hays (D., Ark.) when he debated Rep. Charles M. LaFollette (R., Ind.) on the merits of the Norton bill to set up a permanent FEPC with enforcement powers.

"Don't mistake me," Hays said. "My attitude is sympathetic toward the elimination of all discrimination. I am ready to support any law which will do away with discrimination." 4-24-45

His Objections

Nevertheless, Rep. Hays put his whole weight against the Norton bill, which was being supported on the House floor by LaFollette.

Hays charged that the measure was "fundamentally unsound, unworkable, and a threat to the freedom of the Negro and the while man alike." He said it violates all the principles of judicial process and confuses two functions of Government, regulatory and service functions.

It is unworkable, he declared, as shown by experience in communities where there are large numbers of Negroes or other minority groups. In the third place, said Hays, a permanent FEPC would drive a wedge between groups and make things worse than they are now.

In debate on the floor of the House, Lafollette declared that the bill would "extend the ethics upon which this country was founded into the economic world." He urged that the bill be passed as a measure of extension of the Constitution of the United States. 4-24-45

Norton Runaround

Hays said he had written 15 citizens of the South and asked them if they considered that the President's executive order creating wartime FEPC had contributed to racial progress. Without exception, he reported, they said they saw no evidence whatever of improvement due to the FEPC.

Hays did admit that there had been some utilization of manpower because of FEPC orders which otherwise might not have been devoted to the war effort. But he added, not because of any legal coercion. 4-24-45

Meanwhile, Rep. Mary T. Norton (D. N. J.), chairman of the Rules Labor Committee, is awaiting word from the Rules Committee on her application for a rule which would bring her FEPC bill to the floor.

Baltimore Cases Dominant in D.C. Area FEPC Files

The Afro-American
Baltimore, Md.

[This is the second of a series of four articles on FEPC activities in the Washington Area.]

The majority of industrial complaints alleging discrimination against colored employees, came from Baltimore, according to Joseph H. B. Evans, director of the Fourth Regional Office of the Fair Employment Practice Committee.

Our major interest there, Mr. Evans reports, was in the matter of hiring of colored workers.

The statistical record as released by the War Manpower Commission indicated that as a result of FEPC activity colored workers were not only hired but trained for occupations in which they had formerly only a scant footing.

When it was decided to bring women into industry in large numbers, the problem of hiring of colored women was raised by management which contended that it would require the building of separate toilets and sanitary facilities. 12-15-45

Segregation Not Consistent

In the case of the Bendix Aviation Company, in their aircraft division, it was found that, while colored employees had separate toilet facilities, they used the same cafeteria and colored and whites worked together in production.

It was also noted that when the company laid off 100 workers at one time, no colored workers were included in this number.

Hired But Held Down

The Bethlehem Steel Company employed large numbers of colored employees in all of its yards, but FEPC was required to see that they had the same opportunities for promotion as the white workers. 12-15-45

In addition, the agency had to ascertain locker room space and adequate sanitary facilities were provided.

With the help and cooperation of the International Union of Maritime Ship Workers of America, FEPC succeeded in correcting most of the complaints.

Separated in Training

In one instance, Bethlehem Steel recruited colored painters from the New York area and brought them to Baltimore, but instead placed them with the unskilled labor gang for an orientation period.

The men left, returned to New York, reported the matter to the regional office of War Manpower Commission and immediately the regional director called a halt on any further recruiting by Bethlehem Steel.

FEPC representatives, at the request of the Yard. went to New York for a conference on the matter with Mrs. Rosenberg, regional director of the WMC.

As a result of the conference, FEPC was assured that any men brought from outside of the area would be given their orientation period in the shops in which their work was to be performed.

Equal Facilities the Issue

Other companies in Baltimore accepted colored employees, both men and women, and where it became necessary, made additional installations of the sanitary and toilet facilities. 12-15-45

These included such companies as Proctor and Gamble, American Can Company and Western Electric.

FEPC did not accept complaints alleging that separate toilets and sanitary facilities were necessary for effectual work in an establishment.

However, in the Western Electric Company case it was impossible for FEPC to assume jurisdiction involving separate facilities because the FEPC has always considered that it could not assume jurisdiction that would tend to disrupt the order of transportation," declared Mr. Evans.

Transit Bias Untouched

Efforts of FEPC to get colored street car and bus operators in Baltimore "brought forth the decision that nothing could be done consideration to the matter.

The Baltimore Telephone Company has hired colored employees as clerks, coin box collectors and managers of separate business offices but has refused to employ them as telephone operators.

Later a new president of the Transit Company was appointed, and he has expressed himself as personally not opposed to the use of colored platform operators and is now giving further

Stand Up and Fight or Sell Out and Run

Repeal of the poll tax exacted by South Carolina and six other Southern states as a qualification for voting is in itself of relatively trivial concern. It would not enable negroes to vote. Millions of Southern negroes now pay the poll tax.

The issue is whether or not the federal government shall take from the states the right to define and limit voting. Literacy and property tests differing in specifications are in the laws of various states.

Shall the federal government require suffrage laws to be identical, uniform, in all states? Shall the federal government crush and master the states?

Southern congressmen have before them the plain fact that the Northern congressmen, "Democrats" as well as Republicans, are their enemies. Those denying it to themselves and to their constituents are fools when they are not hypocrites. The poll tax repeal bill can be defeated in the senate only by a filibuster, and the rights of states dependent on filibuster to be saved are doomed.

The poll tax and the F. E. P. C. bills are part of the plan to convert the American republic into a Socialized State, and to the accompaniment of this object, the reduction of Southern states to impotent political units is held to be a necessary preliminary step.

In the minds of the Liberalites and Harlemites, racial amalgamation is the ultimate aim.

The array against the South is as fanatical as was the frenzy of the Abolitionists 100 years ago.

Against this attempt at subjugation, the South can protect itself by independent political action. It can withdraw from the so-called "Democratic" national party and choose presidential electors who in the Electoral College can extort compromise terms that will preserve the integrity of states. In this course it would have assistance, in time, from the smaller states of the North and West, as Maine, Vermont, Montana, Iowa, Idaho. Also it would have the sympathy and help of thousands of Americans of native American stock who live in great city states and are not office-holders and office-seekers.

By withdrawal from the national Democratic party, the Southerners would for the time lose offices, patronage, gifts, subsidies. Again it would be, in the words of the late Senator Tillman, "the poor boy at the frolic," though changed conditions would require the government to spend for the navy yards and airports of the South, all parts of the country being now vulnerable to attack. New York is open to attack by Europeans who would first attack Charleston.

Were the Southern states to assert independence of the national Democratic administration, it might retaliate by appointing negroes to judgeships, collectorships, other important offices. The New Deal, so far, has been double-dealing with the negroes. Attempting to build a negro-white party in the South, it would have cooperation from many white men now in office, the scalawag, or quisling, material being 20 times as abundant in the South now as it was in 1870.

These are the facts, these are the conditions that the white South is facing.

It has got to stand up and fight or sell out and run.

At this time, it is selling out. Its leaders entertain no thought of resisting the poll tax repeal and the F. E. P. C. bill in the only effective way. It would cost them jobs.

Federal Poll-Tax Repealer and FEPC Bill Opposed

6-17-45

By VIRGINIUS DABNEY

RICHMOND, June 16—Repeal of the poll tax by Federal action and establishment of a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee by similar action is opposed by most people in this region. Many who object to the poll tax feel that it would be far more effective to have the tax repealed by the seven States which retain it, and many who desire fair-employment opportunities for Negro people believe that the pending FEPC bill would create more problems for the Negroes than it would solve.

The most striking phenomenon on the poll-tax front was the action of all twelve members of the House from North Carolina in voting on Tuesday against Federal repeal, although there has been no poll tax in that State for a quarter of a century. Yet various spokesmen for the Federal bill have been saying that the sole motive and opposition to that measure was a desire on the part of Southern "bourbons" to keep 10,000,000 white and Negro Southerners from the ballot box. Actually much of the opposition to the bill comes from persons who favor repeal by the States, but who think it would have a bad effect for the National Government to force the elimination of the tax. They also doubt the bill's constitutionality.

6-17-45

Few voices have been raised in this region in favor of a permanent FEPC empowered to bring about the imposition of fines or jail sentences upon employers who do not hire, fire, promote, demote, upgrade and transfer their workers in accordance with its rulings.

Typical of the enlightened opposition to the FEPC is that of The Norfolk Virginian-Pilot, which favors the present FEPC and hopes for its retention, but feels that the projected agency, with its power to enforce employer compliance, probably would do more harm than good in this region.

GOP Solons Aid Defeat of FEPC Bill, But Help Pass Anti-Poll Tax Measure

OK Bias Measure But Stall Until Time Is Ripe for Kill

P.M

By ELIZABETH DONAHUE
PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 13. — In apparent defiance of the Republican leadership of the House, which consistently has backed Fair Employment legislation, four GOP members of the House Rules Committee have maneuvered temporary defeat of the FEPC bill.

Following the adverse vote in the House Rules Committee, which yesterday defeated the measure on a tie vote, only two practical courses are open to continue to outlaw racial and religious discrimination in the hiring of workers.

GOP House Leader Joseph Martin can make good his party's promises and urge his followers to affix their signatures to the Norton petition, which, when 218 members have signed it, can force the permanent FEPC bill to the floor.

6-13-45

Appropriation Vital

¶ The Senate Appropriations Committee and the Senate itself can restore House-deleted funds for a temporary FEPC, which will go out of existence this month unless the Senate takes such action.

Technically, Rep. R. C. Slaughter (D., Mo.) was responsible yesterday for the tie vote which defeated the permanent FEPC measure in the Rules Committee.

Slaughter, who has been absent from Washington for some time, arrived yesterday in time to cast his vote with the Southern Democrats.

In casting his ballot with Reps. Howard Smith (D., Va.), Eugene Cox (D., Ga.), William Colmer (D., Miss.), Joe Bates (D., Ky.) and Bayard Clark (D., N. C.), Slaughter is said to have ignored a sharp warning from Democratic National Committee Chairman Robert Hannegan who is reported to have warned him that he was jeopardizing his political future in Missouri by defying the President's request for a permanent FEPC bill.

GOP Assist

6-13-45

Nevertheless, the success of the Southern Democrats in their campaign to block the measure was made possible by the Republicans who professed to be in favor of the legislation.

Rep. Joseph Martin

For the fourth time in a week, the four Republican Committee members prevented the bill from coming to a vote in Committee when it could have been approved by a one-vote margin.

The Republicans agreed last week to vote yesterday morning regardless of whether Slaughter was present.

The Committee met according to schedule. Slaughters train was late. Observing Slaughter's absence, Rep. Leo Allen (R., Ill.), bolted the Committee room, so the pro-FEPC majority again was reduced by one vote and the Committee was deadlocked.

The meeting was postponed until afternoon. Slaughter was present and the 6 to 6 vote, with the Republicans finally voting in the affirmative, once again locked the bill in a Committee pigeonhole.

Chairman Adolph Sabath (D., Ill.) of the Rules group will take the floor in the House today, urging that members sign the discharge petition which automatically brings the bill to the floor.

Meanwhile, the immediate fight on FEPC shifts to the Senate, where the fate of the temporary anti-bias agency, established by President Roosevelt, is at stake.

The House deprived the wartime FEPC of funds on grounds that the Rules Committee and both houses of Congress first should decide whether a permanent agency should be established.

The refusal of the Rules Committee to allow the Congress to vote on the issue now makes it necessary for the Senate to restore money to the temporary FEPC if racial minorities are to get a fair break in securing jobs.

Grocery Wholesalers Call FEPC Bill 'Snake'

P.M

Attacking the Permanent Fair Employment Practices Bill as a "venomous snake" which "must be killed," the United States Wholesale Grocers' Assn.—whose goods are purchased by housewives of all colors and creeds—has dispatched two letters from its Washington office urging its members to write their Congressmen demanding that they fight the legislation.

A Wholesale Grocers' letter on May 18 said, "this ugly monster still rests secure within the confines of the powerful Rules Committee of the House. We have fought it from this office unremittingly . . ."

A second letter on June 7 read in part:

6-15-45

"We are doubtful if even President Truman is strong enough to saddle such a destructive law . . . upon the people of the United States. Our office here in Washington again is throwing this matter into your lap and in doing so has done our full duty. It is up to you to go further and we believe you will act accordingly."

Rankin Leads Attack on Disfranchise Legislation From Floor

6-13-45

P.M
PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 13.—The Anti-Poll Tax Bill is once again on its way to the Senate, after an overwhelming majority of the House of Representatives voted to repeal the discriminatory tax which disenfranchises millions of voters in seven Southern states.

For the second year in succession, a serviceman listening to the anti-Negro tirade staged by Southern Democrats made his feelings known from the spectators' gallery. As during the poll tax debate last year, the soldier was gavelled into silence by the presiding officer.

With the almost solid backing of Republicans, several of whom fought a valiant battle against the poll tax proponents, the Bill passed by a vote of 251 to 105.

Rep. John E. Rankin (D., Miss.) stepped into the familiar role of leader of the poll tax bloc.

Hits Frankfurter

Rankin, who had contended he "would not worry about the bill" if the U. S. had a decent Supreme Court, centered his fire on Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter.

Rising in Frankfurter's defense, Rep. Francis Case (R., S. D.) retorted "Justice Frankfurter, has become one of the outstanding jurists on the Court." Case was applauded loudly by both Democrats and Republicans.

Rep. Luther Patrick (D., Ala.) was the only member from a poll tax state who spoke in support of the bill.

6-13-45

"A new South is rising," he warned the House, "which favors progressive measures."

Declaring that children of white parents in the south "have two strikes on them" in learning citizenship, Patrick added that fewer than half of their parents are entitled to vote.

Wolf Cry

In reply to Rankin who assailed the bill as a Communist inspired measure, Case warned the poll taxers they would "holler wolf, wolf on the Communist issue, until some day the real thing will be here and you won't know it."

Taking up the constitutionality of the bill—an argument on which the Southern Democrats lean heavily—Chairman Hatton Summers, of the House Judiciary Committee, asserted the anti-poll tax bill "violates the direct language of the Constitution."

"The poll tax itself violates the spirit of the Constitution," retorted Rep. Clare Boothe Luce (R., Conn.).

The measure now goes to the Senate Judiciary Committee and eventually to the Senate, where there is grave danger that the bill will die under the weight of a Southern filibuster, as it has several times in recent years.

FEPC Here to Be Padlocked Saturday

By MAX GORDON Daily Worker N.Y., N.Y.

In two days the New York regional FEPC office, despite its remarkable record in the fight against Jimcrow in industry, will be padlocked. The office, covering New England, New York and northern New Jersey, will shut down Saturday for lack of funds. Along with it will go the offices in Philadelphia, Washington, Atlanta, San Francisco, San Antonio and Kansas City.

Only the offices in Chicago, Detroit and St. Louis will remain, and they are expected to continue only until the beginning of March.

CRACKED INDUSTRY BAN

With an extremely small staff, consisting of a director, three or four field examiners and four stenographers, the regional FEPC here has cracked hundreds of the nation's biggest firms and many more smaller ones throughout the area it covers. In the last year alone, it broke through the jimcrow barriers of 800 plants and businesses. 12-13-45

Some of these include Republic Aircraft, Grumman Aircraft, Bell Aircraft, Curtiss-Wright, General Motors, Western Electric, General Electric, the Bell Telephone system in New York, New Jersey, Boston and Buffalo, American Locomotive, transit companies in Buffalo and Syracuse; Eastman-Kodak, Railway Express, Anaconda Wire and Cable, Phelps-Dodge, Pratt and Whitney, Remington Arms, Electric Boat and numerous others.

Most of the plants never hired Negroes before. They were employing from 500 to a thousand when the war ended. Many, formerly discriminated against Jews and Italians. That was eliminated, and all minority groups won a measure of upgarding rights.

On top of that, the many federal agencies located in New York City scrapped their discriminatory hiring policies because of FEPC intervention or, in many cases, only because FEPC was around. Several of these agencies have their offices in the Empire State Building, which also houses FEPC.

SHACKLED ON RECONVERSIO

Established by President Roosevelt as a wartime agency, the FEPC has been barred from handling peacetime production and has therefore been unable to touch reconversion problems. Unless a permanent FEPC is soon established, the gains made during the war will thus be lost.

An unofficial survey of 107 plants in New York State, undertaken on behalf of the FEPC office, shows that while 10.7 percent of all workers were laid off immediately after V-J Day, the percentage of "non-whites" laid off was 32.7 percentage.

In the Albany area, which includes Schenectady's giant General Electric and American Locomotive Works, 3.2 percent of the workers were displaced in 17 plants while 30.2 percent of "non-whites" lost their jobs. This is an area where FEPC made a lot of headway in winning employment for Negro workers.

12-13-45

BIAS AGAINST FEPC

Workers laid off from federal agencies are placed in a pool from which replacements for other agencies are drawn. FEPC workers report that already there is definite discrimination being practiced against the Negro and Jewish workers in this pool. The agency will not be around to fight this.

The New York state FEPC will not be able to do anything about it because it has no jurisdiction over federal agencies. Nor will the state FEPC be able to go into the Brooklyn Navy Yard and other big federal industrial plants where thousands of Negroes have been hired and upgraded as a result of the work of federal FEPC.

Furthermore, the make-up of the State FEPC as a result of Gov. Dewey's policy on appointments raises serious doubts as to whether it will do the kind of job the federal agency has done with far less funds.

In any case, New York is one of the very few states that even has an FEPC. The only way the agency can be properly replaced is through a permanent federal FEPC. The congressional bill to establish this was approved by the House Labor Committee but has been blocked by the arch - reactionary tory - GOP coalition that dominates the House Rules Committee.

It was this coalition that succeeded in cutting the funds of the temporary FEPC from the $448,000 of last year to $250,000 this fiscal year, ending next July 1. This forced the agency to shut down five of its original fifteen offices in July.

Gov. Tobin Will Seek an FEPC Law Like New York's

Special Correspondence

BOSTON, Dec. 31.—Gov. Maurice J. Tobin says he will recommend to the new Massachusetts Legislature, in his message on Wednesday, passage of a State Fair Employment Practices Statute patterned on New York's Ives-Quinn Law.

His announcement followed receipt of a unanimous report, recommending that he back such a measure, from a committee he had appointed to study the consequences of the virtual liquidation of the Federal FEPC.

The committee reported that the New York law and a similar one in New Jersey have had "a very salutary effect upon employers and employes alike." It urged passage of a measure providing strong jail penalties or fines for violations.

The proposed law would improve on a measure killed by the Republican - controlled State Senate last year, in that it would provide fines of $500 or one year's imprisonment, or both, for each offense. The old measure lacked teeth.

The four-man committee, headed by Frederick W. Mansfield, ex-Boston mayor, vigorously brushed aside opposition arguments by a spokesman for the Associated Industries of Massachusetts. It said he based his arguments "not upon actual experience but upon dark and pessimistic forebodings of the evil which he confidently asserted would descend upon and overwhelm industry" if an FEPC law were passed.

Seeking "justification for these alarming prophecies," the committee heard testimony by Henry C. Turner administrator of the New York law, by Harold A. Lett, who helps administer the New Jersey law, and others.

"They found no evil effects whatever, but reported on the contrary that the legislation was having a very salutary effect upon employers and employes alike."

Protest 'Lip Service' on FEPC; Truman Reply Evades Issue

12-8-45

Daily Worker

The National Federation for Constitutional Liberties charged today that the Truman administration is giving only "lip service" to its avowed aim of eliminating discrimination in employment.

NFCL made this charge in a letter to President Truman, protesting his refusal to permit FEPC to issue a directive barring discrimination against Negroes on the Capital Transit Lines in Washington.

It backed up Charles Houston, Negro attorney who resigned as a member of FEPC in protest against the President's attitude.

NFCL chairman James Marshall wrote in his letter to the President that "your action in the Capital Transit case reflects a persistent course of conduct on the part of the administration to give lip service to the importance of eliminating discrimination in employment since V-J Day, while doing nothing to make the policy effective."

The President, in a letter to Houston, claimed that since the government had seized the Capital Transit Co. during the recent strike, it was obligated by Congress to continue in effect existing conditions of employing—including discrimination.

"The property was not seized for the purpose of enforcing the aims of the FEPC, laudable as these aims are, but to guarantee transportation for the citizens of Washington and vicinity," said the President.

New York, N.Y.

"As anxious as I am for Congress to pass legislation for a permanent FEPC, I cannot contravene an act of Congress in order to carry out the present committee's aims."

Houston Turns in FEPC Resignation

Charges Truman With Nullifying Own Orders

LETTER UNANSWERED

Baltimore, Md.

Administration Aides Reply to Accusations

WASHINGTON

Irked because of White House suppression last week of a directive ordering the Capital Transit Co. to employ colored operators, Charles H. Houston, Monday, announced his resignation from the FEPC.

Mr. Houston's resignation was in the form of a letter addressed to President Truman and dated Dec. 3. 12-8-45

Declaring that his resignation was "effective immediately," Mr. Houston charged that the President had failed to answer a request forwarded to the White House on Nov. 26 for an opportunity for the committee to confer with him.

Committee Not Notified

"Without notice to the Committee or a chance for the Committee to present its views, on Nov. 24 you ordered the Committee not to issue the decision," Houston wrote.

"Nov. 25, on behalf of the Committee, I wrote you asking that you give the Committee opportunity to confer with you. The return registry receipt shows the letter was delivered to the White House Nov. 26. To date we have not received even an acknowledgment of the letter.

"Since the effect of your intervention in the Capital Transit case is not to eliminate discrimination, but to condone it, to that extent you not only repudiate the Committee, but more important, you nullify the Executive Orders (8802 and 9346) themselves," the letter continued.

Government Legally Bound

"Although personally I was confident that the Committee had jurisdiction to issue the decision, and further that even without the decision the Government was legally bound to operate the nondiscriminatory employment policy in its own direct operation of Capital Transit, I asked the legal staff of the Committee for a memorandum on the question. 12-8-45

"The memorandum of the legal staff states that the federal manager of Capital Transit is not only empowered to, but must enforce the national policy of nondiscrimination in employment so long as the system is under his operation and control.

"Your action means that you do not hesitate to seize Capital Transit when employees strike in violation of a private collective

Phoenix Negro-White Rally Asks Local FEPC

Daily Worker N.Y., N.Y.

Special to the Daily Worker

PHOENIX, Ariz., Dec. 11.—More than 500 Negro and white residents of Phoenix in the Tanner Chapel African Methodist Church last Sunday heard Pettis Perry, prominent Los Angeles Communist, outline strategy for achieving full and fair employment.

The meeting was called to support the fight for a local fair employment practice law.

"The problem of fair employment belongs as much to the white worker as to the Negro worker," Perry said. "A reserve of unemployed, poverty-stricken and low-paid Negro workers constitute a potential threat to the living standards of all workers in general and to organized labor in particular."

Declaring that the fight for jobs without discrimination was a part of the fight for jobs for all, Perry said that American monopoly capital was driving ahead with its imperialist plans, "as exemplified in China," and for reaction at home.

He declared that the fight for a fair employment practice law in Phoenix would strengthen the struggle for a permanent FEPC.

Local and state FEPC laws will be necessary to supplement a national law when it is passed," he said.

Morris Graham, head of the Arizona Communist Party and chairman of the meeting, pledged the Party's full strength in the campaign for a Phoenix FEPC.

The Rev. T. J. Townsend, in whose church the meeting was held, welcomed the gathering. He, the Rev. L. B. Nelson of the Ministerial Alliance, J. L. Davis of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and Wade Hammond of the Urban League pledged support the local FEPC fight.

Accepts Resignation Of Attorney Charles H. Houston

But Says Seizure Of Capital Transit Company Had To Keep Prevailing Employment Policy

N.Y., N.Y. 12-15-45

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In a letter Friday accepting the resignation of Attorney Charles H. Houston, one of two Negro members of FEPC, President Harry S. Truman rejected the charge made by Mr. Houston that he had blocked the agency's operations and abandoned its principles.

Attorney Houston, who resigned on Monday, December 3, from FEPC in protest against a Presidential order to the agency to hold up a directive to the Capital Transit Company to cease its discriminatory policies in employment of Negroes, charged that the President's intervention not only repudiates the committee, but nullified the Executive Orders themselves. 12-15-45

In accepting Mr. Houston's resignation, the President wrote that, under the conditions imposed by Congress on Federal seizure, existing conditions of employment were to prevail in the seized property. The Capital Transit Company was seized by the Government on Thanksgiving Eve as a result of two work stoppages. The President pointed out that the action was taken to provide transportation rather than carry out FEPC policies, "laudable as these aims are."

The President added: "In view of this apparent contradiction between the law and the order which the Fair Employment Practice Committee proposed to issue, it was thought best to suggest that the order be temporarily postponed."

In his letter of resignation, Mr. Houston pointed out that "neither the Capital Transit management nor the union leadership has ever claimed that the exclusion of Negroes as platform workers and traffic checkers was a term or condition of employment. The union has no color bar. Management and the union leadership have merely claimed that they could not control the rank and file of the white platform workers."

"Your action in the Capital Transit case," Attorney Houston's letter to the President also said,

CHARLES H. HOUSTON

"means that you do to seize Capital Tran
ployees strike in violatio private collective bargaining ment, but will not move, or mit the committee to move effectuate the national non-discriminatory employment policy declared in President Executive Orders."

His letter of resignation concluded:

"The issue of the Capital Transit case far transcends the question whether a few Negro workers shall be placed on the platform of streeet cars and buses and as traffic checkers on the Capital Transit system. It raises the fundamental question of the basic government attitude toward minorities. The failure of the Government to enforce democratic practices and to protect minorities in its own capital makes its expressed concern for national minorities abroad somewhat specious, and its interference in the domestic affairs of other countries very premature."

Charge GOP Blocks FEPC Legislation

Pittsburgh Courier – Pa.

NEW YORK—Charges that the Administration is giving only "lip service" to the elimination of discrimination in employment and that Republican Congressmen are actively preventing passage of leigslation for a permanent FEPC despite election campaign pledges were made recently by the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties.

In a letter to President Truman following the resignation of Charles Houston, Washington attorney from the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee, NFCL states: "The issue raised by Mr. Houston in his resignation far transcends the Capital Transit case and raises the fundamental question of basic Government attitudes toward minorities. 12-15-45

ASK FOR NEW EXECUTIVE ORDER

"We cannot see how we and other groups devoted to elimination of discrimination based on race, color, creed or national origin, and to the preservation of our democracy can fail to agree with Mr. Houston's conclusion that your action in the Capital Transit case reflects a persistent course of conduct on the part of the Administration to give lip service to the importance of eliminating discrimination in employment since V-J Day, while doing nothing to make the policy effective."

Urging the President to issue a special Executive Order extending the powers of FEPC as he did those of OPA and WPB, the NFCL also asked that he use his influence and powers to see that "the disgraceful blocking of the FEPC bill (HR 2232) in the House be ended."

The Low-Down on the FEPC

The Afro-American Baltimore, MD.

By ALVIN E. WHITE

(In Last Week's Account—In June, five years ago, nine men met with the President to seek a solution to the problem of unemployment pools among colored which remained static in spite of prosperity of the U.S. Out of the conference grew the President's Executive Order 8802 which outlawed discrimination along racial and religious lines in employment.) 12-8-45

Copies of the President's Executive Order 8802 were distributed widley. Colored newspapers hailed the Executive Order as a "second emancipation proclamation." "President Lincoln freed the slaves," they said, "but President Roosevelt freed the workers."

When the President wrote this instrument and set up the group to carry out its functions, certain well known fallacies were followed.

The unwritten rule that a colored person cannot fill a government post where he can make final decisions or formulate policies was adhered to closely. In top Washington jobs, colored people are "assistants," "advisers," "associates," "race relations advisers" and such, but nothing higher.

They may advise but they cannot direct. This insiduous belief has grown into a custom which even the liberal Roosevelt dared not violate.

Roosevelt named a white man to head the committee. There is no quarrel with this. But such a person should be in his own right, a strong, national figure, having the respect and full confidence of the President; with direct Presidential contact and not subservient to the "Palace Guard."

He should be forthright, uncompromising and outspoken!

White persons who espouse the cause of colored are generally regarded as eccentrics and immediately become pariahs and outcasts. They are subjected to unnecessary criticism, opposition and insults. Usually, they wind up completely ostracized, unless they surrender their convictions.

Since its inception, four men have headed the committee. Mark Ethridge, the first chairman, who probably came closest to the ideal; Malcolm MacLean, an educator with liberal ideas; Father Haas, a Cathloic priest, with interest in labor; and the present head, Malcolm Ross, direct from labor's ranks.

Assailed and Applauded

Ethridge served from July 20, 1941 to February 1, 1942. He pleaded business pressure in resigning the chairmanship. But it is believed that a speech he made in Birmingham, Ala., precipitated his resignation.

In this speech, the chairman spoke on the South's segregation. He was bitterly assailed from all sides and applauded on others.

Many defended it on the grounds that Ethridge knew the South and was preparing it to accept the unwanted activities of the committee.

Dr. MacLean, formerly of the University of Minnesota, was brought in from Hampton Institute, where he was president. He stayed with the Committee until May 10, 1943.

Ethridge and David Sarnoff of the Radio Corporation of America, upon Presidential invitation and insistence, remained with the committee as members, but when MacLean resigned, they too got out.

Dr. MacLean was given a Naval commission. Ugly rumors followed the resignation but the capital was full of them at the time. 12-1-45

Dr. MacLean quit over the postponement of the railroad hearings. Elaborate plans had been made for these hearings and a crack staff had been assembled.

Hearings Postponed

But a mysterious, unexplained order came from "higher ups" and the hearings were postponed.

That was the first big set-back for the Committee which had been feeling its way along very slowly and at the same time, accomplishing some of the objectives which it had set.

Father Hass accepted the chairmanship on May 20, 1943, but he too resigned on October 3, 1943. He was earnest, competent and willing and labor respected him.

But his superiors were not too anxious to have him serve so they promoted him to a bishopric, thereby removing him from a "hot spot."

Mr. Roosevelt gave Father Haas two assistants. George M. Johnson, a colored lawyer and Malcolm Ross. Mr. Johnson was promoted since he had been with the committee for some time prior to his promotion.

On October 13, 1943, Mr. Ross was named chairman; although capable and efficient George Johnson, who had seniority and had again and again demostrated his ability, was by-passed.

Honest, Earnestness

Johnson made no complaint, but continued his valuable service as long as he possibly could. Mr. Ross, while not a national figure, has brought honesty of purpose, it is believed, and earnestness to the difficult chairmanship.

The Committee's personnel was overwhelmingly white. The size of the committee was also increased from the original number.

Its members were Philip Murray, president of the CIO; William Green, president of the AF of L; David Sarnoff of the Radio Corporation of America; Milton Webster, vice president of the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; and Earl Dickerson, a Chicago lawyer.

The latter two were colored. Neither Mr. Murray nor Mr. Green ever served personally on the committee; they were represented by proxies. 12-8-45

When the Committee showed signs of collapse and criticism was running high, a new committee was constituted in July, 1943, dropping Earl Dickerson. It was composed of three labor representatives and three industry representatives.

For labor, there were Boris Shishin of the AF of L, John Brophy of the CIO, Milton Webster of the AF of L; for industry there were Sara Southall of the International Harvester Company;

Cramer Selected

Samuel Zemurray, president of the United Fruit Company and P. B. Young, publisher of the Norfolk Journal and Guide. Mr. Young later resigned, pleading ill health.

Lawrence Cramer was selected by Mr. Roosevelt as executive secretary for the committee. While serving as Governor of the Virgin Islands, Mr. Cramer had incurred powerful opposition and made political enemies.

Cramer frequently was opposed by Harold Ickes, Secretary of the Interior.

While Mr. Cramer was capable, he was hampered in doing a good job and his regime at times was rather uncertain.

When he finally gave up the job, he too went to the Navy as an officer. His uncompromising stand won him additional enemies and objectors in official circles. His loss was really felt.

All chairmen made fatal mistake. This was in not demanding direct contact with the White House in all matters at all times.

Most of the contact was through a third person, some things never reaching the President at all. The President's committee was not the President's committee after all.

Moved to White House

It has been said that Jonathan Daniels, a White House secretary, was designated to handle all colored peoples' affairs.

The son of Josephus Daniels of North Carolina, former Secretary of the Navy, young Daniels's first job of importance in Washington was with the Office of Civilian Defense.

He was not very happy there and as soon as possible, Mr. Roosevelt moved him to the White House.

No one knows by what particular virtue Daniels became an authority on colored peoples' affairs. It was common talk among colored people that Daniels chief confidante and adviser in the ranks of "colored officialdom" was Theodore Posten.

Posten formerly worked with Dr. Weaver and later went to the Office of War Information. Through this office, he met Daniels.

Posten never publicly denied the rumors, nor could he with good grace admit them. He was had long enjoyed the confidence having sufficient trouble with the of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and Dr. Channing T. Tobias, FBI which hounded him constantly and accused him of being a Communist. 12-8-45

Shortly before Mr. Roosevelt's death, it was rumored a prominent colored person would be named to his staff in the White House.

President's Confidence

Mrs. Mary McLeod Bethune, who in charge of colored work for the National Council of YWCA, were among those named.

Such an appointment would have strengthened the FEPC since it would have given colored a direct channel to the President.

Truman Intervenes Against FEPC

SUPPRESSES DIRECTIVE; NEED GROWS FOR CONGRESS FIGHT

By CLAUDIA JONES Daily Worker

A leading Negro weekly editorially commented this week: "We shudder to think of what can happen without the protecting arm of the FEPC." New York, N.Y.

Well, insofar as the wind is blowing from the White House, the Negro people and labor had better take note. This deep concern, aptly expressed by the influential Afro-American, permeating the minds of Negro Americans, was dramatized in the recent protest resignation of Attorney Charles E. Houston from the FEPC. Houston's resignation and sharp criticism of the administration was due to President Truman's suppression of an FEPC directive which ordered Capital Transit Co. to employ Negro operators.

BASIC GOVERNMENT ATTITUDE

But Truman's act has far wider implications for the future of fair employment practices insofar as federal policy is concerned.

Under fire is the basic and fundamental question of the administration's attitude towards minorities and the Negro people. It is this that is at the heart of the Houston resignation letter which charged that Truman's intervention "raises the fundamental question of the basic government attitude towards minorities. The failure of the government to enforce democratic practices and to protect minorities in its own capital makes its expressed concern for national minorities abroad somewhat specious and its interference in the domestic affairs of other countries very premature." 12-8-45

It is obvious that what we have here is intervention on the part of President Truman to condone discrimination.

It is intervention in the same callous Truman manner as it is administration imperialist intervention against the heroic peoples of China and Indonesia.

Truman's suppression of the FEPC directive is a categoric repudiation of the FEPC principle. It is of the same cloth as the abandonment of federal control of USES and its transference to state's control without a fight on Truman's part.

Obviously this is not at all an academic question, for practically coincident with this act is the announcement that some seven of 10 regional FEPC offices, including the New York office and all those covering the South, are scheduled to close in less than two weeks—by Dec. 15!

A FAIT ACCOMPLI

It is indeed a far cry from Truman's statement on this issue of last June. Then, when the FEPC was stymied in the House Rules Committee on approapriations, Truman stated:

"To abandon at this time the fundamental principle upon which the Fair Employment Practices Committee was established is unthinkable. Even if the war were over or nearly over, the question of fair employment practices during the reconversion period and thereafter would be of paramount importance. The principle and policy of fair practice should be established permanently as part of our national law."

Well, the war is over, but apparently what was "unthinkable" then is becoming a fait accompli, with the able assistance of the spokesman who "warned" Americans against such thinking. Even then, it is to be remembered that Truman's "warning" was minus action.

Millions of Americans, Negro and white, agree that it is "unthinkable," all right, to abandon the federal principle of fair employment practices. They know that, despite pious declarations, the FEPC can be today likened to the ghost of a pigeon that has been starved to death. Already strangled by lack of appropriations, the contemplated move to close down regional offices in all but three areas—Detroit, Chicago and St. Louis—will reduce the number of regional offices from a one-time 13 to three and regional FEPC office personnel from 117 to about 27.

Moreover, on the first major test of President Truman's declared stand on the FEPC, we find it is the President himself who is abandoning the principles of fair employment practices, and in an agency controlled by the administration—the Capital Transit Co.! What a green-light signal to Big Business and reactionary Jimcrow employers!

Unless something is done quickly by an aroused labor-Negro people's movement, this important wartime gain, establishing fair employment practices as a federal policy—based on a decade of progress in which labor and the Negro people cemented their ties—will simply be wiped out by presidential decree! It represents nothing less than a body blow to the already waning confidence of the Negro people in the Truman administration.

It is of the utmost importance that the fight for a permanent FEPC becomes an important part of labor's over-all fight against the reactionary weather-signals coming from the White House. When a federal policy which challenges the right of transport workers to strike, accompanied by government seizure, is followed by action to prevent Negro workers being employed on the basis of national non-discriminatory employment (declared in presidential executive orders) it is, to say the least, a pattern rife with danger for every Negro and for every worker.

True, it has its own "logic" insofar as the reactionary pattern of administration policy abroad and at home is shaping up. But what must be understood is that the suppression of the FEPC directives is aimed not only at the Negro people but at all labor as well. It is part and parcel of Big Business strategy to decimate the wartime gains of Negro workers, to create Negro-white strife and to destroy and break the labor movement.

It is similarly important for the Negro people and their organizations to speak out in strong terms on the issue of FEPC, as well as on all anti-labor attacks of Big Business and the Truman administration.

This is no narrow stake—it fundamentally affects the very heart of the struggle of the Negro people for complete equality and additional democratic gains—for the realization of such hopes lie only in close alliance with the growing democratic and powerful movement of organized labor.

LABOR MUST RAISE VOICE

Labor's voice should be heard immediately in protest of this suppression of the FEPC directive by Truman, now. 12-8-45

It is around the key and crucial issue of the permanent FEPC that the very fate of this principle of fair employment practices will be decided. This likewise makes it necessary for labor and the Negro people to demand in overwhelming tones tnat the languishing measure favorably voted for by the Labor Committee of the House be voted out. The petition to discharge the committee from further consideration of the bill—to get it before the House—still lacks some 60 signatures to make up the 218 needed. A large number of these are Republicans who reside in the New York area. Especially should support be given to the strategy of the steering committee led by Marcantonio and Rep. Norton which aims to get the discharge petition before the House and to utilize the calendar Wednesday.

Above all, now is the time for strong concern to be turned into action, to defeat these and sundry efforts to destroy the Roosevelt principle of fair employment practices and to assure its permanence in the federal government.

In Detroit the general membership of that city's Council of the National Negro Congress voted every possible assistance to the UAW strike.

LeBron Simmons, president of the Detroit Council, in a message to the GM division of UAW said the auto strikers' demand for a 30 percent wage increase "goes far and beyond that of increasing the take-home pay of the workers out on strike. This will set wage policy throughout the nation."

In New York the American Youth for Democracy likewise pledged fullest support to the General Motors strikers. At a meeting attended by 35 delegates from Detroit, AFL Local 107, International Pulp Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers also informed both AFL President William Green and UAW President R. J. Thomas of their complete support for the GM strike asserting "the welfare of every union working man depends upon victory for the workers over the selfish corporation." 12-8-45

The New York City Central Committee of the International Workers Order sent a letter to R. J. Thomas informing him of their support for the General Motors Strike.

Political Scene

Redbaiting and FEPC

Daily Worker

by Adam Lapin

THE fight on a permanent FEPC bill may come to a climax this month. Friends of FEPC in the House believe they have found a way of circumventing the reactionary Rules Committee, which has kept the legislation bottled up for many months. They believe they can get the issue up on the floor for a vote.

But the outcome of the new drive to get action on FEPC may depend on the success of a divisive, redbaiting attack centered on Rep. Vito Marcantonio of New York which has been launched by groups associated with the National Council for a permanent FEPC.

A couple of weeks ago the main story in the Birmingham World, a Negro weekly, was headlined: "Townsend Charges Marcantonio with Insincerity in FEPC Fight." Other Negro newspapers carried the story too, although not with similar screaming headlines.

The stories were based on a telegram sent out by Willard S. Townsend, president of the CIO-United Transport Service Employes and a member of the National Council for a Permanent FEPC.

Townsend condemned the use of a parliamentary device to bring up the FEPC bill on what is known as Calendar Wednesday as an example of "divisive tactics commonly practised by those whose endorsement is the kiss of death." It seems that all this is a dark, devious plot by Rep. Marcantonio and "the Daily Worker, Fellow Travellers and the Communist Party."

The trouble is that this redbaiting nonsense is being widely circulated in the Negro and labor press, and is being purveyed by word of mouth on Capitol Hill by lobbyists for the National Council for a Permanent FEPC. It may seriously weaken the fight for FEPC unless it is stopped now.

Here is what all the noise is about. Daily Worker

FEPC supporters, who are concerned with the issue and not with putting out redbaiting publicity, are backing several simultaneous moves to get action. They are urging President Truman to issue a new executive order giving FEPC authority to function during the reconversion period. This would prevent FEPC from literally withering away from lack of funds while the Congressional fight continues. N.Y.N.Y.

They are putting pressure on the House to get the necessary 218 signatures to bring the FEPC bill to the floor. But the rub here is that scores of Republicans refuse to sign the petition until close to the 1946 elections so that they can make the maximum political capital.

Finally, to break up this political squeeze play they are backing the Calendar Wednesday strategy. On the basis of complex House procedure, committee bills can be called up on Wednesday. But normally this committee calendar is dispensed with. The move devised by Rep. Marcantonio is to have Rep. Mary Norton, chairman of the House Labor Committee which has reported out the FEPC bill, call it up on the next calendar Wednesday.

Strategy Backed By Rep. Norton

An FEPC steering committee in the House, including Rep. Norton, backed this strategy, and one attempt was made several weeks ago to get the FEPC bill up on a Wednesday. It failed because polltax Congressmen forced an adjournment by a 74 to 31 vote. Congressmen friendly to FEPC just weren't on the floor.

Starting with Wednesday, Nov. 14, further attempts will be made each week to get the FEPC bill up. These attempts can succeed if Congressmen pledged to support FEPC are on the floor and carry out their pledge.

The advantage of this strategy is simply that it is speedy, even though it sounds complicated, and gets around the parliamentary obstacles placed in the path of FEPC.

So what are the Social Democrats and professional redbaiters associated with the National Council for a Permanent FEPC so excited about?

Well, for one thing they have always shown little interest in practical moves to get action on FEPC. For example, several months ago when the real issue was pressuring funds out of a reluctant Congress, these people in the National Council were concentrating on the then more remote issue of a permanent FEPC.

Now that there is a good chance of getting House action, their real strategy is to concentrate on the Senate. A Senate filibuster on FEPC would undoubtedly make headlines. But nobody really interested in FEPC would try to bring the bill up in the Senate before preparing the ground by getting it passed in the House first.

The groups around the National Council are also interested in a $200,000 fund drive, and in a monopoly on the FEPC issue. That is one reason they are so bitter about Rep. Marcantonio who has, whether they like it or not, emerged as one of the outstanding champions of FEPC. Finally, they want to discredit all progressive groups and individuals who won't follow their redbaiting line. 11-5-45

After Willard Townsend issued his redbaiting blast, Dr. Max Yergan, head of the National Negro Congress, sent him a letter which stated:

"I believe there is no justification whatever for statements which disrupt, divide, and thereby play into the hands of the Rankins, Bilbos and their Northern accomplices. . . . My appeal to you is that we go forward in unity to the victory we all desire."

The only barrier tot hat unity is the attitude of those who place redbaiting before a permanent FEPC.

P.M. New York, N.Y.

The bill for a permanent Federal FEPC languishes in the House Rules Committee while U. S. Representatives like Ellsworth Buck, who represents Richmond and part of lower Manhattan, play a hide-and-seek game with a discharge petition which needs only 60 more signatures to get the bill out on the floor. George Marshall, chairman of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, who received the Buck letter, said in his reply that Buck's refusal to sign the petition "lends strong credence to the charge that the majority of Republican Congressmen are withholding their signatures . . . until a few months before election so that they may claim the Negro vote while nevertheless preventing passage of the bill, since it will leave too little time for the bill to pass both Houses of Congress before the end of the session." 12-9-45

Morse, Ball Lead GOP In New Move for FEPC

Out to Steal New Deal's Thunder by Forcing Senate Action

P.M.

By John Weiss
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18. — A lackadaisical Democratic policy on the bill to create a permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission (FEPC) is presenting the GOP a golden opportunity to steal some Administration thunder.

A group of Republican Senators, led by Sens. Wayne Morse of Oregon and Joseph H. Ball of Minnesota, is committed to force the FEPC Bill to the floor when Congress reconvenes after the first of the year. Sen. Morse revealed today that he intends to make a speech in behalf of FEPC before adjournment, blasting the administration for failing to press any action on the Permanent FEPC Bill. Morse will call upon the Republicans to make good their party promise of 1944 in Chicago. 12-18-45

With Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin Jr. (R., Mass.) indicating that House Republicans will finally come into line in a move to get this same bill out of its Rules Committee pigeon hole, supporters of a permanent FEPC are definitely encouraged about early passage of the bill. New York, N.Y.

Shift in Strategy

Cloakroom strategy has now shifted from an attempt to push the permanent FEPC bill through the House first, and a concerted drive will be made to obtain prior passage in the Senate.

Possibility of Senate passage depends primarily upon ability of supporters of the bill to obtain a cloture vote, required to break a filibuster by the Southern Democrats. If the White House is prepared to crack the whip on this issue, the bipartisan coalition of Administration followers, plus the newly revealed GOP backers, may be able to mass the required two-thirds vote. 12-18-45

Truman Backs Survey

Meanwhile, the FEPC announced after a White House Conference yesterday that President Truman is supporting a fact-finding survey, which it will undertake, "to examine what is happening to minority group workers during reconversion." The findings will be made public during a four-day hearing to be held in Chicago during February.

Informed sources here believe that this survey, initially suggested by Malcolm Ross, FEPC Chairman, may delay action on the FEPC bill. Several Congressmen have indicated that they may urge postponement of any action on the bill, pending publication of the result of the survey. The Committee, however, feels that with the limited funds now available (about $63,000), its activity should be "concentrated in the fields where its resources can be applied with the best hope of lasting results."

The Committee further points out that "this limited program is not a substitute for effective full-scale enforcement of the National policy against discrimination." However, the scope of the current bill limits jurisdiction of the FEPC to Government agencies and employers "which contribute to the war effort."

HOUSTON'S RESIGNATION

New York Age

ACTION taken last week by Attorney Charles H. Houston, porminent Washington lawyer, in announcing his resignation from the Committee on Fair Employment Practice, points up the fight ahead for all who are interested in the continuation in peace time of the war-time prohibitions against discrimination in employment by reason of race, color, or national origin.

The resignation followed suppression by the White House of a directive the FEPC had unanimously decided to issue to the Capital Transit Company, ordering it to cease discrimination in employment practices by refusing to hire Negroes as trolley car and bus operators. N.Y., N.Y.

Ever since FEPC was created, the issue of Capital Transit Company's jim crow employment policy has been the one thorn in its flesh. Right there in its own backyard was the Capital Transit Company refusing to employ Negroes as car and bus operators, and yet FEPC, for reasons best known to its staff, was powerless or refused to take action. And yet it could cite transit companies in Philadelphia and San Francisco—to cite just a few—and get compliance with the orders it issued.

In the matter of Capital Transit Company, however, it was a different situation. Capital Transit Company, as a private enterprise owned and controlled allegely by white Southerners, powerful in political circles, posed a difficult problem. On the one hand, FEPC depended for its existence on funds made available by the Federal government. Many of the same people who would have something to say about how much money FEPC would receive were closely allied with, or friendly to, the controlling interests in Capital Transit Company. On the other hand, FEPC decided to "crack" several other hard nuts before turning its attention to the situation in its own district.

Whatever the reason for the long delay, the final decision of FEPC to issue its directive against the Capital Transit Company was predicated on the basis that the company was operating now under government control, following Federal seizure recently because of work stoppages in a series of labor-management disputes. It would be reasonable to suppose, then, that a Federal manager of the company would be amenable to employment suggestions of Negroes, and certainly to a directive issued by FEPC. It looked like the propositious time for such a directive to be issued. 12-15-45

On November 23, FEPC members voted to issue the directive ordering the Capital Transit Company to "cease and desist from practices and policies which have resulted in the denial of employment to Negroes, because of race, as conductors, motermen, bus operators and traffic checkers."

In his letter of resignation to President Truman on Monday, December 3, Mr. Houston wrote in part: 12-15-45

"Without notice to the committee or a chance for the committee to present its views, on Nobember 24 you ordered the Committee not to issue the decision. November 25 on behalf of the committee, I wrote you asking that you give the committee opportunity to confer with you. The return registry receipt shows the letter delivered to the White House November 26th. Today, we have not received even an acknowledgment of the letter.

"The President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice was created by Executive Orders Nos. 8802 and 9346 as an independent agency responsible directly to the President, and charged with effectuating on his behalf the national policy of full utilization of the nation's manpower in war industries, government contract operations and government service, without discrimination 'in regard to hire, tenure, terms or conditions of employment, or union membership because of race, creed, color or national origin.' Since the effect of your intervention in the Capital Transit case is not to eliminate but to condone it, to that extent you not only repudiate the committee, but more important, you nullify the Executive Orders themselves.

". . . Your action in the Capital Transit case means that you do not hesitate to seize Capital Transit when employees strike in violation of a private collective bargaining agreement, but will not move, or permit the committee to move to effectuate the national non-discriminatory employment policy declared in Presidential Executive Orders.

"The issue of the Capital Transit case far transcends the question whether a few Negro workers shall be placed on the platforms of street cars and buses and as traffic checks on the Capital Transit system. It raises the fundamental question of the basic government attitude toward minorities. The failure of the Government to enforce practices and to protect minorities in its own capital makes its expressed concern for national minorities abroad somewhat specious, and its interference in the domestic affairs of other countries very premature."

Mr. Houston's resignation was not rashly nor hastily done. He had just the week before written President Truman requesting that a confernce be held on behalf of the whole committee regarding the President's instructions not to cite the Capital Transit Company. This letter went unanswered, and left Mr. Houston in the position of either remaining with FEPC thereby being ignored in the future or resigning from the committee thereby bring to the public's attention the President's "double talk" as regards FEPC. 12-15-45

Shortly after Mr. Truman became President, by an act of God, he not only affirmed his belief in the principles of FEPC but also asked Congress to vote funds for its continuance. President Truman immediately was hailed by the Negro Press, organizations and liberals for his championing of the cause of Fair Employment Practices.

In the light of the reasons for Mr. Houston's resignation, it now begins to appear that all the praise and encomiums heaped on President Truman were premature. Certainly, the President's actions in the Capital Transit case are not beyond criticism. Nor his actions in refusing to acknowledge receipt of the committee's letter requesting a conference beyond reproach.

More power to Attorney Houston for bringing out into the public's view, the "lip" service the President has been giving FEPC. Actions speak louder than words. In this case, the President's actions spea' 'nder than his words.

Republicans About To Grab FEPC Issue

WASHINGTON.—The Republican party in congress seems finally about to take hold of an issue that is highly important in this critical postwar era, and one in keeping with the party's best traditions of the past.

This is the effort to eliminate discrimination in jobs on account of race, creed or color. Such discrimination is reported on the increase, which is not at all in keeping with our ideals of democracy that we would spread elsewhere in the world. 12-21-45

Republicans are beginning to bring pressure for enactment of bills pending in both branches of congress to create a permanent fair employment practices commission to eradicate such discrimination. It would be modeled along lines of the Fair Employment Practices Committee set up by executive order of President Roosevelt, except that the permanent federal commission would have statutory authority not possessed by the temporary wartime agency.

THE WARTIME FEPC is now seriously handicapped in its operations. It is almost nonexistent. This is due to a fund shortage that has forced it to close all but three branches—it only has $63,000 on which to operate until next July 1—and to narrowing of its jurisdiction because of the end of the war. It was restricted to plants with war contracts.

This is why a permanent federal commission is so needed.

A group of six Republican senators, mostly newer, younger and of progressive inclination, are organizing a campaign to get the bill before the senate for a vote after the Christmas recess. It is high on the calendar. As a preliminary they are putting the case before the public this final week of congress in a series of senate speeches.

The six senators are Aiken, Vermont; Ball, Minnesota; Knowland, California; Morse, Oregon; Smith, New Jersey, and Tobey, New Hampshire. 12-21-45

REPUBLICANS in the house also seem to be bestirring themselves for a permanent FEPC as indorsed by the party's 1944 platform. Rep. Martin, Massachusetts, house Republican leader, publicly has offered his co-operation to force the bill before the house by a petition to discharge the rules committee which has had the bill since last February.

A petition now lies on the speaker's desk. It has nearly 160 signatures, of which only about a third are Republican. It will require 218 signatures to bring the bill to the floor for a vote. A Republican drive to fill up the petition is expected after the first of the year.

Democratic dereliction gives Republicans the opportunity to press this issue and get credit for the legislation. It is one of many similar legislative opportunities awaiting the GOP, if it would only take the initiative.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has urged passage of the FEPC bill. But his efforts have been blocked by the southern wing of his party. Southern Democrats on the House Rules Committee have bottled up the bill there arbitrarily for 10 months. Democrats from other parts of the country have sought its enactment in vain.

The titular leader of the Republican party, Gov. Dewey of New York, secured enactment of a fair employment practices law in his state, similar to that proposed nationally. Never has the case for it been put more concisely than by the governor in discussing the New York measure. 12-21-45

HE SAID:

"There are those who believe the antidiscrimination bill is designed to fix by law the taste, the habits, the associations or the special lives of people. Others believe it is a law to tell you whom you may have in your homes as domestic help or guests, whom they may not hire, or that it is designed to discriminate in favor of one group against another. Of course, it is none of these things.

"The bill establishes by law the simple principle that in business and industrial employment there shall be no discrimination on grounds of race, creed, color or national origin. It translates into law what is inherent in our Constitution, and is the very essence of our free society."

The proposed federal law would do the same, no more, no less.

Republicans deserve public support in their campaign.

C. H. Houston Protests That President Barred Issuance of Capital Transit Decision

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3—Charles H. Houston, one of the two Negro members of the Fair Employment Practice Committee, resigned today in a protest against "the refusal of the President to allow the committee to issue its decision" directing the Capital Transit Company, Washington's transport system, to cease discriminatory policies in the employment of Negroes. 12-4-45

A White House spokesman acknowledged receipt of the letter of resignation, but declined to comment on the protest.

Explaining his action, Mr. Houston, a member of a law firm here, said:

"The President's attitude in the Capital Transit case reflects a persistent course of conduct on the part of the Administration to give lip service to the matter of eliminating discrimination in employment on account of race, creed, color or national origin since V-J Day, while doing nothing substantial to make the policy effective."

For three years the FEPC has been examining the Negro employment policies of the Capital Transit Company, now operating under Federal seizure following two stoppages.

On Nov. 23 the committee unanimously decided to issue a directive to the company, according to Mr. Houston, but on Nov. 24, he added, the agency was ordered by the President to withhold issuance of its decision.

A letter written on Nov. 25 by Mr. Houston for the committee, asked for a conference with the President. Because it was not answered, Mr. Houston said he decided to submit his resignation today.

Mr. Houston stated in his letter that Guy A. Richardson, Federal manager of the Government operated transit system, had opposed issuance of the FEPC decision not "on jurisdictional grounds but purely on political considerations." He also wrote to the President:

"Your action in the Capital Transit case means that you do not hesitate to seize Capital Transit when employes strike in violation of a private collective bargaining agreement, but will not move, or permit the committee to move, to effectuate the national non-discriminatory employment policy declared in Presidential Executive Orders."

Doors Close On FEPC Here

Daily Worker

By DOROTHY LOEB and EUGENE GORDON

At 5:05 p.m. yesterday, Edward Lawson turned the key in a lock on a door on the 63rd floor of the Empire State Building.

The act marked the end of the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee in New York, only federal agency charged with fighting discrimination in employment. new York, N.Y.

Far below on the street, a picket line paraded before the building.

More than 150 marched with placards, protesting President Truman's failure to fight for a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee and pledging that they would continue the fight themselves.

Congress had refused funds for the committee, and so the FEPC, which had broken down Jimcrow in scores of industries, won up-grading and equality in pay for tens of thousands of Negroes, for Jews, Italians and other minorities, was closing.

12-15-45

New York's was one of seven regional offices around the country to close. Only St. Louis, Detroit and Chicago remain open.

Lawson, regional director for New York and New England, locked up without ceremony. A handful, all that was left of a once flourishing staff, stood by. The many who had been aided by the bureau's services were represented only by the picket line.

Before the bureau closed, Lawson supervised the packing of FEPC records for shipment to Washington.

He jerked a thumb toward the packing cases.

"There's many a victory over Jimcrow recorded there," he said. "Who knows if they'll stay victories now?" 12-15-45

Committee victories began to bounce even before the key was turned in the lock, Robert Jones, FEPC senior examiner, said.

He won an up-grading case for a Negro in the Brooklyn Navy Yard only a few months back. He heard just a few days ago that that decision has already been reversed in view of the shutdown.

R.F.C. TAKES OVER

The Reconstruction Finance Corp. is taking over vacated FEPC offices. A few RFC clerks were already at work there yesterday while Lawson's staff was doing final packing.

Jones looked at the RFC wistfully.

"The RFC spends more money in a week than we did in a month," he reflected.

On the picket line were representatives of the CIO United Auto Workers, the Communist Party, the International Fur & Leather Workers, the Negro Labor Victory Committee, the People's Committee and the National Negro Congress.

Lawson blamed public inertia for their failure to make the agency permanent up to now. He predicted that when people feel the full effects of growing layoffs, there would be heightened pressure behind the campaign. 12-15-45

Jones said the closing of FEPC will cause people of other countries to doubt America's sincerity when she proclaims a wish for democracy all over the world.

While the offices were shutting down, the Independent Citizens Committee of Arts, Sciences and Professions, headed by sculptor Jo Davidson, sent a wire to President Truman urging issuance of a new executive order for continuation of FEPC and extension of its powers and authority.

FEPC Stymied

Washington Post (D.C.)

The President's firm insistence that employment practices within Federal agencies be maintained on a thoroughly fair and non-discriminatory basis is a proper and heartening one. So is his order instructing the FEPC to investigate employment practices in wholly reconverted industries as well as in continuing war industries. But, although this somewhat broadens the scope of the agency's authority, it does not give it the essential means with which to carry its important responsibilities into execution. The FEPC has left, for all its operations throughout the balance of the fiscal year, exactly $63,606. Only its facade remains. It has neither the personnel nor the power to make more than a gesture in the direction of eliminating discrimination from the country's economic life. 12-24-45

The members of the FEPC are well enough aware of this impotence themselves. After outlining the limited program they feel capable of undertaking, they candidly disclaimed in a statement issued last Monday that this could be considered "a substitute for effective, full-scale enforcement of the national policy against discrimination. After nearly five years of experience, the committee concludes that the cure for the long-standing evils of inequality in industrial opportunity lies solely within the hands of Congress." This is the long and the short of it. There is nothing much that the President can do about it—except to press vigorously for congressional action on the long-pending bill to establish a statutory Fair Employment Practice Commission. Only Congress can create an effective enforcement agency.

In Congress, the proposal to do this has been bottled up in committee by a combination of politics and pusillanimity. Southern Democrats have kept the measure from going to the floor for a vote; Republicans, although piously applauding the FEPC principle, have conspicuously refrained from signing the discharge petition necessary to dislodge it. Just a short time ago, a Republican caucus came forth with the following splendid statement: "We believe that equality of opportunity should be available to all, regardless of race, creed, or beginning. Every individual should be afforded an opportunity to prosper according to his talents, his ability and his diligence subject only to a like right for his neighbor." 12-24-45

Republican Congressman Charles M. LaFollette commented on this declaration with characteristic forthrightness. Observing that he usually differed from his party's leadership "not in words, but in interpretation of their meaning and in the choice of means to implement the words used," he said: "I believe that the pending legislation for a permanent FEPC in its present form is not only a proper but a necessary means for implementing the policy laid down above. The necessary signatures to the discharge petition to give the House a chance to pass on this legislation now can be obtained only from Republican members, since a saturation point has practically been reached in Northern Democratic members. I think the Republican Party should furnish these signatures from its members so as to bring the legislation to the floor; and that, furthermore, it should furnish, from its membership, the majority of the votes necessary for the passage of that legislation."

The logic of this is simply unanswerable. The Republicans have the means to put into effect what they have long espoused. They cannot escape responsibility if they fail to do so. The need for genuine enforcement of fair employment practices is urgent now during the reconversion period. The situation presents the Republican members of the House with an opportunity and an obligation. 12-24-45

Hats Off!

12-9-45

PM takes its hat off today to Rep. Charles M. LaFollette (R., O.) for laying it right on the line to the more rock-ribbed members of his Republican Party. LaFollette, gagged in the impossible effort to swallow the nation's talk-one-way-and-vote-another "platform," spoke up and said it was high time the Republicans became "the radical party in America and not the conservative." Particularly, he wants to see his party rescue the legislation for a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee, which is buried in a House committee. If enough Republican votes can be won, this victory for democracy can be achieved. LaFollette has sounded a clarion call in the struggle. P.M. N.Y.N.Y.

FEPC in Washington Area Adjusts 446 of 600 Cases

The Afro-American Baltimore, Md. 12-8-45

(This is the first of a series of four articles on FEPC Activities in the Washington Area.)

Although 600 complaints have been handled by Region IV of the FEPC, covering Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, and the District of Columbia, according to Joseph H. B. Evans, regional director.

Mr. Evans said that his office, which closes on Dec. 15, had adjusted and closed 446 complaints leaving 122 still to be adjusted, 6 alienage cases, 16 involving railroads and 10 which have been referred to the Central Office for further handling.

CTC Case a Highlight

A FEPC hearing on the discriminatory hiring practices of the Capital Transit Company attracted more public attention than any other case in the District.

The records show that for two years FEPC conducted negotiations with the transit company in an effort to obtain the employment of colored workers as bus and street car operators.

The efforts of the FEPC culminated in a two-day hearing, which revealed that colored workers had applied for the jobs but that none had ever been hired. However, a directive ordering the company to discontinue its biased policy was halted by Presidential order as copies were about to be placed in the mails. 12-8-45

Paper Tube Company Obeys

A second case handled by FEPC in the District involved the Stone Paper Tube Company, 900 Franklin St., N.E. The committee charged that the company carried a discriminatory advertisement calling for white workers.

FEPC reports that because of its protests the company withdrew the discriminatory advertisements and subsequently hired and promoted colored workers.

A third case involved the Washington Terminal Railroad Company, which was accused of denying to colored workers in the yards equal opportunity for promotion with white employees.

48% Colored

FEPC reports that the Terminal company has four main divisions including the Railroad Yards, Roundhouse and Machine Shops, the Union Station employees and the accounting and clerical staff. Altogether 48% of its employees are colored.

Both men and women work in the yards where they service passenger equipment. Some of the men earn salaries in the upper brackets and are regarded as the company's most important 'employees. 12-8-45

In the Roundhouse and Machine Shops, colored workers are employed as helpers, and while there are no colored mechanics, FEPC reports the master mechanic stated definitely that "if a colored machinist applied for work and met the requirements, he would not hesitate to employ him."

No Clerical Employees

In the Union Station, colored workers are employed as Red Caps, baggage handlers and in the custodian service, but there are no colored workers employed in clerical or white-collar jobs either there or in the business and accounting offices.

FEPC reports that the Terminal Co. is an example of an organization which employs colored workers in the proportion of almost one-half its total force but questions whether qualified colored workers would be given an opportunity for work of a clerical or white collar nature.

No Colored Operators

FEPC reports that the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Company has hired colored employees as clerks, coin-box collectors and managers of separate business offices maintained in Washington.

However, it says that the crux of the problem has been its refusal to hire colored telephone operators. 12-8-45

Although telephone companies in New Jersey and New York have hired colored telephone operators the Washington office has refused to lift the ban, FEPC reports.

ROGERS SAYS:

No National FEPC Until Jim-Crow Financial Interest In Washington Is Broken

The Pittsburgh Pa. Courier

By J. A. ROGERS

(The views expressed in this column are those of the writer and do not necessarily express the editorial opinion of The Pittsburgh Courier.—The Editors.)

PRESIDENT TRUMAN, in a telegram to the Midwest Action Committee, has again endorsed the FEPC. "I have said it before," he says, "and I say it again, that there is no room in America for racial discrimination." There are those who doubt the President's sincerity and say he's only playing politics. What I see here, however, is that he has come out openly for the FEPC and that it takes some courage to do so since most of his party, not to mention many Republicans, are against it.

Mr. Rogers

Because of the present setup in Washington, the President's stand is going to count for little, though. The moneyed powers that profit from jim crow are very strongly entrenched in Congress and have been since the Ku Klux Klan succeeded in putting them there about 1876.

Let me take you back a little in history. In the early part of the last century began a clash between the industrial North and the agricultural South for profits and for political power. The South with its slave labor, and its slaves counted for congressional representation, had a very advantageous position, which the North tried to break. Those Northern concerns with investments in slavery were, however, Southern in sentiment and fought the abolitionists tooth and nail.

NEW YORK CITY, which has changed so much in our day, was pro-slavery. As late as 1860, it was the center of the trade in bootlegging Negroes from Africa for sale in the South. It had no less than eighty-five ships engaged in this trade. In 1860, Lincoln lost New York City by 29,192 votes and his defeat there was attributed to the powerful slave-bootlegging interests.

For the past fifteen years or so, certain Northern manufacturers have been moving to the South to be nearer raw materials and the ill-paid labor common to most agricultural regions. Goods manufactured there are then sold in the North with its higher price of labor and higher wages at great profit. The result is that it is to the interests of such to make alliance with the jim-crow interests of the South to keep labor there so divided that their high profits will continue. The antics of certain Southern legislators therefore please mightly these profiteers.

WHEREVER YOU find that segregation pays you will find a fight to maintain it. In New York City where enormous profits are made from herding Negroes into one area, the chambers of commerce fought hard to prevent the FEPC, and used such clever arguments that they were able to get support from many whites who had long posed as friends of Negroes and of democracy.

I am convinced from what I see of the workings of the FEPC in New York that at last we have the answer to this centuries-old problem. In the past year I see Negroes appearing as employes in unexpected places. In big department stores that had only Negro elevatormen, I see dark Negro girls working as cashiers beside white girls. One big store has even a Negro assistant executive in the personnel department, Lemuel L. Foster. 12-28-40

IN ONE GREAT public institution where in twenty-four years I had never seen a Negro face, I now see them everywhere. And, instead of the race riots that even "friends" of the Negro predicted, colored and white seem to be getting on well together and becoming friends.

And what has caused this basic change? A wise law. Employers are afraid of the law and of adverse publicity. Moreover, a national FEPC will only be good sportsmanship. Every Southern State has a law favoring race discrimination and several Northern ones, too. Since that is so, give the other side a chance, too.

BEFORE WE get a national FEPC some way will have to be found to break the jim-crow financial interests which center in Washington. And the only way I see is an aroused sense of justice, not to mention self-interest, in the thinking people of this Nation.

America must watch her step. In my own time I have seen this race question emerge from local status to a national one and increasingly to international importance. The world is getting smaller. Just as problems in Germany, Japan, Argentina affect us, so our problems affect other people, too.

ONE THING is certain: Unless there is an FEPC or some other wise step there is trouble ahead. De Tocqueville, writing in 1835, said, "If ever America undergoes great revolutions, they will be brought up by the presence of the black race on the soil of the United States; that is to say, they will owe their origin not to the equality but the inequality of conditions." Twenty-six years later his words came true in a bloody economic revolution, whose good effects were later largely undone by the Ku Klux Klan. His prophecy still holds true, therefore, it seems to me that those who expect to be alive another twenty years would do well, in their own interests, to stop listening to the siren voices of those who promote racial, that is to say, national discord in any way.

P. S.—For mention of Jo Anderson in last week's column see page 11 instead of page 1, "Century of the Reaper."

Truman Hit on FEPC Stand

P.M.

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5. - Extreme dissatisfaction among Negroes with the Truman Administration's handling of racial discrimination problems is evident in the resignation of Charles H. Houston, prominent Negro attorney, from the Fair Employment Practices Committee.

Houston resigned with a blast at the White House for blocking the issuance of a directive against the Capital Transit Co., Washington's transportation system, for discrimination in the hiring of Negroes. 12-5-45

In the same statement Houston hit hard at the Administration's whole record on discrimination. He said: N.Y., N.Y.

"My resignation from FEPC is a protest action not merely against our treatment in the Capital Transit case, but against the Administration's persistent course of conduct to give lip service to matters of eliminating racial discrimination in employment since V-J Day, while doing nothing to make this policy substantial."

In the transit case Houston charged the President not only had blocked action, but had ignored the Committee's request for a conference. 12-5-45

"Without notice to the Committee or a chance for the Committee to present its views," he protested in his letter to Truman, "you ordered the Committee not to issue the decision.

"Nov. 25 on behalf of the Committee I wrote you asking that you give the Committee opportunity to confer with you. To date we have not received even an acklowledgment of the letter."

F.E.P.C. On Volunteer Basis Hinted Even If Congress Withholds Funds

Courier Journal

Louisville, Ky.

Demonstration Plans Reported

6-26-45

Washington, June 25 (AP)—The fight over continuing the Fair Employment Practices Committee reached new intensity today with the agency's head saying it may continue operating on a volunteer basis even if Congress gives it no money.

Chairman Malcolm Ross said the F.E.P.C. may go ahead regardless and another member, a Negro, reported plans for a demonstration "more dramatic than a march on Washington."

This member, Milton P. Webster, international president of the A.F.L. Brotherhood of Sleeping-Car Porters, told a news conference he couldn't disclose the nature of the demonstration now but "we are not going to take it lying down."

Liquidation Fund O.K.'d.

He referred to slow action on legislation for a permanent F.E.P.C. The House Appropriation Committee today approved a resolution earmarking a $125,000 fund for liquidation of the agency in the three months after July 1.

There weree still two faint chances that F.E.P.C. might get operating funds:

1. A Senate Appropriations Committee amendment to the war agencies bill to give F.E.P.C. $446,200 for the 1946 fiscal year.

2. The House Appropriations Committee resolution to give F.E.P.C. $125,000 to liquidate itself, which F.E.P.C. supporters undoubtedly will try to convert into a regular operating fund if it ever gets to the floor.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt discusses the F.E.P.C. on Page 8.

6-26-45

Martin Sidesteps 'Fight.'

The Senate amendment, which may come up tomorrow, requires a two-thirds approving vote since the rider would provide funds for an agency lacking statutory authority. F.E.P.C. exists now only through an executive order of the late President Roosevelt establishing it to prevent employment discriminations during the war period because of race, color or creed. It has been financed from executive funds but under a Congressional resolution it cannot have any more White House money after June 30 unless Congress in the meantime has given it an appropriation.

The House Appropriation Committee resolution would have to be O.K.'d by the House Rules Committee, which in the past has refused to approve legislation to make F.E.P.C. permanent.

In this connection, the House minority leader, Representative Martin (R., Mass.), told an F.E.P.C. group that while he personally favored such a measure, he was "not in a position" to direct the House minority members in a "fight for it" unless the Republican conference authorizes that action.

Jap Interest Is Cited.

6-26-45

The House Rules Committee declined even to consider F.E.P.C. legislation today because of an informal agreement not to take action on F.E.P.C. bills until all members have been notified.

Contending their agency had helped spur war production and bring about defeat of Germany by integrating minority groups in the war effort, F.E.P.C. members told newsmen the agency's functions should be carried on to speed victory against Japan and to insure full employment opportunities in peacetime.

Boris Shishkin, F.E.P.C. member and A.F.L. economist, said the Army has discovered widespread use by the Japanese of racial prejudices in this country in an attempt to persuade Asiatic peoples that "this is a white man's war."

MARQUETTE, MICH.
MINING JOURNAL
Cir. D. 9,281
JUN 15 1945

When the President said he would follow in the line his predecessor had taken he became committed to support of a fair employment practice bill. He has done the best he could for such legislation. But he has been turned down by the House rules committee, which has voted six to six against permitting the issue to go to the House.

This is final, unless the committee changes its decision or unless a petition signed by 218 members forces the bill out for a vote. As such a petition has been in circulation for over a month without much success in securing signers, such a course of action seems to be unlikely. The legislation is probably put to one side for this session.

If the House had been given a vote and had passed the bill its hardest going would still have been ahead. Its primary purpose is to prevent discrimination against Negroes. It has, therefore, the same purpose as the anti-poll tax legislation that has twice been passed by the House, only to be killed off in the Senate.

The same forces in the Senate that have killed the one bill would be almost certain to kill the other. They would perhaps prefer to give the Negroes the vote to giving them equal rights with whites in the shops, factories and businesses of the country.

Support of this proposal by the late President was not the least of the factors that gave him the votes of most of the Negro electors in the northern states, and that made efforts by the Republican party to win back their allegiance of no avail. It follows that the political implications of the sidetracking of the legislation are not to be taken lightly.

This is particularly the case because at the same time a Congress dominated by the Democrats refuses to further legislation of the kind Governor Dewey, under the terms of a bill enacted by the New York legislature, with his support and approval, has been taking steps to make the new state law effective. How it will work out in practice is one of the "iffy" questions. But the Governor and the Republicans in the New York legislature have given the Negroes what the Democrats have denied them in Washington.

Job Bias Act Faces Liquidation Despite Warnings

P.M.

PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 26.—As strong groups in both Houses of Congress made plans to liquidate the FEPC (Fair Employment Practices Committee) at an early date, members of the President's Committee on Fair Employment warned that abolition of FEPC would cost additional lives in the war with Japan and create troubles at home.

The Senate was scheduled to begin consideration today of the War Agencies Appropriations Bill. A committee amendment provides $500,000 for FEPC, but it will require a two-thirds vote to pass.

As if this hurdle weren't enough, two Southern Senators, Theodore Bilbo of Mississippi and Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina, have announced that they will filibuster to prevent the committee amendment from coming to a vote. Bilbo said he is prepared to talk until Christmas.

N.Y., N.Y.

A Lot of Bluff

While the poll-taxers have in the past shown their skill in filibustering, FEPC supporters believe their talk is pure bluff and are prepared to call it. Because if the Bilbo-Johnston bloc filibusters on the FEPC amendment, it will be holding up funds not only for that one agency, but for some dozen or more other agencies that even it admits are essential for winning the war.

6-26-45

The bill covers appropriations for the Office of Strategic Services, War Production Board, Office of Defense Transportation, Smaller War Plants Corp., Alien Property Custodian, Office of Inter-American Affairs, War Shipping Administration, Office of Scientific Research and Development, War Labor Board, and Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion. Funds for those organizations and others in the bill run out at midnight Saturday.

Anticipating termination of FEPC, the House Appropriations Committee yesterday voted the agency $125,000 to wind up its affairs. The resolution read that the money was to be used for "completely terminating the functions and duties" of FEPC.

Amendment

An amendment provided that if the FEPC is continued by Congress then the $125,000 may be used for its continued operation until additional funds are voted.

At FEPC offices it was said that the $125,000, while normally about a three-month appropriation, would run the organization for less than a month and a half on a termination basis.

Despite the official position of the Republican Party supporting FEPC, the party's top spokesman in the House, Minority Leader Joe Martin of Massachusetts, refused to make good his party's pledge when a score of FEPC backers called on him yesterday and urged that he lead House Republicans in forcing the permanent FEPC bill out of the Rules Committee.

He explained that, while he would vote for the bill if it got to the floor, he could not lead the drive to pry it out of the Rules Committee by the petition route "without specific authorization" from the Republican House conference. He passed the buck to the Senate and indicated the party's pledge was wiped out by its defeat at the polls last November.

Order Still Effective

Malcolm Ross, FEPC chairman, told a press conference yesterday that Congressional failure to appropriate FEPC funds would not set aside President Roosevelt's Executive Order under which FEPC was originally established. That order, he pointed out, provided that Government agencies and war contractors may not discriminate against Negroes and other minority groups in employment.

6-26-45

"Even though our organization no longer existed, Government agencies and war contractors would be required, under the Executive Order, to continue the non-discrimination policy set out in that order."

He said, however, that enforcement of the policy would suffer in the absence of an organization to conduct hearings and in other ways obtain compliance.

Anna Arnold Hedgeman Heads Fine Staff on Permanent FEPC

The Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh Pa. 12-1-45

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Some of the country's foremost women have become affiliated with the national council for a permanent FEPC, with headquarters in Washington. It might be interesting for readers to know something about these women, who have been fighting the good fight for minority groups, while some of them are members of the other more fortunate group.

Mrs. Anne Arnold Hedgeman, executive secretary, is well known throughout the country because of her extensive lecture tours. A distinguished woman of color, Mrs. Hedgeman is a graduate of Hamline University in St. Paul, Minn., and has held important posts in the YWCA in several Eastern cities, including New York. She has served as consultant on racial problems for the Department of Welfare, New York City, and was field representative of the National Office of Civilian Defense for two years.

MISS WILKINSON INTERESTING

Miss Sidney Wilkinson admits to having been a jack of all trades during her professional career. She has been secretary to Jascha Heifetz, famous violinist, assistant to the municipal director of music in Baltimore, secretary to the vice president of Macy's in New York, business manager for a sculptor among other activities. Born in Baltimore, she is assistant to Mrs. Hedgeman, at which she is most adept.

Margery F. S. Taylor, legislative representative, is a Wellsley College graduate of '38, with graduate work being done at Miami U., in Oxford, Ohio. She has been on the faculty of the University of Michigan, Western College, and George Washington University, as well as having been secretary at Boston's YWCA. 12-1-45

During the war, Miss Taylor spent twenty months ferrying planes from factory to field as a civilian pilot stationed at Dallas, Texas. The planes included single and twin-engine trainers, dive bombers, pursuits and twin engine commercial transports.

OTHER MEMBERS

Other members of the group include Mrs. Elise Bond Hopson, born in Cambridge, Mass., whose schooling was done at Temple U. in Philadelphia, where she worked as stenographer in the office of the famous attorney, Raymond Pace Alexander.

Miss Elsie W. Lewis is a native Washingtonian, was at one time secretary to the librarian at Howard University, as well as being a public stenographer for many years. 12-1-45

Miss Ida Fox of New York City is a former Government employe who has worked with the Minority Workshop in Washington.

Beatrice B. Schalet, another New Englander, has a background in advertising the social service fields in New York City. She was one of the pioneer organizers of Interracial Consumers Cooperative movement in Washington (which is now doing a million-dollar business in groceries alone).

Houston Refutes Reasons Given by Truman for Blocking FEPC Directive

The Afro-American.
Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON.

Charges that President Truman is giving only "lip service" to the question of democratic employment, were reiterated by Charles H. Houston here Friday in answer to the President's letter defending his action in blocking the FEPC directive to the Capital Transit Company.

Following Mr. Houston's recent action in resigning in protest against Presidential blockade of the FEPC directive, Mr. Truman, on Friday wrote the former FEPC committee member, accepting his resignation and setting forth his reasons for White House interference. 12-15-45

Mr. Truman pointed out in his letter that when the Government seizes property during a strike it "shall be operated under the terms and conditions of employment which were in effect at the time possession of such plant, mine, or facility was so taken."

Attacks Statement

Mr. Houston attacked this statement on the grounds that it was not based on historical fact. The Government, he said, took over the Philadelphia Transit Company at a time when colored workers were not employed as street car and bus operators and later upgraded them to these positions.

He likewise declared that since the Fair Employment Practice Commission was a legally-constituted Government agency the Capital Transit Company should be just as much subject to its directives as those of the Office of Defense Transportation which took over and assumed operation of the company during the recent strike.

Action of the President in blocking the FEPC directive to Capital Transit ordering the employment of colored bus and street car operators was in effect, a nullification of the validity of the FEPC Mr. Houston said.

He demanded that the President owed the people of the country an explanation as to just what is the status of the FEPC and declared that the immediate clarification is necessary. 12-15-45

Held Up "Temporarily"

Additional text of President Truman's letter is as follows:

"In view of this apparent contradiction between the law and the order which the Fair Employment Practice Committee proposed to issue, it was thought best to suggest that the order be temporarily postponed.

"The property was not seized for the purpose of enforcing the aims of the Fair Employment Practice Committee, laudable as these aims are, but to guarantee transportation for the citizens of Washington and vicinity.

"As anxious as I am for Congress to pass legislation for a permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee, I cannot contravene an Act of Congress in order to carry out the present Committee's aims.

"Under the circumstances it was felt the issuance of the proposed order would prove injurious to the accomplishments desired by all of us who are honestly interested in promoting the welfare of minority groups."

Mr. Houston answered the President at a meeting of the National Emergency Meeting on Jobs and Security in the National Press Club auditorium. 12-15-45

He also read an excerpt from a letter Senator Douglass C. Buck (Rep., Del.) had written to the National Federation of Constitution liberties expressing the opinion that no action should be taken on FEPC legislation until the summer of 1946.

The FEPC had scheduled a meeting for last Friday, but a quorum could not be obtained and the meeting was postponed. Malcolm Ross, chairman of FEPC, who was recently released from John Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, where he underwent an operation, was at his office briefly on Friday. He was in communication with members of the committee trying to fix a date for the postponed meeting. 12-15-45

Commenting on the resignation of Mr. Houston, Representative Adam C. Powell (Dem., N.Y.) said:

"Mr. Houston's resignation helps to focus public attention on the double-dealing, double-talk with which the FEPC is now being embalmed.

"His resignation will be of no effect unless the people bombard the White House with letters and telegrams urging that a clear-cut policy be immediately arrived at concerning the future activities of the temporary FEPC."

Howard Commends Houston

Said Perry W. Howard, Republican national committeeman for Mississippi:

"I most highly commend the lofty and dignified attitude of Mr. Houston in resigning from a paper organization, whose existence recently has been farcical.

"I predict that other colored leaders will see the light and begin to get their heads together and take stock at this critical moment of whither are we going in the matter of our civil and political rights."

Administration backers contend that in the Philadelphia situation the racial angle was a definite part of the controversy and one of the reasons contributing to the strike, where in the Washington case the strike was called over wages. 12-15-45

The issue of the employment of colored workers, they say, was foreign to the main issue and the president was correct in his analysis of the legal points involved.

FEPC--A Model of Truman Tactics

Daily Worker

By MAX GORDON

WORDS OK—BUT ACTIONS BAD

Southern polltax Democrats are reported to be very angry with President Truman.

They are angry with him, it seems, because instead of killing the Fair Employment Practices Committee, he has permitted it to gasp out its life, a hopeless cripple, at a slightly more leisurely pace.

That's the classic result of appeasement. Reaction simply will not be appeased. 12-22-45

Truman's political method in relation to the FEPC, as on all other issues, has been one of appeasement of reaction. Pressed by political necessity, he has made verbal gestures of support to the policy of wiping out job discrimination. But his real moves have been in the direction of killing that policy.

A TYPICAL TRUMANISM

His most recent move in "extending the life" of the agency is a sample. He has decreed that the emergency war powers continue until next June 30 even though it was set up as a wartime agency, and the war is over. This is hailed by many as a "liberal" move, and it is "condemned" by the tories as an effort to save FEPC. 12-22-45

But here are the jokers:

1) The agency has been stripped of all power except that of investigation. Even the power to issue orders against companies that discriminate, which it had until the Truman directive Thursday, has now been taken away from it.

2) It has almost no money left with which to operate and Truman has made no effort to get it more. New York, N.Y.

3) Numerous other strictly wartime agencies set up by the President, such as the War Labor Board, had their lives extended long ago.

4) No mention is made in the order of the fight for a permanent FEPC.

Several previous efforts to get the President to extend FEPC's life legally were rebuffed by him. He finally acted on it apparently after a couple of liberal Republicans in Congress had threatened to take the play away from him. By his action, he has also tried to take the edge off his responsibility for its death.

ANTI-NEGRO STAND

Removal of FEPC's power to issue orders was foreshadowed by Truman's conduct in the case of the Capitol Transit Co. in Washington. The FEPC had ordered the company to stop discriminating against Negroes and to hire some as drivers. Truman cancelled the order.

His excuse was that the company had been seized by the government because of a strike and the government had to maintain the same conditions of employment as existed before it took over the company. In other words, if the company violated the law, the government had to continue doing so.

But his most recent executive order shows that the excuse was false, that he was paving the way for ending all orders by FEPC against discrimination.

Last summer, when the country was rocked by the bitter battle in Congress over the appropriation for the temporary FEPC, President Truman was compelled to take a stand. It was a typical one.

The issue that raged at the time was whether or not the existing FEPC would get the funds to continue. The President left that issue strictly alone but made a very strong statement about the need for a permanent FEPC. Thus, he avoided collision with the tories, who were trying to scotch the temporary FEPC, and "satisfied" those who were trying to save FEPC.

MUST SAVE FEPC

Since that time, he has been discreetly silent on the permanent FEPC though the fight for it has become the central issue in the drive against job discrimination.

The President's directive highlights the necessity for stepping up the fight for the permanent FEPC. The House Labor Committee has approved the measure for setting it up. The House Rules Committee, dominated by Republicans and polltaxers, has it bottled up. 12-22-45

To get it to the floor of Congress requires a discharge petition. So far, the petition has about 160 signatures. It can get the remaining 60 primarily from northern Republicans since the bulk of the northern Democrats have signed.

C. P. Calls for Fight to Save FEPC

Daily Worker

The following statement of the Secretariat of the Communist Party, U.S.A., on the threatened extinction of the Fair Employment Practice Committee was issued yesterday.

The Fair Employment Practice Committee, established by Franklin D. Roosevelt to enforce the right to jobs for Negroes and other minority groups, is now threatened with destruction.

Bitterly fought by the Rankins Bilbos and the reactionary Republicans, FEPC has been systematically strangled for lack of adequate appropriations. Recently President Truman dealt it a heavy blow when he suppressed a directive, ordering the Capitol Transit Co. in Washington to employ Negroes.

Legislation to make FEPC a permanent weapon of democratic America in the fight against fascist prejudice has languished in the House Rules Committee. Of the 218 signatures needed on a discharge petition to force a vote in Congress, 60 are lacking. Without immediate action, the bill will be lost.

Meanwhile the Administration has decided to close seven of the present 10 regional offices of FEPC Dec. 15. Staff workers will be reduced from 117 to 27. No provisions have been made for such cities as New York, or Pittsburgh, or the whole of the South. 12-12-45

FEPC contributed splendidly to war production, to the military victory against the fascists, and to the democratic health of the nation. More than 1,500,000 Negroes were drawn into industry. Discrimination in upgrading was to a degree eliminated and Negro workers were employed not only in unskilled, but in semi-skilled and skilled trades.

These developments were reflected in a strengthening of the labor movement, as masses of Negro workers joined the CIO and the AFL. In contrast to World War I, when Negro and white workers were pitted against each other, the great influx of Negro workers into the unions advanced the solidarity of the working class and gave a new health and vitality to the trade union movement. N.Y., N.Y.

The labor movement today is thus far better prepared for monopoly capital's current attack against the workers' living standards and their organizations.

The big monopolists understand the role of FEPC in strengthening labor. In order to defeat the demand for wage increases, big business seeks to weaken labor organization by destroying the alliance of labor and the Negro people, by provoking internal strife in the basic industries. Thus they aim to kill FEPC, exclude Negroes from industry, and establish pre-war and pre-FEPC conditions in employment.

The same forces in Congress and the nation who are trying to hamstring the labor movement are lined up solidly behind the campaign to kill FEPC. They are the ones who cut FEPC appropriations to the bone. They are the ones who today are ganging up to prevent the bill for a permanent FEPC from becoming law.

President Truman has more and more identified himself with these forces in his position on FEPC. He did not fight for sufficient appropriations for the old FEPC nor has he fought for the enactment of the permanent FEPC. His policy of lip-service while following a course of inaction has aided the Rankins, Bilbos and the monopolists in blocking the permanent FEPC.

The Communist Party calls on labor and the Negro people, and on all democratic Americans who support the principles of fair employment practices as advanced by Franklin D. Roosevelt, to take action to save FEPC. The fight to maintain and extend the war-time gains of the Negro people is a fight to maintain the alliance of labor and the Negro people. At stake are the rights and welfare not only of the Negro people, but of the whole working class and the people.

Send resolutions, telegrams, and letters to your Congressmen protesting the suppression of the Capitol Transit order and demanding that the bill for a permanent FEPC be immediately called up on the floor of Congress and supported.

President Truman Stopped Order to Capital Transit

The Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

By JOHN H. YOUNG III, Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Fair Employment Practices issue blew up in the Truman Administration's face last Monday as Charles H. Houston, militant Washington attorney, asked President Truman to accept his resignation from the FEPC executive committee. 12-8-45

The letter of resignation denounced the Truman administration for forcing FEPC to withhold an "end discrimination" directive it was about to issue to the Capital Transit Company here. In strong language, the communication to the President declared that the issue of the case itself, in which FEPC was about to direct Capital Transit to place Negro workers on the platforms of street cars and buses in Washington, paled into insignificance when placed alongside the attitude of the Government toward minorities.

Deriding the foreign and domestic ideology of the administration, Attorney Houston warned that "the failure of the Government to enforce democratic practices and to protect minorities in its own capital makes its expressed concern for national minorities abroad somewhat specious." 12-8-45

On Nov. 21 of this year the Government was forced to seize the Capital Transit system in order to end a wildcat strike that had crippled the Capital. The FEPC executive committee, after conferring with its legal staff, arrived at the conclusion that the Government-appointed Federal manager, in control after the seizure, had the power and duty to enforce the National policy of nondiscrimination. On this basis, FEPC prepared a directive ordering the hiring of Negroes by the now Federally-controlled Capital Transit system.

WHITE HOUSE AIDE EXPRESSED OBJECTION

On Friday, Nov. 23, Attorney Houston is said to have called the White House and informed Guy Richardson, the Federal manager, of the FEPC decision to issue the directive.

Mr. Richardson is alleged to have expressed vehement objection to the issuance of the directive on the grounds that it "would embarrass the Government." Attorney Houston denied that issuance of the directive was inconsistent and insisted that the Federal manager, Mr. Richardson, was required to operate the Capital Transit system under the non-discriminatory employment policy established by Executive Order 8802 and 9346 even without a directive from FEPC.

SOUGHT WRITTEN INSTRUCTION 12-8-45

Attorney Houston said that on the next day, John R. Steelman, White House aide, called him on the phone and said that President Truman had directed Steelman to notify him not to issue the directive. Upon receiving verbal orders from Steelman not to issue the directive, Attorney Houston demanded written instructions. According to Attorney Houston, Steelman promised to send the written instructions over that afternoon.

Mr. Houston said that evidently the White House had changed its mind about issuing written instructions, for various other members of the White House staff called Houston corroborating the fact that Mr. Hassett, another White House aide, had been with Steelman when President Truman told him to stop the FEPC directive. Attorney Houston insisted that he would issue the directive unless he received the written instructions from President Truman ordering him not to do so.

Mr. Houston's decision to resign came after repeated efforts to see or hear from President Truman after the White House had turned "the red light" on the directive, he said. 12-8-45

HOUSTON'S LETTER

In commenting on President Truman's failure to communicate with him, Mr. Houston noted in the letter of resignation:

"Without notice to the committee (FEPC) or a chance for the committee to present its views, on Nov. 24 you ordered the committee not to issue the decision. November 25, on behalf of the committee, I wrote you asking that you give the committee opportunity to confer with you. The return registry receipt shows the letter delivered to the White House Nov. 26. To date we have not received even an acknowledgment of the letter."

The resignation letter was dated Dec. 3. Added fat to the fire is the report that the White House is busily engaged in getting out another FEPC directive before the effect of Houston's resignation forms in the public's mind. It is believed that the new FEPC directive will be toothless in that it will give the right to investigate but not to issue directives. The source declares that with this new FEPC directive, the White House hopes to cloud the issue on the Capital Transit incident.

FEPC

SAYS TRUMAN HAS DONE "ABOUT FACE" 12-8-45

Meanwhile, political observers are saying that if the President himself did give the order holding up the Capital Transit case, it means that he has done a complete about-face on the executive orders set up by the late President Roosevelt; that such action takes all of the sincerity out of Truman's many public utterances declaring his support for FEPC. 12-8-45

FEPC Office Shuts; 250 Cases Pending

P. M.

Washington Also Is Unable to Handle Them, N. Y. Director Warns

N. Y., N. Y.

The New York Regional office of the FEPC (Fair Employment Practices Committee) has closed its office here with about 250 cases involving charges of discrimination in employment unsettled. This was one of seven regional FEPC offices closed Saturday because of lack of funds.

Only three regional offices will be operated: in Detroit, Chicago and St. Louis. Work of the office here will be transferred to the top office in Washington. 12-16-45

But, says Edward H. Lawson, Jr., who was New York Regional Director, it will be virtually impossible for the 250 pending discrimination cases to be handled by the Washington office. The Washington headquarters, he explained, because it lacks funds, lacks a staff to handle cases from the closed regional offices.

State Responsibility

Thus the job of eliminating discrimination in employment because of race, creed, color or national origin is shifted wholly to the State Commission which enforces the State anti-discrimination law. Malcolm Ross, FEPC Chairman, said he thought the records and reports of the New York FEPC office would be of use to the State in enforcing the State law, and had offered to make them available to SCAD. 12-16-45

However, he continued, the State Commission had not availed itself of the offer thus far and the records and reports were being packed and shipped to Washington. It was also learned that the New York FEPC office had, because of slashes in its funds, released about 60 employes experienced in fair employment practices work.

'No. 1 Project'

Some weeks ago, a SCAD official announced that recruiting a staff for SCAD was "our No. 1 project." But, according to FEPC people here, SCAD has not hired a single former FEPC worker. A spokesman for the State Commission said Henry C. Turner, Commission chairman, was out of town, and, pending his return, no statement would be made on why Ross's offer of the FEPC records or why qualified FEPC workers were not hired by the State anti-discrimination body.

Break Between Truman, Congress Flares Out

The Birmingham News
Birmingham, Ala.

Discord Due To President's Stand On FEPC, USES, Job Bill; Southerners Are Most Irked

12-21-45

BY CLAIR JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—(AP)—President Truman's relations with Congress took on a new air of tension today, particularly among Southern Democrats.

Some of the latter declared "an open break" now exists between the chief executive and themselves. They told a reporter they saw little hope for improvement in the situation when legislative work is resumed next year.

THE NOTE OF DISCORD was prompted by these three White House developments yesterday as members began heading home for the holidays:

1. Mr. Truman's news conference assertion that he would express himself forcibly soon on legislation calling for returning of the U. S. Employment Service to the states within 100 days. Several congressmen interpreted this as meaning either a veto or another verbal blast at Congress is in the offing.

2. Release of letters to key lawmakers in which the president termed "unacceptable" a House substitute for the so-called "full employment" bill the Senate has passed. 12-21-45

3. Issuance of an order authorizing the Fair Employment Practice Committee to investigate and report on employment practices in private industry until next June 30.

Mr. Truman's actions were termed "a political blunder" by Rep. Gibson (D., Ga.).

TALKING TO A REPORTER GIBSON ADDED:

"It was just like waving a red flag in our faces. He should have left well enough alone. Now we have an open break, just like with the late President Roosevelt."

AS FOR THE LATER FACT-FINDING SESSION, General Motors already has announced its intent to bolt the hearings if the board decides to make G. M. profits a part of the inquiry.

The union is demanding a 30 per cent wage increase.

Mr. Truman, whose statement that "ability to pay is always one of the facts relevant to the issue of an increase in wages" precisely supported the UAW argument, also observed that: 12-21-45

"In view of the public interest involved, it would be highly unfortunate if any party to a dispute should refuse to cooperate with a fact-finding board."

Industry as a whole has opposed use of company books as evidence in fact-finding and has argued uniformly that prices and profits should not be related to settlement of wage questions. In the oil industry's fact-finding board, which planned to resume hearings today, company spokesmen also threatened to quit the hearings if issues of profits and prices are introduced.

Negro Vets Return to Find FEPC in Danger

The Worker

By EUGENE GORDON

Negro vets are returning to America from far-flung battle fronts to discover that, in their absence, the prejudice-fighting FEPC has been nearly completely junked by Congress.

The press which talks falsely of a "crime wave" among the Negro people says little of the fact that only three of the 10 original wartime FEPC offices which are empowered to combat race prejudice will be operating after Dec. 15.

The regional office in the Empire State Building will have ceased its excellent surveys and hearings throughout New York and New England. The Philadelphia regional office will be closed. And so on, with the five remaining regional offices scheduled to be closed in a few days. N.Y., N.Y.

MIDWEST FEPC

Chicago, Detroit and St. Louis wartime FEPC regional offices will continue—for a while a bow toward the FEPC ideal conceived by President Franklin D. Roosevelt. His "Freedom from Fear," among the Four Freedoms for which we fought the Nazis, becomes just another phrase, as far as the Negro worker is concerned. President Truman, who once was prodded into saying a good word for FEPC, says nothing any more to remove the Negro's haunting fear of economic security.

But does anyone think the returned Negro vets—mechanics, aviators, truckmen—will meekly accept a "no Negroes for hire" policy?

The wartime offices remaining open will not help the black workers, or the Jewish worker, or any other minority-group worker. True, these offices will hold hearings on discrimination against them in industry, but only for "the record."

What has happened to the wartime FEPC is a warning of what can happen to the bill for a permanent FEPC. HR-2232, sponsored by Rep Mary Norton (D-NJ), which gathers cobwebs in committee. It can be forced out for debates and vote ONLY if enough Representatives sign House Discharge Petition No. 4. This petition needs 60-odd signatures to make the needed total of 218. 12-9-45

SOME SHADY FRIENDS

While progressive constituents of reactionary Republicans House members are lining up signatures for discharge Petition No. 4, everybody should notice the slick trick which self-styled "friends" of the permanent FEPC are trying to slip over. The National Council for a Permanent Fair Employment Practice Commission has not only stopped trying to get action on HR-2232; it is trying to get everybody else to stop. The reason it gives is that to continue pressure on the House is useless but that pressure on the Senate might bring favorable results. 12-9-45

That is a plausible lie, dangerous to the whole idea of a permanent FEPC. For if the bill goes to the Senate before having first gone through the House, it will go minus the strength necessary for it to stand up against the murderous attack bound to follow. The reason why it CAN be passed in the House is that sentiment and strength for it have already been built up there. That is why HR-2232 must receive more, instead of less, support.

Truman Hits Federal Discrimination

President Gives FEPC Power Only to Investigate Complaints

12-29-45 Pittsburgh Courier — Pa.

WASHINGTON—Training both barrels of a new FEPC executive order on discriminating Government agencies, President Truman last week issued an ultimatum calling for the end of racial barriers in civil service employment. Warned by the FEPC committee, only a few days ago, that Government agencies were the biggest violators of the anti-discrimination law, President Truman lost no time in declaring his position in this matter.

"It has come to my attention that a considerable number of loyal and qualified employes have been refused transfer and re-employment by employing agencies solely because of race and creed. This condition is a violation of civil service rules which have been issued by the President and is in violation of existing law," the President charged.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Scoring President Truman's action in setting up FEPC purely as a fact-finding agency as doing "infinite harm by delaying action on permanent FEPC legislation," the FEPC wired the Chief Executive last week, "Failure of your Administration to act in these crises destroys hope and faith of millions of Americans who face joblessness."

BOWLES' LETTER INFLUENCED MOVE

While it is conceded that the FEPC committee first brought this matter to the President's attention, it is felt that a strong letter from Chester Bowles, Administrator of OPA, to the commissioner of the Civil Service Commission, had great influence on the President's sudden announcement. Bowles charged that other agencies were sending out calls for help and then demanding that they be "male, white and gentile." Bowles charged that even the Civil Aeronautics Administration, under the overall supervision of Henry Wallace, was practicing this discrimination in re-employment. 12-29-45

In his letter to the Civil Service commissioner, Bowles strongly urged:

"I therefore strongly urge you and the Civil Service Commission to take whatever steps are necessary to keep open employment opportunities for our Negro employes when they are no longer needed by the OPA."

EMPOWERS COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE ONLY

Regardless of the impetus behind the Presidential message, it was clear that the President looked upon the situation as a serious one. Even as he levelled these charges against agencies of the Government, President Truman announced a new FEPC directive which would give that committee the right to investigate and report on discrimination in private industry.

Previously, the FEPC committee had said that it would need a new directive in order to carry on operations. This new directive seemed to be in line with the committee's wishes. 12-29-45

Continuing his charge against Government agencies, the President placed the responsibility for discrimination on the agencies as he warned:

"I am writing to request that you make careful analysis of your personnel policies, procedures and practices in order that you can assure me that they are in accord with national law and policy in order that all qualified workers in existing temporary war jobs will be considered fairly for appointments without distinction because of race, creed, color or national origin.

"In addition, your full cooperation with FEPC in all matters affecting the employment of minorities in Government is requested."

Immediate reaction to the Presidential decree was that the new order left FEPC without power to issue directives. Many considered this a blow to the hopes for any teeth in FEPC as administered by the temporary committee. It has been pointed out that the new order gives FEPC the right to "investigate and report" and not to take any action.

It was also pointed out that while the President called for a report on discrimination in Government hiring, he did not warn of penalties to be inflicted if the condition remained.

Nationalists Work for Coalition Based on Hate...

Try to Unite GOP Tories, Democratic Bigots

By Tom O'Connor

The basic political strategy of the Nationalist movement in America—as explicitly stated in editorials of the Newspaper Axis—is to achieve a new coalition of forces opposed to the "internationalist" and "New Deal" policies of the Roosevelt-Truman wing of the Democratic Party and a smaller progressive section of the Republican Party.

The Nationalists believe that by playing upon the respective prejudices, hates, and fears of reactionary Southern Democrats and reactionary Northern and Western Republicans, they can gather enough strength to snow under the liberal, humanitarian wings of both major parties—those Democrats and Republicans who are concerned with securing a permanent peace by genuine international co-operation, and who believe in social progress at home.

Ultimately, the Nationalists hope to formalize this reactionary, isolationist coalition in a Nationalist Party—discarding the name "Republican" because of Southern prejudice against it. Pending the development of the right circumstances for such a move—the right circumstances being postwar economic chaos—they are anxious to develop informal working alliances on particular issues wherever possible.

Pledges Scrapped

The knifing of FEPC (Fair Employment Practice Committee) by a coalition of white-supremacy Southern Democrats and anti-labor Northern and Western Republicans in Congress—each group forswearing its party's pledged word in the last national elections—is an instructive example of the manner in which the basic Nationalist political strategy can work out.

That Man Bilbo has been fronting for the coalition in his Senate filibuster. But the best illustration of the technique by which FEPC was assaulted is to be found in the speeches of two members of the House, a Southern Democrat and a Midwestern Republican—the rabid Nationalist John Rankin (D., Miss.) and Clare Hoffman (R., Mich.).

There were two possible approaches to the mobilization of opposition to FEPC.

One was to play upon race prejudice—principally in respect to the Negro, but also, and importantly, in respect to the Jew.

'Plot' Is Seen

The other was to play upon the dislike of business for any governmental regulation of its affairs, and the belief that continuation of FEPC would place further limits on business's cherished "right to hire and fire" in whatever arbitrary fashion it chose—a "right" already restricted by the upsurge of unionism under the Roosevelt administration.

The common denominator between these two approaches, as is so often the case, was the cry of "Communism." On the one hand, FEPC was represented as a Communist plot to turn the country over to the Jews and Negroes. On the other, it was represented as a Communist plot to extend governmental "regimentation" of business.

Rankin worked one side of the street, Hoffman the other. Each yelled "Communism," but Rankin slanted his remarks to appeal primarily to Jew-baiters and the white supremacy crowd, while Hoffman directed his fire principally to the business man.

The remarks of each on the House floor about FEPC were printed prominently and at length in the Chicago Tribune. From there they filtered out to the vermin press, and were printed over and over again in the pro-fascist sheets of small-fry fuehrers the country over—along with suitable original material.

The timing was perfect. Rankin and Hoffman were blowing off at every opportunity on the subject of FEPC during March and April. This gave their speeches time to reach the readers of the vermin press—and don't think there aren't a lot of them—before the issue came up for final disposition.

It's Picked Up

F.E.P.C.

For example, on Apr. 27 Rankin made a speech calling FEPC "Earl Browder's baby," "the most dangerous piece of totalitarian, Communistic legislation ever proposed in the Congress of the United States," which would "stir up race trouble such as this country has never known," and so on. It was reprinted in toto in the June 16 issue of X-Ray, anti-Semitic sheet published in Muncie, Ind., by Court Asher, one of the group of pro-fascists indicted for sedition.

On Apr. 30 Hoffman made a long and rambling speech on FEPC. He worked up to his climax by saying the bill was needless because the Jews were running the country anyhow, and Negroes had more jobs than they deserved. But the nub of his argument was that a permanent FEPC would be a "snooping" agency with "arbitrary" power to interfere in the affairs of businessmen, and should be rejected for the same reason the Wagner Act should be repealed: "it would penalize employers."

Omissions

It was this latter part of Hoffman's speech which the Chicago Tribune chose to play up in its news columns the next day. The vermin press picked that up, too. For example, the Gentile News, a Chicago hate sheet whose name is self-revelatory, printed the Tribune story verbatim as the lead article in its May issue (see cut).

There were certain significant omissions from the list of anti-FEPC propagandists: certain important Nationalists and important Nationalist organs abstained from the fight.

For example, the New York Daily News, bellwether of the Nationalist flock most of the time, said nothing against FEPC editorially, did not play up anti-FEPC stories in its news columns. In fact, one of the few creditable editorials appearing in the News in recent years was the one favoring passage of the Ives-Quinn anti-discrimination bill in New York. That's right, favoring.

The fact that the News laid off on FEPC can be rationally explained only by its large Negro circulation. Professor James H. Sheldon of the Non-Sectarian Anti-Nazi League, which has done an excellent job assembling evidence of the Nationalist fight against FEPC, points out that the News has been pretty tender about Negroes ever since its Harlem circulation started dropping off a couple of years ago because it was playing up "muggings."

The Tribune, while it did not editorialize against FEPC—Chicago's South Side is the second largest Negro community in the country—did give a big play to anti-FEPC stories when they had a "business regimentation" angle.

Pegler Comes Through

But if some Nationalist propagandists sat this one out, Hearst and his hatchet-boy, Westbrook Pegler, made up for any loss. The great poison pen artist of all time wrote for publication in last Tuesday's Hearst papers one of the great scurrilous columns of his career, with FEPC as his butt.

He was thinking, said Pegler, of going into business. He was going to borrow money from John Hartford, head of A&P, and open a school where a person with a good old American name like Smith or Jones could learn how to join a minority and get a job. He was going to have a supply of burnt cork on hand, and give courses in Negro and Jewish dialect. He gave samples of the dialect; they were so raw that even the New York Journal-American, not ordinarily squeamish about Pegler's mouthings, edited them out (but the Washington Times-Herald did not).

The appeal to race prejudice probably could not by itself have built up sufficient strength to kill FEPC in Congress. With both major parties pledged to it, with President Truman supporting it, with labor (except for the Jim Crow railroad brotherhoods) for it, and the bulk of the Catholic and Protestant as well, as Jewish clergy behind it, the race-hatelers were faced with a losing battle.

Pressure Helped

It is unquestionably the fact that the racists were able to pull reactionary Northern and Western business groups and their lobbyists into the anti-FEPC alliance which has brought them to the verge of victory.

The success of this coalition of reaction would give the Nationalists increased confidence that their basic political strategy is sound, that the time soon will be ripe to discard the progressive wing of the Republican Party and unite its Tory wing with Southern Bourbon Democrats in a Nationalist Party, dedicated to isolationism and to turning the clock back six or seven decades in domestic affairs.

Minority Plea For FEPC

My deep concern for the future of our country moves us as churchmen, firm in the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, to appeal to America's reason—stop this tirade of hate! Washington Post

It is a brazen betrayal of our democracy, an empty victory at Berlin, a cruel mockery of the sacrifices of the Pacific and a ridicule of peace efforts made at San Francisco that the United States Senate should tolerate the propagation of race hate and religious intolerance by the gentleman from Mississippi and his collaborators. Wash., D.C.

Is it that the military victory, won at such costs on the battlefields of Europe, has even now been swallowed up by a political and economic victory for Hitler in the Congress of the United States? Then why do we tolerate this talking marathon of hate? Where is the Daniel that will read the "handwriting on the wall"?

Is race so dear and a political career so sweet that they must be purchased with the enslavement of one third of the Nation?

With one third of the Nation badly clothed, poorly housed, and begging bread, how can we expect to keep the peace? 7-8-45

While headlines give accounts of heroic exploits of Negro GIs on the Marianna Islands in their battle against the Japanese, demagogues in high places ridicule their patriotism and sacrifice by appeals to racial prejudice at home and by a forthright effort to destroy the agency that stands between these men and their future security.

The abolition of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice through the denial of funds for its continuation will be the most disastrous political, economic and moral blunder of our time. It is sowing the seeds for race riots, strikes and national disunity. There is no conflict more filled with revolutionary potential than that which can come when people of different races, different religions and different nationalities are forced to compete for too few jobs, for too little bread, outside the protection of the law. The moral corruption and final collapse of Germany have shown plainly what can happen to a people intoxicated with racial superiority and indoctrinated with prejudice and bigotry.

FEPC's appropriation must be restored. This committee must not die. It stands as an economic bill of rights for our people and for other oppressed minorities. It is more than a declaration of good intentions: it is an effective law of the land. 7-8-45

Southern Foes Of FEPC Study Compromise

Richmond Times-Dispatch

Proposal Provides Temporary Agency

7-8-45

WASHINGTON, July 7—(AP)—Southern foes of the Fair Employment Practice Committee considered today a suggested compromise to keep it alive as a temporary agency so as to block a move to make it permanent.

The compromise was advanced informally by a Southern House leader in an effort to break the month-old FEPC deadlock that has tied up funds of 16 home front war agencies in a $752,000,000 supply bill for the fiscal year already a week old.

It provides for granting the FEPC as now constituted—a temporary agency created by executive order and lacking legal power to enforce its orders—a "token" fund of perhaps as much as $200,000 to continue to operate.

The agency's budget estimates for the fiscal year are $599,000.

By allowing FEPC to continue without giving it legal backing, the agency's foes believe they might slow down a drive to give it permanent and legal status.

Lying on the speaker's table in the House is a discharge petition which, if signed by 218 members, would bring to a vote legislation setting up a permanent commission intended to prevent employment discrimination because of race, creed or color. The petition now has approximately 130 signatures.

Friends Decline to Sign

Many friends of FEPC are displeased with the permanent proposal because they believe it is too far-reaching and have declined to sign the discharge petition.

But said the originator of the compromise, who declined to permit use of his name, said that if the deadlock continues and it becomes apparent that FEPC will get nothing at all, "the heat will be on and we may find ourselves with a permanent FEPC."

"It would be far better to give them a small amount to operate without legal power to act, than to have them set up as a statutory body," he explained.

The compromise was advanced as House Appropriations Committee members indicated they may reverse themselves and recommend that the House accept the $250,000 voted by the Senate, or at least a part of it. That would break the deadlock, provided it could get the support of the House itself.

There has been no record vote in the House on the FEPC this year, its opponents blocking it through parliamentary moves.

Should the FEPC deadlock holding up the funds for the war agencies continue much longer, thousands of employees of those agencies will go payless for work performed since July 1. Congress has authorized the agencies to operate in anticipation of funds to be provided eventually but has not allowed them to do any actual spending.

F.E.P.C. Faces Weakening Compromise

Southerners May Let Temporary Status Remain

7-8-45

By the Associated Press.

Washington, July 7.—Southern foes of the Fair Employment Practices Committee today considered a suggested compromise to keep it alive as a temporary agency to block a move to make it permanent.

The compromise was advanced informally by a Southern House leader in an effort to break the month-old F.E.P.C. deadlock that has tied up funds of 16 home-front war agencies in a $752,000,000 supply bill for the fiscal year already a week old.

Agency Asks for $599,000.

It provides for granting the F.E.P.C. as now constituted—a temporary agency created by executive order and lacking legal power to enforce its orders—a "token" fund of perhaps as much as $200,000 to continue to operate.

The agency's budget estimates for the fiscal year are $599,000.

By allowing F.E.P.C. to continue without giving it legal backing, the agency's foes believe they might slow down a drive to give it permanent and legal status.

Lying on the Speaker's table in the House is a discharge petition which, if signed by 218 members, would bring to a vote legislation setting up a permanent commission intended to prevent employment discrimination because of race, creed or color. The petition now has approximately 130 signatures.

Foes Fear 'Heat' Coming.

Many friends of F.E.P.C. are displeased with the permanent proposal because they believe it is too far-reaching and have declined to sign the discharge petition.

The originator of the compromise, who declined to permit use of his name, said that if the deadlock continues and it becomes apparent that F.E.P.C. will get nothing at all, "the heat will be on and we may find ourselves with a permanent F.E.P.C."

"It would be far better to give them a small amount to operate without legal power to act, than to have them set up as a statutory body," he explained.

House May Backtrack.

The compromise was advanced as House Appropriations Committee members indicated they may reverse themselves and recommend that the House accept the $250,000 voted by the Senate, or at least a part of it. That would break the deadlock, provided it could get the support of the House itself.

There has been no record vote in the House on the F.E.P.C. this year, its opponents blocking it through parliamentary moves.

Should the F.E.P.C. deadlock holding up the funds for the war agencies continue much longer, thousands of employes of those agencies will go payless for work performed since July 1. Congress has authorized the agencies to operate in anticipation of funds to be provided eventually but has not allowed them to do any actual spending.

FEPC Comment

The house of representatives of our Connecticut state legislature, Republican controlled, failed to pass Connecticut Fair Employment Practices legislation during the 1945 session of that body . . . That is now "water over the dam."

Atlanta Con.—Ga.

It seems to me that those of us who would logically benefit most in the event of passage of this legislation, should now focus our attention objectively on the national scene—and the bill of wider scope—taking care to cultivate political friendships in every honorable way we know—and not commit the error of forcefully implying that some certain political party is "all good" and some opposing political party "all bad" (—and that applies to Connecticut as well as Alabama)—it's better psychology to look at it this way, because we are here dealing with the 48 states in the voting arena. For America is 48 states! 7-9-45

It might be well, too, for us to carefully consider the good sense of thinking, and speaking, and writing about this national bill in such terms as will not convey too much of the "social legislation" idea, as this expression in itself can be easily misinterpreted to mean "social equality"—a thing anathema to some of our southern congressmen, even when intended in its purely academic sense. We are not using this term in any of our letters to congressmen, because we want to be very clearly understood.

Capital Pickets To Hit FEPC Ban

Daily Worker

Daily Worker Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14 (UP). — A one-hour noontime picket line before the White House tomorrow will remind the President that eight regional offices of the FEPC have closed down, it was revealed today by executive secretary Marie R. Harris of the Washington Council of the National Negro Congress.

Various CIO and AFL locals will cooperate with the NNC in picketing the White House. Picket signs, said Secretary Harris, will bear the following legend: 12-15-45

"Dec. 15, 1945, eight regional offices of FEPC close today. What about your campaign promises?" "You promised a Permanent FEPC as candidate, as President, keep your word." "Action—not talk or double-talk, Mr. President. We demand a Permanent FEPC." "Who did you consult: Polltaxer James Byrnes or the American people?" N.Y., N.Y.

Meanwhile the President, scheduled to meet with the FEPC today, postponed the meeting to Monday, chairman Malcolm Ross said.

Meanwhile John Brophy, director of CIO Industrial Union Councils, and a member of FEPC, told the Daily Worker that discriminatory hiring has grown by leaps and bounds ever since Congress failed to give FEPC adequate funds.

The Washington Council of the NNC recently wired the President protesting against his recent request to the FEPC for a survey designed to show whether the FEPC still is needed.

FEPC Breaks Up Jimcrow Working Units in Navy Yard

Daily Worker, N.Y., N.Y.

10-22-45

Jimcrow working units in the New York Navy Yard, Brooklyn, have been broken up as a result of intervention by the Federal Fair Employment Practice Committee (FEPC), it was announced yesterday by Edward Lawson, FEPC Regional Director.

Several segregated units were established last year by former Commandant Monroe Kelly, shortly after FEPC had succeeded in getting qualified Negroes promoted to mechanic-instructors' jobs in the drillers' shop for the first time in the yard's history.

A complaint against this form of discriminatory work assignment, which limited promotional opportunities for Negro workers, was lodged with the FEPC by Local 137 of the United Federal Workers of America.

Following investigation last April by Examiner Robert Jones of the FEPC's Regional staff, Rear Admiral F. A. Daubin, new Commandant of the Yard, was requested to eliminate this type of unfair employment practice. At that time the Admiral replied that "special effort will be made to convert these into mixed units."

A final report from the Yard last week indicated all work units are now operating with completely mixed staffs. This was confirmed by Kenneth Murphy, official of the Navy Yard local of the UFW. 10-22-45

National Party Opportunity

Charleston, S.C. News-Courier

Whatever national political party shall consent to separation of the white and negro races while insisting that there shall be no discrimination in wages for equal services whether the workers be white or colored, and shall insist that all people shall have equal protection under the laws of the states, is likely to obtain the political adhesion of the majority of Southern white people.

Were the national Republican party to proclaim the right of employers to hire whom they prefer and were it to denounce the FEPC as a federal policy, a vigorous and aggressive Republican party would instantly take the field in South Carolina. The cotton mill workers as well as executives want "protection against the pauper labor of Europe" and they also want protection against the entrance of negroes into the weave rooms, the card rooms, the spinning rooms in which white women work.

The workers are in complete sympathy with textile corporations in owning villages in which the families of white operatives are segregated. 8-11-45

The national party that would have the support of Southern white people can get it by recognizing these facts. Meanwhile, we repeat, Southern white people are more than willing that the negroes shall prosper by building and carrying on industrial and commercial plantations, hotels and banks.

'Iniquitous Law'

To The News and Courier:

The FEPC will soon be law, but what law! News-Courier

This iniquitous law deprives the states of one of their fundamental privileges in governing themselves; also it deprives the individual of his God given right to employ whom he wishes. It is a stench in the nostrils of decency that our own people should have consented and helped to continue the New Deal, the Roosevelt administration, in power. Charleston, S.C.

The time is coming when you ladies and gentlemen, will have to stand for negroes alongside of you in pullmans, in day coaches, on buses, in hotels and restaurants, the negro and the white children in the same schools, presided over by teachers of both races, riding there in the same school buses, sharing the same seats and lunches, getting used to each other, and finally inter-marrying, the Haiti I have told you about several times before. 9-24-45

The country will be alive with spies, just as it is now and worse, hunting up persons to prosecute, finding them and sending to jail those who can't pay their fines.

It is pure Nazism, no use to call it by any other name.

There is not a pint of "guts" left in South Carolina, and a bucket could hold all in the South.

You are today beholding the utter failure of "Planned Economy" and people suffering for necessities in the midst of plenty.

You have allowed your legislature to pass numerous socialistic laws, so as to follow the New Deal idea of spend, spend. 9-24-45

The governor is on the New Deal side. He will profess to be willing to oppose the FEPC but he is not man enough to call a special session of the legislature whose object would be to advise the federal government that the FEPC is non-effective in South Carolina, and that the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the federal constitution are null and void.

The state and the county governments should be seized by our leading men and a provisional governor be selected who would act as above and organize the state for resistance, if necessary.

BILBO ASSAILED BY GOLDSTEIN

N.Y., N.Y. Sun

Nominee Wishes He Could Impeach 'Crackpot.'

9-22-45

Speaking last night at an anti-Bilbo meeting in Brooklyn, Judge Jonah J. Goldstein, Republican-Liberal-Fusion candidate for Mayor, called the Senator from Mississippi a "crackpot" and said that he wished it were within his power to impeach him. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Four Freedoms Committee in the Newman Memorial Church, Macon street and Throop avenue, Brooklyn.

Bilbo "may represent a narrow viewpoint in Mississippi, but he assuredly does not represent an enlightened America," Goldstein said. "Unfortunately I cannot have him removed from public office in Washington; but I assure you and I pledge you that I will not permit Bilboism to be practiced either openly or under cover here in the great city of New York.

"We have made a start in the State of New York in the fight against discrimination in employment. We have the Ives-Quinn act. New York city can help carry out the provisions and intent of that act by establishing a New York city anti-discrimination committee.

"The committee I propose would be appointed by the Mayor. Its first duty would be to examine the practices of all departments of the city, and all agencies subsidized by the city. This would include our schools, hospitals, housing projects, and the social service and health agencies of our city. It would be the duty of the committee to make recommendations to abolish all discriminatory practices." 9-22-45

Three hundred persons, most of them Negroes, attended the meeting. A resolution urging the immediate impeachment of Bilbo was adopted and copies were sent to Senators Robert M. Wagner and James M. Mead with the request that they start impeachment proceedings at once.

Declining an invitation to speak at the rally, Bilbo had requested that "your whole mongrel congregation should be told: "I absolutely have no apology to make for anything I have said."

Near the platform last night was an unoccupied chair in which there was a sign: "Reserved for Senator Bilbo."

President Lays Down 21-Point Peace Program

Memphis, Tennessee

Asks For USES Under Federal Jurisdiction

9-14-45

BY HARRY S. McALPIN
(Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, — (S N S) — President Truman made an urgent plea for enactment of legislation for a permanent FEPC in his 18,000 word message to Congress today. The FEPC was one of the 21 points covered in the message filled with recommendations for congressional action.

The President indicated that he is continuing the present FEPC during the transition and reconversion period. Set up as a war time agency many fears had been expressed that the FEPC was on its last legs following victory over Japan.

Mr. Truman recalled that during the years of war production we made substantial progress in overcoming many of the prejudices which had resulted in discriminations against minority groups. He said many of the injustices based upon considerations of race, religion and color were removed. Many were prevented he declared." Perfection was not reached, of course, he said but substantial progress was made. In the Reconversion Period and thereafter we should make every effort to continue this American ideal. It is one of the fundamentals of our political philosophy and it should be an integral part of our economy.

He also called on Congress for enactment of "full employment" legislation and Federal employment benefit payments to provide weekly unemployment compensation up to a maximum of $25 throughout the country

President Truman requested that the Fair Labor Standard Act be amended to substantially increase the minimum wage level of 40 cents an hour, which he said was now "obsolete," and asked that the provisions of the Second War Powers Act be extended to perserve "the powers necessary" to keep the economy stabilized and "permit us to enter into the difficult period of readjustment without the threat of a disastrous price collapse."

USES UNDER FEDERAL CONTROL

The President also called on Congress for continuance of the United Employment Service under federal control until the expiration of the Mobilization Act June 17, 1947, and asked for an increase in appropriations for the employment service to help find jobs for demobilized veterans and displaced war workers.

His 21-point program further suggested a traditional tax bill; a public works program; countinued induction of men 18 through 25 for periods of two years; a broad and comprehensive housing bill; and legislation strengthening the Department of Labor and giving it supervision of collective bargaining, conciliation and voluntary arbitration.

FEPC Fights All Discrimination

Daily Worker

Manhattan, N. Y.

Editor, Daily Worker: 12-17-43

In most articles on the FEPC and in the Communist Party's "Call for Fight to Save FEPC," most all the stress is laid upon protection to the Negro people.

I know very well that their's is the greatest suffering through discrimination but I feel that the broader interpretation of the powers of FEPC should be explained in our press so that we can all see how it directly concerns each one of us. I have lived in Reading, Pa., and Waterbury, Conn., and have witnessed discrimination against both Negroes and Jews in the large industrial plants of these cities. In many sections of our country, Roman Catholics are discriminated against in the same way, and we have all heard of the discrimination against Jehovah's Witnesses, etc. N.Y., N.Y.

I hope that we will all get together to save FEPC. There is not one of us who can afford to say, "It does not concern me, personally."

Walter White Tells Senate Group That Unemployment Would Aid Ku Klux Klan

Iowa Bystander
Des Moines, Iowa 9-6-45

Washington, D. C.—Negro workers, who got employment largely in emergency in war time plants and in temporary civil service jobs, need the Full Employment Bill passed by Congress, Walter White, NAACP secretary, told the Senate Banking and Currency committee August 29.

Not only does the Negro need the bill, but his fortunes as a wage earner will form "an important aspect of the whole problem of post-war employment," Mr. White said.

"While there has been a decided increase," he said, "in the number of Negro workers employed in what we consider continuing industries, the majority of Negro war workers have been employed in strictly war production. According to the War Manpower Commission's most recent reports, the Negro labor force in essential employment is distributed in the following categories: Shipbuilding, 192,000; Aircraft production, 116,000; Ordnance and communication equipment, 122,000; Basic metals and rubber, 103,000; other munitions, 160,000. From these estimates it will be observed that 600,000 Negro workers are concentrated in the indusries that now suffer most severe cutbacks with the coming of peace.

Suffer Cutback

"With reference to the post war prospects of the Negro worker it may be noted, on the basis of a comparison of the 1940 and 1944 figures on the occupational and industrial distribution of the Negro labor force that (1) the Negro has made his greatest employment gains in those occupations (especially semi-skilled factory jobs) which will suffer the severest cutbacks during the post war period; (2) further, he has made his biggest advances in those industries (especially the 'metals, chemicals and rubber' group) which may experience the greatest proportionate post war declines.

"Finally," testified the NAACP secretary, "it also should be noted that in those occupations and industries in which the Negro has made his greatest employment advances, he was generally among the last hired. Therefore, under seniority rules he is more likely to be laid off than the average worker in these occupations.

Mr. White pointed out that widespread unemployment and suffering would speed the organization and influence of organizations like the Ku Klux Klan. The NAACP head also urged the enactment of the bill for a permanent FEPC, the national housing bill, S. 1342, the Kilgore unemployment compensation bill, the Pepper amendment to the Wage-Hour act, the Wagner-Murray-Dingell social security bill, and a federal anti-lynching law.

FEPC Head Deplores Trend Toward Downgrading Negroes

PM New York, New York
9-24-45

He Sees Minorities Relegated to Menial Jobs In Industry

By Donald Ross

Malcolm Ross, chairman of the Federal Committee on Fair Employment Practice, warned yesterday that reconversion has brought a "disturbing" nationwide trend toward a downgrading of Negroes, Mexican Americans, and other minorities to menial jobs in industry.

Ross added that it is "too early to make a final judgment" of this trend, but he described himself as not being optimistic. He spoke at a conference on "Federal Responsibility for guaranteeing Fair Employment Practice" held in the Hotel Commodore by the New York Committee of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Discrimination

Ross cited an eastern war plant which recently cut back all its several hundred Negro employes except 12, who were retained as porters. In this same city, which he didn't identify by name, Ross charged that reconverting plants already have advertised for "white" or "white Gentile" workers only.

"To permit minority group workers now to become a disproportionately large part of the unemployed, even though it is transitory unemployment," Ross said, "is to invite their use as strike-breakers and to inject into already delicate situations the added racial hazard." He recalled that Negroes were used as strike-breakers after World War I.

In 1919, Ross said, there were many race riots as a consequence of reconversion, but he added that "we are in much better shape now because of our war experience, the Fair Employment Practice Committee, the "excellent" attitude of unions and many employers.

The all-day conference, described as an educational gathering, consisted of four panel discussions in the morning, a luncheon at which reports were given on the panels by their respective chairmen, and a dinner at which Ross spoke.

Gain During War

Ross pointed out that in July, 1942, Negroes comprised only 2.5 per cent of those employed in industry, according to War Manpower Commission figures. In November, 1944, he said, the figure had risen to 8.3 per cent, and on the day the Japs surrendered every twelfth American war worker was a Negro or Mexican-American.

Malcolm Ross

The pressing question, he said, was whether this new labor force represented a "merely temporary wartime use of the industrial skills" of this group or whether their skills would be taken over "for the building of peace and prosperity."

The questions discussed by the four conference panels were:

¶ Do the Constitution and the General Welfare Demand Federal Guarantees of Fair Employment Practice?

¶ Do Full Employment and Industrial Stability Demand Federal Guarantees of Fair Employment Practice?

Necessary for Unity

¶ Do National Unity and Justice for American Minorities Demand Federal Guarantees of Fair Employment Practice?

¶ Do the American Creed and the American Conscience Demand Federal Guarantees of Fair Employment Practice? 9-24-45

Reports on the panels showed that there was general unanimity that a permanent FEPC was necessary. Panel Chairmen reporting were Charles Houston, vice chairman, American Council on Race Relations; Morris Rosenthal, vice president, Stein Hall & Co.; A. A. Liveright, executive secretary, American Council on Race Relations, and the Rev. Robert W. Searle, executive director, Greater New York Federation of Churches.

Mrs. John Hammond Jr., and Dr. Channing Tobias were co-chairmen of the conference.

Ballot on FEPC Blocked in House

The Afro American
Baltimore, Maryland

WASHINGTON—(NNPA)—Opponents of a permanent Fair Employment Practice Commission forced adjournment of the House after a 16-minute session last Wednesday to prevent possible action on legislation creating such an agency. 10-6-45

Representative Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, chairman of the House Labor Committee, had intended to use a parliamentary maneuver to bring the measure to the floor.

Approved 74 to 31

The motion to adjourn was made possible moofbcl6j by Representative William M. Whittington (D., Miss.) and was approved by a standing vote of 74 to 31.

Mrs. Norton told reporters that the attempt to bring the bill up under "calendar Wednesday" rules represented a new strategy to try to get a permanent FEPC. On "calendar Wednesday" bills on the calendar may be called up.

Since the Norton bill has been reported by the House Labor Committee, it is on the House calendar, but its consideration has been blocked because the House Rules Committee will not give it a rule making it a special order of business.

Leaving for Europe

Mrs. Norton said she is leaving for Europe soon to attend an international labor meeting.

"Supporters of the FEPC bill will not try to bring up the bill until I get back," she said. "That won't be for a couple of months."

She said she was "confident" that the measure will be finally acted upon "before many weeks are past."

Southern opponents of the FEPC countered with the statement that parliamentary maneuver or no, it will be "many, many weeks"—if ever—before Mrs. Norton can get her bill before the House.

Bilbo Puts Finger On Evil of FEPC

PM

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22.—Sen. Theodore (The Man) Bilbo (D., Miss.) has put his finger on the trouble with the bill to create a permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission (FEPC). Said Bilbo: "The FEPC is dedicated to equality." 12-23-45

Bilbo also "revealed" Friday that the proportion of Negro Federal employes in the capital ran almost 10 per cent higher than the Negro ratio throughout the country and therefore suggested that the FEPC seek employ for white workers who are victims of race discrimination.

It was then no problem for the Senator to jump over to his other favorite topic as he blamed Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt for FEPC activity. He proclaimed that it was this black mark against her which occasioned his protest a day earlier over her nomination as a delegate to the Assembly of the United Nations Organization. N.Y., N.Y.

Despite Bilbo, legislation for a permanent FEPC seems closer to enactment today than ever before. Sen. Dennis Chavez (D., N. Mex.) promised that he will move for a vote on it immediately after the holiday recess. Indication that the GOP would side with Administration Democrats to upset Bilbo & Co. was given by Sen. Wayne Morse (R., Ore.), who said the Republicans were ready now to debate and vote on the bill.

Mr. Irving Potash, Mgr.
Furriers Joint Council
New York, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Potash:

I feel sure it is unnecessary to remind you personally of the evils of a permanent Fair Employment Practice Act and the effect it will have upon employment relations throughout the country. So long as such a bill is before Congress, it behooves all of us to do what we can, through our Senators and Congressmen, to defeat it.

The Southern States Industrial Council is doing everything it possibly can to bring about the defeat of this measure. We are glad to report that practically every Senator and Congressman from the sixteen Southern States is vigorously opposing the Norton Bill, and will oppose any like bill which might be introduced.

Foes of FEPC: Some of the hate propaganda that is flooding the mails against enactment of a permanent Fair Employment Practice law. Employer groups, especially in the South, are sending such stuff out widely in a high pressure campaign. Letter to Furriers Joint Council, a CIO affiliate, was apparently sent under the impression it was an employers' organization.

By DOROTHY LOEB

Employer groups are campaigning feverishly to block enactment of a permanent Fair Employment Practices law and measures looking toward full employment and a stable economy.

Elaborate brochures, tracts with scare heads and specially prepared personal letters are flooding the mails in a drive that seems to center in the South but which also originates material from Chicago and Washington, D. C.

The "Southern States Industrial Council" of Nashville and the "National Federation of Apparel Associations" sent material (see photostats) out so widely that they included on their mailing list Irving Potash, manager of the CIO Furriers Joint Council. Potash and the Council are among the hardest fighters for the FEPC and for government action to assure jobs. Probability is that the "free enterprise" boys thought the Council was an employer organization.

Frantic "special bulletins" emanate from a "Conference of American Small Business Organizations" which has offices at 407 South Dearborn St., Chicago.

HYSTERICAL CLAIMS

The Conference, which claims to represent more than 300 organizations in over 260 different lines of industry sends out broadsides that summon Jimcrow supporters to arms with hysterical claims that enactment of an FEPC law would "legalize business persecution under the guise of anti-race discrimination." 10-16-45

"This is one issue which is not subject to arbitration or compromise because it is the cornerstone on which all free enterprise has been built," says one Conference special bulletin. "If you give up this fundamental right to hire and to fire, you may as well close your doors and quit business."

As might be expected, the Conference material, while concentrating fire against the FEPC, also includes a violent barrage against all proposed legislation that would give government aid in promoting jobs, controlling prices, preventing monopoly abuses or extending social security. 10-16-45

Conference literature lists Frederick A. Virkus, chairman, simply as president of the Virkus Co. Doned as treasurer of the Illinois Small Business Men's Association and H. Barry McCormick, treasurer, is listed as president of McCormick & Henderson, Inc. Other directors listed include O. E. M. Keller, president, Toledo Small Business Assn.; William J. Murray Stresses Wage Raises, Permanent FEPC

Daily Worker N.Y., N.Y.

11-9-45

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—CIO president Philip Murray declared today that refusing to grant wage increases to America's workers now means "opening the depression gates." Mr. Murray, in an article released by CIO, emphasized that the practical elimination of overtime and the unemployment of millions of war workers has brought on, according to President Truman's own calculations, a reduction in the national income of 35 billion dollars.

Murray laid emphasis on the Negro worker as "the chief victim of a notorious low-wage policy."

"Because of the evil bars of discrimination," he said, "the Negro industrial worker has been the chief victim of a notorious low-wage policy, a policy which is a cancerous growth in our economy."

Murray warned that "until we secure the establishment of a permanent FEPC, we face the fact that the wages of Negro workers will drop even lower as the wages of non-Negro workers go down."

Murray said the CIO would not cease its efforts until the FEPC receives permanent status.

Murray also drew from Truman's recent wage policy address to prove the obvious capacity of the large corporations to meet the wage and salary demands of labor.

"The issue of immediate and substantial wage and salary increases can be translated into the ever-present conflict between progress and reaction," he said. "Just as a permanent FEPC and the abolition of the polltax—issues on which the CIO will never rescind its efforts—are key issues in our battle for full social democracy, so are wage and salary increases the cornerstone of the battle for economic democracy."

THE FAIR PRACTICES ORDER

The New York Times

As a war agency the Fair Employment Practices Committee is on its last legs. Already ordered by Congress to wind up its affairs by June 30 next, it was yesterday deprived by Presidential order of its power to issue directives to private employers. At the same time, however, Mr. Truman made it plain that he did not intend to countenance racial or religious discrimination in Federal employment. In a letter addressed to heads of governmental departments and agencies he asserted that "a considerable number of loyal and qualified employes had been refused transfer and re-employment by employing agencies solely because of race and creed," pointed out that this action violated civil service rules and existing law, and insisted that "all qualified workers in existing temporary war jobs" be "considered fairly for appointments without distinction because of race, creed, color or national origin."

12-5-45

The question of whether or not a peacetime FEPC could be successful is in controversy. There can be no controversy, for anyone honestly committed to democratic principles, as to the policy President Truman has laid down. Until more employers—and, it must be added, employes—become wiser than they are today there will be some discrimination in private employment. In public employment there can be no such discrimination without violating not only rules and laws and the Constitution itself but the spirit of American democracy. President Truman, at a crucial moment, has taken a proper stand. 12-21-45

Shutdown Ordered From Washington

Atlanta Daily World-Ga.

11-15-45

The Fair Employment Practice Committee will close its field offices in New York, Philadelphia, Atlanta, San Francisco, San Antonio, Los Angeles, and Washington, D. C. on December 15, Malcolm Ross, Chairman of the Fair Employment Practice Committee, announced Wednesday. This move was made necessary because of lack of sufficient funds for the effective handling of cases in these offices, Mr. Ross said. "However," he added, "regional offices in Detroit, Chicago and St. Louis will be kept in operation."

The decision to close the seven offices and to concentrate FEPC attention on the reconversion problems of minority group workers in these three areas was made after discussions of the Agency's future held recently among members of the commitee. "FEPC is extremely reluctant to lose the able workers in the seven offices to be closed," Mr. Ross stated. "The personnel of these offices during the years of actual war performed a notable service in keeping the war plant gates open to all American workers irrespective of race, creed, color or national origin."

QUESTIONS AHEAD

"The months immediately ahead pose many questions in this field. Those plants which are reconverting to peacetime production ought as a matter of fair play and common sense to offer work opportunities to all applicants without favor or discrmination. Many employers and labor organizations learned during the war that tolerance is a keystone to economic stability. It is the hope of FEPC that these principles will be applied in the areas where the Committee's offices can no longer be maintained."

Dr. Witherspoon Dodge, regional director of the Atlanta office, said, "It has been a privilege to function as the instrumentality for affording the members of the minority groups in the South at least a small measure of that democratic protection of a worker's right to earn a living at his or her maximum skill which it is hoped will constitute a larger part of the democracy of the future."

11-15-45

SMALL APPROPRIATION

Congress cut appropriations for FEPC following a bitter filibuster and wrangling in commttees of both House and Senate a few weeks before the close of the 1944 fiscal year. A compromise was reached for a $250,000 emergency appropriation for the war agencies unit after Southern members of Congress and friends of the agency debated at length the merits of the FEPC. The appropriation was acknowledged as insufficient and immediate staff cuts resulted.

Despite President Truman's personal plea to Congress for a permanent FEPC, measures to promote the agency remain pigeon-holed or stalled in committee rooms.

Friends of FEPC have been urged in its automatically dying hours to keep up the fight for a permanent agency by putting pressure on representatives in Washington.

FEPC Faces Extinction; Plans Mass Hearings in 3 Cities

Daily Worker

New York, N.Y.

By ART SHIELDS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Faced with extinction FEPC is planning a final push against discrimination in three mass production centers.

Whether FEPC can go on after this will depend on whether President Truman issues a new executive order extending the agency and whether Congress passes legislation giving it permanent status.

As a result of dwindling funds, FEPC has been forced to order shutting down all but three regional offices.

11-15-45

But on the basis of investigations, these three offices, in Chicago, Detroit and St. Louis, will launch public hearings on racial discrimination in reconverted industries.

Wholesale discrimination against Negroes in motor, metal fabricating and other industries has promoted this new move.

BIAS AT FORD

Ford managers last week asked the U.S. Employment Service in Detroit to supply "white" laborers for the River Rouge Plant. Negroes were excluded.

The Chrysler Gear & Axle managers asked the USES to furnish 400 "white" mechanics.

Few Negroes are left in the Northwest Airlines and Minnesota Mining Co. plants in St. Paul and Minneapolis.

In St. Louis, the Emerson Electric Co. fired almost all its Negro workers when it closed its turret division, leaving many whites on the payroll elsewhere.

Check-up in the Martin Bomber plant in Baltimore showed only 13 Negroes at work out of nearly 3,000, whereas 8,000 to 9,000 whites are left.

The Bendix Aircraft plant at Philadelphia, dominated by General Motors, has seven or eight Negroes left out of 265, though several hundred whites remain.

Closing of regional offices in New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Atlanta, San Antonio and San Francisco will paralyze FEPC work in most of the country.

The Atlanta closing will end government investigations of discrimination in the heart of the South.

The San Antonio closing will withdraw protection from the Mexican workers.

A 50 percent staff cut also impends in the National FEPC headquarters in Washington.

Time Running Short To Act on FEPC Bill

Dailey Worker New York City

In two weeks, seven of the 10 regional offices of the temporary Fair Employment Practices Committee will shut down, including the office in New York and all those covering the South.

12-1-45

Only those in St. Louis, Detroit and Chicago are scheduled to remain open, and even that is doubtful.

Meanwhile, the measure voted favorably by the Labor Committee of the House for a permanent FEPC is languishing in the Rules Committee.

A petition to discharge the committee from further consideration of the bill—to get it before the House—still lacks some 60 signatures to make up the 218 needed. Fourteen New York congressmen, all Pepublicans, have thus far failed to sign the discharge petition despite GOP platform pledges and the pious statements of support from state GOP leaders.

These fourteen should hear from their constituents at once, demanding that they sign the discharge petition for a permanent FEPC. They are:

Edgar A. Sharpe, Long Island; Leonard W. Hall, Long Island; Ellsworth Buck, Staten Island and the lower western part of Manhattan, Ralph Gwinn, Westchester; Ralph Gamble, Westchester; Jay LeFevre, Kingston area; Clarence Kilburn, Malone; Hadwen Fuller, Utica area; Clarence Hancock, Syracuse; John Taber, Auburn; W. Sterling Cole, Southern Tier; James W. Wadsworth, Rochester; Walter G. Andrews, Buffalo; Danield Reed, Jamestown area.

Tories Scuttle 7 More FEPC Offices

New York, N.Y.

The Worker

By MAX GORDON

The wartime Fair Employment Practice Committee, which broke down Jimcrow barriers in tens of thousands of factories, offices public utilities and mines, is on the way out.

On Saturday (Dec. 15), seven of the ten remaining regional offices were due to close their offices for lack of money. They are the offices in New York, Philadelphia, Washington, San Antonio, Atlanta, San Francisco and Kansas City. The closing of the San Antonio office will hit Mexican workers especially.

Five others were shut down in July. Remaining are the offices in St. Louis, Chicago and Detroit. These are expected to go in March.

Those associated with the FEPC are fearful that the great gains made in the course of the war will be lost immediately. In New York employers knowing that the agency's days were numbered have down-graded Negro workers, stalled in taking up complaints and engaged in other abuses.

12-16-45

Even federal agencies, released from the pressure of FEPC, are resorting to old discriminatory practices. Laid-off employes, who formed a pool to be drawn from by other agencies that needed workers, are being chosen reportedly on the basis of color and religion.

FEPC had been instrumental in wiping out these practices in the recent past.

Established by President Roosevelt as a wartime agency, FEPC could not handle peace production and hence was unable to touch the reconversion problem. Reports from all over the nation showed that Negro workers have lost their jobs rapidly as industry reconverted.

A committee of social work experts this week told President Truman that their surveys showed that Negroes were among the worst and most immediate sufferers of lay-offs in war industry.

An informal survey of 107 factories in New York State, undertaken at the request of FEPC, showed that while 10.7 percent of all workers were laid off right after V-J Day, the percentage of "non-whites" was 32.7.

Meanwhile, the permanent FEPC bill in Congress, which can preserve the wartime gains in peacetime industry, is languishing in the tory-dominated House Rules Committee. It was approved by the House Labor Committee. Its backers in Congress have been circulating a petition to discharge the bill from the Rules Committee for the past several months.

12-16-45

They have thus received about 160 of the 218 signatures needed. Few Republicans have signed despite the pledges made by the GOP in its 1944 platform. Since the Southern tory Democrats will not sign, the bulk of the signatures will have to come from northern Republicans.

The tory-GOP alliance dominating Congress is responsible for the fact that the wartime agency is running out of funds. FEPC spent $446,000 last year and asked for over $500,000 to carry out its work this year, which ends next July 1. Instead, the reactionary alliance, after a bitter fight, succeeded in chopping the amount granted to $250,000.

President Truman has helped the process of killing the agency, despite the lip-service he has given to it. Aside from his failure to fight for the permanent FEPC, he killed an order Negro attorney who was a member of the Capitol Transit Company found guilty of discriminating.

The Need for the FEPC

RICHMOND TIMES DISPATCH 7-2-45

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

The following statement in your editorial of June 14 is one of the finest arguments that I have seen yet advanced, albeit unintentionally, for the need of an FEPC which will operate in the South as well as in other sections of our nation. I quote: "We should say that a majority of white people in Virginia approve the appropriation of public funds for the education of Negroes along the same lines that are provided for whites from the same funds. Furthermore, we believe that a majority of Virginians approve equal facilities for Negroes, not only in the public schools, but also in such spheres as publicly provided health facilities and in waiting-room accommodations and on transportation lines."

If your conclusion is valid, then the least that can be said is that the majority has an extremely poor method of seeing that its beliefs are really carried out. For example, just a comment concerning the items as mentioned by you: Times Dispatch

Public schools: Surely there is no one now in Virginia, whether he has read the Denny report or not, who believes that education and educational facilities are equal for white and colored children in the Commonwealth. 7-2-45

The statements published in most of the daily papers in our State concerning the diversion of State funds granted for instruction because of the number of Negro children in average daily attendance is but one case in point. An investigation has led a State Department of Education official to declare that 90 per cent of all school buildings used by colored in the rural areas in Virginia are obsolete according to modern standards. A Federal court in one city has just had to go back after several years and declare a school board (acting for the people) and a superintendent (most prominent in educational affairs in Virginia), in contempt of court because they refused to obey a previous court order to establish pay parity as between colored and white teachers.

The writer is quite aware that improvement is needed also in the education of whites in Virginia, but he knows and so do you that an abundance of figures are available showing that the need for improvement in Negro schools is far greater than that of similar schools for whites.

Health facilities: Did you really mean that public health facilities are equal as between Negroes and whites in our various localities? Examine the record.

Waiting-room accommodations and transportation facilities: I have traveled more than 2,000 miles on buses alone in Virginia in the past year. I have often wondered how the front and middle seats of our buses ride. Take my word for it, the rear seats right over the rear wheels (where colored are forced to ride) are most uncomfortable. Most of the lavatory facilities for colored in our bus stations are filthy, and I don't believe you can blame the war for their lack of cleanliness. In the bus station in the largest city in the Southwest section of our State, colored people who wish to buy food must secure it by going up to a small, unpainted window and having it passed to them over a large container in which there is always a stack of dirty dishes. If you think these are isolated cases, spend a few minutes in the colored part of the waiting-room in either one of your two large bus stations on Broad Street in Richmond or in bus stations in a hundred other places in the State. And don't forget the railroad stations.

You say the majority of white Virginians approve equal facilities for Negroes. I sincerely hope so but many people will doubt this opinion. Whether they do or do not, the majority has neither the time nor the energy nor, what is more essential, the courage to follow through and make certain that their liberal attitudes are carried out. For this reason, and there are others, we urgently need the FEPC.

J. RUPERT PICOTT.

Senator Eastland's Remarks

RICHMOND TIMES DISPATCH

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Your article on Senator Eastland (D-Miss.), which appeared June 30, interested me very much. I am a returned veteran, and if a man elected to lead and govern citizens of the United States can make such a statement as Senator Eastland made, and really believe it, we are far from civilized.

It was a disgrace to every member of the Army of the United States. I can see that all of our sacrificing with blood and sweat on foreign soil has been in vain (in Senator Eastland's eyesight and anyone else who thinks the same way as he does). 7-4-45

Negro soldiers are still fighting and working as they have been doing faithfully for the past three and one-half years to help make free democratic nations a true democracy and rid the world of aggressive war lords. And if what Senator Eastland said carries any truth at all in it, the three years of my life I spent overseas fighting and working was for a cause that doesn't exist as long as Senators Bilbo, Eastland and others are spreading propaganda that we know is far from true. I suggest that Senator Eastland pay a visit to one of the many American cemeteries in Italy and other parts of the world and see graves of Negro soldiers who have paid the price in full. It might do him good.

The FEPC and Fascism; Southern Style

P.M. N.Y., N.Y.

WASHINGTON

Reactionary Southerners are trying to get away with an unprecedented violation of democratic procedure in order to kill the FEPC (Fair Employment Practices Committee), the agency which tries to give Negroes and other minority workers in this country a fair chance to earn a living.

They are trying to kill off the FEPC by preventing the House from having a chance to vote on its appropriation. This is the only way they can win. The Senate has approved a new appropriation for the agency and the House will, too, if it has a chance to vote.

Twice before in recent weeks, the Southerners, with the aid of some of the Republicans, have been able to keep the House from having a chance to vote on its appropriation. This is the only way they can win. The Senate has approved a new appropriation for the agency and the House will, too, if it has a chance to vote.

Twice before in recent weeks, the Southerners, with the aid of some of the Republicans, have been able to keep the House from voting on this fundamental issue of the right to work without discrimination because of race or religion. They succeeded in preventing the House from voting on legislation to create a permanent FEPC or from voting on funds for the temporary FEPC.

But the Senate's approval of funds for the FEPC has made it necessary for the anti-democratic forces in the House to adopt extraordinary procedure to keep the House from voting on the issue. This procedure is to kill the bill which already has passed the House and the Senate carrying appropriations for the war agencies, and put through an entirely new bill which will omit the funds for the FEPC.

The purpose of this complicated parliamentary plan is simply to prevent the House from having a chance to vote on the FEPC. The normal procedure, and the much easier procedure, would be for the House to vote on the bill passed by the Senate and either accept or reject the Senate amendment.

The program for engineering this legislative lynching is complex and the situation is further complicated by the fact that many members of Congress are playing a two-faced game on the FEPC. They are willing to let it die, if they aren't held responsible, if they don't have to vote on killing it. Forced to vote, the majority will support the agency.

This makes it difficult to fix the blame where it belongs, or to bring pressure where it will do the most good.

But the House is the master of the situation and can stop the legislative lynching if the people back home make it clear they don't like what is happening.

Remember that the House has ignored President Truman's demand that it vote on a permanent FEPC. Remember that it adopted a complicated legislative course to avoid voting on the appropriation for the temporary FEPC, and is now trying again to avoid that vote even after the Senate has approved the fund.

7-3-45

This is a far cry from democratic procedure. It is an outrage not only against the millions of citizens whose right to work is jeopardized, but against every American citizen who believes in fair play.

The voters must make clear to the members of the House that they want a vote on the FEPC and no more ducking of the issue. They must tell House members that it is time to stop this monkey-business.

The time is short. The issue is vital. The best way to bring quick pressure is to wire or write the leaders of the House demanding that the House vote on the FEPC. So wire or write today to: P.M.

FIRM TO FIGHT ANTI-BIAS ACTS

J. C. Company Promises To Halt Any Action Aimed at Discrimination

Meeting with the labor relations attorney of the company in Jersey City yesterday, the Hudson County FEPC Council was assured that any acts of discrimination will be immediately halted at the Hatfield Wire and Cable Company, 346 Bergen Ave., Jersey City.

The assurance was extended for the company by Harold Grotta, the attorney, who asserted that discrimination has not been the policy of the company, but that if it is being practiced by local management it would be stopped at once.

The charges were brought by the county FEPC when six Negro women filed complaints against the company for refusing to hire them while employing other workers with less, or as much experience. Several of the women charged that the company even refused to accept their applications.

Investigation into the alleged unfair practices was conducted by the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (CIO), and the FEPC council then arranged for yesterday's meeting of citizens and the company attorney at the office of Meyer Pesin, chairman of the county anti-discrimination group.

The Hudson County CIO Industrial Union Council meanwhile brought the charges to the attention of Mayor Frank Hague, of Jersey City, who sent a representative to the company, asking it to refrain from any such practices.

Since the charges were brought, four Negro women have been hired by the company, it was reported.

Save FEPC

I wish to commend you on your very timely and forceful editorials in support of FEPC. These editorials certainly reflect the feelings in the hearts of all freedom-loving Americans.

It is inconceivable that any person invested with the trust of democratic American principles should oppose legislation which promotes national unity at a time when peace is not yet won. What fears lie in the minds of the Congressmen who threaten filibusters. Are they afraid that their own little kingdoms will fall because we practice the kind of democracy that is written in the laws of our land?

Fascism in Europe was started by suppression and intolerance against minorities—certainly it could happen here if we allow a few bigoted persons to exercise their will.

We cannot have a real democracy or unity if we arouse doubt and suspicion in the minds of any American—when we have been told that we are fighting for a better world in which to live. This is no "band wagon" sentiment—it is stark reality. What is there to lose by granting a man an opportunity to earn a living so that he may guard against poverty, crime and disease. Do not these gentlemen who oppose FEPC realize that suppression and intolerance will reap its toll eventually directly or indirectly on their personal welfare?

"The gentlemen cry Peace! Peace!"—there will be no real peace until men recognize that all must share—there can be no unity or hope of a democratic nation should freedom be granted only a chosen few. 7-2-45

I hope that many Americans see the dangerous implications of opposition to this type of legislation and that they will voice their opinions to their Congressmen in no uncertain terms. 7-2-45

War Agencies Appropriation Bill Stalled As F.E.P.C. Loses Again In House

Louisville, Ky.

Courier Journal

2 Committees Block Action On Measure

7-3-45

By WILLIAM S. WHITE

Special to The New York Times and The Courier Journal.

Washington, July 2.—In the bitterest congressional controversy of this session, two committees of the House refused today to accept the Senate's appropriation of $250,000 to continue the Fair Employment Practice Committee and the whole of the war agencies appropriation bill thus was delayed indefinitely.

The Senate on Saturday had passed the measure, carrying $771,000,000 for various war agencies, among them F.E.P.C. Proponents of the F.E.P.C. tried first today before the House Rules Committee to obtain clearance for it but were defeated in executive session on what was understood to have been a tie vote of 5 to 5.

O.W.I. Cut Restored.

With the whole measure thus halted, they then went to the House Appropriations Committee but that body declined by vote of 20 to 11 to approve F.E.P.C. and then, by vote of 21 to 12, reported out an entirely new war agencies bill of $752,000,000 not only eliminating F.E.P.C. but restoring a $21,000,000 cut which the House had voted earlier in the appropriation for the Office of War Information. The parliamentary situation was such that no decision on the new bill was possible before Thursday.

Members of the Rules Committee assembled in the late afternoon intending to give the measure right of way, under a "closed" rule by which amendments to it would be impossible, but Chairman Sabath (D., Ill.), an F.E.P.C. proponent, appeared only long enough to announce that he had called no meeting of the committee but might call one tomorrow.

Recess Plan Threatened.

Tonight, at the end of a day of angry maneuvering, a legislative pile-up has been created so serious as to bring into question the House plan to recess soon for the summer.

Those controlling the essential House committees were plainly resolved to defeat F.E.P.C. at any cost and the available information indicated that the Senate would not recede from its stand in behalf of that agency, particularly since some Republicans had sought to make it an outright party issue.

At F.E.P.C. headquarters it was said that 120 Washington employees of the agency, which was created by President Roosevelt by executive order to seek to end racial discrimination in the employment of workers, had been advised that they might not be paid their salaries and that no new obligations of any sort were being incurred.

Petition Is Circulated.

Meanwhile, friends of F.E.P.C. were seeking to recruit signers to a long-pending petition to remove the Rules Committee from jurisdiction over a bill to establish a permanent F.E.P.C. with much broader powers than the existing committee. Thus far, the petition was far short of the required 218 names to accomplish that objective.

The agencies directly involved in the war agencies bill had been theoretically out of money since midnight Saturday, the end of the fiscal year. They were not in fact "broke," however, for a blanket provision in the second deficiency appropriation bill passed on Saturda ywas interpreted generally in Congress as making emergency provision for them.

Many Agencies Affected.

The agencies are the following: National War Labor Board, Office of the Alien Property Custodian, the Office of Defense Transportation, the Office of Economic Stabilization, the Office of Scientific Research and Development, the Office of Inter-American Affairs, the Office of War Information, the War Production Board, the Smaller War Plants Corporation, The War Shipping Administration, the Office of Censorship, the Office of Strategic Services, the Petroleum Administration for War, the Office of War Mobilization and Reconversion, the Office of Retraining and Re-employment, the Surplus Property Board, the Selective Service System and the War Relocation Authority.

When the Rules Committee met this morning to take up the F.E.P.C. issue, a delegation of New York Negroes entered the room. Almost at once the committee, as is customary when a vote is to be taken, decided to go into executive session. All nonmembers of the committee began to file from the room and Charles Collins, a New York City organizer for the Hotel and Club Employees Union, asked when F.E.P.C. would be discussed. A committee attendant took him by the arm, explaining that all save members of the committee were required to leave the room.

"What is this—Germany?" Collins cried in resentment. "I had a brother who died in this war."

Offers Come From Several Sources - ANP

Philanthopist Offers Substantial Amount To Agency

Daily World

7-9-45

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON— (ANP)— Serious consideration is being given to the question of acceptance of private funds ,already offered, for the continuance of the FEPC should congress fail to allow the embattled war agency a budget, the Associated Negro Press has learned.

The offers have come from several sources, it is learned at least one of which, a substantial amount being that of a well-known philanthropist with emphatic New Deal leanings.

The idea is looked upon favorably in at least one section of high administration circles which, it is safe to say, has given some stimulation to the only out which may be left to FEPC and the fight on discrimination.

OPINION SOUGHT

From another source it is understood that an informal opinion from the attorney general has been sought. No one in FEPC, however was prepared to confirm this information. 7-9-45

The concern for the agency in this respect was registered almost immediately following the statement of Chairman Malcolm Ross to press conference week before last that the committee had given thought to the possibilities of continuing on a voluntary basis. He pointed out at the time that the failure of congress to appropriate money would not necessarily invalidate the presidential executive order establishing the agency. He intimated further that the committee would probably go further into the possibilities of this as an alternative in the light of developing circumstances.

The budget bureau had recommended that FEPC be allowed $599,000. Other figures considered during floor discussion went down as low as the $125,00 for liquidation purposes. In conversations held thus far on the matter of providing private funds the higher figure was the one most nearly approximated.

DOUBT REMAINS 7-9-45

There remained some doubt, however, as to whether funds so raised could be provided for a federal agency. Before the move could be taken the opinion of the attorney general would have to be gotten. The procedure here would be to state the case to the Whtie House, since FEPC is an independent agency, and the opinion would be asked from there. 7-9-45

Opinions are conflicting on the possibility or propriety of the method. Those favoring it believe that the money could be turned over to the public treasury earmarked for FEPC, and disbursements would be made from it. On the other hand, those who doubt the feasibility say that the effect might be to produce an "unwholesome influence on government."

Bilbo Talks On and On At 'Funeral' of F.E.P.C.

Courier Journal 6-29-45

By FRANCIS J. KELLY.

Washington, June 28 (AP) — Theodore G. "The Voice" Bilbo of Poplarville, Miss., strengthened his claim today as the talkingest man in the United States Senate.

His tonsils humming with health, his desk piled high with reading matter, the balding Mississippi Democrat announced he was preaching the funeral sermon of the Fair Employment Practice Committee. He began it yesterday afternoon, "held" the floor under parliamentary procedure overnight, and then resumed talking today. He talked four hours today before finally yielding the floor so other business could be transacted.

Bilbo said F.E.P.C.'s actual funeral would be held Monday. That's the first business day of the new fiscal year. He proposes to hold the floor until the present fiscal year ends Saturday midnight, to keep Senator Chavez (D., N. M.) from offering an amendment to the war agencies appropriation bill giving F.E.P.C. $446,200 to finance another year's policing of industry against racial and religious discrimination.

Nails Driven Into Coffin.

(On the other side of the Capitol, the House Rules Committee drove nails into F.E.P.C.'s coffin by tabling legislation to grant it $125,000.) 6-29-45

Anybody who dropped into the Senate gallery for as long as 5 minutes found out that Bilbo doesn't like F.E.P.C. He doesn't call it this bill or this measure; it's "this damnable piece of legislation" or "this smooth deliberate scheme to integrate the Negro race with the white and foster intermarriage and interbreeding."

Bilbo read editorials from Negro newspapers. He read a column by Westbrook Pegler, in dialect. He read an extract from The Daily Worker, but explained he wasn't a Communist. He read letters from Southern friends.

Chavez Challenges Bilbo.

"How long does the senator intend to speak?" a colleague inquired gently.

"Until F.E.P.C. is dead," Bilbo replied.

Chavez charged Bilbo was imperiling the life of 16 war agencies by his filibuster. Bilbo said no, it was Chavez who was doing the damage by his insistence on offering his amendment. Its adoption would require suspension of the rules and a two - thirds majority. Chavez challenged Bilbo to let the Senate vote on it. Bilbo said he wasn't taking any chances.

"I assure my friend from Mississippi," Chavez said, "that he can filibuster until doomsday, but that motion will be offered."

Bilbo said: 6-29-45

"If you are so hell-bent on doing so I may not give you an opportunity to offer it."

Editor Constitution: Someone has sent me a copy of your recent editorial under the title of Bilbo Makes Friends for the FEPC. If you are really at heart against the FEPC then why write such an editorial? If you think my opposition to the FEPC will help pass the damnable legislative monstrosity, why not keep it a secret instead of playing it up that I am against it?

I have an idea that you are just "smart" boys, but you aren't bright—what I mean is that you are kinda "nutty." Of course, I am still talking about the one that wrote this editorial.

Just watch the Congressional Record day after day and you will finds lots of material for editorials for a man who really has the ability to properly evaluate things and is able to understand Einstein's doctrine of the relativity of things.

In conclusion, let me say that I think your reference to me is gratuitous and proves that the writer is a limicolous ass.

FEPC Filibusterer Slurs Negro GIs

Daily Worker 6-30-45

Daily Worker Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, June 29.—All day long today Sen. Theodore Bilbo's Mississippi colleague, James O. Eastland, was permitted to flood the Senate chamber with abuse of Negro troops and almost everything progressive in American life.

Eastland was carrying the filibuster ball against the FEPC appropriation for the tired out Bilbo. Sen. Olin D. Johnston (D-SC) says he will carry it tomorrow.

But tomorrow is the last day of the talk marathon before the vote on cloture—that is the limitation on filibuster debate—comes Monday.

The cloture vote is not coming Saturday as was expected because the Mississippi-born sergeant-at-arms of the Senate, Wall Doxey, didn't round up enough Senators in time for a quorum Thursday night till midnight had passed.

The petition was ready early in the evening, with the necessary 16 signers, but there wasn't a quorum, so it couldn't be filed. And Doxey didn't bring enough Senators in for a quorum till a new legislative day had begun. That meant delay until Monday, for a cloture petition must lie on the clerk's desk two legislative days before the vote can be taken. 6-29-45 neral would be held Monday. That's the first business day of the new fiscal year. He proposes to hold the floor until the present fiscal year ends Saturday midnight, to keep Senator Chavez (D-N. M.) from offering an amendment to the War Agencies Appropriation Bill giving FEPC $446,200 to finance another year's policing of industry against racial and religious discrimination.

House Tables Bill

[On the other side of the Capitol, the House Rules Committee drove nails into FEPC's coffin by tabling legislation to grant it $125,000.]

Anybody who dropped in to the Senate gallery for as long as five minutes found out that Bilbo doesn't like FEPC. He doesn't call it this bill or this measure; it's "this damnable piece of legislation" or "this smooth deliberate scheme to integrate the Negro race with the white and foster intermarriage and interbreeding."

Bilbo read editorials from Negro newspapers. He read a column by Westbrook Pegler, in dialect. He read an extract from the Daily Worker, but explained he wasn't a Communist. He read letters from Southern friends.

Chavez Challenges

"How long does the Senator intend to speak?" a colleague inquired gently. 6-29-45

"Until FEPC is dead," Bilbo replied.

Chavez charged Bilbo was imperiling the life of 16 war agencies by his filibuster. Bilbo said no, it was Chavez who was doing the damage by his insistence of offering his amendment. Its adoption would require suspension of the rules and a two-thirds majority. Chavez challenged Bilbo to let the Senate vote on it. Bilbo said he wasn't taking any chances.

"I assure my friend from Mississippi," Chavez said, "that he can filibuster until doomsday, but that motion will be offered."

Bilbo said:

"If you are so hell-bent on doing so I may not give you an opportunity to offer it."

Bilbo Tonsils Are Humming With Health

Richmond Times Dispatch 6-29-45

WASHINGTON, June 28—(AP)—Theodore G. (The Voice) Bilbo, of Poplarville, Miss., strengthened his claim today as the talkingest man in the United States Senate.

His "tonsils" humming with health, his desk piled high with reading matter, the balding Mississippi Democrat announced he was preaching the funeral sermon of the Fair Employment Practice Committee. He began it yesterday afternoon.

Bilbo said FEPC's actual fu-

Southerners Block Action On War Funds

Richmond Times Dispatch 7-1-45

FEPC Death Warrant Signed by House

WASHINGTON, June 30—(UP)—Southern Democrats blocked House action on the $771,000,000 War Agency Appropriation Bill tonight and thus signed a death warrant, effective at midnight, for the Fair Employment Practices Committee.

Their move also cut off other war agencies from their regular source of funds but they will be kept functioning through other arrangements until the dispute over the War Agency Bill and the FEPC has been resolved.

With Congress racing against time to complete action on appropriation bills involving billions of dollars before the fiscal year ended at midnight, Southern Senators had abandoned their filibuster against the FEPC. The Senate approved a $250,000 item for the agency—The House had included none—and passed the war agency bills. 7-1-45

Cannon Asks Conference

But when the measure returned to the House, Chairman Clarence Cannon (D-Mo.), of the House Appropriations Committee, asked that the bill be sent to conference to compromise differences between House and Senate versions. His request required unanimous consent, and Southern Democrats shouted him down.

Cannon explained to reporters that he now will have to ask the Rules Committee, which has been consistently hostile to the FEPC, to send the bill to the floor so the House can vote on the proposal to send it to conference. If that committee refuses, the measure will go back to the Appropriations Committee to be redrafted—presumably without the FEPC item.

Adverse Conditions for FEPC Filibuster

6-28-45

By ARTHUR KROCK

WASHINGTON, June 27—A Senate filibuster is usually unpopular in the country, though some successful ones have, after varying periods of time, won the praise and gratitude of the people. But, generally, a filibuster is deemed to be an abuse of the latitude given to individual Senators by the rules, and in the Nineteen Twenties this sentiment produced a regulation which permits the Senate to impose a modified form of closure to put an end to these delaying actions if it chooses.

This public attitude and the consequent closure rule constitute a threat to any filibuster. But the one that may now be attempted against the appropriation to finance for another year the temporary Fair Employment Practices Commission would be confronted with other disadvantages.

First, if the filibuster is launched and is carried through this week, the fiscal year will have come to an end without appropriations for many other war agencies, since funds for the continuation of these are part of the bill that allots $466,200 for FEPC for another year. It will be charged that the Senate filibusters, in the course of war, have stopped the operation of essential Government units, and that will arouse widespread resentment. It is quite true that the salaries of employes of these agencies are not due until July 15, by which time the issue over FEPC probably will have been resolved one way or another. And it is also probably true that, if it weren't, the President and the Treasury could find contingent funds to maintain the other agencies until the appropriation bill was passed. But the latter can't be proved, and the opponents of the filibuster will easily be able to persuade the people to the contrary.

Second, the FEPC appropriation—which the House has blocked—occurs as a rider to the war agencies' supply bill, and therefore a two-thirds Senate vote will be required to bring it before the chamber for action. If the advocates of the FEPC fund can muster two-thirds for this purpose, it is argued, they can impose closure and thus end the filibuster ingloriously. And the whole Senate, including the filibusterers stand in dread of the precedent which would thus be made.

The United Nations' Charter

Third, and perhaps most important, if the filibuster comes and lasts throughout the remainder of the fiscal year (until Sunday night, that is), the President will bring the United Nations organization Charter next Monday into a bad Senate atmosphere. It will be engaged in one of those delaying actions which will remind the country and the world of the tactics by which the last attempt at a peace-keeping league was damaged—some still think mortally—by the United States whose President had been its chief advocate and architect. This will be an uncomfortable setting for the President and for the introduction of the Charter, and the Senate will probably get a bad press everywhere—a consequence of its actions to which the Senate is highly sensitive.

All these factors are unfavorable for a filibuster on the FEPC item. Several Senators who approve the objective of such an effort, and think the FEPC a dangerous aggravation of the social ills it was designed to cure, oppose a filibuster for these reasons and will probably try to end it—if launched—after Friday, when the last of the votes they could hope to muster against accepting the appropriation-rider will be on hand. Then, to shut off any threat of closure, and for the other causes enumerated above, they will try to assemble at least the one more than one-third required to keep the appropriation out of the bill, after which they will join to vote the funds for the other war agencies.

Another Chance Later

6-28-45

These Senators will use another argument against a prolonged filibuster. They will point out that the funds proposed are only for one year and for the temporary FEPC, which was established by executive order. They will remind filibustering colleagues that the bill to make the FEPC permanent and statutory is blocked in the House, which also declined to appropriate for the temporary agency, and that therefore the prospects are excellent against a permanent establishment. They will say further that if and when the Senate has before it a measure to make a permanent FEPC, they will gladly join in a filibuster, which will not be affected by the present adverse factors; because, on the clear-cut issue, they will feel justified resisting such a proposal with every means in their power.

These arguments may prevail; the threatened filibuster may be tried and succeed in its general purpose; the Senate may invoke closure, thus clearing the way to repeat the process when the poll-tax repeal measure is before it; or some other solution may be found. But there is a very deep sentiment in the Senate against a permanent FEPC which will not be accurately reflected in the roll-calls. Despite all the arguments made for it, and despite the admirable objective which is claimed for it, social and economic conditions in many parts of the country forecast as violent and demoralizing a career for a permanent FEPC as they did for the Prohibition Amendment and the Volstead Act. 6-28-45

In this connection it is notable that two of the most progressive Southern Democrats, with outstanding liberal records on the racial question—Governor Arnall of Georgia and Mark Ethridge of Kentucky—oppose the bill.

The FEPC

The New Republic

Southern Democrats have used all their tricks against the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice, and in spite of President Truman's forthright statements making the FEPC an Administration issue, the Southern Democrats blocked consideration of the whole war-agencies-appropriation bill until they thought they had enough votes to throw out the FEPC item. As this is written, every effort is being made to obtain the two-thirds vote of the Senate necessary to suspend the rules and consider the FEPC appropriation. Unless this succeeds, the present Fair Employment Practice Committee dies on June 30. 7-2-45

Regardless of the outcome, work will continue on the drive to obtain permanent fair-employment legislation. Two-thirds of the House members will have to sign a discharge petition to get the bill on the floor, since the reactionary Rules Committee has refused its approval. Following the summer recess, Senator Chavez is also expected to press for Senate consideration of his bill for a permanent FEPC, and public support must be kept up with this action in mind. 7-2-45

Bilbo Stacks Books About Negro on Desk During Filibuster

the Call

6-6-45

By HARRY McALPN

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) — The uncultural, un-American attacks made by Sen. Theodore Bilbo (Mississippi) against the Negro and the Jew during his filibuster against the FEPC on the floor of the Senate last week should not be dignified by giving them wide-spread publicity through our papers, is the opinion expressed by a number of leading Negroes in Washington.

It is interesting to note, however, that Bilbo used the occasion to attack the appropriations made to Howard university, and to point out that it is the only educational institution in the country supported by federal funds. He was using it as a point to prove that the white folks of America are the ones being discriminated against, not Negroes.

He said he would seek a law in the District of Columbia outlawing intermarriage of the races, and possibly one to outlaw such marriages in all states.

On his desk during the debate, he had most of the recent best-selling books on the Negro,—Rayford Logan's "What the Negro Wants," Richard Wright's "Black Boy," Roi Ottley's "New World A-Coming," Lillian Smith's "Strange Fruit," and Gunar Myrdal's "An American Dilemma," among others.

During most of his 'extended remarks," he was baited by Sen. Langer, Republican of North Dakota. Langer left the Republican side of the Senate to take up a position right in front of Bilbo. He swung his chair around so he could "watch" Bilbo's every word. At one point, when he was called out of the chamber, he told Bilbo, I'll be back." It was a timely remark, for the Senate floor was almost empty, though the galleries were full watching the circus performance.

Walter White Pays Pres. Truman Visit

Atlanta World — Ga.

5-27-45

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — Walter White, executive secretary of the NAACP and one of three Negro consultants with the American delegation at the San Francisco conference, told President Truman at the White House Friday that he did not consider the United States had taken "as unequivocal a stand" on the trusteeship issue "as the human and material resources of the U. S. gave it the power to take."

White talked with the chief executive for 15 minutes and said he had discussed both domestic and international matters with the permanent FEPC being the main point of the latter. On this he said he agreed with the "impression" held by Rep. Mary Norton that the President favors a permanent agency.

5-27-45

The American delegation at the conference had done a "pretty good job" but had not been as vigorous as it might, White said. He criticized the delegates for siding with Great Britain and France, both colonial powers. The NAACP official endorsed the "excellent plan" favored by China and Russia promising ultimate independence to colonials but deplored the failure of the Americans to assume a similar position.

5-27-45

The President invited White to return later. White received approval to bring with him other Negro leaders. However, such a meeting is not likely to be held until late in June.

Compromise On FEPC Bill Seen Fading

Richmond Times

5-21-45

WASHINGTON, May 20—(AP)—Efforts all but collapsed today to work out some compromise, acceptable to Southern Senators, on legislation for a permanent postwar Fair Employment Practices Commission.

Senator Pepper (D-Fla.) still was pursuing the possibility but Senator Ellender (D-La.) said he had given up.

"I don't believe it will be possible to get together on anything acceptable," Ellender told reporters. "The committee as a whole apparently doesn't want any bill without a full set of teeth in it."

The Education and Labor Committee has a bill by Senator Chavez (D-N. M.) and six others to create a permanent FEPC empowered to issue prohibitions against job discrimination because of race, creed, color, national origin, or ancestry. The commission could apply to Federal courts for enforcement of its orders.

A majority of the committee apparently was set to approve the measure at a meeting last Thursday, but agreed to hold off a vote for a week while Southern members, bitterly opposed, tried to work out something all could accept.

5-21-45

Ellender and Senator Johnston (D-S. C.) had served notice they would filibuster if the bill were brought to the Senate floor.

The present FEPC was created by an executive order from President Roosevelt which holds good only for the war's duration.

ENCOURAGING ACTION

New York Post

OPPONENTS of broad social legislation in Congress often brand certain measures as "Negro" bills and through sheer force of demagoguery oft-times are able to muster sufficient strength among Negro-haters in Congress to defeat the legislation.

5-26-45

It was encouraging, then, that at its annual meeting held last week in Brooklyn, the women's division of the American Jewish Congress adopted a resolution urging Congress to establish a permanent FEPC. Negroes welcome this additional and much-needed support from so powerful and vocal a minority. It augurs well.

N.Y., N.Y.

Permanent FEPC:

The protection of job possibilities for the Negro workers is an outstanding feature of full employment for all the people. The permanent FEPC is one of the chief guarantees of such safeguards for the Negro men and women, who have been in war work and who will be looking forward to employment in the reconverted industries. There's yeoman work to be done on this measure in and with Congress.

In the Senate the bill is out on the floor now, but an intense campaign of communications to your Senators is required to make its passage certain.

In the House the hide-bound Rules Committee has held it up from the lower body's consideration, but a petition is now being circulated among the Representatives to get it out on the floor. That petition, still about 60 names short, can be filled by the pressure of public-spirited citizens and labor organizations on their respective Representatives.

Committee Backs Chavez Plan, 12 to 6, as Southerners Prepare for Filibuster

5-24-45

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, May 23 — The Senate Committee on Education and Labor approved today, by a vote of 12 to 6, the Chavez Bill which would establish a permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission to succeed the present FEPC which the late President Roosevelt created by Executive Order in 1941.

N.Y., N.Y.

The measure now goes to the Senate calender and Senator Dennis Chavez, Democrat of New Mexico, its sponsor, said he would call it up for consideration "as soon as possible."

A similar measure, reported out by the House Labor Committee, has been stalemated in the House Rules Committee for weeks. Efforts by Representative Mary T. Norton, Labor Committee chairman, to force it to the House floor by petition have failed thus far to discharge the Rules group from further custody of the bill.

As the Senate committee acted on the legislation, which is designed to prohibit discrimination in employment because of race, creed, color, national origin or ancestry, talk of filibuster was renewed.

5-24-45

One attempt to amend the measure to make it operative only in those States where it was adopted by proclamation of the Governors or by action of the Legislatures was defeated in committee. This and many other amendments were promised as certain to be offered if the bill undergoes formal consideration by the Senate.

Voting to report the bill were Senators Chavez, James E. Murray of Montana, chairman; David I. Walsh of Massachusetts, Elbert D. Thomas of Utah, James M. Tunnell of Delaware and Joseph F. Guffey of Pennsylvania, Democrats; George D. Aiken of Vermont, Joseph H. Ball of Minnesota, H. Alexander Smith of New Jersey, Wayne Morse of Oregon and Forrest C. Donnell of Missouri, Republicans, and Robert M. LaFollette, Progressive, of Wisconsin.

Voting "no" were Senators Claude Pepper of Florida, Allen J. Ellender of Louisiana, Olin D. Johnston of South Carolina, J. William Fulbright of Arkansas, and Lister Hill of Alabama, Democrats, and Senator Robert A. Taft, Republican of Ohio.

5-24-45

With the division of the Democrats cutting along the lines of previous controversies over the FEPC, poll-tax measures and anti-lynching legislation, predictions were made in some Capitol quarters that a taking of this legislation to the floor might cause a renewal of intra-party breaks which possibly would be reflected beyond the scope of this one measure.

That the determination of the Southern Senators is as strong as ever to prevent, if possible, any action on this bill by the Senate was indicated in several quarters. Some Southerners said that they hoped a filibuster would be avoided, but they predicted that the mere calling up of the FEPC bill would be the signal for one. In one quarter it was declared that, "if necessary, debate could be continued for three months, or longer."

Three From FEPC Visit White House

Memphis World — Tenn.

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON— (ANP)— Three FEPC members conferred with a White House official on Wednesday but came away without any answer to their continuing dilemma as to what President Truman intends to do in fulfilling his pledge made in his message to congress on Sept. 6, that the FEPC "is continuing during the transition period."

To be sure, the committee is continuing but its jurisdiction has been cut back so severely as a result of the ending of hostilities that it is of little or no effectiveness in handling cases of alleged discrimination arising in connection with reconversion activities.

SOLUTION DISCUSSED

When the committee met in Aug. several of the war agencies in their problems of liquidation. He is acting as the special representative of the President and without pay. But FEPC was not among the agencies designated for Allen to assist, and apprehensiveness is growing that his interference may not be helpful to the continuance of the committee at all.

Under the appropriation granted by a recalcitrant congress, FEPC may remain in business until June 30, 1946, the end of the fiscal year.

Apparently it was to no avail.

Those in the group were Chairman Malcolm Ross, deputy chairman George M. Johnson, and members Sara Southall and Milton P. Webster.

10-9-45

NOSING INTO BUSINESS

Meanwhile, it is learned, George Allen, a Mississippian by birth and an insurance man by trade, has been nosing into the agency's affairs. The chief executive designated Allen a month ago to assist the war agencies in their problems of liquidation. He is acting as the special representative of the President and without pay. But FEPC was not among the agencies designated for Allen to assist, and apprehensiveness is growing that his interference may not be helpful to the continuance of the committee at all.

Under the appropriation granted by a recalcitrant congress, FEPC may remain in business until June 30, 1946, the end of the fiscal year.

N.J. FEPC Bills Passed; Governor Lauds Measures

Afro-American 4-14-45

Baltimore, Md.

TRENTON—Gov. Walter Edge is expected to sign into law this week seven bills passed by the State Legislature on Friday for the creation of a Fair Employment Practice Commission.

The measures, introduced on March 12, by Assemblyman J. O. Hill (Rep., Essex County), are aimed at the elimination of racial discrimination by employees and broadening the scope of existing civil rights laws.

2 Oppose Main Bill

The main bill, which provided for the creation of the fair employment practice commission, passed the Republican-dominated Legislature with only two dissenting votes. 4-14-45

They were cast by Assemblywoman Hardester of Essex, who said the provision making the State education commissioner the administrator of the law was unworkable, and by Assemblyman Wilson of Hunterdon County. The six companion measures passed without opposition.

Passage of the measures brought varying comments. 4-14-45

Governor Lauds Measure

Assemblyman Hill, the State's only colored legislator, said: "These bills will give us a start toward real democracy," adding that he did not expect a perfect measure and that improvements could be made later on weak points

Governor Edge lauded the measures, contending that by placing the FEPC within the State Department of Education, it would have the benefit of an already established, smooth-working organization.

Called "Weak, Ineffective"

In both the Assembly and the Senate, the Democratic minority attempted to attach amendments asked by delegates during two public hearings. Both efforts failed, resulting in criticism to the effect that the measure was weak and ineffective.

Assemblyman Giles C. Frazier, Democrat of Camden, said: "It isn't worth the paper it's written on."; whil etaoin:u|— 1 23 on": while Assemblyman T. James Tumulty of Hudson asked:

"This law will look swell on the books, but does it protect the persons that it tries to protect?"

"Gross Fraud"

Carl Holderman, executive secretary of the State CIO, described the bill as a "gross fraud upon the people of New Jersey."

"It is a victory for the politicos, a defeat for the people," declared Dr. Frank Kingdom of the Independent Citizens' League, the organization which sponsored an earlier FEPC measure.

The measures provide that the FEPC be placed in the Department of Education, headed by a deputy commissioner whose salary will be $7,000 per year. Appointment is to be by the governor, with Senate approval.

Violators would be subject to charges of misdemeanor, which carries a penalty of $500 fine, ora year in prison, or both.

Truman Runs Into Blockade On FEPC Bill

Washington Post 6-7-45

Washington, D. C.

By Robert C. Albright

President Truman yesterday ran into his first serious legislative blockade when the House Rules Committee failed to heed his request for immediate clearance of permanent Fair Employment Practices legislation.

Rules Chairman Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.) tried twice to make good on the President's request. Southern Democrats forced adjournment of the first meeting and literally walked out on a second.

Southerners Hostile, GOP Cool

Sabath promptly called another meeting for today, but the outlook was not hopeful. Southern Democrats were openly hostile to any FEPC legislation, and Republicans appeared cool to the bill in its present form. 6-7-45

On a show-down, four GOP members of the 12-man committee, teaming with at least two Democratic members, are expected to vote for clearance. With one of the six opponents absent, this would be enough to report the bill, provided Sabath can ever get it to a vote.

This he has been trying to do for weeks. Even with the President's letter in hand, he failed again yesterday. Here's how the bill was balked.

When Sabath called up the bill, Representative E. E. Cox (D., Ga.), a leading opponent, protested that Representative Roger C. Slaughter (D., Mo.), was absent. (With Slaughter absent, the vote would have been 6 to 5 for the bill. His presence presumably would have tied the result, preventing action.)

Sabath insisted on a vote, and Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) moved for adjournment. Sabath failed to put the motion, but with House bells ringing for a quorum on the floor, members walked out. 6-7-45

Quorum Never Available

The chairman called another meeting for 2 p. m., but never succeeded in holding a quorum. Opponents used the absentee method this time to prevent action. Among those stepping out of the room, leaving the committee just shy of enough votes to take action, were Smith and Representative William M. Colmer (D., Miss.).

"I am ready for a vote at any time," Representative Charles A. Halleck (R., Ind.), told newsmen. Halleck said he may vote to report the bill, but will support amendments on the floor for judicial review of decisions of the proposed permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission. He said the present bill makes the commission "judge, jury as well as investigator" on findings of fact.

Rep. Norton Pushes Bill

"That's the NLRB method, and we don't like it," said Halleck.

Republican lukewarmness to the Norton bill likewise was noted on the floor, where only a GOP handful has signed a petition to discharge the Rules Committee and force the bill to the floor. The petition now has 121 signatures. It needs 218. No Southern Democrat has signed. 6-7-45

Nonetheless, House Labor Chairman Mary T. Norton (D., N. J.), author of the bill and sponsor of the discharge petition, predicted her petition will be signed up quickly if the Rules Committee refuses to act. It was Mrs. Norton who carried her bill to the White House two weeks ago and obtained the first presidential indorsement.

Murray of CIO Condemns Delay in Appropriating $599,000 Fund First Set by Roosevelt

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, June 5—President Truman urged the House Rules Committee today to vote out the long-pending bill providing for a permanent Fair Employment Commission. In a letter to Representative Adolf J. Sabath of Illinois, chairman of the committee, he said:

"The principle and policy of fair employment practice should be established permanently as a part of our national law."

The proposed commission would have broader powers than the present Fair Employment Practice Committee, which it would succeed. The permanent measure has been held in the committee since Feb. 0, despite efforts of proponents to get it out. Meanwhile, Congress has failed to provide funds for the 1946 fiscal year for the present FEPC. President Roosevelt recommended $599,000 and President Truman urges this amount.

"Unless it (the bill for the permanent commission) is sent to the floor," President Truman wrote, "the members of the House will have no opportunity to vote upon it. The result will be that on July 1 next the principle of fair employment practices will have been abandoned by the House of Representatives."

"To abandon at this time the fundamental principle upon which the fair employment practice committee was established is unthinkable," the President asserted. "Even if the war were over, or nearly over, the quetion of fair employment practices during the reconversion period and thereafter would be of paramount importance.

"Discrimination in the matter of employment against properly qualified persons because of their race, creed, or color is not only un-American in nature, but will lead eventually to industrial strife and unrest." 6-6-45

The effect of the appeal on the House Committee was uncertain tonight. It is scheduled to take up the measure at a meeting tomorrow.

Failureo f an appropriation for the present FEPC was deplored by Philip Murray, president of the Congress of Industrial Organization, in a letter to Representative Clarence Cannon, Democrat of Missouri, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee. Unless the committee is permitted to survive, he said," racial tension will be engendered which will dissolve overnight the industrial democracy which has thus far been achieved." He described as "a legislative maneuver" the explanation that the appropriation had been delayed because of the pending permanent legislation.

The situation in the Senate is different. There a bill similar to the House measure was reported to the floor on May 24 and is expected to be taken up in mid-June.

Negro Leaders Laud Truman

P. Morning Post 6-7-45

Walter White, secretary of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, today called President Truman's statement on the FEPC (Fair Employment Practices Committee) "magnificent."

In a message to the President, White said:

"Your statement to Congress denouncing action of the House Appropriation Committee in refusing funds to the FEPC is magnificent. Not only members of minorities are grateful but all Americans who are concerned about winning the war and making democracy real."

Dr. Channing Tobias, Negro leader who consulted frequently with President Roosevelt on FEPC matters, said he had written President Truman praising him on his action to save FEPC. 6-7-45

"The President's letter to Rep. Adolph J. Sabath," Tobias said, "leaves no one in doubt as to his position on FEPC. Mr. Truman has faced the issue faily and the entire Nation of right-thinking people of all colors and creeds applauds his resolute stand."

FOR A PERMANENT FEPC

New Republic

The time has come to recognize that all doctrines of racial and religious hate must die. Not alone in fascist Germany or Japan, but in the hearts and minds of man, of free man, everywhere. This is a simple, clear thought which men who died in this war understood.

2-13-45

In our national life, the seeds of fascist race and religious hate still exist. As honest citizens, we do not blink this fact. We ask you to face it with us. The FEPC is the one federal agency whose duty it is to prevent or correct discrimination in job opportunity because of race, color, creed or national origin. In recent days, an unparalleled attempt, brazen and ruthless, to destroy the FEPC has been made by those in our national life who would perpetuate here what our sons have died to uproot in Germany.

We request that the chairmen of the Democratic and Republican Parties call special meetings of the National Committees and publicly declare their support for a permanent FEPC; and declare themselves unalterably opposed to racial hatred and religious intolerance. We request that the National Committees of both parties act now to execute their campaign pledges on the FEPC made to our people in 1944.

Miss Catherine Lundy of Syracuse, N. Y., writes protesting the Congressional cut in the FEPC appropriation and enclosing a check for one dollar to be forwarded as a contribution to the FEPC. She says, "I am sure there are at least 349,000 persons in the United States beside myself who, if the matter is called to their attention in your magazine, wil lbe more than glad to contribute a dollar each in order that the FEPC may function effectively."

Mr. Charles E. Lotreck of Northampton, Mass., calls to our attention the "recent announcement that at the Fall Conference of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs, the principal speaker will be . . . He "wonders what principles and motives animate an organization lending a hand to the promotion of the monarchist aspirations of a Hapsburg in this democratic country."

The Lynn Committee to Abolish Segregation in the Armed Forces, which has been waging a long, consistent fight to end "military Jim Crow," writes asking for contributions to help fight "the shame of segregating men and women in our armed forces because of their color." Contributions may be sent to the Committee at 101 West 46th Street, New York 19.

We have received from John R. Childs a copy of the Liberal Party's statement on the United Nations Charter. It calls upon progressive forces to work for its increasing democratization on the grounds that "the guarantees given dependent peoples are inadequate and the veto power of th great nations is not sufficiently qualified." It points out that the Charter has not yet "mitigated the desire of most of the great powers to esablish unilateral systems of security," and recommends that the United States "give wholehearted support to the democratic and progressive forces in Europe and Asia," rather than to those of reaction, as the only way of reaching a modus vivendi with Russia. The statement emphasizes that the Charter is only a first step in the right direction and that its improvement will depend "upon the developing experience of the nations as they seek to solve common postwar problems."

The Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor sends us "Building the Future for Children and Youth," a summary of recommendations made to President Truman by the National Commission on Children in Wartime for the expansion of protective services for children. The Commission suggests that: "The Social Security Act be amended to allow the federal government to increase its expenditures for child-health services by at least $75 million. . . . It urges federal aid to education and the strengthening of child-labor legislation." Copies of the complete report may be obtained from the Children's Bureau, United States Department of Labor, Washington 25, D. C.

Mrs. Dorothea Baker of Brooklyn writes that the letters of Edmund Rucker and Lillian Smith (the New Republic, July 2) do not in her opinion lay enough stress on the role of education in fighting against racial discrimination. Textbooks, from kindergarten on up, she believes, should emphasize "the climatic geographic rules governing pigmentation . . . and the true reasons . . . why inter-racial animosities are fanned into . . . fires with the telling stench of politics, trade, industry." If this were possible, "man might mature to an understanding . . . of his fellow man."

Fight Over Permanent FEPC Again Threatens in Congress

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8—(AP)—A bitter revival of the congressional fight over creation of a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee is building up.

This became evident today as congressional advocates of the antidiscrimination agency renewed their campaign to put it on the books as a full-time branch of the government, instead of a war-time unit.

President Truman's request in his Thursday message that the permanent committee be set up sparked the new drive, and at the same time, set in motion again the conflict of opinions which kept the Congress in heated debate for two months last Spring.

Eventually a compromise was reached giving the FEPC, set up by executive order of the late President Rooosevelt, limited funds and limited life.

Mr. Truman declared a permanent FEPC is needed to maintain "substantial progress" made during the war "in overcoming many of the prejudices which had resulted in discriminations against minority groups."

Representative Randolph (D-W. Va.), chairman of the House Labor Subcommittee which wrote the permanent FEPC bill, told a reporter:

"We hope the President's request will provide the spark to insure passage of the necessary legislation soon."

"We are starting a renewed drive to get this measure adopted as soon as possible," asserted Representative Joseph Clarke Baldwin (R-N. Y.).

Prolonged controversy over the issue seems certain. Most Southern Democrats are committed to an all-out battle against their party leader. Other Democrats and most Republicans have promised to fight just as hard for the agency.

By agreement of the opposing factions $250,000 was appropriated in the Spring for continuation until next July of the temporary FEPC. This was only half the amount sought, and left unsettled the question of a permanent agency.

The permanent FEPC legislation has been approved by both the Senate and House Labor Committees. It is on the Senate calendar, but no action is expected there immediately. In the House, the Rules Committee has it pigeonholed, but FEPC friends hope to get around this block.

"We are pushing efforts now to get enough signatures to discharge the Rules Committee of further responsibility," Representative Hook (D-Mich.) reported.

"We only need 60 or 70 more signers, and many Republicans who have promised us support have not put their names on the list as yet."

If a majority—218—of the members sign such a discharge petition the bill would be referred to the floor for immediate consideration.

Even opponents have said that if the measure reaches the floor they cannot block its passage in the House. Their only hope then would be to kill it by the filibuster method in the Senate.

FEPC Law Advisable?

Atlanta, Georgia 9-23-45

PRINCETON, N. J.—Few issues have produced such sharp differences of opinion in the United States as the issue involved in anti-discrimination, or FEPC type, laws proposed in Washington and in various states of the union.

The idea of requiring employers to hire a person qualified for a job regardless of color was recently written into law in New York and New Jersey, but a current survey shows that the idea has not yet achieved widespread acceptance throughout the country as a whole.

The south is not the only section which shows resistance to such legislation. In questioning Americans from coast to coast the Institute finds that large numbers of people in the middle west, and in the far west, are also reluctant to see legislative action to abolish racial and color lines in employment.

FARMERS the country over are especially unreceptive to the idea. The farm population, even outside the south, is more opposed to FEPC laws concerning employers than any other large group.

Manual workers, on the other hand, show preponderant sentiment in favor of the FEPC program. A majority of these say they would like to see employers required to hire without regard to race or color.

Manual workers also express greater willingness than white collar workers, executives, professional men or farmers to work alongside persons of any race or color.

YOUNG PEOPLE—those under 30—also show more inclination to accept anti-discrimination laws than older people—a fact which suggests that such proposals will win increasing support as time goes on.

Of all geographical sections, the northeast shows the most receptiveness at present, a majority of people there expressing themselves in favor of FEPC-type legislation.

Reconversion

The abrupt and apparently unexpected end of the war in Asia presents the nation with a problem that is unprecedented in history. Of course the cessation of the fighting brought joy to most of the people everywhere. Even the war workers joined in the celebration even if some of them —especially those who needed work—soon realized they must readjust themselves to peace time conditions.

The readjustment will be difficult, to be sure, with many. But we believe the great majority of Negroes will join other Americans with the same devotion, patience and loyalty in helping to make smooth the transition from war to peace as they demonstrated in helping conclude victoriously the greatest war in the history of the world.

Hardly had President Truman announced capitulation of the last enemy nation than machinery move of necessity to close millions of war time jobs, many of which had, after collective efforts, been opened to Negroes for the first time. In a few short months, perhaps weeks, all war jobs will be closed and the nation reconverted to peacetime production.

Newspapers reported last week that FEPC, salvation of Negroes during this war, along with other agencies is to go. It was created by the late Mr. Roosevelt as an emergency body, to operate for the "duration." In the absence of congressional action and continuation of FEPC, firms may resume discrimination against Negroes in employment, and with federal approval. Of the sixty million jobs we need now, unless vigorous action is taken, Negroes will be the last considered, even for the menial work. That's how it was before; that's how it will be again unless we do a lot of thinking and working on our part. First, we must redouble our efforts to get a permanent FEPC. In spite of our political status in the South, we should let all our representatives in Congress know our view. Moreover, we should write now our relatives and friends in nothern states where the public representatives are more responsive to the wishes of the Negro citizens, urging them to make known to their members of Congress the need for this legislation.

Although most of the nation will be reconverting to a past condition, we the Negroes in the South, must never reconvert to the political slavery which held us prior to the Supreme Court decision April 3, 1944 in the Texas primary case. This decision legally grants us political equality. We must realize our new and improved status politically and grasp this great weapon and use it to improve our conditions generally.

Let every minister, every teacher, every professional and community leader stress over and over, again and again this most important fact. Let every Negro aspire first of all to become a registered voter because even if we get an FEPC law, remember the force and effect of any law is determined largely by the spirit and attitude of those who administer it.

Considering the obstacles against us as a race, we should be on the average the most vote-conscious citizens in our country. But at the present the reverse is the case. If we are to hold what we have and enjoy the benefits available to the average American, we must never reconvert to political impotency. We have the numbers to become a political factor in the life of our city, our county, our state and our section. Let's organize and use this power.

Chicago Adopts FEPC Ordinance

Pittsburg Courier 9-1-45

Pa.

CHICAGO—(ANP)—With only one dissenting vote, a Fair Employment Practices ordinance, drafted and introduced by the Chicago Civil Liberties Committee, was adopted Tuesday by the Chicago City Council. Chicago becomes the first city to enact such an ordinance. The ordinance makes it a misdemeanor for an employer to refuse to employ or for a union to refuse to admit any person because of race, creed, color or national origin.

The ordinance committed the city of Chicago to a policy of non-discrimination in its own hiring and requires contractors and sub-contractors working for the city to include in all contracts an agreement not to discriminate.

The Illinois House of Representatives passed a State FEPC bill, but it was defeated in the Senate by employer organizations.

CITY PROSECUTOR TO HANDLE COMPLAINTS 9-1-45

Ira Latimer, executive director of the Chicago Civil Liberties Committee, stated: "The new ordinance is of the greatest importance because of the multi-million dollars public works project which Chicago is planning to undertake in the months and years just ahead.

"The city prosecutor will receive complaints of violations of the ordinance and prosecute these violations in the municipal court. Public officials in all city departments will be held responsible for all employes and contractors working under their direction. The new ordinance will have the support of the majority of public opinion and will be therefore quite effective in ending discrimination in employment against minority groups." 9-1-45

The new ordinance is as follows:

Section 1. Whereas, it is the policy of the United States Government in furtherance of the successful winning of the peace to insure the maximum participation of all available workers in production, regardless of race, creed, color or national origin, in the firm belief that the democratic way of life within the Nation can be defended successfully only with the help and support of all groups within its borders, the city of Chicago, to cooperate with the United States Government, by elimiating discrimination in public and private employment, enacts this ordinance, to be known as the Fair Employment Practices ordinance.

Section 2. It shall be unlawful for any department of the city of Chicago; or any city official, his agent or employe, for or on behalf of the city of Chicago; or any private employer performing work within the city of Chicago; involving any public works of the city of Chicago, to refuse to employ or to discharge any person otherwise qualified on account of race, color, creed, national origin, or ancestry; to discriminate for the same reasons in regard to tenure, terms or conditions of employment; to deny promotion or increase in compensation solely for these reasons; to publish offer of employment based on such discrimination; to adopt or enforce any rule or employment policy which discriminates between employes on account of race, color, religion, national origin, or ancestry; to seek such information as to any employe as a condition of employment; to penalize any employe or discriminate in the selection of personnel for training, solely on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin, or ancestry.

Section 3. All contracting agencies of the city of Chicago, or any department thereof, shall include in all contracts hereafter negotiated or renegotiated by them a provision obligating the contractor not to discriminate against any employe or applicant for employment because of race, creed, color or national origin and shall require him to include a similar provision in all subcontracts. 9-1-45

Section 4. It shall be unlawful for any person to discriminate against any other person by reason of race, creed, color or national origin, with respect to the hiring, application for employment, tenure, terms or conditions of employment or union membership.

Section 5. Any person, firm, or corporation who shall violate or fail to comply with any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine in any sum not exceeding $200.

Section 6. If any part of this ordinance shall be declared invalid, the balance shall remain in full force and effect.

Organize House Steering Body For FEPC Bill

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.
9-25-45

Rep. Vito Marcantonio (ALP-NY) announced in a speech Sunday night the formation of a steering committee in the House for the FEPC Bill, and told his listeners he expected the bill to pass.

The Harlem Congressman accused the coalition of southern Democrats and reactionary Republicans on the powerful Rules Committee of "bottling up the bill." He said that he and Rep. Mary T. Norton (D-NJ) planned to get the bill onto the floor on 'calender Wednesday' when committee chairmen or members may present a bill when their committees are reached on the calender.

Marcantonio spoke at a dinner which ended an all-day conference called by the New York Committee of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare on "federal responsibility for fair employment practice."

NATIONAL CONFERENCE

Marcantonio also revealed that the House Steering Committee for the FEPC Bill will call a national conference in Washington soon to put pressure on Congress for passage of FEPC legislation.

Malcolm Ross, chairman of the Federal Committee on Fair Employment Practice, in his speech expressed alarm at the tendency during reconversion to downgrade Negroes and other minorities. He recalled that following World War I employers had used Negroes as strikebreakers and that "during this present war there were more than 100 strikes over racial issues." To permit minority workers to become too large a proportion of the unemployed, Mr. Ross thought, would "inject into an already delicate situation the added racial hazard."

Charles Houston, Negro attorney, said in reporting the findings of the conference that "the alternative to FEPC is a perpetuation of substandard living conditions for large sections of the population and moral degradation."

"Liberal pressure is necessary," he said, "because reactionary vested interests are constantly at work."

Sharp Differences Of Opinion Found On Race Discrimination Proposal

Manual Workers Favor Legislation To Abolish Color Lines In Employment, But Farmers And Others Are Against Taking Any Legal Steps

Order to ISU May Be Tip on FEPC Survival

Negro Seamen Issue Is Big Test for the Committee

N.Y. N.Y.

By CHARLES A. MICHIE
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Unless somebody—presumably the American people—does something about it, the war-born Fair Employment Practices Committee is on its way to an early peacetime grave.

A survey of FEPC's chances of survival in a reconverting industrial world are far from bright in spite of a crystal clear White House order extending its powers int othe reconversion period.

A test of FEPC powers, which may clarify the situation, is the only order the agency has issued since V-J Day, one which says the Seafarers International Union (AFL) cannot refuse to accept Negro seamen in its deck gangs.

So far, according to Malcolm Ross, FEPC chairman, the Seafarers' Union has not acknowledged receipt of the order. Chances are, the union will tell the FEPC to go fly its kite and not conform to the order. That is why the order is a significant test.

President Truman has expressed his flat opinion that there should be a permanent FEPC in the U. S. A., but the prospect is gloomy. A House bill to create such an agency has been interred in the reactionary Rules Committee of the House, dominated body and soul by Southern Democrats, to whom the FEPC is an ogre of unpleasant proportions. 10-17-45

A petition to by-pass the Rules Committee on the legislation requires 218 signatures of Congressmen. So far they have 150, far short of the needed number.

There were 115 persons working for FEPC before the appropriations cut from $500,000 to $250,000 early this year. Now 53 are attempting to enforce the democratic principle that a man looking for a job should not be discriminated against because of his race, color or religion. Only nine offices are operating—New York, Atlanta, St. Louis, San Antonio, Detroit, Chicago, Los Angeles San Francisco, and Washington.

Ross's surveys have shown the heaviest cutback in employment are among Negroes and Mexican-Americans. Usually, these were the last employed so there could not be a fuss raised about their loss of jobs.

Ross warned communities which imported Negro and Mexican-American labor they must be prepared to integrate them into reconverted industries ar pay the cost of having them on their hands unemployed.

The next six months should decide the fate of the 1,500,000 Negroes and Mexican-Americans employed in war industries who are being let out today. That, he says, is where FEPC could assist the Nation.

Since its inception, the committee processed about 12,000 cases and settled 40 per cent of them. It had only 30 hearings, involving 102 companies, 38 unions and five Government agencies.

Normally, about 80 per cent of the cases concerned race discrimination, 10 per cent creed and 10 per cent national origin—Europeans of foreign birth. Lately discrimination because of national origin decreased to about 5 per cent and that because of race increased to about 85 per cent. 10-17-45

A report on the discrimination situation, which was FEPC's job, will be ready in about two weeks for presentation to either Congress or the White House.

Seek To Heal Breach Between FEPC Committee, Nat'l Council

The Atlanta Daily World Atlanta, Georgia

Differences Need Ironing Out For Success

By ERNEST E. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON— (ANP)— Differences between the National Council for a Permanent FEPC and the committee itself are going to have to be ironed out shortly if the drive to secure passage of the ligislation in either chamber is to be successful, it is learned.

Last week the problem was laid before A. Philip Randolph, co-chairman of the council, in an effort to have him intercede with the committee with the objective in mind of arriving at an answer to the question of respective roles.

The conflict between the two groups began sometime ago but was never allowed to reach the surface primarily because to do so might have jeopardized the fights being made last spring and early summer first to get the Norton bill out of the house rules committee, and second to secure an appropriation for the committee.

DUTIES RESERVED

In essence it is this: the national council has reserved to itself the primary -- though not exclusive necessarily--role of developing and executing strategy with regard to the legislation. This is the job the set out to do in 1943 and the one it is diligently prosecuting now. It has preferred to leave to the committee the responsibility of directing the annual struggles for the appropriation.

Because these two distinct areas of operation have not always been mutually observed, individuals from both sides have been frowning at each other with some real feeling behind it all.

Legally the FEPC has no right to interfere with the course of pending legislation, except when invited by congress, and ethically ought not inject itself into the picture where it might appear that it is trying to perpetuate itself. On the other hand, this is a very sound project for any outside, non-governmental group such as the council to undertake.

TWO BILLS DRAFTED

Late in 1944 when it was apparent that the 78th congress would end without passing a permanent FEPC bill, the national council busied itself with plans for reintroducing its bill in the next session and for pressing its drive.

Quite unbeknowing to the council, however, Will Maslow, formerly director of field operations with the FEPC, drafted a bill and handed it to Mrs. Mary Norton (D) of New Jersey and chairman of the house labor committee. The bill was sufficiently different to permit the opposition members of the committee to insist upon a new public hearing. However, a number of bills were presented, all in the council's version, and in the compromise worked out a new hearing was avoided and a satisfactory measure was allowed to be reported to congress.

9-16-45

Another source of the dispute is the fact that staff members of the committee have been lobbying on the hill among same congressmen without checking with the national council which feels that this is its particular job.

QUESTION INITIATIVE

Officials of the council recognize that the experience of the committee can be useful to the fight it is making but does not believe the committee should exercise such initiative, which at times has proved embarrassing to the council.

On the other hand, a committee spokesman maintains that there should be no objection of they have friends on the hill and decide to ask these friends to support the permanent legislation.

The course open to Randolph, in the event he decides to move on the situation, is to talk over with Chairman Malcolm Ross of the committee the best procedures for cooperating both on the legislation and future appropriation arguments.

Randolph Expects Riots if FEPC Dies

P. M. N.Y. N.Y.

By CHARLES A. MICHIE
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Oct. 19.—Race riots are inevitable in big industrial cities of the U. S. A. unless Congress assures minority groups—mostly Negroes—of a fair and equal chance for work, A. Philip Randolph, co-chairman of the National Council for a Permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission, warns lawmakers of Capitol Hill.

If the Congress does not pass the bill creating a permanent FEPC, Randolph said, "it is difficult to see how violence, perhaps exceeding that which after the last war brought terror to 26 American cities in one year, can be prevented."

He added that "anti-social employers" are "reconverting" to their habit of discriminating against Jews and Catholics, Negroes and Mexicans thanks to Congressional inaction and a dying wartime FEPC. They want cheap labor markets, he charged.

"This is the very basic invitation to violence," he told a press conference which did not number in its representatives a single major wire service or a single major metropolitan newspaper.

Randolph reached his conclusions after surveying conditions in St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Kansas City and New Orleans and consulting with members of the 70 national organizations supporting a permanent FEPC.

10-19-45

Randolph recalled the cities terrorized by race violence in 1919, climaxed by disastrous riots in Chicago. Then there were only 1,000,000 men out of work in the Nation, 50,000 in Detroit.

"Today," he warned, "one of the most optimistic estimates is that there will be 8,000,000 jobless by Spring. Right now there are 143,000 unemployed in Detroit, three times as many as in 1919. By Spring America will have eight times as many jobless as it had in 1919.

"Saving FEPC will not prevent violence completely, but would certainly tend to restrain employers and give hope to vast numbers of the minorities," he added.

He said inaction in Congress fosters discrimination on the part of employers and disillusionment among the jobless, with "resultant outbreaks."

Randolph emphasized that 1,000,000 non-whites are returning as veterans of the armed services.

During the war, he said FEPC raised the 3 per cent minority citizens in war jobs to 7.2 per cent. Since cutbacks began, minorities are being tossed out at higher rates than other workers.

The Glen L. Martin bomber plant in Baltimore had employed 50,000 white workers and more than 3000 Negroes at its peak, he said. Now, only 13 Negroes are left. And, for another example, he cited the fact that the U. S. Employment Service again is getting requests for "white Gentile workers only."

Negroes Hardest Hit in Buffalo Layoffs

The Daily Worker New York, N.Y.

FEPC REPORTS 6,000 JOBLESS: MINORITIES FIRED FIRST

Buffalo's war industry layoffs have hit the Negro population of that city hardest of all, Regional FEPC Director Edward Lawson reported yesterday.

10-31-45

Lawson, who has just returned from a tour of the upstate area, said that at present more than 6,000 Negro workers, formerly employed in war plants in Buffalo, are now without jobs and face small opportunity of obtaining them in peacetime industry.

10-31-45

He also reported that women workers of other minority groups, chiefly Jewish, Polish and Italian, are also being squeezed out of reconverted plants.

Mounting unemployment in Buffalo stems from removal of the city's two big war plants, Curtiss-Wright and Bell Aircraft. Each of these plants employed more than a thousand skilled and semi-skilled Negro workers as a result of FEPC's negotiations with them two years ago. Two other plants, Buffalo Arms and Colonial Radio, which had hired many Negro workers as a result of pressure from FEPC have closed down entirely.

Mr. Lawson reported that only a few hundred of the thousands of Negro women who had wartime employment in Buffalo's plants are now employed.

Birmingham Herald Alabama

"Blind guides, which strain at a gnat and swallow a camel!"

9-18-45

More and more conservatives are discovering that the Full Employment Bill is not a camel but a gnat. Fulton Lewis, most conservative of the radio commentators, took this position last week. So do Mark Sullivan and Raymond Moley. Beardsley Ruml thinks so. The act does declare the "policy" of the government to be that all Americans have "the right to useful, remunerative, regular and full-time employment" and of having the government "assure the existence at all times of sufficient employment opportunities to enable all Americans "to exercise this right (with obvious exceptions). But just as strongly the act declares it the policy of the government to "foster free competitive enterprise" and "the investment of private capital." Insofar as the two policies are incompatible they cancel each other and only emphasize the more that the policy statements are not the real bill.

* * *

The bill amounts only to a provision that the president shall report each year what, if any, unemployment is in prospect. Congress may then do whatever appeals to it about the situation. The bill takes pains to stipulate that the carrying out of any measures for which the situation may call or seem to call shall not be considered as authorized "unless by provisions of law other than this act."

9-18-45

And yet, so single-minded have some of us become against anything, with the old New Deal earmarks that here is my friend Editor Peter Molyneaux, of the Southern Weekly, earnestly denouncing the bill as one under which, if nationwide unemployment is indicated, "it becomes the duty of Congress and the president to supplement private and other non-federal spending by whatever amount of federal spending and investment is required to make up the deficiency." Maybe it would become "the duty" in Sen. Murray's eyes, and Sen. Wagner's, but it is such a duty in their eyes already, without any bill. It is not the duty in the sense of any legal obligation in the bill itself.

It is hard to understand those who are denouncing this Full Employment bill as a monstrous advance into controlled economy and yet are keen for the Permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee, in comparison with which the former is only a toothless pleasantry.

9-18-45

"Is there any essential difference between a commission regulating the way railroads may charge their customers and a (fair employment committee regulating the way employers may hire or pay their workers?" asks H. V. Richardson, of Jacksonville, Fla. It seems to me that there is a very total difference. Two, in fact. One is that railroads are public services apart from our regular competitive economic system. Government regulation of such operations has been accepted by everybody as proper, and as proving nothing in regard to governmental interference with ordinary economic processes. Another is that there is a big difference between having the government supervise railroad rates, or even prices, wages and working hours, and government efforts to interfere in the million and one considerations involved in deciding whom you want to employ and whom you don't.

9-18-45

For government to regulate railroad rates is difficult. For government to exercise price, wage and production controls in general is much more difficult. But for government to dictate colors, religions, races and points of view on private payrolls is impossible. Only confusion and strife can come of the attempt.

First City To Enact Such An Ordinance

Violations To Bring Fines Not To Exceed $200

CHICAGO— (ANP)— With only one dissenting vote, a fair employment practice ordinance drafted and introduced by the Chicago Civil Liberties committee was adopted Tuesday by the Chicago City council. Chicago becomes the first city to enact such an ordinance.

The ordinance makes it a misdemeanor for an employer to refuse to employ or for a union to refuse to admit any persons because of race, creed, color or national origin.

The ordinance committed the City of Chicago to a policy of non-discrimination in its owns hiring and requires contractors and sub-contractors working for the city to include in all contracts an agreement not to discriminate.

ILLINOIS BILL DEFEATED

The Illinois House of Representatives passed a state FEPC bill but it was defeated in the senate by employer organization.

Ira Latimer, executive director of the Chicago Civil Liberties committee, stated: "The new ordinance is of the greatest importance because of the multimillion dollars public works project which Chicago is planning to undertake in the months and years just ahead.

"The city prosecutor will receive complaints of violation of the ordinance and prosecute these violations in the municipal court. Public officials in all city departments will be held responsible for all employes and contractors working under their direction. The new ordinance will have the support of the majority of public opinion and will be therefore quite effective in ending discrimination in employment against minority groups."

The new ordinance is as follows:

"Section 1. Whereas, it is the policy of the United States government in furtherance of the successful winning of the peace to insure the maximum participation of all available workers in production, regardless of race, creed, color or national origin, in the firm belief that the democratic way of life with in the nation can be defended successfully only with the help and support of all groups within its borders, the city of Chicago, to cooperate with the United States government, by elminating discrimination in public and private employment, enacts this ordinance to be known as the Fair Employment Practices ordinance.

PINS DOWN CITY

"Second 2. It shall be unlawful for any department of the City of Chicago; or any city official, his agent or employe, for or on behalf of the city of Chicago; or any private employed performing work with in the city of Chicago; involving any public works of the city of Chicago to refuse to employ or to discharge any person otherwise qualified on account of race, color creed, national origin, or ancestry; to discriminate for the same reasons in regard to tenure, terms or conditions of employment; to deny promotion or increase in compensation solely for these reasons; to publish offer or employment based on such discrimination; to adopt or enforce any rule or employment policy which discriminates between employes on account of race, color religion, national origin, or ancestry; to seek such information as any to employe as a condition of employment; to penalize any employe or discriminate in the selection of personnel for training, solely on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin, or ancestry.

"Section 3. All contracting agencies of the city of Chicago, or any department thereof, shall include in all contracts hereafter negotiated or renegotiated by them a provision obligating the contractor not to discriminate against any employe or applicant for employment because of race, creed, color or national origin and shall require him to include a similar provision in all subcontracts.

"Section 4. It shall be unlawful for any person to discriminate against any other person by reason of race, creed, color or national origin, with respect to the hiring, application for employment, tenure terms or conditions of employment or union membership.

"Section 5. Any person, firm or corporation who shall violate or fail to comply with any of the provisions of this ordinance shal be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, shall be punished by a fine in any sum not exceeding $200.

"Section 6. If any part of this ordinance shall be declared invalid the balance shall remain in full force and effect."

A Permanent FEPC

The President has again insisted that Congress create a permanent FEPC which will protect Negroes and other minorities in their right to earn a living without discrimination.

He has called for a housing program, financed largely by private capital, but with government aid, to build from 1,000,000 to 1,500,000 units a year.

He has urged a vast public works program, including construction of roads, airports, hospitals and development of America's river valleys.

He has proposed improvement of medical, hospital and loan provisions for veterans.

He has recommended to Congress an increase in the "obsolete" 40-cent minimum of the wage and hour act.

These are all essential aspects of Roosevelt's Economic Bill of Rights. And these are the most significant and positive features of President Truman's 16,000-word message to Congress.

FEPC Finds Lundeberg Union Guilty of Bias

Daily Worker Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7. — The badly battered Fair Employment Practise Committee came back today with an important anti-jim-crow decision, directing the AFL Seafarers International Union to stop discriminating against qualified Negro seamen.

It is understood that several other important decisions against the jimcrow in other industries are expected later this month.

The Seafarers Union headed by Harry Lundeberg, was found guilty of discriminating against Negroes on some 32 counts in hearings conducted in New York City Oct. 10, 1944.

The FEPC order was signed by Chairman Malcolm Ross. If Lundeberg ignores it the case will be certified to President Truman for action.

Uncontradicted evidence from the Port of New York and other SIU shipping centers showed the Lundeberg's union consistently refused to ship out Negro deck and engine department workers, who had been sent to the union hiring halls by the recruiting and manning organization of the War Shipping Administration.

The SIU's jim crow began in its union halls, where separate black and white hiring departments were established.

Life or Death of FEPC Up to Truman

By ART SHIELDS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—FEPC's life or death depends on President Truman. And time is very short. The wartime non-discrimination cannot do its job during reconversion unless the President issues a new executive order extending FEPC's jurisdiction to industries in transition from war to peace production.

Hope that such action may come quickly is felt by some Negro, CIO and AFL representatives. Such Fair Employment Practice Committee members as Attorney Charles Houston of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, John Brophy of the CIO and Boris Shishkind of the AFL found the President sympathetic when they visited him this week.

Nevertheless there is no guarantee that the order will be signed. Any letup therefore in labor's campaign could be disastrous.

NEGROES, JEWS HIT

Meanwhile FEPC's doubtful status is encouraging discrimination in many industrial cities.

Both Negroes and Jews are affected. It was learned today that the U. S. Employment Service is getting an increasing number of calls from employers for "white only" workers, and "white and gentile" workers.

Some Philadelphia employers are said to be among the worst sinners in this respect.

USES leaders are distressed by the situation. In the past—before the Japanese surrender—they could turn for action to FEPC. Now FEPC's powers are in dispute.

White supremacy employers have been laying off Negroes with a vengeance since the victory celebration. One Philadelphia plant manager, for instance, fired all of his approximately 280 Negro employes but 12, whom he kept on as porters.

A much higher proportion of the firm's 700 whites were retained.

Many discriminatory Negro layoffs are also reported from Detroit, Chicago and elsewhere especially from war industry cities in the South.

ROSS' WARNING

The danger of race riots, which Malcolm Ross, FEPC chairman, recently predicted would follow the liquidation of the agency is increasing. White supremacy propaganda is fanning this peril as Negroes seek a share in the jobs ebbing out.

Fortunately many Americans are alerted to this peril. Friends of FEPC from Portland, Ore., told today how a member of the influential City Club, who made a public attack at a club meeting against the Negro people, was dramatically rebuked at the following meeting this month when several hundred members passed a strong resolution supporting FEPC and the right of Negroes to work.

FEPC, incidentally, won a major victory in Portland last year when it compelled the AFL boilermakers union to let down its barriers against Negroes in the Kaiser shipyards.

Such former victories, however, will be largely wiped out unless the President sees his way to extend FEPC jurisdiction quickly, trade union leaders emphasized today.

Much depends on the energy with which the labor movement makes its demand for FEPC felt in government circles. Philip Murray, CIO president gave a lead on this issue in his strong FEPC declaration before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee during the full employment bill hearings last Wednesday.

The drive for 218 House signatures to get the bill for a permanent FEPC out of the clutches of the Rules Committee and onto the floor, will be stepped up when Congress reconvenes next week. Less than 150 have signed up to date. The immediate crisis, however, centers around the issue of extending the jurisdiction of the wartime Fair Employment Practices Committee to industries reconverting for peace.

Talk With Truman on FEPC Encourages Negro Leaders

By ELIZABETH DONAHUE
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—The prospect that the Federal Government may retain some power to control racial and religious discrimination in employment during peace as well as war brightened today following a conference among President Truman, Chairman Malcolm Ross of the FEPC (Fair Employment Practices Committee) and prominent Negro and labor leaders.

Although there still is doubt as to whether the President can and will exercise his war powers to assure minority groups fair job opportunities during the reconversion period, Ross and other members of the conference group are extremely optimistic.

The power given the temporary wartime FEPC created by President Roosevelt is fast ebbing as the agency was set up with specific assignment of protecting minorities only in war plants. 8-23-45

Ross said today that the President "fully understood the problem," but declined to state just how Truman expects to handle the problem of job discrimination over the next few months. P.M.

Accompanying Ross to the White House were Charles H. Houston, attorney for the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People; John Brophy of the CIO, Boris Shishkin of the AFL, and Deputy Chairman George Johnson of the FEPC. New York, N. Y.

Shishkin said:

"The President said explicitly that he will proceed with the measures necessary to alleviate racial and religious employment bias during the reconversion period."

Negro Magistrate Quits GOP For Knifing FEPC in Pa.

Special to the Daily Worker

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 26.—Magistrate Edward W. Henry, nationally known Negro Elk leader and considered a Republican bulwark among the Negro people, has announced that he has quit the GOP because it killed FEPC in Pennsylvania.

Magistrate Henry, in an interview with People's Voice, said he had refused to attend a meeting of Republican leaders in New York last week, and declared: "The state GOP murdered FEPC. I am through with the Pew-Grundy machine. I no longer care to be considered a representative of the Republican Party of Pennsylvania in view of the outrageous attitude of Republican leaders toward the FEPC bill introduced by Legislator Homer Brown. . . . The power behind the throne, who in this case happened to be Hon. Joseph Pew, gave his secret orders, and the bill was referred to a committee where it died an unnatural and untimely death.

Labor's Job Program

Permanent FEPC Essential During Reconversion Period

Daily Worker New York, New York

The enactment of the permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee bill now before Congress is an essential part of the reconversion program. The bulk of the Negro workers in industry will be among the millions laid off in the next few weeks and months. The temporary FEPC will not be able to help them get jobs in peacetime industry because its functions are confined to war industry.

The permanent FEPC measure had been approved by the House Labor Committee and the Senate Labor and Education Committee blocked by the tory-GOP-dominated Rules Committee which refuses to allow it to get to the floor for a vote. A discharge petition to get the measure to the floor has about 150 out of the required 219 signatures. The job now is to see that the petition is completed as soon as Congress gets back.

Specifically, the measure bars discrimination in industry and provides that a permanent committee be set up to investigate cases of such discrimination. If it is established by hearings that discrimination exists, it issues an order that it be cut out.

The procedure then follows that of the National Labor Relations Act. Failure to carry out the Commissioner's order will land the culprit in the courts. If the courts rule against him, he must either obey or face certain penalties. The committee will thus have broader power than has the temporary wartime commission, which has only power to persuade.

French Advisor Scores Eastland

Baltimore Md. afro-American

By MICHAEL CARTER

NEW YORK—Sen. James Eastland (Dem., Miss.), who insulted French African troops by saying they had attacked 5,000 German women is not only a liar but a "distinguished Senator who is using Nazi tactics and is doing the Germans a great favor."

This statement was made to the AFRO last week by Jean de la Roche, French Advisor on Colonial Affairs, who said he was positive that the alleged subway assault "never took place in any subway anywhere." 7-21-45

There is no subway in the place where Senator Eastland said the alleged attack took place.

Personal Insult

French official circles here take the Senator's slanderous attack as a personal insult, and see in it the beginning of a new type of soft peace approach.

"This is the same sort of thing they said after the last war," de la Roche said.

In taking something said against a colored Frenchman as a personal insult, French officials show a marked difference to some American whites who would not consider a slander against a colored American as an affront to the entire country.

No Press Record of Story

A check-up of the Associated Press, International News Service, United Press and the Columbia Broadcasting System press service revealed that none of the major press services transmitted such a story from overseas.

Army public relations officers here said that European war news reached this country through five authoritative channels: the press service, accredited individual correspondents in the employ of newspapers, magazines, or other publications, the overseas radio, the OWI and official Army sources.

"Nothing like this was ever brought up," press-service men said.

Not Generally Believed

From my observation, the attack story is not generally believed by whites in New York City.

They may have believed it if Senator Eastland had not used it as a filibuster against the FEPC. If it has had any effect on white New Yorkers, it has made them more conscious of the need of a Federal FEPC.

'Pushing People . . .'

PM 7-25-45

Dear Editor:

I have noted with interest your stand on racial discrimination. You have inferred that those who discriminate against a race, color or creed are betraying the democracy for which we are fighting. Has it ever occurred to you that your own stand is as fascistic and totalitarian as that of your opponents? You advocate the FEPC which would force a majority to accept a minority. You decry the stand of the Mt. Vernon chapter of the Military Order of the Purple Heart and intimate that they should be forced to admit colored members. To me, the use of force to gain the acceptance of any one race, color or creed by other races, colors or creeds, whether legally or otherwise, is not democratic in any respect.

We have in our U. S. A. another minority, the original owners of this country. We despoiled him of his lands and relegated him to a reservation. He cannot vote; in fact, he cannot legally take a drink of liquor. He is not accepted as an equal, yet he, too, has fought and is fighting for this country. No howls of anguish have ever emanated from your pages on the unfair treatment of the American Indian. Perhaps they, too, need publicity agents.

SGT. ROBERT N. ZIMMERMAN
Greensboro, N. C.

Let's be sensible. "PM is against people who push other people around . . ." So does PM have to be against the Allied armies which pushed the Germans around all over Europe? We aren't Gandhiists; we believe in active, not passive, resistance to the pusher-arounders. N. Y.

You say FEPC would force the majority to accept a minority. Well, do you say the Government should abolish the income-tax law because it forces people to pay taxes? The conscription law, because it forces people into the Army? Laws against murder, because they force people to abstain from putting arsenic in Grandma's eggnog?

We wish laws against murder weren't necessary. We wish the whole thing could be handled by education. We wish laws against discrimination—which is sometimes a slow kind of murder—weren't necessary. We wish everybody were educated to the understanding that discrimination—denying a man employment because of his race or creed, refusing to serve a man in a restaurant because his skin is darker, denying a man the right to vote for the people who make the laws he has to live under—is an unjust thing, an undemocratic thing, an evil thing. We're trying to do our bit to help educate people to that understanding.

But the world can't wait for education to make all laws unnecessary. So we're for FEPC. If that be fascistic and totalitarian, make the most of it.

As to the 333,939 U. S. Indians: we oppose discrimination against them as much as we oppose discrimination against any other minority. FEPC protects them just as much as it protects any other minority. Granted that U. S. treatment of them has been shameful. We can't revise history; all we can do is try to make everybody's future a little better.—ED.

Fate of FEPC

N.Y. Times

Last week the Rules Committee was under fire, as Congress was locked in the sharpest wrangle of the present session. The crux of the controversy was a proposed appropriation to keep alive the Fair Employment Practices Committee, which acts to ban discrimination in war industries for reason of race, color or national origin. Southern Congressmen on the House Appropriations Committee had stricken from the War Agencies Appropriations Bill a $446,000 item to finance FEPC. The Rules Committee, in admitting the bill to floor debate, prevented supporters of FEPC from introducing an amendment restoring the FEPC fund. 7-8-45

The House passed the bill without the FEPC fund. In the Senate FEPC backers restored a $250,000 appropriation for the agency. Under usual procedure the House and Senate bills would then have gone to a joint conference committee to iron out the differences. But the Southern-controlled Rules Committee in the House referred both Senate and House bills back to the Appropriations Committee. There an entirely new bill was written, eliminating FEPC.

When this new bill reached the House floor FEPC backers retaliated. They struck from it appropriations for ten of nineteen agencies with the threat that if FEPC could not have funds neither could the others—including such important bodies as the Office of Defense Stabilization, the War Labor Board, the War Production Board, the Office of Economic Stabilization and the Office of War Administration. Thus stripped of its major items the War Agencies Bill was sent again to the Senate, where FEPC advocates said they would seek to have that chamber sit on the bill until the House reconsiders.

Chances for Adjournment

In view of the bitter recrimination and frayed tempers that the FEPC wrangle caused, such a tactic could bottle up Congress for the entire summer. It could deprive employes in nineteen affected war agencies of their pay—they have been technically without funds since the end of the fiscal year, June 30—and bring to a stop activities vital to the prosecution of the war. On the surface it appeared that such a stalemate might develop. But observers familiar with Congressional impasses predicted otherwise. For one thing, they pointed out, the Washington heat and the House's urge for a summer vacation were strong incentives to an early compromise. Since the Senate is committed to staying on for the San Francisco Charter debate, it is less sensitive to these incentives than the House. Most Washington observers predicted that an agreement would be worked out, with the House yielding ground. But whether or not it would restore the FEPC was still a moot question.

F.E.P.C. Bill Is 'American,' LaFollette Says

Courier Journal Louisville Ky.

Hoosier Representative Backs Measure On Air

7-28-45

The Courier-Journal Washington Bureau.

Washington, July 27.—The legislation proposing a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee is as American as Plymouth Rock, Representative Charles M. LaFollette said in a radio address tonight.

It is based, he said, upon the realization that the democratic ethic upon which this Government is founded must be made to operate in the economic field, as well as the political field; that men not only possess the right to speak and vote, but also the right to eat. 7-28-45

Address Broadcast.

The Republican congressman from Evansville, Ind., spoke in New York on a program carried by the American Broadcasting System. The discussion involved a measure now pigeonholed in the House Rules Committee by Southern Democrats.

"The proposed legislation," LaFollette said, "declares it to be a matter of national policy, operating in industries which affect interstate commerce, that the right of an individual to work in any job which he has the ability to attain and the character qualifications to keep shall not be denied to him because of the color of his skin, his creed, his race or the nation of his origin."

MASS RAPE IN REICH IS DENIED BY DEVERS

New York Times

WASHINGTON, July 26 (AP)—Gen. Jacob L. Devers, commander of Army ground forces, replying to allegations by Senator James O. Eastland, Democrat, of Mississippi, said today he believed there was no mass rape by French Colonial troops in Stuttgart.

He said, however, that there were cases of individual attacks on women because "I know that they [French Army authorities] shot at least twelve soldiers, Moroccans, Algerians and Goums," on charges of rape. He added that other cases had been reported. 7-27-45

General Devers discussed the matter at a news conference, in response to question.

One report, the general said, was that 2,500 women had been raped in a tunnel in Stuttgart after the German city fell to Allied troops of the Sixth Army under General Devers' command in late April. He asserted his own belief that the figure was nearer 300 and that these were individual cases.

General Devers said he based his opinion on an investigation he ordered immediately after the stories reached him. The general said he went into Stuttgart personally and left an inspector there to interview reported victims. An American doctor accompanied the general. In no instance, General Devers asserted, was evidence found of the alleged mass rape.

Senator Eastland had said the reports described the Colonial troops allegedly involved as Senegalese, who are African natives of Negro stock. General Devers said that to his knowledge only four Senegalese were in the Stuttgart area, the Colonial contingents being made up of Moroccans, Algerians and Goums.

Southern Democrats and FEPC

Atlanta Constitution

An inkling of the Democratic dilemma was provided by the long battle over appropriation for the Fair Employment Practices Committee, designed to prevent racial and religious discrimination. President Truman, pursuing a policy subscribed to by both political parties in the last campaign, had asked that the FEPC be made a permanent government institution.

The stake in this conflict is strictly political. It is the Negro vote in a dozen crucial northern states, which is openly threatening to bolt the Democratic party en masse unless the prevailing southern domination of it is broken.

7-26-45

Mr. Truman has given lip service to the FEPC, but he has shown no inclination so far toward going to war with the southern wing of his party. Of his six cabinet appointees, five are southerners or near-southerners, hailing from South Carolina, Kentucky, Missouri, Texas and New Mexico.

Atlanta, Ga.

FEPC is emphasized here only because it was the one disputatious domestic issue with which the expiring congress came to grips. There are a multitude of questions far more pressing and equally loaded with political dynamite.

FEPC AND OWI

N.Y. Times

Six weeks of wrangling, which wore out tempers in both Houses of Congress and held up nearly $750,000,000 of funds urgently needed by war agencies, have resulted in a qualified victory for the Fair Employment Practices Committee and a real victory for the Office of War Information. On Thursday, without a record vote in either House, FEPC received $250,000, or about half of what was asked for it. The terms of the grant are ambiguous, for the money may be spent either to liquidate the FEPC or to continue it in case Congress next year feels like doing so. In either event the principle has been accepted that this nation is not in favor of discrimination in wartime employment because of race, creed or color. OWI won a real endorsement, with an appropriation of $35,000,000. The House of Representatives, in which the fight against the agency was led by Representative Taber of New York, apparently took the view that Mr. Taber's charges of "ridiculous waste" were more than counterbalanced by the testimony of General Eisenhower, Chief of Staff Marshall and President Truman as to the need for OWI in the European theatre.

N.Y. 7-14-45

It is disquieting that such a squabble as this should take place on Capitol Hill in the midst of war with so many vital matters demanding attention. But the enemies of FEPC and OWI had every opportunity to present such arguments as they had and they were duly defeated by the common sense of the majorities in both Houses. Perhaps FEPC and OWI both stand more firmly today because they were fought over and not carelessly taken for granted.

Southern Paper Tells Sen. Bilbo: 'Shut Up, Sit Down'

Daily Worker

N.Y. N.Y.

By BILL MARDO

Theodore Gilmore Bilbo may hail from Poplarville, Miss. —but he isn too Popular with the folks back home—if we're to judge from newspaper reaction in the south.

Listen to what leading Southern dailies have said since Bilbo began his infamous spree against FEPC and minority groups.

The Chattanooga Times, while opposed to a permanent FEPC, declared on June 30: "The Times believes in continuing the wartime commissions until the war is won. Senator Bilbo ought to shut up and sit down."

8-4-45

And the Augusta Chronicle, while also against the FEPC, was nonetheless incensed by Bilbo's "demagoguery." On June 23, the Chronicle editorially declared: "Those who signed and circulated the petition favoring the FEPC were perfectly within their rights in doing it, and there was need to pillory them or insult them by applying to them such vilifying language."

On July 10th, the New Orleans Item outspokenly affirmed: "Bilbo's recent reversion in the Senate to characteristic indencencies for inciting racial and religious hates has not surprised anybody who knows 'The Man.' But they have again aroused disgust all over the country."

Demand Swells For Bilbo Ouster

Demands that Bilbo Must Go increased in volume yesterday as additional organizations called for the Mississippi Senator's impeachment.

The National Negro Congress noted that a "genuine national sentiment is aroused" by Bilbo's "vicious conduct." It called on all NNC council leaders to join in a countrywide campaign to remove Bilbo from the Senate.

The Jewish Peoples Committee described the Senator as a "polecat polltaxer obviously desiring to incite pogroms against Negroes, Jews and Catholics." Therefore, the committee stated, "our Senators and Representatives must be deluged with the demand that Bilbo must go."

The following organizations also called for a quick cleanup of Bilbo and Bilboism:

CIO United Federal Workers of America, Local 204:

"We are shocked at Sen. Bilbo's insulting remarks and demand an apology. We feel strongly that Sen. Bilbo's remarks are not becoming to a member of the United States Senate." The union represents 5,000 clothing workers producing and distributing naval uniforms for the war effort.

The Garibaldi Society, International Workers Order:

"On the stationery of the United States Senate and signed by a United States Senator (Bilbo) was seen the offensive slur, 'My Dear Dago.' Perhaps this gentleman forgets that Italians have always been part and parcel of our country's life and its progress."

The Communist Party, Chicago, Ill.:

"In answer to the insulting and outrageous Hitlerite remarks an aroused American people should call for the removal of this fascist spokesman from Congress. Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi is a fascist menace to America."

Meanwhile, Chicago's Southside Council of the Communist Party this week initiated a move for Bilbo's impeachment. Street corner meetings were held in Chicago's Negro community and 20,000 leaflets were distributed to fans attending the Negro All-Star East-West baseball game last Sunday.

Test Of The FEPC

Washington Post

The Fair Employment Practice Committee deserves commendation for coming to grips at last with the Capital Transit case. It is admittedly a difficult case, and the committee had been exhorted by many, including some elements of the Negro community, to postpone the hearings which were held this week. For the committee to have yielded to this counsel of expediency would have been, we think, to destroy its own prestige and effectiveness. The transit company's absolute ban on the employment of Negroes in platform positions is a matter of common knowledge. The FEPC could not countenance its continuance in the Capital City of the Nation without stultifying its whole effort to end job discrimination.

D.C.

The discrimination in this case is candidly acknowledged by the company, but attributed entirely to an unwillingness on the part of its white employes to work alongside Negroes in platform jobs. The company made an effort in 1943 to train a Negro bus operator and encountered employe resistance. It made an apparently careful survey of the attitudes of its white drivers and operators and discovered what should have been surprising to no one, that many of them have strong racial prejudices and threatened to quit their jobs if Negroes should be hired. The company's position, therefore, as stated by its counsel, Edmund L. Jones, is that "it cannot take upon itself the responsibility of employing Negro platform employes as long as the hazard of complete stoppage exists." A disruption of transport would, of course, be calamitous in this headquarters of the national war effort.

1-18-45

It seems to us, however, that the company has magnified the hazard of complete stoppage. Transit workers tried this in Philadelphia, but the Army put a speedy end to it. Negro platform workers are now employed in that city with no evidence of friction. In Los Angeles, a threatened stoppage failed to materialize after the Philadelphia strike was quelled, and Negroes are now employed there, too, without difficulties. No doubt prejudice is more rife among the predominantly Southern employes of the Capital Transit Co.; but we do not believe they would—or could—defy the power of the United States Government.

Nor do we think that the Government ought to yield in this or any other situation to the threats of a bigoted and truculent minority. It was clear in Philadelphia that the whole resistance to the hiring of Negroes was inspired by a handful of hoodlums. The same, we are convinced, will be found to be the case here. Our manpower trouble, as Philip Murray stated before the May Committee, stems in large measure from underemployment of Negroes. Bus and streetcar operators are urgently needed in this city. To bar men from serving in these jobs because of their race or color is at once to hamper the war program and to subvert the principles for which the war is being waged. Since the Capital Transit Co. will not take the responsibility of instituting fair employment practices, the FEPC must shoulder this responsibility for it. The hazard that men will defy their Government is not so great as the hazard entailed in a failure by the Government to uphold the principles upon which it is established.

Crack Down On Jim Crow

PM News

8-17-45

Alleged Jim Crow practices in the AFL Seararers' International Union brought an order from the Fair Employment Practice Committee this week, directing it to revise its policies and practices so that seamen shall be hired without regard to race, creed or color.

Wash. D.C.

The FEPC also directed the union to "cease specifying the race or color of seamen requested by it from the rotary hiring list of the War Shipping Administration."

The order prohibited the union from continuing its practice of refusing to accept men for jobs because of their race when they are referred to the union.

How to Handle Bilbo

Afro-American

Senator Theodore (White Trash Bloc) Bilbo wrote a letter to a Brooklyn woman in which the salutation was "My dear Dago."

8-4-45

Asked by Congressman Vito Marcantonio of New York to apologize, Bilbo said that he would be glad to do so if she would withdraw "the dirty letter."

The dirty letter to which he referred was one in which a young Italian woman, Miss Josephine Piccolo, had asked Bilbo to stop filibustering against the FEPC, advising him that his remarks slandered colored people and Jews.

For a woman to dress him down in this very polite fashion, said Bilbo, was dirty, and therefore he had to insult her by calling her "Dago."

Baltimore, Md.

In previous instances, he has used epithets applying to colored people and to Jews and now it is the Italians.

Who is to blame for it? Not Bilbo, but members of Congress themselves, from your State and from yours and yours. If Congressmen had your welfare at heart, they would not let Bilbo or Eastland or anybody else insult Italians, Jews and colored citizens without quickly and quietly taking such steps as to make these castaways feel the united disapproval of Congress.

There are a hundred ways in which Congress can handle recalcitrant members and Congress ought to do it. Let's stop answering Bilbo every time he opens his mouth to utter dirty words. Let's jump on our Congressmen to find a way to close him up and if they can't, then let's vote for new Congressmen.

FEPC Closing as Business Groups Map Fair Policies

N.Y.

By GEORGE W. HEALY Jr.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 4—The FEPC is preparing to fold its tent in the Deep South.

8-5-45

The New Orleans region's Fair Employment Practices office will be closed about Aug. 31, because of the reduction of the FEPC budget from $507,600 to $250,000.

Although most business men in the Deep South frankly did not like the FEPC or its methods, they are not rejoicing about its regional fadeout. Instead, they are planning the organization of voluntary fair employment practices committees which they hope will keep Federal agencies of this kind out of the South permanently.

John W. Moore, chairman of the New Orleans Association of Commerce manufacturers' committee, is pushing the organization of a voluntary successor to the FEPC.

"We are advocating a program which would show the world that New Orleans is trying to set up a fair employment policy which should be an example for other cities," Mr. Moore reported after a meeting of his committee.

By coincidence, the first Negro lawyer admitted to practice in Louisiana since 1927 was accredited by the State Supreme Court as W. Don Ellinger, regional FEPC director, was arranging to close his office. Only three Negroes applied for admission to the bar in the past eighteen years, and two failed to pass the bar examinations.

8-5-45

Practically every war plant in the Deep South is employing Negroes on the same basis as white workers. However, in many plants segregation is enforced, as in garment factories and other plants in operation before the war.

News Notes: Louisiana cane growers predict that increased subsidies recently approved by the Department of Agriculture for producers and processors will stimulate a maximum crop in 1946. . . . Mississippi's Agricultural and Industrial Board is opening a new drive to take advantage of availability of more building materials to continue its "Balance Agriculture with Industry" program.

THE UPPER SOUTH

N.Y. Times

Opposition to FEPC Remains General in the Area

By VIRGINUS DABNEY

RICHMOND, June 30—It is humiliating to many citizens of the Upper South to have a man like Senator Bilbo of Mississippi serving, in effect, as their spokesman in Congress, but most white persons in this section appear to be opposed to the creation of a permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee, with authority to hale employers into court. Large numbers sympathize with the desire of the Negroes for better employment opportunities and would accept without misgivings the continuation of the existing FEPC, which relies on conciliation and persuasion.

7-1-45

No holders of elective office from this region have advocated either type of FEPC, and many have expressed opposition. One of the most extreme opponents is Representative Joe Ervin of Charlotte, N. C., who said on the floor that under the bill for a permanent FEPC, this over-all Government agency would help select all employes of the legislative, executive, and judicial branches of your State government, the faculties of your State colleges and universities, all employes of your city and county, all school teachers and all election officials, as well as all employes of all purely local corporations."

The foregoing is contrary to the statement of Representative Norton of New Jersey, patron of the bill, who says the measure would apply only to agencies of the Federal Government, employers of six or more persons whose operations affected interstate or foreign commerce, Federal contractors and subcontractors who employed six or more persons, and labor unions whose practices affected interstate commerce.

Signatures of more than 1,600 white and Negro Southerners are attached to a petition for enactment of the Norton bill. The petition has been submitted to Senator Barkley of Kentucky by the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, with headquarters in Nashville.

One-Legged FEPC

A ONE-LEGGED FEPC now pursues a lusty monster of race prejudice which for three centuries has waxed fat, swift, and strong on hate. Hacked off with dull blunt instruments wielded by the Eastland-Bilbo-Rankin-Republican combine, the other leg representing the difference between a $599,000 and a $250,000 annual appropriation festers in the trophy room of the bigots.

None too potent at its best because it lacked any real power save that of public opinion to enforce its findings which proved insufficient as in the case of the railroads and railroad unions, for example, the FEPC was always more of a promise and a hope than a reality. But the direness of the job situation of the Negro, Jew, and Mexican was reflected in the magnificent fury of the fight to beat back the cocky, blatant boast of Rankin that he was preaching the funeral sermon over the FEPC.

We cannot—we must not—let that fury abate one iota. Unless it cuts its staff and activities in half or more, the FEPC has precisely one half year to exist and operate. The House bill to establish a permanent, statutory Fair Employment Practice Commission, H.R. —, remains before the Congress until this, the 79th Congress, expires by adjourning sine die at the end of December, 1946.

Plan Of Action

Chicago, Ill.

HERE IS A PLAN of action which neither hot weather nor distance nor personal inconvenience should stop you from pursuing. An exodus from Washington of Congressmen has already begun. As soon as the San Francisco Charter and the Bretton Woods Agreement are disposed of both House and Senate will adjourn until around October 1st. Most of the Congressmen and Senators will hasten to their home districts to build up political fences in anticipation of the 1946 elections.

8-4-45

Refugees from their spacious, air-conditioned Washington offices and wearied from their strenuous shadow boxing and buck-passing, these solons will claim the right to rest and quiet. See to it that they get neither. Organize delegations representing labor, Jews, Negroes, and decent Anglo-Saxons to call on their Congressmen at home. Ask them bluntly if (a) they have signed the discharge petitions on the anti-lynching and FEPC bills; (b) if not, why not; (c) will they, immediately on the reconvening of Congress sign both petitions regardless (especially if they are Republicans of what their party leaders advise). Accept no evasions or circumlocutions. Ask for an unequivocal yes or no.

If they are Senators, ask them if they (a) will vote for cloture to limit debate when filibusters are started by Eastland, Bilbo or any other Southern demagogue; (b) will they get up off their fat and ancient derrieres and fling the lie into the teeth of Eastland and his loathsome kind as did Senators Wagner and Mead of New York when filthy lies are told by professional Southerners like Eastland to traduce the job being done by black soldiers, sailors, and marines overseas to preserve a way of life for obscene and worthless humans (God save the mark) like Rankin.

A Crisis Looms

8-4-45

WE ARE NOW FACING the crisis in the fight which should have been met last February when the House Labor Committee reported out the permanent FEPC bill favorably. A drive should have been launched immediately to obtain the necessary 218 signatures to the discharge petition. Instead there appears to have been faith, fatuous in the light of the composition (six Southerners and at least two undependable Republicans on a committee numbering twelve) of the House Rules Committee, that a favorable rule would be obtained.

We have seen the futility of such hopes. Let's waste no tears nor recriminations. Let's get the 218 signatures, force the bill to the House floor for a vote as soon as an increasingly discredited Congress reconvenes in October, and in the ensuing fourteen months smash a Senate filibuster by making the Senators who can continue to be Senators only if they retain the support of politically mature labor, Negro, Jewish, and liberal voters to stand up and fight and be counted on the side of right and decency. Right now they count on you and me continuing to be suckers. Will we?

Grave Threats to FEPC Seen in Present Job Crisis

Daily Worker N.Y. 8-20-45

BY ART SHIELDS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—The Fair Employment Practices Committee may be almost liquidated after Congress convenes Sept. 5 unless President Truman and the labor movement speak out with the utmost vigor. The danger comes from two sources:

First, reactionaries will seek to cut FEPC's jurisdiction down to the bone with the ending of hostilities.

Admittedly the need for an anti-discrimination agency is greater than ever at this moment when workers in shipyards and aircraft plants and other work shops, where Negroes have made great advances, are being laid off by the hundreds of thousands.

Negroes are the first to be fired when FEPC protection ends. This is happening today in shipyards in New Orleans where FEPC offices closed down when Congress cut the agency's appropriation this summer.

LIQUIDATION DRIVE 8-20-45

Negrophobes in Washinugton are now pressing for the virtual liquidation of FEPC on the alleged grounds that the agency has no jurisdiction over war industries during the period of reconversion. These enemies of FEPC argue that its jurisdiction is limited by statute to workers engaged in war work, or employed by the government or in plants under government contract.

Acceptance of this interpretation by the Government would practically put FEPC out of business. The vast majority of its cases came from the war industries. The facts could not be otherwise when nearly all industry was geared into the war effort.

Friends of FEPC of course will fight this narrow interpretation as socially disastrous and legally incorrect. There are judicial precedents to show that certain wartime powers can be used in industries reconverting for peace.

CANNON SWINGS AXE

The second danger comes when Chairman Clarence Cannon (D-Mo) of the House Appropriations Committee, a foe of FEPC, begins overhauling the war agencies, for the purpose of demanding drastic cuts in their budgets. 8-20-45

Cannon left FEPC out of the war agencies appropriation last summer until a dramatic Congressional fight led by Rep. Vito Marcantonio (ALP-NY) forced him to retreat.

Cannon's committee goes to work on the war agencies with the opening of Congress. In preparation for the committee's probe the Budget Bureau has asked all the agencies to submit estimates of their expenses.

Meanwhile job discrimination against Negroes and members of other minorities is still rampant, great progress has been made but there are still big plants that hire no Negroes. And there were still 2,600 discrimination cases pending before the FEPC at the end of the last fiscal year.

TRUMAN SILENCE

Since June 30 the agency has been extremely handicapped by lack of funds. 8-20-45

The compromise appropriation cut, which Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley (D-Ky) helped to put through, left FEPC with only $250,000 for the coming 12 months—about half of what it had before. And now this half ration may be cut drastically again.

President Truman who did urge the passage of a permanent FEPC bill, has kept silent on the extension of the present FEPC, which stands between Negro workers and unemployment and hunger.

ployment Practices Committee.

The temporary committee, established by President Roosevelt to outlaw discrimination in war plants, was created under the War Powers of the President—powers which obviously cannot carry the FEPC through the difficult reconversion period.

Re-creation of a permanent fair employment agency was said to be clearly up to Congress. President Truman, according to most officials in Washington, probably lacks any authority to extend FEPC on even a temporary basis, regardless of his determination to project the anti-bias policy into the postwar era.

Closing Down

Disclosure that the wartime FEPC is practically out of business accompanied rumors that racial tensions are already developing as a result of cutbacks and grave Negro-white economic rivalries in the South.

Chairman Malcolm Ross of the FEPC admitted that in "at least 10 cities the situation could become acute." 8-19-45

But he would give no specific examples and emphasized that it is too soon to analyze the wholesale contract cut-backs in terms of what groups are affected.

ing contracts were immediately cancelled Negro women were the first to be fired.

Capital Worried

Up till now these reports have not crept into print, but they are not being taken lightly in the Capital. 8-19-45

The main concern here is whether Congress and the President will set up some kind of agency to prevent the outbreak of serious racial conflicts.

The wartime FEPC and Chairman Ross are frankly confused about the agency's present status. But there appears to be little doubt that, in view of the fact that Congress cut the appropriation in half less than two months ago and that FEPC's permanency rests on Truman's war powers, the agency is presently impotent.

The extent to which FEPC's burden grew heavier as the war neared an end is indicated by the fact that the 2600 cases pending before the committee on July 1 represent a 20 per cent increase over the number of cases pending the same time last year.

The prospect of growing discrimination even in war industries coincided with Congressional action six weeks ago which gave the agency $250,000—less than half the amount of money requested by the President. 8-19-45

Viewed by Southern Democrats and many employers as a vast agency with the power to revolutionize the U. S. A., FEPC employed only 117 people at its peak. Now it is operating with 51 persons on its nationwide administrative staff.

Even with a small organization the agency's records show that it settled 3000 cases in the last year peace as in war.

Legislative measures to implement the President's request, pending in both houses, have been stacked in the corner under pressure from the Southern Democrats.

The question being asked in Washington is whether Congress will anticipate the danger signals or whether a series of major race riots is required to alert it.

FEPC Stripped Of Power by End of War

The Pittsburgh Courier Pittsburgh Pennsylvania 8-25-45

By HARRY McALPIN

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NNPA)—Wholesale cancellation of war contracts by the Army and Navy is stripping the FEPC of its authority over discriminations in hiring and working conditions.

Under the Executive Order of the President, the agency has had jurisdiction over complaints against all agencies of the Federal government, over complaints against all employers and the unions of their employes having contractual relations with the Federal government, which expressly or by implication, contain a non-discrimination clause, and over complaints against employers and unions of their employes engaged in industries essential to the war effort, whether or not they have contractual relations with the Government.

POWERS LIMITED

Except for a few contract holders, the FEPC will be limited now to handling complaints against agencies of the Federal government.

This is happening at a time when discriminations in layoffs and hiring and rehiring are likely to increase. There is nothing the present FEPC can do, however, until Congress passes legislation making the agency permanent and giving it jurisdiction over industries involved in interstate commerce.

Race Tensions Developing as Result of Layoffs in Industry

But informed Negroes in Washington, who want to avert any sensational publicity, privately admit that in Birmingham, Ala., a "white supremacy" group, modeled on the Ku Klux Klan has formed into a corps of "minutemen." The group is said to be organizing a block-by-block campaign and collecting arms and ammunition to prepare for racial warfare.

Congress Can Do It

While the President apparently lacks the power to continue FEPC, the reconvening Congress can do so almost immediately.

Truman recently asked both houses to establish the committee as a permanent agency of Government, pointing out that the problem of job discrimination is as vital in

Plans Made In N. O. For FEPC Conference

Houston Tex. Chronicle

The Informer

NEW ORLEANS — Industrialists and businessmen, who employ colored as well as white workers, met here Friday and laid plans for an early Fair Employment Practice Conference. Conducted in the Association of Commerce building, the meeting was the result of a recommendation by the New Orleans Item, in a June 15 editorial, calling for voluntary action on the part of employers and unions in working out a code of employment ethics in lieu of federal control.

The aforementioned meeting was a follow-up of an original meeting, called by Father Vincent J. O'Connell, at the request of Ralph Michelson, president and publisher of The Item, to consider the need for a conference on unfair employment practices. The date of the proposed fair employment practices conference, and the personnel of the special manufacturers' committee which will participate in it, will be announced in the near future.

Father O'Connell stressed the economic liability to the city as a whole, as inadequate housing and living conditions for the Negro population. He said New Orleans has 200,000 Negroes who represent a third of its population, and the whole city would benefit if the buying power of a third of its people were increased. 8-1-45

He also pointed out that since the war, 3,500,000 people, "white as well as colored," have been lost to the South because of better job opportunities outside Dixie.

"New Orleans should take the lead in eliminating discrimination in employment," said John W. Moore, chairman of the Association of Commerce Manufacturers' Committee.

Clifford F. Favrot, co-owner of Dorn Roofing Company, told of a satisfactory experience he had during the recent $200,000 building drive for a colored YWCA, and he is convinced that much can be gained by making the colored population aware that leading white businessmen are concerned about its welfare.

SOUTHERN EDITORS PROTEST

THE vicious and unwarranted attack on Negro soldiers made during the Senate filibuster against FEPC by Senators Bilbo and Eastland was not to the liking of many Southern newspaper editors who were even more vocal in their protests than most Northern editors. New York Age

The Macon, Ga., News in a two-column editorial said: New York

"We conceive it to be the duty of every Southerner to repudiate every appeal to racial prejudice. The white people of the South cannot live on terms of enmity and hostility with a racial minority constituting one-third of the population. Persons who fan the flames of racial hatred are enemies of the people and their free institutions.

"This speech of Senator Eastland's is one of the basest appeals to such prejudice and hatred we have ever read. We hope the entire South will repudiate it and that the Senator's own state at the first opportunity will return him to the obscurity from which he came."

The Louisville Ky., Courier-Journal editorially said: 8-4-45

"The Senator himself is branded as a dangerous enemy of national unity in his cowardly use of sweeping assertions designed only to discredit a loyal American minority."

And the Richmond, Va., Times-Dispatch editorially said:

"If Mississippi wants to send to the United States Senate such men as Theodore Bilbo and James Eastland, there is little the rest of the country can do about it, but the peoples of the other Southern States certainly do not have to remain silent under the possible imputation that these spreaders of interracial hate speak for anyone but themselves . . . It is humiliating to the South for two Mississippi demagogues to misrepresent the Southern people with their unfair distribes."

FEPC CLOSES FIELD OFFICES IN SIX CITIES; 66 WORKERS LET OUT TO KEEP AGENCY FUNCTIONING

Black Dispatch

Oklahoma City,

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) — Five feild officers and 66 staff members are being lopped off the Fair Employment Practice committee within the next 30 days in order to keep the agency within the limited funds afforded it by congress, Chairman Malcolm Ross said on Friday. Okla.

The office closings represent one third of those opened during the four years the committee has been functioning, and more than one-half of the personnel. The present staff numbers 117 persons.

"The committee ordered a 30-day period in the closing of these offices," the chairman said, "in order to wind up the affairs of these units and to give displaced staff members time in which to seek other positions."

The 10 field officers to be continued are in war production areas where minority-group problems are likely to be most acute during the remainder of the war, Ross announced. These are at New York City, Philadelphia, Washington, Detroit, Atlanta, Chicago, St. Louis San Antonio, San Francisco and Los Angeles. 8-4-45

The five offices being closed are at Cleveland, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Pittsburgh and New Orleans.

This staff is being made in this manner: "In the Washington headquarters, the field operarions division will be reduced from eight to four persons; budget and administration, from 17 to 11; and the legal division, effective Sept. 30, from nine to five.

The information division is being eliminated and its functions merged with the review and analysis division, which will be reduced from nine to six employes.

Under the new plan of operation, Ross commented, the typical field office will consist of a regional director and a secretary. The New York City, Chicago and St. Louis offices, however, will have, in addition, one field examiner each.

Congress appropriated $250,000 for the agency whereas last year it had $507,600. The ambigity of the language used in connection with the item promted FEPC last week to seek a ruling from the acting comptroller general. They were told that they may spend all of the appropriation for operations without setting aside any for liquidation.

If the agency is to be terminated ultimately, congress will have to give them additional money to wind-up.

Empty guns are useless, hungry men are helpless targets, and the huge American bombers do not land in open fields. We are the ones who have kept ammunition for those guns, who provided the food for the combat troops, and lest Mr. Eastland forget, many of the bombs that helped to defeat Germany and will help to defeat Japan were loaded by the back breaking efforts of the ground crews.

O'Dwyer Blasts Discrimination Urges National, Local FEPC

Daily Worker 8-21-45

Gen. William O'Dwyer has placed himself squarely on record against race discrimination and for national, state and local FEPC's.

The Democratic-American Labor-Veterans Party candidate for Mayor, speaking before the Holy Trinity Baptist Church in Brooklyn, declared himself flat-footedly for the elimination of all phases of discrimination 'in whatever form or whatever place it may appear."

"We must not tolerate any public practices that single out the Negro or any other minority group from enjoying the equal opportunity to earn his livelihood or to achieve a higher standard of living, or to make his way in the political and economic fields of endeavor," he declared.

Specifically, he placed himself on record as "wholeheartedly in favor of the Fair Employment Practice Acts in our national, state and municipal governments."

"They should be permanent features of our public life," he maintained, and "must not be dead letters."

He pledged to do "everything in my power to enforce laws against discrimination in employment and laws providing safeguards for our mutual protection against bigotry."

The former Brooklyn district attorney presented in considerable detail the "able and heroic" record of Negro servicemen in the war and noted that the "loyalty of the American Negro is proverbial."

Among the facts detailed were that 700,000 Negroes are in the Army alone, of whom 500,000 served overseas. A quarter of a mllion were in Europe on V-E Day. He cited the 92nd and 93rd divisions and the 24th Infantry Regiment as units that had become famous for "courage, fighting ability and devotion to duty."

He assailed the "shortsightedness of our economic and social system" which forced "difficulties and handicaps" upon "our Negro fellow-citizens" and demanded that the American people stop ignoring the problem.

"We must all be on the alert against the inequalities that eat into the vitals of true democracy," he declared. 8-21-45

"It has always been one of my major and uncompromising obligations to curb the intolerant elements in the community, who would seek to draw dividing lines between our citizens of various creeds and color," he said. "Bilboism has no place in American life."

He criticized the word "tolerance" in relation to religion, color or national origin on the grounds that we should strive "not for tolerance but for mutual respect."

FEPC and Reconversion

Daily Worker - New York, N.Y. 9-13-45

9-13-45

By Abner W. Berry

As President Truman recognized in his message to Congress, this is an emergency period. It will be of long duration. Each returning boatload of GIs adds greater urgency to the need for quick action. It was in this sense, then, that we must take the President's proposal for the establishment of a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee. For it is a definite MUST in in reconversion legislation.

Already the organizations of big business are ganging up against the FEPC bills now pending in the House and Senate. They want a "free hand" in chosing their workers. They are opposed to "burocratic controls."

But the returning Negro veteran is going to want the assurance that his livelihood will not be dependent upon the economic kings who have always exercised their "freedom" to exclude him from jobs. That is not the freedom for which he fought. He is expecting rather that "freedom from want" —which means a job at decent wages— becomes for him a fulfilled promise. 9-13-45

A Million Negro Veterans

There will be nearly a million Negro veterans, most of whom come from the South. They should become considered an important factor in the program of industrialization there. The Negro war workers who manned posts in factories and mills producing for victory must have a share in building for the peace.

Henry Wallace, in his recent book Sixty Million Jobs, wrties: ". . . industrialization in the South, to stand up against the competition of other areas, will need both increased productivity and greater consumption on the part of both the white and Negro working population."

Fight Needed For FEPC Bills

In placing together the ability to produce and to consume, Wallace implies decent wages and the development of technical skills. From all of past experience such a program so vital to the social and economic health of the nation cannot be left to "free enterprise."

Progressives foresaw the need for a permanent FEPC long ago. FEPC bills are now pending in the House and Senate. But these bills have been fought by the poll-tax wing of the President's party and by the "free enterprise" group of reactionary Republicans.

In the House the Labor and Education Committee has reported out a permanent FEPC Bill. But the Judiciary Committee headed by Texas' Hatton Summers refuses to give it a rule, so it is not on the calendar. Representative Mary Norton is circulating a discharge petition for its release.

In the Senate the Labor Committee has voted favorably on a similar bill, but red tape keeps it from the floor and the chance for a vote.

It is clear then that the mere proposal for such legislation is not enough.

The President and his suporters in Congress will have to fight hard for the proposed reconversion program. On FEPC legislation they will have to fight even harder, as their opponents have already made known their stubborn opposition and a willingness to stoop to the lowest levels of racist skullduggery to attain their ends. 9-13-45

Labor unions, the organization of the Negro people and all groups now supporting the reconversion legislative program proposed by President Truman will have to place special emphasis on FEPC legislation. It is highly possible that the fight for a people's reconversion program will fall short of complete victory by the loss of this vital section.

It is an unhappy truth that to utilize America's black arm in building the peace and postwar democracy requires legislation and to get that legislation on the books it is necessary to conduct a sharp political fight.

Secession Is The Word 'Suh'

Asks South Carolina To Defy Constitution

Pittsburgh (Pa) Courier

CHARLESTON, S. C.—(ANP)—A special session of the State Legislature to defy FEPC and the Federal Constitution was urged in a letter signed by D. F. Jamison of Ridgeville, S. C., to the News and Courier. The writer declared "there is not a pint of 'guts' left in South Carolina, and a bucket could hold all in the South."

Jamison decried the finally passed FEPC as an "iniquitous law" and laid it to the New Deal and Roosevelt administration. The letter continued:

"The time is coming when you ladies and gentlemen will have to stand for Negroes alongside of you in Pullmans, in day coaches, on buses, in hotels and restaurants, the Negro and white children in same seats and benches, getting the same school buses, sharing the used to each other and finally intermarrying.

"It is pure Nazism, no use to call it by any other name.

NO "GUTS" IN SOUTH 8-4-45

"There is not a pint of 'guts' left in South Carolina, and a bucket could hold all in the South.

"The Governor is on the New Deal side. He will profess to be willing to oppose the FEPC, but he is not man enough to call a special session of the Legislature whose object would be to advise the Federal Government that the FEPC is non-effective in South Carolina. and that the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments to the Federal Constitution are null and void.

"The State and the county governments should be seized by our leading men and a provisional governor be selected who would act as above and organize the State for resistance, if necessary."

Following the Supreme Court ruling against the Texas white Democratic primary, South Carolina was the first State to call a special session of the Legislature to remove all reference of the primary from the State Constitution and to defy the high court's ruling.

Jim-Crowed Heroes

8-25-45

Dear Sirs: Captain Charles L. Thomas, commander of a tank-destroyer contingent, is the first Negro officer to be awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action. He holds an air pilot's license and when he gets out of the army intends to study mechanical engineering in order to become an aeronautical engineer. But it's almost certain he won't get a job unless the federal Permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee bill is passed. It is not now the practice of the airline companies to hire Negroes as pilots or engineers, or indeed in any other capacity than as porters. Wyatron

I wonder whether Captain Thomas's white fellow citizens will help make it possible for him and others like him to have a fair chance at decent jobs in the post-war world. If so, we will need the full-employment bill as well as the Permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee bill. Thus far both are stalled in the mazes of Congressional opposition such as that voiced by Senator "Dear Dago" Bilbo. New York N.Y. 8-25-45

Cartelism In Congress

Washington Post

IN CONGRESS you can make a career these days by being against cartels. It's as safe as being against sin and the common cold.

To be ultrasafe, you can be against cartels in Germany. Nobody wants cartels in Germany.

What Congress conveniently overlooks is that it is in itself a kind of political cartel. Or, rather, under certain circumstances it becomes a tight little political monopoly with freedom of action frozen to zero.

That happened over extension of the Fair Employment Practice Committee, first in the Senate and then in the House. Senator Theodore (The Man) Bilbo of Mississippi resorted to filibuster to block consideration of FEPC. He was ably assisted by his colleague, Senator James O. Eastland of Ruleville, Miss., who made one of the most shocking speeches ever heard on the floor of the Senate, in the course of which he slandered not merely whole races but the armed forces of the United States as a body.

Mississippi has a population of 2,184,000. In the 1940 primary election Bilbo got 91,000 votes, which was 29,000 more than his nearest opponent. Bilbo's total was less than 10 per cent of all potential voters in that poll-tax State. It is a small fraction of 1 per cent of all the voters in the country, yet, nevertheless, Bilbo can say no to all of us.

7-6-45

THE GREAT MAJORITY of Senators, who favored the FEPC, finally were able to break the Mississippi filibuster and included a provision for its continuance in a war appropriation measure. On the other side of the Capitol, FEPC came up against the perfect ring—an airtight trust—for preserving a political monopoly which in the past has repeatedly blocked progressive legislation.

This is the House Rules Committee. The Rules Committee is a bottleneck through which all legislation must pass before it reaches the floor for action. It is a very narrow passage, by comparison the Biblical needle's eye is a broad boulevard.

Of the 12 members of the Rules Committee, 6 are Democrats from Southern or border States. For all practical purposes, that is a working majority.

Two of these men, Eugene Cox of Georgia and Howard Smith of Virginia, are veterans who know every parliamentary trick. They are also two of the most reactionary members of the House.

In effect, Cox and Smith run that committee. They sit beside the monopoly toll bridge and say what shall get by. They are masters of the political trust which, by reason of the Rules Committee, the House has become. If 218 members sign a petition, the Rules Committee can be by-passed; but it's hard to get 218 people to sign any kind of petition. 7-6-45

Another monopoly device is called "senatorial courtesy." It has been used over and over again to keep back legislation that one or two individuals wanted to kill. In recent weeks, it has been used to hold up approval of plans for international airlines after the war.

Bilbo and Eastland

Richmond Times-Dispatch

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

The editor of The Times-Dispatch should be commended for his timely editorial, "Misrepresenting the South," in which he condemned the tirades of Senators Bilbo and Eastland, of Mississippi.

As a Negro, I am glad to say that I am too intelligent and broadminded to judge all the people of Mississippi by these two representatives. But what a pity that any State in this intelligent, enlightened age, when tolerance and world peace are the principal topics of discussion, should have this type of representation. Maybe one reason is that nine Southern States spend on an average only $59 a year for the education of a white child when the average expenditure for the nation is $88. Mr. Eastland said he wasn't prejudiced toward the Negro, but what about the $19 a year educational expenditure for the Negro child as compared with the $59 for the white child? Yet the Negro is supposed to be qualified to meet all requirements in an emergency such as war.

7-5-45

After a lecture by the late Dr. Carver at the University of Mississippi, Senator Bilbo shouted to the press, "What is the proud State of Mississippi coming to, having that peanut nigger from Tuskegee making an address?" He said he couldn't understand what any "nigger" could have to say that would interest Southern white boys and girls. I think Mr. Bilbo could have learned a great deal from Dr. Carver himself if he hadn't been blinded by prejudice. Dr. Carver will go down in history as one of the world's greatest scientists, but I wonder what history will have to say about Mr. Bilbo.

If I were either of these two distinguished gentlemen from Mississippi and boasted of white superiority, I would not be afraid of the FEPC or to prove that superiority on the testing ground of fair competition, since we say that fair play is a fundamental American principle. It includes the concept that every man has a right to work at a job or compete for that which he is capable, and that individual ability should be rewarded.

We say we want a new world where peace will reign supreme, but that new world can't be bought with race slavery, prejudice and hate, but with democracy of the human spirit, intelligence and brotherly love.

Bilbo Attacks Dewey For FEPC Legislation

Richmond Times Dispatch

WASHINGTON, July 6—(AP)—Senator Bilbo (D-Miss.) today attacked Governor Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, because of his attitude on FEPC.

New York State has adopted legislation along the lines of the Fair Employment Practices Committee, barring discrimination in employment for race, creed or color.

Dispatch

Bilbo, in a new speech to the Senate, again condemned the FEPC and commented: 7-7-45

"If any of you think Dewey has a chance in 1948, forget it. He's dead. And in 90 days when the people of New York find out what this FEPC means he'll be dead in New York State, too."

FEP Too Drastic For Sen. Pepper

Chicago Daily

Florida's Sen. Claude C. Pepper declared here this week that he was flatly opposed to a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee.

The famous Dixie liberal said that he would approve a temporary committee but would not vote for a permanent FEPC.

Here to speak at a rally for ratification of the United Nations Charter, Pepper told a press conference that he believed the Negro issue "was the most difficult problem in America today."

He said that he had failed in his attempt to write a compromise FEPC Bill when caught in a cross-fire between liberals who resented his efforts to weaken the bill and Southerners who opposed any FEPC whatsoever.

"I found that there can be no compromise on an FEPC Bill," said Pepper. He said that he agreed to the principle of equal economic rights for Negroes but stated he felt it should be done "in another way, preferably through the courts."

Hits Bilbo

Pepper, however, blasted Sen. Bilbo's filibuster on the FEPC as "disgraceful" and stated that he would vote for cloture to end the attempt to "talk the bill to death."

Regarded as one of the leading liberals in the Legislature, Pepper indicated that he felt FEPC was an attempt to change social conditions too rapidly. Citing his record on the anti-poll tax bills and other liberal measures, the Floridan said he wished there "was some way to make a widespread distribution" of Negroes so that the problem would not be too acute in any one region.

When a Defender reporter corrected him on his statement that "50 per cent of the people in Mississippi are Negroes," Pepper said that, nevertheless, such large concentrations of Negroes in one area constituted a problem "which is essentially different from that in New York or Chicago."

Pointing to the bitter opposition faced by Southern advocates of liberalism, Pepper said that his last photograph taken with Negroes in 1942 at a Los Angeles Baptist church, had been circulated against him throughout his home state. He indicated that he did not wish to have this experience repeated.

Pepper said that "the true spirit of the South is the spirit of liberalism," and added, "I am not a Southern Bourbon in any sense of the word." 7-7-45

Fair Deal For Negroes

This is addressed especially to those people, unacquainted with the "deep south," who think congress must do something to insure fair employment practices because Negroes in the south are either denied the right to work or forced to toil long hours and paid in table scraps, old shoes and second-hand clothing.

(Incidentally, an F. E. P. C. investigation a year or two ago revealed more unfair practices in Detroit than in Texas, and now the reduced staff is giving most of its attention to the "ten worst cities," only three of which are south of the M. & D. line.)

I dislike writing about my private affairs, but in this instance it is unavoidable. After all, how can any witness testify without being personal?

South Carolina is not the deepest south on the map, but in all that is typical of the south it qualifies as Exhibit A.

The small brick house that is now my winter home in South Carolina was built while our nation was enjoying one of the periodic economic sprees we call booms. Everything was outrageously high. Cement was $2.50 a sack; the poorest quality of oak flooring (the only kind available) cost $140, and pressed brick cost a nickel a brick, $50 a thousand.

My boss carpenter was a white man. I paid him $5 a day. The brick mason was a Negro. He charged me $15 a day, and the white man who mixed mortar for him cost me only $2.50. (The Negro mason found another one for me in a neighboring town, and he also charged $15 a day, but his work was so awful it had to be torn down and he quit without waiting to be fired.) 8-20-45

The plasterer was a big Negro with a fine baritone voice who sang as he worked. He was an expert. I have forgotten what he charged, but he took the job "by contract" and set his own price.

Every white painter in town was tied up for months to come, but a transient came by just in time. He was a little brown Negro and one of the best workmen I ever saw. I think he charged me $5 a day. His only fault was that he got drunk every weekend and I had to bail him out of jail every Monday morning. 8-20-45

Negroes get the lowest wages because they do the common labor; but in every pick and shovel gang, in ordinary times, you find unskilled white men who are drawing the same wage. Skilled Negro workers, around home, get the pay of skilled white workers.

I do not mean to say that Negroes get an economic fair deal. I am only testifying concerning a few matters in one small place which I happen to know about.

The Senate: Heights and Depths

New Republic

OUTSIDE, the damp Washington heat of 97 degrees pressed down on the sweltering city like a hand. In the Senate chamber it was cool—cool as a big-city movie house—but tempers were reaching the breaking point. For the Chamber had stood almost all it could endure and Negro-baiting Bilbo was still carrying on his venomous filibuster against the Fair Employment Practice Act.

There he stood, a little, hateful man with a small, triangular, catlike face, peering out from steel spectacles, scanty hair brushed back over narrow forehead, and using words of racial bigotry against Catholics, Jews and "Negras" that would have made Goebbels chuckle. The audience in the galleries, many of them servicemen, moved about uneasily, or gave embarrassed giggles. A few Senators were at their desks; others glanced in through the glass doors of the lobbies, sighed helplessly, and departed. Under the archaic Senate cloture rule there was little they could do. On and on Bilbo talked, hour after hour; long into the night his filibuster proclaimed the helplessness of the American democratic process. A majority in each chamber favored continuation of the FEPC, but the minority would not let it function. "Some of my best friends are Catholics," observed Bilbo, before launching a new attack. Around midnight the Senate lacked a quorum, although Sergeant-at-Arms Wall Doxey and his assistant scoured the city. And next day Mississippian Eastland took up the thread, preaching racial hatred in even more vicious terms from the very floor of the American Senate. 7-9-45

This was the curtain-raiser and prelude for the Senate debate on the San Francisco Charter. By the indulgence of Bilbo, who had the floor and whose permission it was necessary to obtain in order to interpose other business, Tom Connally and Arthur Vandenberg made their eloquent reports on the international situation, and hope for world brotherhood. Connally preceded Bilbo; Vandenberg next day preceded Eastland. I doubt if ever there have been two days on which the Senate rose so high and then stooped so low. Vandenberg's speech in particular was moving and effective. It was to a Senate still shaken by the Bilbo-Eastland filibuster that Truman came this week to make his own dramatic appeal for prompt ratification. Well, the charter certainly will be ratified. Isolationists may make a brief effort to attach a rider limiting authority of the American delegate, but in my opinion it will get nowhere. About the only element of suspense left now is how long debate will take, and how few the opponents will be. Valuable though the charter is, perhaps the Bilbo-Eastland filibuster that preceded it was helpful too, in its way, as a reminder not to expect sudden Utopias. With such hate and bigotry in the world—the Goebbelses in Germany, the Bilbos in America—even the most effective international machinery will be hard pressed to succeed. 7-9-45

It is the ungenerous but perhaps inevitable consequence of the collapse of Senate opposition to the charter to wonder how far that document might have gone and have still been accepted under present circumstances. It is my impression that the Senate would have taken a considerably stronger measure and even one in which some degree of sovereignty was sacrificed. The very unanimity which the charter now seems likely to obtain indicates its possible failings. At any rate, by the standards of 1919, America's forthcoming entrance into a world organization evidences a tremendous advance. The real battle, so far as Congress is concerned, has moved ahead to the time when it becomes necessary to implement the charter, particularly with economic coöperation. Fortunately, votes on these matters—on loans abroad, on authority of the American delegate, on the establishment of an American section of the international police force—will come up under simple majority-vote procedure. The only two-thirds hurdle is the charter's ratification as a Senate treaty.

The House has passed the Truman recommendation to make the presidential succession go through the office of the Speaker. The Senate will take a long time before passing this very dubious measure, and may reject it altogether. Mr. Stettinius is out as Secretary of State and James F. Byrnes has been appointed to the job. The Senate has confidence in Mr. Byrnes, its former colleague, and will see little benefit in shifting the role of heir-apparent from his office, where it now lies, to that of the Speaker. The historic record shows that the appointed Secretaries of State are generally stronger men than the elected Speakers of the House. It is a fair bet, I think, that the presidential succession will stay where it is.

Mr. Truman is fashioning his cabinet gradually to his own pattern and is expected to make further changes shortly. The least enviable role so far is that of Clinton P. Anderson of New Mexico, who started out as a congressional critic of the Food Administration and suddenly found himself the new Secretary of Agriculture. Mr. Anderson must be a very brave man indeed. Congress has insisted upon giving him more and more authority over food, and Mr. Truman has not made his position any easier by telling interviewers that he thought the meat situation would get better as soon as Mr. Anderson took over. 7-9-45

Notes. – According to the Guild Reporter, no Boston newspaper carried the news that two of the city's largest department stores—Jordan Marsh and Kennedy's—and 40 other New England clothing stores had been convicted of violating OPA price ceilings, with total fines of $12,500. Instead they printed columns of display advertising from the convicted stores on the day the penalty was announced. The American Society of Newspaper Editors which recently sent a three-man mission round the world in the interest of access to news should include Boston in its next itinerary. . . . Rivalry between army and navy continues in the Pacific and some observers fear that it may take another Pearl Harbor to dramatize it; meanwhile General Eisenhower's "one-uniform" recommendation for all armed forces is not making much headway. . . . An inter-Allied commission has just decided that coal is the big problem of Europe, taking precedence even over food and coming second only to security itself.

SOUTHERNERS TALK OF TRUCE ON FEPC

Some Suggest $200,000 Grant to Temporary Body in Move to Bar Permanent Agency

N.Y. Times

WASHINGTON, July 7 (AP)—Southern foes of the Fair Employment Practice Committee considered today a suggested compromise to keep it alive as a temporary agency and block efforts to make it permanent. N.

The compromise was advanced informally by a Southern House leader in an effort to break the month-old deadlock that has tied up funds of sixteen war agencies in a $752,000,000 supply bill for the fiscal year already a week old.

It provides for granting to the FEPC as now constituted, a temporary agency created by executive order and lacking legal power to enforce its orders, a "token" fund of perhaps as much at $200,000. The agency's budget estimates for the fiscal year are $599,000.

On the Speaker's table in the House is a discharge petition which, if signed by 218 members, would bring to a vote legislation setting up a permanent commission to prevent employment discrimination because of race, creed or color. The petition now has about 130 signatures. 7-8-45

Many friends of the present FEPC are displeased with the permanent proposal because they believe it is too far-reaching and have declined to sign the discharge petition.

The originator of the compromise declared, however, that if the deadlock continued and it became apparent that the FEPC will get nothing at all "the heat will be on and we may find ourselves with a permanent FEPC."

"It would be far better to give them a small amount to operate without legal power to act," he added, "than to have them set up as a statutory body."

The compromise was advanced as Appropriations Committee members indicated that they might reverse themselves and recommend that the House accept the $250,000 appropriation voted by the Senate to the temporary FEPC, or at least a part of it. That would break the deadlock provided it could get the support of the House.

There has been no record vote in the House on the FEPC this year, its opponents blocking such a vote by parliamentary moves.

Should the deadlock continue much longer, thousands of employes of war agencies will go payless for work performed since July 1. Congress has authorized the agencies to operate in anticipation of funds to be provided eventually, but has not allowed them to do any actual spending.

Support of FEPC bill pledged

Los Angeles Tribune 9-13-45

Support in the fight for a permanent FEPC was promised here last week by John S. Barcome, chairman of the Republican Central Committee of Los Angeles county. Los Angeles, Calif.

Said Barcome, "We believe in the prevention and elimination of practices of discrimination in employment against persons because of race, creed, color, or national ancestry or origin. The Policy Committee of the Republican Central Committee of this country, in its recent submission of policy recommendations to the executive committee of the party and to all segments of the party, specifically wrote: 'We pledge the establishment by Federal legislation of a permanent FEPC'."

"We also are aware that certain interests, in setting-up a so-called non-partisan group to support an FEPC bill in the state legislature, placed individuals in front of the bill who are entirely of one party,—and that party was not the Republican party. We realize that Republicans in this area were never invited to participate in the handling of the bill until the bill was 'buried' in committee, and the so-called non-partisan griup found itself unable to move the bill for vote." 8-13-45

It was pointed out that William Nickerson, Jr., was an active member of the Policy Committee of the county Republican party, and as such, has helped to draft policies of the party.

Labor Dept. Studies Taking Over FEPC

N.Y.

Schwellenbach Says Union Leaders OKd Inclusion of Agency

P.M

By John T. Moutoux
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, July 18.—Secretary of Labor Lewis Schwellenbach is studying the desirability of bringing the Fair Employment Practices Committee, the War Labor Board, and the National Labor Relations Board into the reorganized Labor Dept.

Other Government agencies being considered for inclusion in the enlarged department include the U. S. Employment Service and the Labor Divisions of the War and Navy Depts. and of the War Production Board. 7-18-45

All this would be in line with the recommendations made to him by most of some 30 labor leaders who have called on him since he took over the office July 1.

"There was a uniformity of opinion among them," he said, "that all functions of the Government that involve labor should be included in the Department."

Same as Rest

7-18-45

Asked if that included FEPC, Schwellenbach replied in the afirmative, adding that its activities were closely connected with labor. He said he would study its inclusion, "the same as all the rest."

The new Secretary made it clear that if he took over these bureaus, it would be more with the idea of centralizing administrative functions—doing the "housekeeping" as he called it—than for the purpose of controlling the decisions of such agencies as the WLB or the NLRB.

Schwellenbach said that the second point on which all his labor callers agreed was a desire that the Labor Dept. do all within its power to minimize strikes and labor controversies, especially during the reconversion period.

William Green, AFL president, Philip Murray, CIO president, and John L. Lewis, UMW president, were among the callers.

BLS Gets Clean Bill

Lewis Schwellenbach

Schwellenbach discounted printed reports of his dissatisfaction with the Bureau of Labor Statistics by announcing that he had asked the heads of all but two of the Department's division to remain for an indefinite period. Included was the head of the BLS. The two exceptions represented divisions that he had not yet finished investigating and therefore excluding them "in no way reflects on them or their chiefs," he added. N.Y.

The Secretary said he has asked the chairman of the House and Senate Labor Committees to introduce bills providing for creation of two additional Assistant Secretaries of Labor. If this is done, he said he would ask that Carl Moran, a recent Assistant Secretary, be made Under Secretary of Labor. Dan Tracy, of the AFL, will continue as one of the three Assistant Secretaries. Presumably the other two would come from the CIO and the Railroad Brotherhoods, although Schwellenbach said he wanted to make it clear that any appointee would have to represent the public in general and not just a certain group.

FEPC

It Can. . . Did Happen Here On The Floor Of The Senate

Pittsburg Courier

Excerpts from remarks of Senator Eastland during filibuster on FEPC appropriation:

"The Communist Party is behind this agitation. The Negro group in the United States is the greatest minority, the largest minority, the most powerful minority politically, that we have. The Communist Party has been behind and has promoted legislative measures such as the one now pending, and I submit the Communist Party is behind the present FEPC."

"What is the object of the FEPC? Economic equality? Then why has it devoted its time to tearing down partitions between white and colored lavatories in Government buildings and war factories? Why has it gone into industry and taken measures to bring about social equality? I will tell the Senate why. It is a part of the Communist program for racial amalgamation in the United States."

* * *

"The Negro race is an inferior race. The Negro organizations which are supporting this measure know that today all the power in the world could not bring about social equality, and could not force the white people of this country to associate on terms of equality with the Negro race. So there is agitation by them for a gradual tearing down, one at a time, over a long period of time, of the safeguards which have been erected to maintain the purity and racial integrity of the white race." 7-7-45

"Mr, President, we must have racial harmony in the United States. We must have racial tolerance in the United States. A great rift has been driven in American life. Our country has been divided and weakened, in accordance with Hitler's doctrine of divide and conquer, and Stalin's doctrine of making the races and classes in each country race-conscious and class-conscious in order that the state may be weakened. Has this agitation helped the Negro? Has it helped any minority group? Mr. President, whom has it helped, except the cause of Communism in the United States?"

"But let us go further. By setting up this agency, we grant an unfair preference to the Negro soldier or to the soldier of a minority group over the returning white soldier. We set up an organization to see that the returning Negro soldier gets a job, to help him get a job, and to see that there is no discrimination in giving jobs to the white soldier. Who has won this war? Why should the white soldier, the warrior who has returned home after having achieved the greatest victory in history, be penalized for political reasons?"

* * *

"To begin with, that division (the Ninety-second)—and I state it authoritatively—had the best equipment of any division in the American Army; it had the best training of any division in the American Army. For political reasons—and when I say 'political reasons,' I quote American geenrals—they were forced to commission some Negro officers for that division. In not one instance, Mr. President, could they place a Negro officer in a responsible position. In not one instance could they place upon his shoulders the responsibility of combat, and I tell you now, Mr. President, that division could not be placed in an important position in the line. Had we depended upon it, the German Army would have gone south to the toe of the Italian boot and destroyed our armies in Europe. The Negro soldier was an utter and dismal failure in combat in Europe. When I make that statement, it is not from prejudice; I am not prejudiced against the Negro."

"In a number of instances these soldiers would desert their posts of duty, officers would desert their posts of duty, without cause, and the whole division would, without cause, rhyme or reason, quit fighting. The officers told us the soldiers had no initiative, no sense of responsibility, very low intelligence, and were a failure."

* * *

"Mr. President, I understand a Negro from the War Department went to Italy, and after coming back, gave out a statement that the division had not been so 'hot,' that it had failed in combat, and he made the excuse that it was because of discrimination in the United States and because of segregation here."

* * *

"In Europe Negro soldiers are used principally as service troops behind the lines, and I state now, on the authority of many Ameri-

Fair Play For The Negro

John Temple Graves has something to say in his column this morning about fair employment practices. He laments the fact that so fine a name as "fair employment" should have been tacked on to a bureaucratic monstrosity and legislative trouble-maker. And he takes occasion to make the point, and it is a pertinent one, that the white people of the South who are decent and what he calls "commonly sensible" believe in fair employment practices where Negroes are concerned, though not under the dictation of a federal bureau and in the absurd details of a federal law agitated by Northern politicians for their own selfish political benefit, politicians more concerned with the Negro's vote than with his welfare.

Mr. Graves quotes the new Governor of North Carolina, Gregg Cherry, as predicting that "as our industry and even our agriculture becomes more and more mechanized, employers will tend to look at the individual competence and skill of a man rather than his color". In Gov. Cherry's opinion, "the time will come when a colored man need not expect to get a job, or his race a percentage of jobs, on the basis of color, but each individual will seek a job on the basis of skill and efficiency as a person".

That is the way it ought to be, and that is the way it will have to be. The Negro must look to the day when he will be given a job, not because he is a Negro but because he is entitled to the job on the basis of his skill and efficiency. No fair employment practices bill will bring that about. It will come as the result of social evolution and economic readjustment.

can officers, that they were lazy; that they would not work; that it was a mistake to send them to Europe; and furthermore, that they should be returned from Europe and sent to the Pacific, where there are races of color."

"Mr. President, I dislike going into these things, but by the pending measure we are actually asked to discriminate against the white war veteran, and give the Negro preference over him."

* * *

"It was necessary during the Normandy invasion to disarm a good many Negro soldiers, I was reliably informed by a high-ranking general in Paris. Negro soldiers would go to farm houses and holler 'Boche! Boche!' as if they were looking for Germans, call the men of the families out into the yards, and hold guns on them while they went in and criminally assaulted the women members of the family. In the small Normandy peninsula, from invasion date to May of this year, there were thirty-three cases of criminal assault—twenty-six by Negroes, seven by whites."

* * *

"Mr. President, I state that the conduct of the Negro soldier in Normandy, as well as all over Europe, was disgraceful, and that Negro soldiers have disgraced the flag of their country."

* * *

"In Europe the Negro has crossed the color line. He has gone with white girls of the very lowest caliber, and I know how the Northern white boy feels about that. Thank God, the white soldier from Pennsylvania, the white soldier from New York, feels about the racial question today just as does the veteran from Mississippi or Georgia or South Carolina or Tennessee."

"FEPC might be good politics now, but I have talked to literally hundreds of soldiers from every section of the country, and I know what they think about it. I know what is going to happen when the soldier returns home."

* * *

"Mr. President, I state further that the conduct of the Negro soldier in Europe, the soldier to whom it is proposed to give preference, has caused the United States to lose prestige; he has caused hatred for our country and for our people. I was told in any number of cities that decent white girls could not go out on the street because they would be accosted by groups of drunken Negro soldiers. I know from conversations with Army officers, with generals in the American Army, and with civilians, that in England, in France, in Belgium, that feeling exists in a very intense degree. He has disgraced the flag of his country. He will not fight. He will not work. Yet we give him a preference. We discriminate against the white soldier in order to get some Negro votes."

7-7-45

"This agitation for social equality has destroyed racial tolerance; and I state frankly that the white soldier is openly and avowedly waiting for his chance when he returns to the United States."

* * *

"I spoke to a young man from Altoona, Pa., who broke down and cried when he told me that he realized there would be serious trouble in the United States in the post-war era; that the racial question would be the great domestic issue to be settled, and he said he was fearful of the results. He said he did not like the attitude of Negro soldiers. That they had been taught they could cross the color line, and he said that under no conditions would they be permitted to do so."

* * *

"There will be no FEPC! There will be no social equality! There will be no such un-American measures, Mr. President, when the soldier returns. Thank God, there still burns in his breast the fire of real Americanism. Thank God, he is going to put a stop to this agitation, to this attempt to destroy his country, when he gets back home."

"We are dealing with an inferior people, and yet we are discriminating against the white soldier, in favor of the inferior person, and under this measure we are giving the inferior person a preference in securing employment."

* * *

"I have no prejudice against the Negro. I believe in economic equality for him. I believe in equal pay for equal work. I believe that every Negro is entitled to kind, just, and considerate treatment. I have defended Negroes in court on numerous occasions. Several of them are personally employed by me in my business. I know their shortcomings. I know what they can do. I am speaking in behalf of racial harmony in America. There is an attempt being made by the Communist Party, which knows the desire of the Negroes for social equality, to inflame them, and, step by step, tear down the safeguards and segregation practices which have been established in the United States."

Here are some excerpts from Senator Theodore G. Bilbo's remarks in his filibuster against the Fair Employment Practices Bill:

"If this bill passes it is so far-reaching they will be up here going into every office on Capitol Hill and saying you'll have to stick some Jews in your offices."

* * *

"I want good homes, colleges, school, swimming pools and ball parks for n——rs. But I don't want them puddling around and messing in my pool."

* * *

"This is a damnable, Communist, poisonous piece of legislation."

* * *

"If you go through the Government departments there are so many n——rs it's like a black cloud all around you."

* * *

"Some Catholics in this country are lined with some rabbis trying to bring about racial equality for the n——rs. Some of my best friends are Catholics. A Catholic priest in my State gives me a birthday present every year. But you can't get away from the fact that some of them are rotten."

* * *

"The n——rs and the Jews of New York are working hand in hand. That's why you find Eugene Meyer—a Jew—(owner of the Washington Post) denouncing me and saying I'm bankrupt."

* * *

"I'm not taking any chances on this bill passing. I'm going to a funeral Monday. I'm preaching a sermon in advance. The FEPC is dead."

* * *

"If the n——rs will come North, God bless 'em. I want 'em to come North."

* * *

"The few Jews in Mississippi are exemplary citizens. They all vote for Bilbo."

* * *

"As I told those newspapermen and this guild, if they don't stop this Communism there's going to be a revolution and we'll lick the whole damn crowd."

Excerpts from remarks of Senator Dennis Chavez in reply to Senator Eastland during filibuster on FEPC:

"When the casualty lists come from the War Department, when a telegram is sent to a worrying and grieving mother about the death of her child on a foreign field of battle—a boy who perhaps may have had his throat cut by a Japanese bayonet—it matters not whether he happens to have been from the South or the North, or anywhere else! Death on the battlefield does not differentiate between the Jew, the Negro, the Mexican, and the so-calld Anglo-Saxon."

"Due to the intolerance of people who call themselves Americans; due to the hatreds of humans, war manpower was practically at a standstill, and thousands of Americans—indeed, millions—who do not have to ask anyone else's permission to be an American, and who were willing to toil and work and sweat, could not obtain employment because they happened to be of Jewish extraction, or possibly Mexican extraction, or possibly because they happened to come from an area where Negroes live."

* * *

"Some persons were so intolerant that they were willing to jeopardize the boys in the front lines in order to keep a Negro or a Jew, and in places a Catholic, from working in the war effort."

"We find people in this country who would object to and who would not themselves permit fair play to the relatives of those who died in Tunisia, of those who died on Anzio Beach, or at Salerno. There was no discrimination as the boys got off the ships and tried to reach the beaches. There is no discrimination or separation in the military graveyards all over the world. There is no discrimination by the Japanese when he is trying to reach an American boy, be that boy Hebrew, Mexican, Irish, Negro, or what. The Japanese would cut the throat of that boy if he had a chance to do so.

* * *

"In this, our own country, a country which preaches decency for all the world, which preaches fair play for all the world, which wants to adopt the San Francisco Charter, in this country we still find those, as was stated on the Senate floor yesterday, who object to doing something which would provide that a Negro, or a Pole, or a Catholic might have a job after the war."

FEPC to Abandon Five Field Offices

Afro American
Baltimore, Md.

Present Staff of 117 Workers Pared to 51

CUTBACK IS DRASTIC

8-4-45

Backlog of 2,600 Cases Pending Need Service

WASHINGTON — The President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice will close five of its 15 field offices late in August, and reduce its present staff of 117 to 51 persons, Malcolm Ross, FEPC chairman, said Friday.

This action is necessitated, Mr. Ross said, by the recent reduction of the agency's budget from the $507,600 expended last year to the $250,000 appropriated for the current fiscal year.

The committee will continue operation of 10 field offices in war production areas where minority-group problems are likely to be most acute during the remainder of the war, Mr. Ross announced.

These offices are at New York City, Philadelphia, Washington, D.C.; Detroit, Atlanta, Chicago, St. Louis, San Antonio, San Francisco and Los Angeles. The five offices to be closed are at Cleveland, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Pittsburgh, and New Orleans.

Given 30 Days

"The committee ordered a 30-day period in the closing of these offices," the chairman said, "in order to wind up the affairs of these units and to give displaced staff members time in which to seek other positions."

Under the new plan of operation, Mr. Ross said, the typical field office will consist of a regional director and a secretary. The New York City, Chicago and St. Louis offices, however, will have, in addition, one field examiner each.

8-4-45

"This reduction in force, of course, will not permit us to service any of these areas to the same extent as we have in the past," Mr. Ross said. "The handling of complaints of discrimination in war industry and in Government service will continue, but on a necessarily greatly reduced scale. A present backlog of 2,600 pending cases needs servicing."

66 to Lose Jobs

The present FEPC staff of 117, including all field office and Washington headquarters' personnel, will be reduced by 66 persons. In the Washington headquarters, the field operations division will be reduced from eight staff members to four; budget and administration from 17 to 11; and the legal division, effective Sept. 30, from 9 to 5. The information division will be eliminated and its function merged with the review and analysis, which will be reduced from nine to six employees.

700 GEORGIANS GIVE SUPPORT TO FAIR EMPLOYMENT PRACTICE

Democracy and Fascism Clash in Struggle to Efface Job Discrimnation

SOUTH FACES UNWHOLESOME CONSEQUENCES

6-30-45

Seven hundred prominent citizens of Georgia, both black and white, joined last week in a petition to President Truman and both houses of the federal legislature demanding that a permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee be established by statute. The petition, which was addressed to the Congress, reads as follows:

"To the members of the Congress of the United States:

"With far-sighted vision the founders of our republic laid for its foundation stone the divine principle of human dignity. In a shrine in the Library of Congress, revered by all the people of the United States, rests that document which enunciates the basic philosophy of this nation: 'We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.' In support of that declaration is pledged 'our sacred honor.'

"Within a generation, two devastating wars fought in defense of democracy have impressed its meaning and implications upon the people of the world.

"Today, two schools of thought are in conflict: democracy with its philisophy of individual rights and dignity; fascism with its ideology of force, built on discrimination against racial and religious minorities.

"Such discrimination has no place in American life; by its very nature it is fascistic. Yet such discrimination exists in our country and mocks our words before the world. It has handicapped us in making maximum use of our manpower for war production. It has been used effectively in the propaganda of our enemies. If continued it will weaken our leadership in the council of nations; it will lessen the chances for a durable peace.

"Here in the South we have experienced the unwholesome consequences of discrimination in employment. A large segment of our people held at a low wage level has depressed the income of all and has stunted the progress of the area.

"In 1941, the late Franklin D. Roosevelt, in order to make full use of the nation's manpower and to demonstrate on the home front the principles of democracy for which we are fighting abroad, created by executive order, under the war powers granted him by the Congress, the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice as a temporary war agency. It is a significant fact that in his last campaign for office, Mr. Roosevelt singled out by name the Committee on Fair Employment Practice, from among all the war agencies, and advocated its continuance in peace.

"Legislation to establish a permanent Fair Employment Practice Commission is now before the Congress. The act recognizes that in matters of employment the practice of discriminating against properly qualified persons because of race and creed 'forces large segments of the population permanently into substandard conditions of living, thereby creating a drain upon the resources of the nation. Passage of the act would be in line with other feleral legislation, for in the past ten years Congress has enacted twenty-three laws which forbid discrimination in their administration, and the Supreme Court of the United States has repeatedly condemned discriminatory employment practices. Furthermore, the administrative procedure of the proposed commission is not new, since it would be like that of the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, and a number of other administrative agencies, with orders enforceable only by the courts.

Establishment of a permanent Fair Employment Practice Commission is supported by some sixty-odd national organizations. Both the Repullican party and the Democratic party are commited to such legislation by their party platforms, as well as by the fact that the presidential nominees of both parties promised support to this legislation in the last national campaign.

We are approaching the end of our military war. Events are moving swiftly. We cannot afford to permit our actions to lag behind the tempo of irresistible forces.

"We join with President Truman in calling upon the Congress to fulfill the pledges of their parties by enacting S. 101-H. R. 2232, setting up a permanent Fair Employment Practice Commission to prevent economic discrimination based on race, creed, national origin, or ancestry."

Dixie Solons Talk Of FEPC Compromise

Montgomery adv.

Plan To Give Agency Small Fund To Head Off Permanent - Unit

7-8-45

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(AP)—Southern foes of the Fair Employment Practice Committee considered today a suggested compromise to keep it alive as a temporary agency so as to block a move to make it permanent.

The compromise was advanced informally by a Southern House leader in an effort to break the month-old FEPC deadlock that has tied up funds of sixteen home front war agencies in a $752,000,000 supply bill for the fiscal year already a week old.

Token Fund Proposed

It provides for granting the FEPC as now constituted—a temporary agency created by executive order and lacking legal power to enforce its orders — a "token" fund of perhaps as much as $200,000 to continue to operate.

The agency's budget estimates for the fiscal year are $599,000.

By allowing FEPC to continue without giving it legal backing, the agency's foes believe they might slow down a drive to give it permanent and legal status.

Lying on the speaker's table in the House is a discharge petition which, if signed by 218 members, would bring to a vote legislation setting up a permanent commission intended to prevent employment discrimination because of race, creed or color. The petition now has approximately 130 signatures.

Many friends of FEPC are displeased with the permanent proposal because they believe it is too far-reaching and have declined to sign the discharge petition.

Permanent FEPC Feared

But the originator of the compromise, who declined to permit use of his name, said that if the deadlock continues and it becomes apparent that FEPC will get nothing at all, "the heat will be on and we may find ourselves with a permanent FEPC."

"It would be far better to give them a small amount to operate without legal power to act, than to have them set up as a statutory body," he explained.

The compromise was advanced as House appropriation committee members indicated they may reverse themselves and recommended that the House accept the $250,000 voted by the Senate, or at least a part of it. That would break the deadlock, provided it could get the support of the House itself.

There has been no record vote in the House on the FEPC this year, its opponents blocking it through parliamentary moves.

Should the FEPC deadlock holding up the funds for the war agencies continue much longer, thousands of employes of those agencies will go payless for work performed since July 1. Congress has authorized the agencies to operate in anticipation of funds to be provided eventually but has not allowed them to do any actual spending. 7-8-45

Bilbo Lambasts White Georgians For Backing FEPC

Black Dispatch

ATLANTA,—(ANP)—Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo, regarded as one of America's leading race baiters, lambasted 736 white Georgians last week in the senate for urging passage of a permanent FEPC act. 7-7-45

Bilbo called the white Georgians "Quislings of the white race" for advocating a permanet FEPC law and described this city as a "hotbed of Southern Negro intelligentsia, Communists, pinks and reds."

The Mississippian's accusations were included in a letter he sent to Dr. M. Ashby Jones, retired local Baptist minister; the Rev. William Holmes Borders and Armand May, local manufacturer.

The 736 Georgians asked "fair play for all American citizens," said Dr. Jones. He added that their stand was "an appeal to reason instead of prejudice, which is outdated in the South."

Bilbo's letter was inserted in the Congressional Record.

F.E.P.C. Backers Strip War Agencies of Funds

Courier Journal

Appropriations for 10 Bureaus Knocked Out In Retaliatory Action By House Advocates

7-6-45

By WILLIAM S. WHITE.

Special to The New York Times and The Courier-Journal.

Washington, July 5.—House backers of the Fair Employment Practice Committee, resolutely denied money authorizations to continue the agency, retaliated today by striking from the overdue war agencies appropriation bill allocations aggregating $618,000,000 for ten other Government bureaus directly assisting in prosecuting the war.

As the controversy thus deepened in harshness and complexity, while several hundred persistent advocates of F.E.P.C. from New York and Philadelphia walked about the corridors of an angry Congress, all House plans for a summer recess were imminently threatened and it developed as well that unless some compromise could be made within two weeks many thousands of Government employees apparently would have no pay day late this month.

'Sit Down' Proposed.

Tonight, F.E.P.C. proponents in the Senate, which had voted $250,000 as a part of the war agencies bill to carry the agency forward, declared themselves determined to go on in its behalf to the end and as they considered the alternatives a movement was on foot among them to try to have the Senate simply "sit down" on the issue and refuse this latest of the bills of the House.

7-6-45

Senator Chavez (D., N. M.), who had been leading the fight for F.E.P.C. in the Senate, suggested that this could be done simply by a majority vote in the Senate Appropriations Committee tabling the new House measure. That measure, which should have been passed before last Saturday midnight to provide the funds to continue a total of 19 war agencies, emerged from the House today in a form so shrunken and so involved in parliamentary technicalities as to present to those who sought some solution a far more formidable job than they had faced before.

New Bill Prepared.

The position was this: The House from the start had refused to give anything to F.E.P.C., which is a temporary organization set up by President Roosevelt to try to end discrimination by employers in hiring workers. On Saturday the Senate, which within its own membership had been bitterly engaged upon the issue, adopted at last a compromise amendment to the war agencies bill allowing $250,000 for F.E.P.C. and appropriating $771,000,000 altogether for all the war agencies.

When this measure reached the House for conference Southern opponents of F.E.P.C. stood adamant against it and at length the House Appropriations Committee prepared a wholly new war agencies bill, minus F.E.P.C.

When this bill came to the House floor today the situation was such that under parliamentary rule "points of order," which customarily are waived on appropriations bills, could be made against 11 of the affected agencies since they had no precise statutory base. The one agency which was open to this attack, but was not attacked, was the War Relocation Authority.

7-6-45

Points of Order Made.

Representative Marcantonio (A. L., N. Y.) and Representatives Celler of New York and Mary T. Norton of New Jersey, both Democrats, set out at once to make such points of order, all of which had to be conceded by the House leadership, and thus knocked from the war agencies bill the following agencies in chronological order.

The National War Labor Board, the Office of Defense Transportation, the Office of Economic Stabilization, the Office of Scientific Research and Development, the Office of Inter-American Affairs, the Office of War Information, the War Production Board, the War Shipping Administration, the Office of Strategic Services and the Petroleum Administration for War.

The resulting bill carried $134,000,000 instead of the $752,000,000 it had carried upon submission to the House, and the shouts of the leaders on both sides left no doubt that compromise had been made more difficult than ever.

Accepts Showdown Challenge.

For example, Representative Hendricks (D., Fla.) a member of the Appropriations Committee, recalled that the F.E.P.C. advocates had expressed a willingness to "stay here all summer" for a showdown, and added:

7-6-45

"If there is to be an implied threat that we must make an appropriation (for F.E.P.C.) to get a recess, then as far as I am concerned there will be no recess this summer. And some of the members from near by who have been accustomed to taking week ends at home may find it extremely difficult to continue that practice." This appeared to have been directed at such delegations as those from New York City and Philadelphia.

It had been thought in Congress heretofore that employees of the war agencies could be paid through an emergency blanket provision hastily inserted last Saturday in a noncontroversial deficiency bill. But the Treasury held that while this emergency clause would permit the agencies involved to incur obligations for the fiscal year that began on Sunday, it did not empower them actually to hand out money.

Two 'Wilful' Groups in House Block FEPC, Rep. Norton Says

P. M.

She Protests Sabotage of Bill in Tactics by Commitees

7-4-45

By United Press

WASHINGTON, July 4.—Rep. Mary T. Norton (D., N. J.) said that two groups of "willful" house members have prevented the House from considering FEPC (Fair Employment Practices Committee) legislation.

Southern members defended Committee action against the measure as vital to the national welfare. A fight will be made in the House tomorrow to overrule the action by two committees and permit the House to consider an FEPC appropriation.

Mrs. Norton told the House that President Truman asked the Senate to consider not only the words of the world security charter, but the spirit in the light of "human rights and fundamental freedoms for all men and women."

"Later on a group of six willful men on the Rules Committee, which controls legislation in the House, and 21 on the Appropriations Committee refused to grant this request" for the House to be permitted to vote on FEPC funds, Mrs. Norton said.

"How dare we explain what freedom and justice is to the other peoples of the world when we deny it to a shall group of our own people?"

Her remarks brought two Southern Democrats to their feet in defense of Monday's FEPC blocking action.

Rep. Dan R. McGehee (D., Miss.) congratulated members of the Rules and Appropriations Committtees "for having the backbone not to foist upon the people an unconstitutional act."

Rules Committee Member Rep. Eugene E. Cox (D., Ga.) declared the group was being criticized by Mrs. Norton "for standing guard over the liberties of the people."

He added that he could understand Mrs. Norton's disappointment because "once upon a time Old Mother Hubbard went to the cupboard to get her poor dog a bone and when she got there the cupboard was bare and so the poor dog had none."

Bilbo Called Spokesman For Northern Money

Fight Against FEPC Bill Hit By Clark Foreman

Atlanta Daily World

NASHVILLE—(ANP)—The names of Sen. Theodore G. Bilbo, frequently called Mississippi's "white supremacy" leader, was mentioned as one of the south's congressmen who are serving the interests of northern capitalists in the fight against the FEPC bill. The tieup of Bilbo and other southern congressmen with northern financiers was revealed last week by Clark Foreman, president, Southern Conference for Human Welfare, during a discussion "What's New About the New South" at Fisk university here.

7-28-45

NORTH OPPOSES UNIT

In explaining the Bilbo filibuster against the FEPC, he said the financial north does not want F. E. P. C. and they are letting the southerners fight it for them. Such senators as Bilbo do not represent the northern capital in the south.

Northern capitalists do not want the poll tax repealed, he continued then cited an Alabama instance where it was said that a repeal of the poll tax would scare northern investors away, and therefore the state was against a repeal.

Clark listed five barriers to democracy in the south:

1. The poll tax.
2. Registration of voters.
3. The white primary.
4. Reapportionment of state legislature to give preference to agricultural sections where votes are more easily controlled.
5. The county unit vote, which he called a distortion of the electoral college.

7-28-45

END OF REBELLION

He mentioned two major political incidents that occurred in the south last July 4. One was the raising of the American flag in Dade county, Ga., during Independence day celebrations and other was the celebration of Independence day at Vicksburg, Miss. Both events were interpreted as marking the end of the 80-year post-Civic war rebellion against the United States government.

7-28-45

In predicting that a permanent FEPC bill will be passed, on the basis of the war-time measure, Clark said human as well as physical values will soon be taken into consideration. The caste system is the basis for fascism, he declared.

FEPC

How the good fight was won

Daily Worker N.Y.

By ART SHIELDS

7-22-45

WASHINGTON.

THE polltaxers' prestige has been blunted by the FEPC victory in Congress last week.

Success of the people in winning the appropriation to continue the non-discrimination committee, that protects the right of Negroes, Jews, Mexicans and other minorities to work, can be followed by victory for the right to vote without paying taxes.

The methods used in the FEPC fight give the cue to victory in many coming battles for jobs and democracy in the months that are ahead. The same combination of skilled, hard-hitting floor work in Congress with determined mass pressure can defeat the representatives of race hatred and monopoly again.

The polltaxers hoped to catch the people asleep when they started their fight against renewing the appropriation for the wartime Fair Employment Practices Committee last month.

In the House they insolently expected to kill or bog down the measure in the committees they control. The perpetually elected polltaxers have won this control by climbing the seniority ladder a rung at a time every two years.

In the Senate they intended to smash FEPC with the dreaded filibuster.

Their strategy was to prevent a floor vote. They knew that most Northern members of Congress would not dare to defy the wishes of organized labor, as well as of the Negro, Jewish and other minority peoples on this point.

The polltaxers had grown even confident by a preliminary success. For months white supremacy spokesman like Rep. Eugene Cox (D-Ga) and Rep. William Colmer (D-Miss) had been able to bury Rep. Mary Norton's (D-NJ) bill for a permanent FEPC in the Rules Committee, that powerful body that can thwart the people's will by preventing a bill from reaching the floor.

The Coxes and Colmers had been able to get away with this strategy because Rep. Vito Marcantonio and other progressives had been centering their attention on the fight against the polltax. But the House end of the polltax fight had been won by late May. The 218th Congressional signature had been gained to take the Marcantonio polltax bill out of the Rules Committee and the House had given the bill a 253-to-105 vote.

This was the situation when the fight against the FEPC appropriation began. But men like Cox, Colmer and John E. Rankin, the shaggy, gray Mississippi Democrat, who rates as the most virulent enemy of the Negro people in the House, didn't sense all the forces against them. They kept boasting that FEPC would never come to a vote.

BENJAMIN J. DAVIS, JR.

CHARLES COLLINS

REP. VITO MARCANTONIO

REP. MARY NORTON

The polltaxers won the first rounds in the fight through their committee control. In a secret session, the Appropriations Committee left FEPC entirely out of the War Agencies bill. The Rules Committee then refused to let the House put in an FEPC amendment from the floor.

Some liberals felt licked. But Marcantonio, who knows the House's parliamentary rules almost by heart, wasn't discouraged. "We'll have another move when FEPC comes back from the Senate," he said. "And by that time Congress will be hearing a mighty protest from the people back home," he predicted. 7-22-45

The filibuster bludgeon then struck at FEPC after the bill had gone to the other end of the Capitol and the Senate Appropriations Committee had inserted a $446,000 fund amendment in the War Agencies bill by a 14-to-4 vote.

Sen. Theodore Bilbo (D-Miss), chief race hate spieler in the upper chamber, was the first to pick up the bludgeon. Realizing that FEPC had a majority, probably two-thirds of the Senators behind it, Bilbo began filibustering before the amendment was even read on the floor. Bilbo himself held the floor two days; his fellow Mississippian, James O. Eastland, spoke another full day. Olin D. Johnston (D-SC), who disgraced the labor forces, who had backed him against "Cotton Ed" Smith on his pro-Roosevelt professions, brought up the rear.

N.Y.

Wild Hitlerite propaganda ran through the filibuster speeches. Ignorant demagogues ranting about the "culture" they represented, spewing lies about "murder" and "rape" against the Negro people, and red baiting continually, were talking against the June 30 deadline, when FEPC funds would run out.

Perhaps never in this generation has the Senate been treated to such a vicious performance as in Eastland's speech, when he slandered the decorated heroes of the 92d Negro Regiment as men who wouldn't fight and falsely accused Negro Senegalese troops of raping thousands of German women in a Stuttgart subway, which didn't exist (Stuttgart has no subways).

To the shame of the Senate, no one answered these liars at the time. Robert F. Wagner and James Mead, New York's two Democratic Senators, however, blasted Eastland on the Senate floor later with documentary War Department proof after citizens' delegations appealed to them for action

7-22-45

The fury of the filibusterers, however, didn't hide their real weakness. The country was against them. Delegations were protesting to Senators. Thousands of protest letters and wires were pouring in. And active steps to end the filibuster by a cloture vote to limit speeches to one hour each had begun.

This weapon, used only five times in Senate history, seemed within the grasp of the FEPC forces Thursday, June 30. The necessary two-thirds vote was apparently at hand at that midnight session. But they didn't get the vote for two reasons: (1) Sergeant-at-Arms Doxey, from Bilbo's own State, didn't round up enough Senators for a quorum when he was sent out on that job; and (2) Sen. Alben W. Barkley, majority leader, who had temporarily gotten the floor, didn't yield to a Senator who wanted to present the cloture petition for a vote.

Barkley said he didn't know what the Senator wanted. Be that as it may, his failure then, as well as his role later in effecting a compromise to cut the FEPC appropriation down to $250,000, reveals the weakness of the Administration leaders on this fundamental issue.

The danger of cloture still presented itself to Bilbo later, however, and his group eventually accepted Barkley's $250,000.

Far better would it have been to have enforced cloture and appropriated the full amount.

The FEPC fund deadline had expired. But haste would still bring funds before the July 21 payroll came due. And Monday morning, July 2, found a delegation of 60 Negro and white men and women from New York.

While Capitol police swarmed around them, the delegates, led by New York's Negro Councilman, Ben Davis, a Communist, and Charles Collins, executive secretary of the Negro Labor Victory Committee, did a wonderful job.

7-12-45

Locked doors barred the delegation from the Appropriations Committee room, where a new War Agencies bill without an FEPC appropriation was substituted for the Senate bill.

Some liberals in Congress felt sick at this point. The Rules Committee wouldn't let the House put an FEPC amendment into the new War Agencies bill. "We are beaten," they said.

But Marcantonio wasn't licked With a militant group of Congress members behind him he took unexpected steps to prevent any substitute war agencies bill from passing while the House was barred from voting for FEPC. So while hundreds of Negro and white union members from Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York swarmed through the Capitol the next Thursday he rose in the House and began raising points of order against one war agency after another. Rep. Emanuel Cellar (D-NY); Rep. Mary Norton and others, with Rep. Hugh De Lacy (D-Wash) abetting, raised points of order too. Ten executive war agencies, involving some 600 million dollars, were stricken from the substitute bill on the technical grounds that Congress had not provided for them by law.

The mutilated bill was ignored by the Senate Appropriations Committee. So the House Appropriations Committee had to reconsider the original, Senate-amended bill with its $250,000 item. The committee, at first, put in a proviso that the $250,000 must be used for "liquidation" only. But after a speech by Marcantonio, calling for defeat of this amendment, the committee added a saving clause permitting the money to be used for the work of the agency.

The amendment was sustained by a 188-to-116 vote later in a dramatic House session when Marcantonio brushed off cries of "Communist," "subversive" and "revolutionary" from the polltax bloc and branded the foes of equality as practising "Hitlerism in America."

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-NY), who had been absent as the result of an accident during most of the fight, and Rep. William Dawson (D-Ill), the two Negro members of the House, got the floor for effective two-minute speeches.

The War Agencies bill of which FEPC is a part, was flown to President Truman soon after.

The delegations had the chance to help wake up Congress to its duties because the masterful parliamentary work of Marcantonio and others prolonged the fight while the protests were rising.

All credit in Congress itself is due to the indomitable progressives, who led the fight of the people.

7-22-45

And none is due to the Republican Party, though it seeks to cash in. Sen. Robert A. Taft (R-O), for instance, who earlier offered an amendment to provide on FEPC without enforcement powers, is now calling on the Negro people to return to their "historic" friends.

President Truman, on the other hand, publicly appealed to the Rules Committee to let the House vote on the permanent FEPC, though he didn't intervene publicly for the wartime FEPC appropriation.

Two jobs lie ahead for FEPC friends. (1) The fight for the permanent FEPC, which needs 70 or more signatures from members of Congress to get a House vote, must be carried through. (2) More funds for the wartime FEPC now on half rations must be won. Senator Mead has indicated the way. A deficiency bill appropriation can furnish the additional funds.

But time doesn't wait.

BEHIND THE FILIBUSTER

Afro-American

(AN EDITORIAL)

Those among us who think Mississippi's Senators Eastland and Bilbo made their vicious anti-race speeches simply to win Dixie votes or kill the FEPC are political and economic adolescents. Their motives go deeper than that.

These men are fighting to preserve a system. The South is still a feudal fortress peopled with vassals and serfs exploited for the benefit of the moneyed class.

Feudalism and slavery must be perpetuated with force. Force is not always physical. It can be psychological, and the task of maintaining an atmosphere of force is the job of the Bilbos, Rankins, and Eastlands.

It is not necessary to maintain an armed band of brigands, such as Hitler created in his SS black shirt Elite Guard, to keep people in a state of fear.

Only a small percentage of the citizens of Germany ever landed in concentration camps, but the existence of these camps, with popular knowledge of the atrocities visited upon the unfortunate, was enough to keep a large mass of the timid in check.

7-31-45

The Southern hierachy has a cheaper and equally effective scheme for keeping both colored and poor whites in subjection.

They simply create a psychology of fear in both races so that the poor whites become the jailers of the poor blacks. But in order to do this, they must remain in an economic jail themselves. Terror is the handmaiden of low wages and exploitation.

The guard in the prison is the natural and fundamental enemy of the man who wants to get out.

During the days of physical slavery, foreign travelers in America were quick to observe that the South was an armed camp. Every white man, regardless of whether he owned slaves or not, felt duty bound at all times to carry a weapon. Slavery makes slaves of both the victim and the master.

Which brings us to our point. The South knows that returning colored veterans are not going to take lying down the same kind of treatment they endured before the war.

The South also knows that in order to maintain the status quo it will need the help of all the whites of the South, poor and rich alike. Each white person must be a committee of one to keep the colored man in "his place."

So it was the job of Eastland to build a feeling of bitter resentment of all whites against colored vets by spreading his infamous falsehoods about colored soldiers engaged in wholesale rape in Europe, to strike fear in the hearts of Southerners, and put them on the alert when the boys come marching home.

Baltimore, Md.

In this way the whites are mentally rearmed with the desire to lynch, a weapon they had apparently placed in its sheath during the war.

The spokesmen of the South are afraid that through educational and civilizing processes, plus a sense of gratitude, the few decent people might develop tolerance toward their comrades in arms and be inclined to live and let live.

This must never happen and so again we have the red flag of rape waved before the bull of Southern passion, all for the purpose of keeping racial hatred and suspicion alive, and the races at each other's throats.

That is the why of Eastland's speech. That is the why of Bilbo. The fight on the FEPC was only incidental and a sounding board for their deeper motives.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—With 2,600 cases of job discrimination on grounds of race, creed, color or national origin still unsettled the work of the Wartime Fair Employment Practices Committee faces near paralysis this summer as the result of fund slashes.

Director Malsolm Ross announces that "the handing of complaints of discrimination in war industries will continue, but on a greatly reduced scale."

Five field offices are being closed in August, said Ross, so that the committee can keep within its apapopriation of $250,000, which is approximately half the sum voted last year. The closed offices are in Cleveland, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Pittsburg and New Orleans. Offices, with reduced staffs, will be continued in New York, Philadelphia, Washington, D. FEPC Proves Bitter Issue For Congress

Congress has a hot potato which is being tossed back and forth from the house to the senate, with no one wanting to hold on to it long. It is the effort to secure an appropriation for continuance of the Fair Employment Practice Committee, which in theory requires that workers, regardless of race, color, or creed, be given equal opportunity. The issues simmer down to that of the Negro question being brought in to the fore and this is a question of major importance on the West Coast where tens of thousands of Negroes have arrived and are engaged in war work. Are they to remain and be absorbed in industry and commerce, or are they to be directed eastward and southward?

The unions, especially in the shipyards and plants, have been attempting to stave off this issue. During a filibuster in the senate some very intemperate speeches were made by Senator Bilbo of Mississippi and some of his southern colleagues. Bilbo didn't spare Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, of whom he spoke in anything but complimentary terms, and another senator drew fire when he charged that Negroes didn't make good soldiers. The anti-FEPC members of congress from the south have been openly hostile to any legislation that would equalize the status of colored and white workers. The Southerners also claim that the Northerners by their acts and at heart were opposed to the FEPC, but feared political reprisals if they voted against it.

The lower house has been attempting to avoid the issue, but the senate has demanded action, as it is holding up a major appropriation bill which includes the funds of the FEPC. So there can not be much more delay. President Truman has urged continuance of the committee, but up to now the whole picture of the FEPC is a complicated one.

The agency, which was one of the Roosevelt New Deal measures, has never been authorized by congress, but was created by an executive order back in 1941 and supplemented in 1943. Congress inserted a provision in the appropriation bill whereby it was ordered that no funds may be used to pay the expense of any agency unless congress has specifically appropriated money for it, or has authorized it to expend funds. That is the reason the FEPC is now stymied. It has no drawing account at all until congress takes action on the pending appropriation bill.

Despite the social significance of the controversy, the importance of the Negro vote is a factor that the politically minded must take into consideration. It is perhaps the most significant single development in American politics in the last decade. In some Northern industrial states the Negro holds the balance of power, and although traditionally Republican, he is presumed to have supported the Roosevelt program. Roosevelt's popular majority over Willkie in 1940, outside the south, was slightly under two million votes. In three large states, New York, New Jersey, and Illinois, the result was close enough to have been decided by the Negro vote. Whether it was, no one can say.

In 1890 only 10 per cent of all Negroes in the United States lived above the Mason-Dixon line. In 1940 it was 23 per cent, and later migrations northward have probably brought the percentage to 30, with an estimate of probably four and a half million Negroes in the north. This whole issue was given another airing recently in Congress when the abolition of the poll tax in the Southern states was being debated before committees and on the floors of congress. Thus we have an issue all bound up in social, union, and political entanglements. There are those who say the Republicans want to bring the dissatisfied Negro vote back into the party. The Southern Democrats do not need the Negro vote.

Back in April 1942 the Republican National Committee had its meeting in Chicago and came out for "ending, under the pressure of war, such injustices as discrimination against the Negro citizens in industry, labor and in the armed services." This verbiage is modeled much after that used by the Democrats. So, regardless of the FEPC legislation, there is a possibility that the colored boys and gals may find themselves in the position of wielding the balance of power politically in the next presidential election. And wouldn't that be something?

LETTERS

Criticizes U. B. for Stand on FEPC Bill

To the Editor—First let me state that I am a Catholic and a reader of your publication. For some time now I have noticed that you do not have a column in which your readers can express their thoughts and opinions and I have begun to wonder if your readers are supposed to digest what you and your writers think is right without having any ideas of their own.

The main reason that prompts me to write this letter is that I do not care for the stand your paper takes on the Fair Employment Practices Commission.

It appears to me that your paper goes to great lengths to let us know that you are in favor of the bill but does not take the trouble to explain just what it is or what the results will be.

WHY DO YOU not tell your readers that it is designed to create employment for the Negroes by taking jobs from others?

Why not tell them that the employer will be forced to hire these people even if he has to fire others to do so?

It is very evident that you expect to have unemployment in the near future or there would be no need of such a bill. Its results as I see it would be like this: a soldier who works for a company which hired a few or no Negroes would return home to find that his employer had work to do but that he could not hire him because he had older employes with more seniority who made up the bulk of his help and he was required by law to hire 10 per cent Negroes.

THIS IS NOT a bill to create work or to abolish poverty. It is a bill to divide unemployment and poverty among all the people.

I am sure that it will make our G. I. Joe very happy especially if he happened to live in one of the many sections of the city where conditions caused by the war and the greed of the capitalists have turned his street and home from something to be proud of to something to sell as quickly as possible at bankrupt prices. Then he will have to find other living quarters at twice their true value. Neither can you convince people that they can live with this recently acquired population in peace and happiness.

Mr. Editor, there is no justice in this bill or in a newspaper which does not give its readers a chance to express their opinions.—Gilbert F. Uline, 2958 E. 81st Street, Cleveland

ARE THE MEDDLERS HELPING THE NEGRO?

The possibility may be remote, but still a possibility, that the Negro of the North may suffer from the meddling white Northerners who are fighting for FEPC. At the same time, the Southerners, opposing "fair practice," may come to realize that the meddlers have eased the "social problem" of the South.

In the United States News we find figures collected to show the considerable increase of Negro skilled labor at war plants. In four years the employment of civilian Negroes increased one million. Foremen and semi-skilled operatives doubled. The survey showed 12 percent of Federal Government employes are Negroes.

All of this is heartening to the Negro, but the survey also shows that in many northern cities, Negro populations have doubled during the war.

Conceding that the Negro can reason equally with the white, there must be many of his kind who are born and established northerners, now wondering what this increase of population means to him, and how his chances at the end of war work will compare with his chances in pre-war times.

The increase of Negro population in northern cities can come from but one place —the South. And most of the southern Negroes intend to remain in their new homes, the survey showed. Each southern Negro in cities with doubled Negro population, is going to reduce by one-half the chances of the "native" northern Negro of finding employment after the war boom.

The migration, it would seem, is bound to reduce the Negro population of the South. That may be an advantage to the South.

The southern Negroes who have remained at home probably are satisfied with their opportunities. They will have more opportunities with less competition for jobs. The South may lose some cheap labor, for it will find returned "migrants" dissatisfied after having enjoyed northern prosperity.

Perhaps the "meddlers" fighting for "fair practice" are not helping the Negro with his problem of self preservation. FEPC may be another effort to "upset nature," which improves conditions gradually and not radically.

New York's most serious problem is overcrowded Harlem. Other cities will find similar, if smaller, problems should work become scarce. For, no matter how much we may talk about and desire "racial equality," the fact remains that the Negro districts provide the greatest percentage of public dependents in a depression.

We continue to believe that the champions of the Negro have the wrong idea in believing that "fair practice" will be a cure-all. We believe the same efforts should be expended in helping the Negro take care of himself, with his own industries, stores, professions, farms, with concentrating upon the employment and service of the Negro by the Negro.

Give the Negroes a chance to progress by themselves, and later on we may need a "fair practice" national law to force them to employ some whites.

The FEPC

Congress has finally compromised the issue of the Fair Employment Practice Committee. After a long deadlock, the FEPC has been given $250,000 for the next year, as opposed to $600,000 which committee members believe is the minimum required to do its job. The bill is confused and ambiguous as to whether the FEPC has now been ordered to go out of business. We earnestly hope that until a clearer mandate from Congress is received, it will continue to function as in the past. The FEPC is an acid test of the intentions of Congress. If this country is not willing to spend $600,000 a year, out of an annual budget of approximately $100 billion, to fight discrimination on grounds of race, creed or sex, America is a good deal farther away from democracy, a good deal closer to fascism, than many people have supposed.

We do not believe that the vote in Congress fairly represents the sentiment of the American people. We think, on the contrary, that it was a demonstration of the abnormally large power of a minority of Negro-hating Southerners from poll-tax states. We hope that next autumn another attempt can be made to marshal public opinion behind the FEPC in such overwhelming strength that the Southern tories will be forced to give up the fight. If this is not done, President Truman's chance of reëlection in 1948 will be seriously diminished. Many thousands of Negroes, both North and South, are saying today that if they have to choose between reactionary Republicans and reactionary Democrats, they prefer reactionary Republicans who at least are not filled, as so many Southerners are, with ideas of racial supremacy that are on all fours with those of the Nazis.

UPHOLDS FEPC AIMS

To the Editor of the Blade:

The rather surprising attack of George Vradenberg on the proposal for a permanent Fair Employment Practice Committee was published in The Blade July 11. What moves me to reply to his letter is the fact that Mr. Vradenberg is a well known Toledo industrialist and a highly respected and influential citizen.

At a time when the integration of Negroes, industrially, is made doubly difficult by the proximity of the demobilization of a million and a half Negro service men, and the inevitable disturbance in employment due to reconversion, his ill considered and and unsupported attack upon the FEPC was not worthy of him as a responsible citizen.

The passage of a law establishing a permanent FEPC does not mean that "the free enterprise sytem goes out the window for all time." A study of the measure as proposed would reveal that it is limited in its application to goverment agencies, industries under interstate controls, unions operating in the interstate field. It is not true that the "boys" have been fighting overseas to eradicate a system characterized by such measures as the FEPC. While to appeal to all of us generally to prevent the passage of the FEPC on the ground that we must otherwise lose the freedom for which our boys have given their lives for the past 150 years borders pretty close to such irresponsible statement as we expect from a Senator Bilbo.

What proposal would Mr. Vradenberg make for these more than 3,000,000 Negroes now in industry or government employ or in the armed services?

The proposal for a permanent FEPC is based on these realistic considerations: First, that discrimination against Negroes has been a deeply rooted part of the pattern of the American economic life; second, that equality of economic opportunity is one of the freedoms which the Negro in America has never enjoyed but for which he has been willing to fight along side of his white American brother; third, that the present status of the Negro American requires a special consideration on the part of the community as a whole if the task of progressively integrating Negroes economically is not to deteriorate.

Some agency of the people such as the FEPC seems to some of us and many industrialists, essential if the free enterprise system is to continue and to preserve our integrity as a free people.

Sirs: Time Magazine

Whether by accident or design, your juxtaposition of the three articles concerning the [FEPC] filibusterers, Vicksburg, and the Marshall Islanders was a masterful presentation of the crisis that confronts America in her aspirations towards world leadership. Throughout the world there are many thousands who, like the Marshall Islanders, are looking to the U.S. and the magnificent ideals which have become symbolical of American leadership. But will they continue to feel that way when they learn about Senators Bilbo and Eastland? 7-30-45

What a tragic paradox it is for this hate-weary planet that one of its mightiest nations, the one presumably destined to lead it into a new era of peaceful cooperation, is unable to heal its own festering wounds of hate and distrust of more than 80 years' duration.

Sirs: Time Magazine

What variety of goons elected Theodore Bilbo to the U.S. Senate? This country stinks to high heaven with prejudice and intolerance and loudmouthed Senators. 7-30-45

No Negro, I am nonetheless for them all the way, and it is time we realized that they are no different from any other race in their capabilities and intelligence, if given the opportunity to develop both.

Senator Bilbo sits on a "black cloud" spitting down on Negroes, Jews, Catholics and Communists. What kind of people live in Mississippi, anyway? It is time some Americans opened their small, tight minds. . . .

"Tragic Paradox"

Sirs: Time Magazine

When I first read your account [July 9] of Senator Bilbo's filibuster against the FEPC [Fair Employment Practices Commission] I was furious, then sick with disgust to think that after so many fine young men of all faiths and races have died to defeat fascism and preserve individual freedom, a U.S. Senator should openly make such vile statements in the U.S. Senate.

In the Army, "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman," or disgracing one's uniform are court-martial offenses. Apparently the Senate would benefit by a similar regulation. 7-30-45

Few people ever see Congress in action or read the Congressional Record. You are doing us a great service by bringing us the actual words of our Congressmen. This is real news, and, to my knowledge, at least, Bilbo's remarks were not quoted in any of the local papers, though Eastland's tirade was.

Filibustering for Murder?

On July 1, 1917, a quiet American community burst into flames. Before East St. Louis, Ill., settled back, 39 Negro Americans had been hanged, shot or burned to death and six thousand more driven from their homes.

There was murder that week in East St. Louis because Negroes, unable to find decent war jobs and hard-pressed to live, had worked as scabs and strikebreakers.

The country quieted down largely because fifteen thousand Negroes marched down New York's Fifth Avenue a few weeks later in a "Silent Protest Parade" but carrying a banner which fairly shrieked, "Mr. President, Why Not Make America Safe for Democracy?"

It quieted down because President Wilson answered that plea—in a limited way and for the duration. Job conditions became easier—Negroes found less discrimination in federal shipyards, arsenals, loading docks.

That was for the period of World War I. But when peace came and factories began to close down, Negroes resented losing their jobs before whites, and whites resented their resentment.

In Omaha, Chicago, Washington

A Negro was lynched in, of all places, Omaha, Neb., the courthouse burned down, and the whole city seethed with violence until federal troops moved in, bayonets unsheathed. There was fighting in the streets of Chicago, and in Johnston County, Arkansas, 25 Negroes and five white men died violently.

There were 26 riots in 1919. And many the next year. In 1921 rioting broke out in Johnstown, Pa., Springfield, Ohio. So it went those years.

The terrible events of 1917 in East St. Louis have been paralleled by the equally terrible Detroit riots of 1943. For the "Silent Protest March" down Fifth Avenue substitute the proposed March on Washington which caught on like wildfire among the Negroes. In place of Wilson's non-discriminatory employment policy that followed the "Silent March," place Roosevelt's Fair Employment Practices Commission which was set up only four days before the threatened march on Washington was to start.

At the end of the last war Negro soldiers returning from France were filled with fury over discrimination. At a ceremony in France, when ordered to sing "America The Beautiful," one outfit of 3,000, which had just suffered 1,100 casualties (for which it had received the Croix de Guerre) stood, arms folded and lips tight. Only the six white officers sang. In Houston, Tex., Negro soldiers were so mistreated that they raided the city, for which 13 were hanged.

Now, for that, substitute the race riots at Fort Bragg, the killing of three men at Dix, the "mutiny" of the four Negro Wacs, the rumors, once heard all over Harlem, that Negro soldiers at Fort Huachuca, Arizona, were hiding FEPC arms in the hills for the day when they would get "even."

It's Worse Now

If this historical parallel errs, it is because the situation today is even more explosive than the situation after World War I.

The Negroes have become less willing to tolerate intolerance. They will not swallow the old injustice of "Last hired, first fired" in the Booker Washington, "Uncle Tom" tradition.

They have looked since 1941 to the FEPC to protect them against discrimination in employment. Any American who now tries to take that simple justice away from Negroes may be responsible for the first shot fired in race riots this time.

We warn Bilbo who filibusters against FEPC with such aplomb, we warn the House Rules Committee which has tabled the appropriation of FEPC funds, we warn a half-irritated, half-disinterested nation watching this, that there is blood in Bilbo's words, murder in the Committee's action.

The next few hours will tell. Are we such a helpless people that we must stand by and watch as a handful of evil men lay the groundwork for possible murder in our land? This is a time for Americans to speak.

EASTLAND MIXES ISSUES

Although we oppose legalizing the birth certificate of the misnamed Fair Employment Practices Committee and are of the opinion that making such an agency a permanent part of the federal structure would be to set up a dictatorship over business that would create rather than eliminate discrimination, The Register is unable to see what relationship the battle record of Negro troops has with the question of continuing or killing the FEPC.

Senator EASTLAND of Mississippi, second youngest of the members of the Senate, uttered highly inflammatory and uncomplimentary references to the war record of Negroes during a filibuster attack on the FEPC. He claimed that his comments were not provoked by prejudice but simply reflected opinions and reports made by high ranking officers of the Army. Accepting EASTLAND's word for the source of his bitter criticism, one wonders just how injection of such matter into the filibuster can help the cause for which he was speaking—opposition to the FEPC.

The FEPC should be judged by its conduct during the period of its existence as a war measure. We do not believe that record justifies continuing it into the peace years when the manpower problem will be somewhat reverse of conditions prevailing in June, 1941, when A. PHILIP RANDOLPH, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and director of the March on Washington, and WALTER WHITE, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, forced President ROOSEVELT to issue Executive Order No. 8802 as the price of calling off the invasion of the capital by tens of thousands of Negroes to protest what they termed "exclusion from the war effort."

The debate over the FEPC is no place, however, for disparaging the combat record of Negroes in the uniforms of the fighting services. Any criticism to be made of Negro troops should come from their commanders, not from the general public. It is dangerous to brand whole units or races for deficiencies shown by some of their number. The high officers who gave the adverse report on Negro troops to EASTLAND also could have designated certain other American units, formed entirely by white troops, which failed to prove themselves in some engagements. Human frailty being what it is, some men will prove heroes and others cowards, regardless of the color of the skin.

The wiser course, we believe, is to leave the evaluation of the Negro as a fighting man to the War and Navy Department and to historians, while the Senate disposes of the FEPC. Neither issue is relevant to the other.

Southern Daily Feels Ashamed Of Bilbo Gang

Philadelphia Tribune
7-28-45

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—The type of representation in Congress furnished by the State of Mississippi is a burden on the South, according to an editorial appearing in the Montgomery Advertiser, one of the South's leading and oldest newspapers, established in 1828.

In a lead editorial last week, the Advertiser declared:

"One would think that the fair name of Dixie, with all her Bilbos, Eastlands, O'Daniels, Coxes, and Rankins in the United States Congress, already has more than enough of shame and reproach to bear without having another Southern Congressman join their company. Surely it is an unkind providence that thus saddles us with a disproportionate number of mentally perverted representatives in the highest legislative body of men in the nation—a body which once was honored by such Southern giants as Clay, Calhoun, Hayne, or a dozen others of hardly less imposing stature. Maybe we in the South are unduly sensitive on the point, at least a few of us may be, but no other section of the country is represented in Congress by so imposing a galaxy of intellectualy bankrupt demagogues and tub-thumpers." 7-28-45

Committee Set to OK Meager FEPC Fund

P.M.

PM's Bureau

WASHINGTON, July 10.—The House Appropriations Committee is expected to meet tomorrow and vote approval of a meager fund of $200,000 for the FEPC as a means of breaking the deadlock on the entire War Agencies Bill.

Despite rumors of House-Senate week-end conferences there was little, if anything, done to settle the issue. House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) denied at his daily press conference that he had taken part in any discussions. 10

Yesterday and today found two members of the House Appropriations Committee—Reps. Clifton Woodrum (D., Va.) and John Taber (R., N. Y.)—out of town. So the Committee is not expected to meet until tomorrow. 7-10-45

Meanwhile, the Senate Appropriations Committee is pursuing its course of silence; refusing to consider the second War Agencies Bill passed by the House, until the House Committee and the House itself act on the first bill and vote one way or the other on FEPC.

The $200,000 compromise which the House Appropriations Committee is likely to take is the fifth figure that has been discussed seriously in connection with FEPC's new appropriation for FEPC in the budget.

It amounts to less than half of what FEPC spent last year and is even $50,000 under the sum the Senate approved for the agency two weeks ago.

Sen. Dennis Chavez (D., N. M.) declared yesterday that, if the House sends the bill back with a cent less than the $250,000 originally approved in the Senate, he will fight to restore it to more than $500,000.

Both Republican and Democratic House leaders who are watching their members drift out of town by the score recognize that there is small chance that the House will have a quorum on hand after Thursday. So they are determined to finish business and get the House off on a prolonged vacation.

The threat of "no quorum" is only one factor which is forcing the FEPC issue to a head in the House. A second is the subtle pressure being exerted on Southern Democrats who reportedly have been warned that, if the wartime FEPC doesn't get some money, a bill establishing a permanent fair employment agency is likely to pass.

Leaders on both sides in the Senate and House hope to get the War Agencies Bill cleaned up this week. But if the House cuts FEPC below the Senate-approved sum of $250,000, supporters of FEPC predict there is more trouble ahead.

Bilbo was allowed to declare and carry out his filibuster "to hold the floor until the fiscal year ends" on June 30, although at the last minute a "compromise" was accepted, hamstringing the FEPC bill. Then Bilbo threw the ball over the fence into the House of Representatives where Rankin and Colmer of Mississippi continue the sabotage.

THIS fight is only beginning, and it can be won. But right now, while fighting, let us get the big lesson from this system of sabotage.

Here is the opportunity for Americans to study the process and structure of our United States Government. Sticking to Mississippi, there are 1,195,000 citizens of that State of 21 years of age and above, and therefore theoretically presumed "under the American system" to possess the right to vote. But only 173,000 people voted in the last election, which is about one-seventh of those supposedly having the right. More than one million adult citizens of that State do not vote for reasons that include the most primitive rope-and-shotgun terrorization and polltax, other State restrictions and the general system of white degradation which is called "white supremacy." Approximately one-seventh, including the worst gangs of organized thugs the world still possesses after V-E Day and also the narrow fringe of well-to-do business and professional classes, cast the votes. Of this one-seventh, somewhat over half cast their votes for Theodore G. Bilbo—but in doing so, lo and behold! they elect, in effect, 96 Senators!

This is not the letter of the law. But we of the United States go rather by the rule that the law is not applied except as it serves certain purposes of the classes in power. 7-7-45

For instance, switch to the House of Representatives. Mississippi has seven members in the House at Washington. Under the U. S. Constitution that State is entitled to seven Congressmen as long as she permits her 1,195,000 adult citizens to vote. But to the extent that she deprives them of the vote, the Constitution requires that her representation be cut down in proportion. She deprives six-sevenths of her adult citizens of the right to vote. Under the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution—passed exactly for this purpose—Mississippi forfeits the right to six out of the seven congressmen.

But this provision of the 14th Amendment has not been applied since the 1870s.

A bloc of some 40-odd men sit in the United States Congress with no right to be there at all as long as the millions of southerners, Negro and white, whom they are supposed to represent, are excluded from the right to vote. Sixteen of the 21 members of the House of Representatives from Texas, for example, would be thrown out of Congress if the present disfranchisement continued and the penalty of the 14th Amendment were applied.

OF COURSE, no single individual brings about this sabotage. Every American ought to see into the background. We are to enter into a period in which every strain upon our democracy will be increased by the dislocation of the change from war production to peace production—questions of employment being first of all. A host of war-fat corporations would like disunity among the people. They would like to wreck, or at least severely to cripple the labor movement, and they consider the South, with its hangover of slavery, with its enormous mass of millions of disfranchised workers and impoverished farmers, with its Bilbos, Rankins, Eastlands and Coxes representing nothing but a cancer in the body politic—as a foothold against the democracy of America as a whole.

But they can be beaten.

Mississippi's 96 Senators

by Robert Minor

Daily Worker

ALL of the 96 Senators from Mississippi are named Theodore G. Bilbo, and all of them have decided unanimously to embark the United States upon a course that will take us through many storms—if the decision of Senators Bilbo stands.

You know there are 96 United States senators—twice as many as there are States in the Union, and under the law they come in pairs, one pair from each state of the 48 States. And not at all do I mean that they are all identical with Bilbo of Mississippi; some are human, or thereabouts. But they all uphold the sacred right of Bilbo to sabotage the process of legislation to prevent the passage of a bill to give the legal right to live like other Americans to that half of the people of Mississippi, and one-tenth of the United States, who belong to the second largest ethnological group of America's basic population stock, those of African descent. 7-7-45

The entire government of the United States, with all its machinery down to policemen on the streets of Washington, defended the right of a single individual to hold up the working of the Senate, prevent the payment of the government employees, interfere with the war, cost the American Army and Navy many lives—in order to prevent the Fair Employment Practices Bill from coming to a

Courier-Journal

Says He Was Misinterpreted

To the Editor of The Courier-Journal.

I find that The Courier-Journal and other Southern newspapers have misinterpreted a letter of mine and other men published in the New York Times last winter against the New York Fair Employment Practices Bill as meaning that we were also opposed to the federal measure. I cannot speak for all the other signatories, but my opposition to the New York bill was not in any way due to any objection to the federal measure. Louisville, Ky.

There were grave faults in the bill signed by Governor Dewey and I questioned the necessity for the whole measure as long as the federal Government was concerning itself with this field. Had I known what action Congress would take in regard to the federal commission I should probably not have opposed the New York measure, despite its weaknesses. 7-24-45

To my mind the federal Fair Employment Practices Committee has in every way justified itself and I cannot understand The Courier-Journal's supporting its work in wartime and yet finding its continuation undesirable in peacetime.

OSWALD GARRISON VILLARD.

Thomaston, Conn.

The Courier-Journal has carried a single editorial reference, February 19, to a letter signed by Mr. Villard and five other New Yorkers in The New York Times February 12. The letter included arguments which clearly applied as forcefully against federal as against State legislation on employment practices. For example: "It is as impossible to destroy prejudice and discrimination by law as it is to control opinion or morals."

The original letter signed by Mr. Villard also noted a difference between wartime employment conditions and those which may prevail after the war. For example: "And if we have a period of serious unemployment after the war, the commission will be overwhelmed with claims, many of them without merit." 7-24-45

Evidently Mr. Villard has revised his views since he signed the letter which we quoted February 19. He is obviously entitled to do this, but, with all deference to him, we do not think he is entitled to say that The Courier-Journal misinterpreted the views expressed over his signature in the letter to The New York Times February 12.—(Editor.

WEEK-END CHATS

By

JAMES A. HAMLETT, JR.

The Phoenix Gazette

THE TRUMAN ADMINISTRATION set itself in town with the Negro voters last week when the Fair Employment Practice Commission was saved. . . During the days of the battle to get the appropriation, things looked as if it was going to be "bye bye Blackbirds" for the Democratic party so far as minority groups were concerned, but through political maneuvering the liberal element saved the day and rendered a great service to humanity. . . . The Republicans thought they had a laugh up their sleeves when Senators Bilbo, Eastland and others were out in front on the back stretch, but in the home stretch, the advocators of Hitlerism were lost in the shuffle. . . . The Republicans killed the FEPC bills in every state except New York and Indiana and supported Senators Bilbo and Eastland in the senate. The score now stands . . The Truman Democratic Administration delivered . . . the Republicans failed. 7-20-45

Of course a lot of things will be happening every day and the score may change. There is yet a measure asking for permanent legislation for a Fair Employment Practice Commission. There will be another battle. So as the score stands today, Truman is in the lead.

JUL 8 - 1945

WITH THE DEAN OF WASHINGTON

CHARLES M. DEAN

Washington Bureau, 1387 Nat'l Press Bldg.

THERE WAS A BIG rush to cancel Pullman reservations by members of the House of Representatives Thursday. The House had planned a summer recess and, though the Senate is to remain in session, had intended to take it by the "three-day recess route." But the War Agency appropriation bill is now in a snarl that may take several weeks to unravel.

The trouble resulted from the appropriation of $250,000 inserted in the bill by the Senate for the Fair Employment Practice Committee. The FEPC had asked for more than twice that amount, but the $250,000 will pay the salaries of the staff of the Washington office and give them a little fund for incidental expenses, though it is conceded it will not provide for traveling to hold hearings to determine whether persons are being discriminated against because of "race, color or creed" by certain employers. Many of the employees are Negroes who are demanding that funds be supplied at once, and threatening the politicians in both the Democratic and Republican parties with dire things if they don't get the money.

When the appropriation bill came back from the Senate to the House the Rules Committee refused to permit a vote on "concurrence" as long as the FEPC amendment was in the bill. The House rules required that it be sent back to the Appropriations Committee. This committee wrote a new bill, again leaving out the FEPC appropriation and this bill came before the House under a "wide open" rule Thursday. Reps. Vito Marcantonio, American Labor party, New York; Mary Norton, Democrat, New Jersey, and Emanuel Cellar, Democrat, New York, are loyal supporters of FEPC. They all have a big Negro vote in their districts. Before the matter came to a vote this trio served notice if FEPC received no appropriation nine other war agencies would receive nothing. This list included the Office of War Information, which is not meeting with much approval on Capitol Hill. Enemies of FEPC promptly assured them FEPC would get nothing.

House rules require all appropriations must be "authorized by law." It was easy for Marcantonio, Mrs. Norton and Cellar to make points of order that eliminates the appropriations for the war agencies who exist because of executive orders by the President. None of them had ever been "authorized by law." This was done and the bill passed and sent to the Senate. It is conceded the Senate will, when it gets around to it, reinsert all the appropriations for war agencies. It is also likely it will reinsert its $250,000 appropriation for FEPC. Enemies of FEPC from the South contend they have the votes in the Rules Committee and a single objection will again send the bill to that House committee. Thus there are excellent prospects the appropriation bill will again be rewritten and the FEPC left out. The supporters of the FEPC hold to their ultimatum requiring an appropriation for FEPC with the threat that unless it is forthcoming the other agencies will suffer by the "point of order route." Unless one side or the other surrenders the bill may be kept in the process of enactment for months. In the meantime the war agencies may obtain funds for operation by borrowing through the Controller General's office. Until the bill actually is passed none of the war agencies will be able to do much planning as to their expenses and there will be much reduction of expenses in all of them.

Ohio Republicans in the House favor letting the $250,000 appropriation stand. They want to go home and until this matter is settled they must remain in Washington. Fortunately the weather moderated toward the end of the week and they did not suffer the usual Washington heat wave in July. Many of them are busy trying to effect a compromise, including Rep. Clarence J. Brown, who is a member of the Rules Committee.

Veterans in Congress say nothing like this ever happened before, but when the war was on in Europe no one dared to raise a point of order that would deprive war agencies of appropriations. There is little prospect of the quarrel being settled in the next week as the Senate insists it must dispose of the Bretton Woods monetary legislation before it acts again on the appropriation bill. But the Senate is set to remain in session as many Senators desire to make speeches on the San Francisco peace charter, even though it is virtually certain that the charter will be approved with less than half a dozen votes against it probable, and likely only half that number will be actually cast in the negative.

The Senators say if the House desires to be stubborn the best thing for them to do is to wait and cool off. That will be possible as long as Washington weather remains as it is this week end.

WASHINGTON.

The Fair Employment Practice Committee faces a reduction of approximately 50 per cent in its personnel and activities in the curent fiscal year, although the question of fair employment practices while the war with Japan continues and during the reconversion period looms important.

This reduction is forced because Congress approved an appropriation of $250,000 only for the FEPC in ambiguous language, which may continue the subject of controversy.

The appropriation for FEPC for the fiscal year which ended June 30 was $446,000. The Budget Bureau recommended the sum of $599,000 for the current fiscal year.

Must Close Regionals

Economies are expected to be effected chiefly by a closing of a number of regional offices. FEPC maintained as of June 30 nine regional offices and sux subregional offices. Only the most important of these offices are likely to continue.

Of its staff of 117 persons, forty-seven are employed in the central offices here and the other seventy in the field. A reduction in personnel in the Washington offices is also anticipated.

Other economies are expected to be effected in such items as travel, for which $63,800 was available in 1945; communications, printing and binding, rents and services, and supplies and materials.

The inadequacy of the fund of $250,000 is demonstrated by the fact that in 1945 FEPC had only thirty-seven field examiners covering forty-eight States and the District of Columbia.

Approval Friday

Final Congressional approval of the compromise appropriation of $250,000 came last Friday when both the Senate and House approved the conference reports on the $769,364,850 war agencies supply bill.

7-21-45

Passage of the bill was delayed thirteen days beyond the end of the fiscal year when the war agencies appropiations for 1945 expired. A bitter fight against any apropriation for FEPC by Southern Democrats was responsible for the delay.

Actually the FEPC controversy was not involved in the question of approval of the conference report as that controversy had been settled on Thursday. But Southern Democrats in the House, who had opposed FEPC, wanted the record to show that by voting to adopt the conference report they were not in fact voting to give FEPC any funds.

Amendment Clarified

The other question they sought to have clarified was the meaning of the language of the compromise amendment. Opponents of the FEPC wanted this language construed to mean that out of the $250,000 appropriation money had to be used for the liquidation of the agency unless Congress passed within the fiscal year legislation creating a permanent FEPC.

The General Accounting Office, to which the compromise amendment was referred for construction, ruled that the money can be used for operation of FEPC, which shall be liquidated by 1946 if there is no permanent legislation.

The compromise was effected last Thursday. There was no record vote in either the House or the Senate on continuing FEPC with an appropriation of $250,000. The compromise amendment reads as follows:

"Salaries and expenses: For completely terminating the functions and duties of the Committee on Fair Employment Practice, including such of the objects and limitations specified in the appropriation for such agency for the fiscal year 1945 as may be incidental to its liquidation, $250,000: Provided, That if and until the Committee on Fair Employment Practice is continued by an Act of Congress, the amount named herein may be used for its continued operation until an additional appropriation shall have been provided; Provided further, That in no case shall this fund be available for expenditure beyond June 30, 1946."

Adopted by Voice Vote

The amendment was adopted first by the House and then by the Senate by voice votes. In the House an effort to obtain a roll call vote failed. Under the rules, a fifth of all present must stand to signify insistence upon a roll call. Only about fifty stood, most of them on the Democratic side.

The Senate accepted the House amendment after Senator Wayne Morse, Republican, of Oregon, criticized both Democrats and Republicans for not making an effective attempt "to maintain FEPC on an adequately financed basis."

Senator Morse contended that it were better that FEPC "not have any money at all than that it be given an insufficient amount of money, which makes it perfectly certain that FEPC cannot do the job which needs to be done."

He said the sum of $250,000 "is totally insufficient for it to succeed in its work and the language in which the amendment is phrased is ambiguous, subject to disagreement as to its meaning and is bound to produce confusion."

Yields Floor

His speech had at first been interpreted as a filibuster to force a reconsideration to give FEPC more money, but he yielded the floor when it became apparent that this was a hopeless undertaking.

7-21-45

Senator Theodore G. (The Man) Bilbo, Democrat, of Mississippi, who previously had led the filibuster against FEPC, said he recognized the futility of continuing to oppose the compromise and that he was "taking his medicine."

In a sudden flip-flop the House Appropriations Committee on Wednesday recommended continuation of the FEPC with an appropriation of $250,000 to be used for the sole purpose of liquidating the agency.

Marcantonio Protests

When this action was reported to the House, Representative Vito Marcantonio, American Labor, of New York, denounced it as "no compromise at all" and called on supporters of FEPC to oppose the committee recommendation. The Appropriations Committee went back to work and emerged with a slight change in its amendment giving FEPC $250,000 to continue its work for a year.

The national war agencies appropriations bill had been pending in Congress since June 1, when the House Appropriations Committee reported it to the House without funds for FEPC on the ground that a bill to authorize a permanent agency was under consideration.

The Senate inserted an amendment in the bill giving FEPC $250,000 but the House Appropriations Committee laid aside this bill and reported a new bill omitting FEPC. Representatives Marcantonio, Mary T. Norton, of New Jersey, and Emanuel Celler, of New York, took turns making points of order against appropriations carried in the bill which were not authorized by law.

When the emasuclated new bil was referred to the Senate Appropriations Comittee, Senate and House leaders, Democratic and Republican got together and worked out the compromise.

U. Of C. Denies Ducking FEP Issue On Radio Forum

Chicago Defender

Widespread reports that the University of Chicago's Radio Round Table had ducked the hot Fair Employment issue were denied this week by university officials.

A proposed July broadcast with Walter White, NAACP chief, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Andrew Higgins, Southern liberal, had been reportedly by passed by the university because of anti-FEPC sentiments within Dixie states which aired the program.

7-21-45

John Howe, the university's radio director, said that withdrawal of the program from its scheduled place had been left entirely up to him. He stated flatly that there was no connections between the university's skipping the FEPC discussion at a time when proponents of the bill were fighting for its life in Congress, and pressure from Southern opposition.

Howe told the Defender that the broadcast had been omitted because of his inability to get "top people" for the discussion.

Mrs. Roosevelt, he said, had declined participation in the radio program at this time and Higgins had been sent out of the country on a government mission. This left White, which the university apparently considered unmatched in the country except by Mrs. Roosevelt or Higgins.

This marked the second time the University of Chicago's Round Table had shelved the NAACP chief from a tentativel scheduled broadcast. The last Round Table at which White was to appear with former Alderman Paul Douglas had been mysteriously buried for no apparent reasons.

Reports of the university's cancellation of an open pro-FEPC discussion while the Congressional fight rages to kill the agency immediately started rumors here that the school or the network had yielded to demands from anti-FEPC forces.

NBC spokesmen, however, said that the program had been fully approved by them and that its choice of personnel was the responsibility of the university.

Advertised as the "oldest educational program on the air" the Chicago Round Table has discussed directly the Negro issue once in the past two years.

Howe said that "if the FEPC becomes an issue" in the future, the university would probably schedule another broadcast on it. He said that the proposed program had "neither been cancelled nor postponed." It simply will not go on the air.

The FEPC

The New Republic

Congress has finally compromised the issue of the Fair Employment Practice Committee. After a long deadlock, the FEPC has been given $250,000 for the next year, as opposed to $600,000 which committee members believe is the minimum required to do its job. The bill is confused and ambiguous as to whether the FEPC has now been ordered to go out of business. We earnestly hope that until a clearer mandate from Congress is received, it will continue to function as in the past. The FEPC is an acid test of the intentions of Congress. If this country is not willing to spend $600,000 a year, out of an annual budget of approximately $100 billion, to fight discrimination on grounds of race, creed or sex, America is a good deal farther away from democracy, a good deal closer to fascism, than many people have supposed.

7-23-45

We do not believe that the vote in Congress fairly represents the sentiment of the American people. We think, on the contrary, that it was a demonstration of the abnormally large power of a minority of Negro-hating Southerners from poll-tax states. We hope that next autumn another attempt can be made to marshal public opinion behind the FEPC in such overwhelming strength that the Southern tories will be forced to give up the fight. If this is not done, President Truman's chance of reëlection in 1948 will be seriously diminished. Many thousands of Negroes, both North and South, are saying today that if they have to choose between reactionary Republicans and reactionary Democrats, they prefer reactionary Republicans who at least are not filled, as so many Southerners are, with ideas of racial supremacy that are on all fours with those of the Nazis.

Liberals Believe FEP 'Gift Horse' Appropriation Bears Watching

(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON — Weathering a death struggle against stubborn Congressional opposition, the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices was given a new, but shaky, lease on life when both houses voted a $250,000 appropriation to continue its work for another 12 months.

This action broke a six-weeks FEPC deadlock and cleared the way for the passage of the 800 million dollars War Agency Appropriation bill which loosed funds for some 19 war agencies tied up since July 1.

The final outcome of the bitter congressional battle can be chalked up as a victory over the "rule-or-ruin" group of southerners in the House, who, abetted by a score or more of Republicans, waged a losing fight to wipe FEPC off the books.

As for the agency which was created by President Roosevelt to combat discrimination in employment based on race, creed, color, or national origin, the outcome represented a decided loss. 7-21-45

The so-called compromise appropriation passed in a heated conflict which shifted from the House to the Senate and then back to the House again gives the FEPC less than half the money requested for its new budget, and sets the agency off to a crippling start at a time when it will need to operate at capacity strength.

Moreover, the language of the House amendment to the Senate-passed war agencies bill is contradictory.

No Strings

Although Senator McKellar (D., Tenn.) president pro tempore of the Senate, stated categorically that the money would be available without strings for operating purposes, Senator Wayne Morse (R. Oregon) expressed doubt "that the courts will agree," adding, "I am perfectly convinced of the interpretation which the foes of the FEPC will make of it the moment public knowledge of this debate fades away . . . I do not think a group of men could have sat down and devised language more clever to thwart FEPC, to doom it, to make it difficult for it to administratively function, to place it under a cloud, to give it insufficiency of funds so that it cannot do a good job, than the language which has been brought to us in this amendment."

In one section of the bill FEPC is ordered to liquidate. This process, according to those close to the agency would take approximately $100,000 of the total for liquidation and other obligations.

If this order is upheld by the Comptroller General of the United States, then FEPC would have only $150,00 — or approximately one-third of the funds voted them last year—for operational purposes.

Seek Official Ruling

Another section of the bill states the total $250,000 are to be used for operational purposes.

It is understood that the agency is pinning its hopes on the latter version, interpreting the entire appropriation voted to be used as an operational fund with no necessity for earmarking any portion for liquidation.

It is expected that FEPC chairman Malcolm Ross will seek early a ruling from the Comptroller General on the intent of the language in the FEPC bill.

Additional Funds

If the agency's position is sustained, they can operate at their present level until mid-January or February and then seek a deficiency appropriation. With the 1946 congressional election looming, it is expected that a deficiency appropriation would have excellent chance of passage.

The House compromise to the Senate war agencies bill came after days of both secret and open haranguing in which House leaders sought desperately to remove the administration from the disgraceful position in which it found itself.

But, there were the handful of southern reactionaires moving under the leadership of William Colmer (D., Miss.) who had to be stopped.

The Senate had steadfastly refused to take action on any new bill the House intended to cook up. This was done in an effort to force House approval of the bill which they had passed. They had decided it would be the Senate bill or nothing.

Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) of the House Appropriations Committee, called a meeting of the committee which brought out what they termed a compromise amendment to the Senate bill. In effect, it recommended the death sentence for FEPC.

The bill read: "for completely liquidating the functions and duties of the Committee on Fair Employment Practices . . . $250,000 provided; that if the FEPC continued by an act of congress the amount herein named may be used for its continued operation until an addditional appropriation shall have been provided.

Rep. Vito Marcantonio of New York, lone American Laborite in the House immediately challenged the so-scalled compromise. "It is no compromise," Marcantonio contended, "It is liquidation."

He immediately began to rally the liberal forces in the House to fight the House Appropriation Committee recommendation.

Marcantonio's brilliant leadership in the FEPC fight won for him the plaudits of the galleries and many of his fellow congressmen—indeed, if not the fear of Southern House leadership, many of whom head important committees.

He has come to be regarded in the last few weeks the leader of the House. His recent success with the anti-poll-tax legislation, and with a resolution reported favorably by the Foreign Affairs Committee to recognize Italy as a full ally has done little to allay these fears.

Through Marcantonio's insistence the language of the amendment was changed to provide for the continued operation of the FEPC "if and until" it is made permanent by an act of Congress.

Colmer accused "the distinguished gentleman from New York" with "cracking the whip" over the heads of the House again. He warned, "this is not a sectional issue," and predicted, that those who are finding out what is in this iniquitous proposal, are not going to find it to be so popular to follow the leadership of the gentleman from New York on this thing in the future.

Cox To Rescue

Quickly, Rep. Eugene Cox (D., Ga.) and company came to the support of Colmer. Others in the group included Representatives John Rankin (D., Miss.), Howard Smith, (D., Va.), and D. Worth Clark (D., N. C.)

This is the same group which has bottled up in the Rules Committee legislation to create a permanent FEPC. Efforts to force the bill out by discharge petition have netted only 145 of the required 218 representative's signatures after approximately three months.

Cox told the House Appropriations Sommittee that changing the language of the bill "was a sorry surrender to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Marcantonio) upon whose single pair of legs stands every extreme leftist in this country feverishly engaged in digging the grave of private enterprise."

Marcantonio told the southerners that they were enraged and frustrated, for, in spite of them, "the American people through their representatives have an opportunity to vote in support of this fundamental American institution," the FEPC.

He accused them of being pseudo patriots" clothed in "pseudo patriotism" out to do a "subversive job on this American agency."

"The genesis of FEPC is found in the greatest American document of all time," Marcantonio declared, "the Declaration of Independence, in which it is unqualifiedly stated that all men are created equal. And when they said 'all men are created equal,' they meant that every man had a right to work irrespective of his race, color, and creed; and that goes for Negroes in Georgia and Mississippi and everywhere else."

Fascism Charged

He then asked, "Who and what is subversive?" and soberly declared, "To deny equality is not only oubversive but it is practicing Hitlerism in America." Lashing out at the southerners he boldly stated, "those who here seek to deny equality in employment are not only subversive but are the adept technicians of the Nazi anti-racial practices."

Going down the line with the southerners in support of the Colmer amendment to liquidate the FEPC which was defeated by a teller vote of 188-116 were observed a handful of Republicans among whom was Rep. Jessie Sumner (R., Ill.)

Although the majority of the Republicans opposed the Colmer move, they refused to support a Marcantonio motion for a roll call vote.

Several House liberals including Representatives William Dawson (D., Ill.), Emanuel Celler (D., N.Y.), Adam C. Powell (D., N.Y.), Keefe ((R., Wis.) Bender (R., Ohio), and Dirksen (R., Ill.), stood solidly beside Marcantonio.

Dawson told the House that "the Negroes are citizens of the United States and under our laws are entitled to every right of citizenship," basic among which is the right to a job. "We want the right to work, we want the opportunity to work out our salvation like every American citizen is entitled," Dawson said, and declared, "certainly every American citizen is entitled to a job in this country of ours."

Bender In Plea

Bender made an impassionate plea for Republican support of the Appropriations Committee's amendment. This represented a change of approach from that used by Minority leader Joseph Martin Jr., (R., Mass.) who earlier in the week sought to place the entire blame for holding up action on the Senate bill on the shoulders of the Democrats.

Martin said, "the delay and fuddling around on the War Agency Appropriation bill is not at all creditable to the congress and is a serious reflection upon the capacity of those in charge of the legislation."

The House amended bill was committed to conference and subsequently passed by both houses.

In the Senate, Morse objected to the compromise because of the reduction by one-half the amount of $46,000 which was recommended by the Bureau of the Budget.

Morse said, "I do not believe that my party has lived up to its pledge made at the convention or it never would have agreed to the compromise. But, the administration leadership forced this compromise on the Congress and in my opinion it would be better if the FEPC had not a single cent rather than insufficient funds on which to operate."

Then, speaking from his long experience on the War Labor Board where he made a distinguished record, Morse warned, "We are going to lose the war in a very real sense, if, as an aftermath, we become engulfed in a wave of bigotory, prejudice, and hatred which do violence to those great principles of democratic government which differentiate our government from others."

He was finally persuaded by fellow Republicans to abandon his fight and accept the compromise. He relinquished the floor after speaking for approximately one hour.

For a split second it appeared as if Senator Theodore Bilbo, arch foe of the FEPC, would throw a monkey wrench into the entire works. He suggested the presence of a quorum just about the time the Senate was ready to vote on the compromise. He was promptly shushed by Majority Leader Alben Barkley (D., Ky.).

Bilbo, who conducted a three-day filibuster against the FEPC, said that if he had the remotest chance for success he would never give up the fight. As things stand, he said, "I'm just taking my medicine."

The War Agency Appropriation bill was flown to President Truman in Potsdam, Germany, for his signature.

Mississippi Senator Seething Over Rebuke by Vermonters

A wire sent to Senator Bilbo by Miss Esther M. McCullough, Miss C. S. Anderson, and Mr. and Mrs. Ned Jennings of Old Bennington, rebuking the Mississippi legislator for "vituperative attacks on Negro soldiers", drew an irate reply and as prompt a rebuttal from Miss McCullough, quoting the article in The Christian Science Monitor upon which the protest had been based.

The long distance exchange of Yankee-Dixie opinions was as follows:

Copy of wire sent to Senator Theodore G. Bilbo July 8, 1945

Your recent vituperative attacks against the Negro soldier and his part in this War is a disgrace to the democratic ideals for which this War was fought.

(signed) Esther Morgan McCullough, C. S. Anderson, Ned Jennings and Helga Jennings.

Copy of wire from Senator Bilbo to Esther Morgan McCullough July 9, 1945:

Your telegram of July 8th accusing me of an attack on the Negro soldier and his part in this War has been received. This is just a plain inexcusable lie. If you will get the Congressional Record and read my speeches for the two days you will find that I did not utter one word against the Negro soldier. I demand an apology for your deliberate misrepresentation. Kindly wire apology immediately so I can insert it in the Congressional Record along with your telegram. Otherwise I will exhaust Webster's International dictionary in finding appropriate words to describe the kind of liars you are.

(signed) Theo G. Bilbo, USS.

Copy of letter sent by Esther Morgan McCullough in reply to above telegram, July 11th:

It seems strange that we should have to convince you about your own speeches. I enclose a resume from the Christian Science Monitor, a newspaper known all over the world for its accuracy and impartiality in reporting the news.

I hope you will include our wire and, by all means, your reply to it, in the Congressional Record. We, on our part, will do all we can to publicize both wires.

Sincerely,
(signed) Esther Morgan McCullough

Miss McCullough quoted the following article from which she got her information in the Monitor of July 6th:

"Most serious effect of the fight so far may be the vituperative racial attacks of Senators James O. Eastland and Theodore G. Bilbo, both Democrats of Mississippi, made on the Senate floor particularly on Negroes and Negro soldiers. There is evidence that these at[redacted]k in, with bitter consequences likely to leave a lasting sting.

"Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War, yesterday answered this attack by declaring the Army is proud of its Negro soldiers. But such a careful columnist as Marquis Childs, writing here today, declared that Senator Eastland 'made one of the most shocking speeches ever heard on the floor of the Senate, in the course of which he slandered not merely whole races but the armd forces of the United States as a body.'"

The article was on the subject of the FEPC dispute in the Senate.

"LABOR AND THE NEGRO."

Whatever the outcome of the sen ate debate on the permanence of the FEPC, the negro in the South must remember that he will still have a problem in labor relations that is unique and singular. It may have its benefits in some sections of the United States, but there is a "psychology" here within our own borders that will largely determine who will be hired and who will not be hired. This is a fact and a reality however we look at it, and to plan a profitable labor-life without realizing this is to deceive ourselves. In spite of all that may be promised by some agencies, it is still true that economic evolution is much more permanent and profitable than economic revolution. Let us, as negroes, remember these things:

1. There has always existed in the mind of the Southern employer a sense of fairmindedness as regards negro laborers. When times were bad and the depression swept down upon us, statistics revealed that the North had more unemployment among its negroes than the South. This is indicative a sense of needed employment of negroes in the industries of the various Southern communities. The South has always regarded the negro, not as a burden to its taxpayers, but has made provision for him in the economics of its cities. This could not and would not have been done had there not existed a deep sense, in the South's own way, of fair play towards negro labor. It is encouraging to also note, in this regard, that the interest of the Southern employer has always extended beyond that of the work he required to be done. It has reached out into the colored communities, into the negro churches and deep into the affairs of the negro in times of family sorrow and trials. Play grounds have been established, churches have been rebuilt, homes have been erected and various comforts of life have been ours because of the sense of fairness that exists solely here in the South.

2. The spirit of arrogance on the part of the negro laborere is not helpful, neither to him or to negroes as a whole. It breaks a chain of deep sympathy and understanding which has been functional and profitable down through the years. And no man should do anything that would injure the expression of goodness among men.

'. This brings us back to the topic of our first article, "Let Down Your Bucket Where You Are." Remember the bridges that carried you over in the flood times. It is your solemn duty to, by virtue of your labor, thought and attitude, to help keep relations friendly, courteous and kind.

Atlanta Constitution

One Man's Rights

Atlanta, Ga.

When a certain man was forced out of business and ruined because union men refused to work for him, he carried the matter to the supreme court. His plea was denied by a 5-4 decision, which means that one man—say Justice Black of the majority—made the law as it now stands.

Justice Black said that laborers "can sell or not sell their labor as they please and upon such terms and conditions as they choose." 7-25-45

Now this is a free country or it is not. If men are free, it is obvious that the humblest man has the right to refuse or quit a job if he doesn't like the wages or hours or working conditions.

(What is more, if he is prejudiced in such matters, he may refuse to work for a woman, a white man, a Negro, a Protestant, a Catholic or a Jew. Otherwise he would not be free.)

But the law enacted by Justice Black goes farther. It affirms the right of laborers "in combination to refuse to work." (Though he was speaking of transport workers, the word "laborers" clearly was meant to include all who work for hire.)

This detail of the Black law is nothing new. It merely reaffirms the right to strike. But in its application to this particular case, it raises a question.

All free men have equal rights. No one can in justice possess a legal right that is denied to other men. And though Coolidge won fame by saying there is no right to strike against the public safety, it should be obvious that no man's legal rights can be taken from him because of his occupation.

If "laborers in combination" have the right to ruin one man by refusing to work for him, when they in effect have a monopoly of labor, why haven't firemen and policemen the right to injure many people by stopping work and leaving their city without police or fire protection?

(And if a free and prejudiced man has the right to refuse to work for another because of his race or religion, why hasn't an equally free and prejudiced man the right to refuse to employ another because of his race or religion?)

(Bear in mind that we are discussing rights—not what is right. There is a difference.)

There are problems that cannot be solved by law. And no problem is solved until it is solved justly and equitably. 7-25-45

It is axiomatic that one man's rights end where another's begin. Our whole body of law is based on the premise that one man has no right to injure another. Lawmakers or courts must find a way to reconcile one's man's rights to the rights of another when the two conflict.

The Battle for FEPC

by Adam Lapin

Daily Worker

ONE phase of the fight for FEPC has ended in partial victory. FEPC did not win enough funds to do an adequate job, but it did get $250,000. Now the second phase of the fight opens—the fight for a permanent FEPC. And this is perhaps a good time to review the significance of what has happened so far.

One question that will have to be cleared up is the role of the Republicans on the FEPC issue. There is no doubt that the Republicans will make a major attempt to capitalize on the fight. Senator Robert Taft of Ohio, who has actually been opposed to an FEPC with compulsory powers, laid the basis for this by making a half-hearted gesture at calling for cloture during a stormy Senate night session.

And Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon has condemned the compromise of $250,000 as a betrayal of FEPC. He said he thought it would have been better if FEPC had received no funds at all—which seems to be a peculiar standpoint for one who claims to have been interested in saving the agency.

7-16-45

Morse is astute enough to admit that the Republicans didn't really live up to their campaign platform pledge to support FEPC. But he adds that the record of the Republicans was so much better than that of the Democrats.

Now the fact of the matter is that the GOP record is nothing to write home about. Certainly Republicans did not show any indignation or fight when Senators Bilbo and Eastland were filling the Congressional Record with unspeakable slanders of the Negro people. And leading GOP Congressmen cooperated actively with the poll tax Democrats in the attempt to kill FEPC.

Republicans and Democrats on the House Appropriations Committee voted to eliminate funds for the agency on the ground that a permanent FEPC bill was pending. And in the Rules Committee where the permanent FEPC bill was bottled up the GOP Congressmen played political footsy with their poll-tax friends. The committee was evenly divided six to six, with the four Republicans voting for FEPC.

But the deadlock could have been broken a couple of times when poll tax Congressmen were absent. Instead, they reached a gentlemen's agreement not to force a vote and actually stayed away themselves to balance the absenteeism of the poll taxers.

And, of course, there is the plain fact that even after the Senate voted $250,000 for FEPC half a dozen Republican members of the House Appropriations Committee voted against this pittance. The truth is that the Republicans cooperated in preventing FEPC from ever coming up for a record vote in the House.

But what complicates the situation and makes it possible for the Republicans to make political capital is the equally plain fact that the record of administration leaders on the FEPC issue was little short of disgraceful.

Majority Leader Alben Barkley had no stomach for a real fight with the poll tax Senators. And it was he who started FEPC down the toboggan slide to a $250,000 appropriation. There was no real reason why FEPC could not have won at least $500,000.

Rep. John McCormack, majority leader in the House, actually appeared before the Rules Committee on one occasion to support the demand of the Appropriations Committee for a rule which would make an amendment to restore FEPC out of order. He did change his attitude a bit later, but never enough to become a real fighter for FEPC.

7-16-45

The attitude of administration leaders was that here was an unpleasant issue that involved them in difficulties with Southern Democrats, and that the sooner it was disposed of any way at all the better. There was no feeling of responsibility to the Negro people and other minority groups.

It is true, of course, that President Truman did send a strongly worded letter to Chairman Sabbath of the Rules Committee urging action on the permanent FEPC bill. But Truman did not commit himself on the more immediate and urgent issue. He did not demand an appropriation for FEPC.

In short, Truman handled himself with his usual political finesse. He made a play for Negro support with his letter to Sabbath. But he did not get into any serious difficulty with the Southern Democrats, who are winning new positions of prominence in his cabinet, because he failed to fight actively for an FEPC appropriation nor did he demand that his leaders in Congress do a real job.

Substantially the same pattern of administration tactics has been in evidence on the issue of unemployment compensation. Truman and other officials have come out for it—but they have not made a real attempt at getting action in Congress to the point of risking friction with conservative Democrats.

7-16-45

This kind of business looks like good politics. It leaves Truman in a position where he is friends with everybody. But in the long run it is sure to be profoundly unsatisfactory to labor and the progressive forces. Truman's fences in Congress are still intact after the FEPC fight, but it might be a good idea for the administration to begin mending its fences out among the Negro people.

The fact is that neither administration leaders nor the Republicans can claim credit for the partial FEPC victory. The credit goes to the Negro and labor organizations that put the heat on Congress, and to courageous progressives like Rep. Marcantonio who made a real fight. This combination did the job. It will no doubt have to do many other jobs if the 79th Congress is to pass any important progressive legislation.

FEPC Battle-Tide Turns

Daily Worker - N.Y.

Daily Worker

By Doxey Wilkerson

THE tide of battle in the struggle for FEPC is definitely turning, and that fact poses important lessons which the Negro people, labor and other progressive groups would do well to ponder.

This is written prior to Thursday's crucial vote on the proposed $250,000 "compromise" FEPC appropriation in the House. Even so, these things are already evident:

FIRST, the polltaxers and their big-business cohorts CAN be beaten. They were hell-bent to destroy FEPC NOW, and used every legislative trick in the trade to accomplish their purpose—delay and refusal to recommend a House appropriation, vicious and disgraceful filibustering in the Senate, rewriting the whole War Agencies Appropriation Bill to avoid a House vote on the Senate bill proposing funds for FEPC, and lots more.

But now the House foes of FEPC have been forced by overwhelming popular pressure to propose a compromise appropriation in the hope of warding off the full $500,000 sum requested by the President's budget. Even their last-minute attempt to earmark the reduced $250,000 sum for "liquidation" purposes was beaten back, and the House Appropriations Committee was forced to rewrite its bill to permit FEPC to use the money for a continued fight against discrimination in employment.

7-14-45

FEPC Foes Beaten Back

The congressional enemies of FEPC and all other people's programs are determined, noisy, diabolically clever, and backed by powerful feudalistic forces in the South and tremendous industrial wealth in the North, but still they have no easy task in trying to carry through their reactionary purposes. Whatever the outcome of Thursday's House vote on FEPC funds—where there is a real possibility of restoring the full amount—one thing has already been demonstrated: The congressional enemies of the people CAN be beaten.

SECOND, defeatism in the people's struggle must be avoided like a plague. Any readiness to "give up" plays right into the hands of reaction and tends to demobilize the forces of progress and weaken the power of their struggle.

Last week, for example, when the enemies of FEPC seemed to be emerging triumphant, many reactionary newspapers and radio commentators hasten to pronounce the agency as good as "dead." We well understand why. But it is most unfortunate that many so-called "liberal" papers, including certain Negro weeklies, promptly echoed this defeatist propaganda of reaction.

Marcantonio Kept Fighting

7-14-45

Representative Vito Marcantonio showed the way to win. When FEPC's doom seemed most certain, "Marc" intensified his fight, refusing either to yield or to compromise, and using every parliamentary trick at his command to keep the struggle going while labor and other friends of FEPC were marshalling their forces to back him up. As a result, a deadlock was provoked between the House and Senate over FEPC, creating a situation out of which ultimate victory for the people can readily be won.

It would have been possible to prevent this FEPC crisis if labor and other forces of the people had been in there fighting all along, confident of their power and determined to win. It is possible even now to restore the full temporary FEPC appropriation and pass the permanent FEPC bill—if we cast aside all tendencies toward defeatism and fight with the vigor and consistency of Vito Marcantonio.

THIRD, what we do in this struggle for FEPC will have far-reaching consequences for our whole fight to beat back the current reactionary onslaught against the liberties and security of all the people.

None should be so naive as to think that the real power behind the drive to kill FEPC stems from the "racial prejudice" of a Taft or a Rankin. This effort to destroy the Negro's wartime employment gains is more fundamentally an effort to break the growing unity between the Negro people and organized labor, and thereby to weaken the whole progressive movement and block attainment of the democratic goals for which we are fighting this war.

The People Will Win

7-14-45

But reaction shall not carry through its program. The democratic forces of the people are far stronger now than ever before. They are learning more and more the lessons of unity and mass political action. They are beginning to understand the peril to their liberties and security which lies in the resurgence of reaction since V-E Day. And they are increasingly ready to fight back.

The reactionaries will continue their struggle against the people, but they will fail. They cannot match the mass power of an organized and fighting people. We will win a permanent FEPC, and we will use the strength demonstrated in this struggle to carry through on all other fronts a genuine program of democracy and freedom for Negroes and all other Americans.

The Achilles Heel Of the Filibuster

Courier-Journal

An incidental but perhaps historic result of the respite won by the Fair Employment Practices Commission is the suggestion it bears that Congress may have found the answer to the filibuster and other kindred forms of parliamentary assassination. The new discovery, it seems, involves the application of a kind of squeeze, by which the statesmen who undertake to talk a measure to death in the Senate, or to wall it up in the pigeonhole of a House committee, may be saddled with the blame of killing other things, besides. It is, in short, a counter-filibuster. 7-16-45 Ky.

We could hardly believe our eyes when we read that Senator BILBO himself, giving a forlorn acknowledgement to the shrunken F.E.P.C. appropriation as it sailed past on its way to formal approval, admitted that he was licked. He had lost his fight, as the Southerners in the House had lost their fight to bottle the appropriation in the Rules Committee, because for the first time the majority of the two chambers chose to stand up and slug it out with them. A ruthless technique, the filibuster thus gave rise to reprisals that had to be just as ruthless, and that amounted to a determination to stop completely the legislative wheels from grinding, if that is what it took.

To be sure, it was necessary also to inject a certain amount of compromise into the situation. The F.E.P.C. is saved, but only for a year. It gets only half the appropriation it requested, but it is relieved of the order to use the money to wind up its affairs and get out of the Government. It won a breathing spell, but in light of the ferocity of no-quarter opposition that had been thrown against it, this partial victory demonstrated that it has a political vitality that is rather phenomenal.

FEPC's Future

Washington Post

The long, ugly battle over funds for the executively created Fair Employment Practices Committee has ended unsatisfactorily from every point of view. Neither of the major political parties came out of the wrangling with much credit. The outcome is an altogether ambiguous compromise—a compromise which, as Senator Morse observed, "is plainly an unconscionable one." It continues the FEPC—but only under crippling conditions. And it leaves unresolved the basic issue whether the authority of the Federal Government is to be employed for protection of the economic opportunities of minority groups. 7-14

Congress has adopted a Janus amendment which declares that the FEPC must use its funds for liquidation and which at the same time stipulates that it need do nothing of the sort. This double-talk was threshed out on the floor of the Senate Thursday, and Senator McKellar, who was in charge of the appropriation bill, stated categorically that the money appropriated would be available without strings for operating purposes. "As I understand," said Senator Chavez, "the FEPC is not in any different position now than would be the OWI or any other agency covered by the same bill." "That is correct," replied Senator McKellar. And he went on to say: "We have been careful to take the matter up with the department which will have charge of it, namely, the General Accounting Office. Representatives of that office have expressed the opinion that the effect of the amendment is as I have stated." Even Senator Bilbo, when pressed, admitted: "They do not have to make arrangements to go out of business under this amendment. I think that is a correct construction of the proposal." 7-14-45

Nevertheless, there are grounds for the fears expressed by Senator Morse. "I am not at all sure," he said, "that the courts will agree with the distinguished Senator from Tennessee. But I am perfectly convinced of the interpretation which the foes of FEPC will make of it the moment public knowledge of this debate fades away . . . I do not think a group of men could have sat down and devised language more clever to thwart FEPC, to doom it, to make it difficult for it administratively to function, to place it under a cloud, to give it insufficiency of funds so that it can do a good job, than the language which has been brought back to us in this amendment."

FEPC must now, at best, cut its staff in half and curtail its activities at the very time when its effective operation is most needed to prevent job discrimination in the reconversion period. Congress cannot indefinitely dodge the vital public issue which lies behind this shoddy compromise. It now has before it legislation to establish a Fair Employment Practices Commission on a statutory basis. That legislation has been ducked and dodged far too long. It should be confronted and resolved—in open debate and with an open record vote, so that the American people can know where their legislators stand. 7-14-45

Daily Worker

CONTINUATION of the wartime FEPC is a significant victory over the polltax filibusterers in Congress and their reactionary Republican allies.

It is, however, only a partial victory since the $250,000 appropriate is less than half of what the agency needs to do its job. If, however, the GOP-polltax group was unable once again to ride roughshod over Congress it was because of the initiative of progressive Congressmen led by Rep. Vito Marcantonio, New York laborite, and because of the forceful intervention of the people throughout the country in the last few weeks.

The wartime FEPC has, of course, an exceedingly important role to play in continuing the fight against discrimination in war industry. But, both because of the inadequate appropriation and because of its limited function, it cannot tackle the necessities of the reconversion period where the problem of job discrimination is becoming particularly acute. 7-14-45

Therefore, it is essential that the nation take up at once the fight for a permanent FEPC with adequate funds to battle against bias in every phase of employment and with adequate powers to do the job right.

One of the weaknesses of the fight for the wartime FEPC was that the people were late in starting their campaign and that wide circles that were active in the battle for state FEPCs, including leaders of the AFL and of Catholic and Jewish life, never became involved at all. The partial victory for the temporary agency demonstrates that if all these groups get together and conduct a vigorous campaign, they can win the battle for the permanent FEPC.

Right now, the fight requires that some 75 more Congressmen be gotten to sign the discharge petition to bring the permanent FEPC bill before the House. About 145 of the 218 signatures needed have been obtained.

Drives should be opened immediately in each state to get the Congressmen to put their names on that discharge petition.

A WARTIME FEPC IS NEEDED

New York Times

Rather than give in on what they assert to be a matter of principle, members of two House committees and a large group on the floor of the House seem willing to hold up the $771,000,000 war agencies supply bill indefinitely. The principle they are upholding is that there ought not to be a Federal agency to discourage racial and religious discrimination in wartime employment. They oppose such an agency, even when the FEPC appropriation has been whittled down to $250,000 by the Senate and the FEPC functions remain primarily persuasive and conciliatory. 7-4-45

This "principle" cannot be defended when every citizen, including Negroes, is taxed to maintain war agencies and pay the bills on war contracts, and when service in the armed forces is not limited by race, creed or color. Some agency to promote fair employment practices is needed while the war lasts, and to be effective this agency must be national in scope. The proposed appropriation is much too small to enable FEPC to play the tyrant, even if it were disposed to do so.

A permanent FEPC, operating within the States and empowered to bring court proceedings against employers, is another matter. In many States it probably would not succeed, despite a growing sentiment in those States for better economic opportunities for the Negro. But the present FEPC is by its terms impermanent. It ought to be continued until the end of the war, and perhaps thereafter limited to employers and employes engaged on Federal contracts. 7-14-45

Democracy A La Bilbo

Washington Post

I have never read a stronger argument for local suffrage than that carried in the local columns of Monday's Post. Senator Bilbo, self-styled "Ex officio Mayor" of Washington, says flatly "he will keep the job [Chairman of the Senate Committee on D. C.] as long as he stays in the Senate and the Democrats are in control, and that he has no doubt about reelection" in 1946, "because none of the supporters of FEPC can vote in Mississippi."

That's pure democracy for you, from a Senator who in the 1940 primary as a candidate for the Senate received a vote slightly less than 4.2% of the population of Mississippi, his State. 7-19-45

Challenging Problems Confront Congress

Courier Journal
Louisville, Ky.
1-1-45

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP)—The 79th Congress convenes next Wednesday, hoping its main job will be shaping the plowshares of peace from the instruments of war forged during the last four years.

It faces many challenging problems, most of them dealing with that transition.

But one of the toughest jobs it will tackle is directly related to war—universial military training.

Many Members Returned.

In name only will the 79th be a new Congress. More than 80 per cent of the 435 House and 96 Senate seats will be occupied for the next two years by veterans of the 77th and the 78th "war Congresses."

The incoming Congress will be composed of 243 Democrats, 190 Republicans and two minor party members in the house. The Senate will be composed of 57 Democrats, 38 Republicans and one Progressive.

Ranking high on the program of legislation awaiting consideration are these subjects, in addition to peacetime conscription:

Broadening of the social security program.

Revision of the war-weighted tax structure.

Reconversion of industry from war to peace, and planning for full-time employment.

Military Training An Issue.

Wage stabilization and price controls. 1-1-45

Continued financing of the war and curbing of the mounting national debt.

Strengthening of labor laws, particularly those dealing with the War Labor Board.

And possibly the drafting of a "lasting peace" plan.

The Army, the Navy, the White House and Congressional leaders are anxious for prompt disposition of compulsory peacetime military training legislation. Hearings will start early before the House Military Committee, with indications Congress will be asked to require every male youth to take one year of straight military training at the age of 18 or shortly thereafter.

Social Legislation Proposed.

Both major political parties have advocated liberalized social security benefits, some of the proposals awaiting consideration calling for government-backed security from the cradle to the grave. The subject is certain to lead to a knock-down and drag-out fight.

Taxes boosted to a record high in recent years to finance the war may be trimmed as the result of a current congressional study of a postwar revenue program. Some Capitol Hill fiscal leaders believe a 10 per cent tax cut can be effected to soon as Germany falls.

Some Want High Taxes.

There are others who feel that taxes should be kept high as long as employment is up, so much of the revenue can be diverted towards reduction of the national debt. The debt is approaching the statutory limit of $260,000,000,000 and Congress may have to lift the legal ceiling to $300,000,000,000.

Continued slashing of non-war spending has been promised by the House Appropriations Committee, which will start work immediately on a score of supply measures. 1-1-45

Wage stabilization and price control legislation, always a battleground, must be handled before June 30, when the existing emergency statutes expire.

Postwar Job Problems.

Tied in with reconversion, the foundation for which was laid by the 78th Congress, is the subject of full-time postwar employment. Retiring Vice President Wallace has predicted that one of the first pieces of legislation presented will be "a full employment bill" under which the President would submit not only a budget of proposed federal expenditures but "a national budget as well."

The "nationl budget" would deal with the total investment and expenditure by Government, business and consumers, with an attempt being made to determine the total expenditure needed to provide full employment. 1-1-45

Congress also will grapple with the subject of reorganization of its own machinery including, possibly, higher pay for the lawmakers.

May Amend Labor Act.

The second Government seizure of Montgomery Ward property has emphasized calls for labor legislation. House Democratic whip Ramspeck of Georgia believes Congress should give the War Labor Board statutory authority to enforce its orders.

Whether the 79th Congress will blueprint the peace program only war-front developments will determine. But foreign policy is certain to be a live issue.

Rayburn to Be Re-elected.

There is growing dissatisfaction in Congress with the handling of the Polish, Greek and Italian problems. An effort may be made to write definite foreign policy into the Lend-Lease and reciprocal trade programs, renewable in June. 1-1-45

The first few weeks of the new session will be devoted to organization and formalities. Democrats, in strengthened control on "The Hill," will re-elect Sam Rayburn of Texas as speaker of the House and retain their organizational structure of the 78th Congress. They may even take a larger proportion of seats on major House committees, in view of their larger representation.

Mrs. Norton Seeks FEPC Bill Action

AFRO-AMERICAN
Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Protesting the delaying tactics of the rules committee in granting an open rule for permanent FEPC legislation, Rep. Mary Norton (Dem., N.J.) laid on the table of the House last Friday a petition to discharge the bill for debate.

Simultaneously, A. Philip Randolph and Allen K. Chalmers, co-chairmen of the National Council for a Permanent FEPC, issued a joint statement urging that supporters of the measure hurry to obtain the 218 signatures necessary for discharge. 5-5-45

Given Opportunity to Sign

"I have waited two months for a rule and have frankly given up any idea of securing it," declared Mrs. Norton, chairman of the House Labor Committee, which is sponsoring the bill.

As this legislation is so very important now, we have put this petition on the desk to give those who are in favor of the bill the opportunity to sign it and bring the measure to the floor for complete debate, she added. 5-5-45

Declaring that "the rules committee does not reflect the attitude of most Congressmen" on permanent FEPC legislation, Randolph and Chalmers said that many in both parties are eager to discuss this bill on the floor and enact it. 5-5-45

Rankin Rants

Rep. John H. Rankin (D., Miss.) warned that the FEPC measure was "the most dangerous piece of totalitarian, communistic legislation ever proposed in the Congress of the United States," and was promptly answered by Congressman Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N.Y.), who accused Rankin of "flag waving."

Marcantonio declared:

"I say that white men who have been fighting shoulder to shoulder with colored are not going to come back here and object to working shoulder to shoulder with colored in the offices, the mines, the mills and the factories of this country.

"They have been fighting against fascism and Hitlerism to protect the principle of equality and they expect to return to a United States where that principle is applied."

No Action Before May 14

May 14 is described as "the earliest date" by which the bill can be brought to the floor. One informed source speculated that "if we can't get 218 names in that time, the case is lost for present."

For four days last week the rules committee listened to those opposing the reporting of the bill. On Thursday morning, the remarks of certain of the Southerners reflected a feeling of anti-Semitism, it was reported.

Jewish Issue Injected

Rep. Howard Smith (Dem., Va.) inquired whether a Felix Cohen (an associate solicitor in the interior department) had written the original bill, but was told by Chairman Adolph J. Sabath (Dem., Ill.), "We have positive evidence of the chairman (Mrs. Norton.)

At the same session, Rep. Lee Allen (Rep., Ill.) directed a series of questions to Rep. O. C. Fisher (Dem., Tex.), who was testifying. Fisher, answering, not only condemned the present FEPC but predicted of what might be expected of a permanent FEPC.

Earlier in the week, Rep. L. Mendel River (Dem., S.C.) appeared to oppose the measure, while Rep. Charles Halleck (Rep., Ind.), who has inferred that he favors the bill, continued to labor the likelihood of breaches of administration if the bill is passed in its present form.

House Votes 102-97 Against Discharge

GOP BLOC BLAMED

5-5-45

Housing and Health Legislation Passed

HARRISBURG, Pa.—The FEPC bill of Rep. Homer Brown (Dem., Pittsburgh) was killed Tuesday night when the State House of Representatives voted 102 to 97 against a motion to discharge the bill from the House Labor Committee.

Of the 108 Republicans in the House, 102 voted against the motion made by Representative Brown, while 92 Democrats, including 3 from Philadelphia, and 5 Republicans favored it.

GOP Bloc Scored

Representative Brown scored the Republican bloc for the defeat of the bill, stating that it was "a brazen stifling of the ordinary processes of our constitutional form of government, and a reprehensible denial of the right of a people to be heard and their voices to be acted upon."

The administration opposed the Brown bill which was introduced in the House in January. Its passage had been advocated, however, by a large number of persons attending a public hearing here on March 27, and at that time sponsors of other FEPC bills pledged to endorse the Brown bill.

Four bills designed to create better housing facilities throughout the State and another measure to improve the State health program were approved by the House of Representatives here Monday.

The four housing measures, sponsored by Rep. Franklin H. Lichtenwalter (Rep., Lehigh Co.), covered the wide housing program which had previously met with the approval of Gov. Edward Martin. 5-10-45

The major proposals were the result of a careful study of the housing needs within the State and recommendations made by the Pennsylvania Post-War Planning Commission.

New Housing Agencies

Not only will certain blighted areas be reclaimed for the purposes of improved housing, but public bodies will be established as redevelopment authorities.

These groups will "plan and contract with private, corporate or governmental redevelopers—defining and providing for the exercise of their powers and duties, including the acquisition of property." 5-5-45

The proposed new redevelopment authority will be organized under the Department of Commerce rather than under the Department of Health as is now the case with the housing authority.

Health Bill Passed

A bill providing for a continuation of the full program of the Department of Health, was approved Tuesday by the House by a vote of 107 to 88, despite considerable opposition from the Democratic delegates.

Rep. Adam T. Bower (Rep., Northunberland), defended the bill and steered it on to passage. He also defended the special provision of the bill which prohibited the Department of Health from accepting Federal funds.

According to Democratic representatives, the State is refusing millions of dollars which might be used for the protection of the health of its citizens.

PENNSYLVANIA FEPC

Courier
HARRISBURG, Pa.—With the Joint House-Senate Committee probably taking action early this week on which of three pending Fair Employment Practice Bills to give the green light, the measure sponsored by Representative Homer S. Brown (Democrat), Allegheny County, has the support of the House Democratic Minority, and the backing of the Pennsylvania CIO Industrial Union Council.

Governor Martin, while favoring the "principle" of Mr. Brown's measure, opposes it as it would probably cost $300,000 to set up the agency as conceived by the Allegheny County representative.

HEAVY FINES

5-10-45

Mr. Brown's Bill would create a five-man commission, independent of the State Labor Department, with $10,000 annual salaries and power to investigate and punish unfair labor practices by employers and labor organizations. Fines would amount to $25 to $200 for first and second offenders, and $500 to $1,000 fines, one-year maximum term, or both for subsequent violations.

Administration's Silent On Federal FEPC--Charge

New York Amsterdam News
3-31-45

By BERNARD K. JOHNPOLL
(Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON—Inferring that the administration was doing nothing to assure the speedy introduction of the Permanent FEPC Bill on the Floor of the House, Rep. Charles M. LaFollette, (Rep., Indiana) ,called upon Rep. Adolph Sabath, (Dem., Ill.), chairman of the House Rules Committee to speed action on the legislation.

The Bills Introduced

The first bills for a Permanent FEPC were introduced in the 78th Congress in the middle of January, 1944, by Mr. Scanlon of Pennsylvania, a Democrat, who is not a member of the 79th Congress; by Mr. Dawson of Illinois, a Democrat, and myself. He said:

3-31-45

"That therefore a year and two months have elapsed since this legislation was first introduced; that in the 79th Congress, H. R. 2232 was reported out by the Labor Committee on February 20, 1945, after twelve practically identical bills had been introduced on this subject, six by Republicans and six by Democrats; that the first hearings were held before the Rules Committee on March 8, 1945; and that two weeks have now elapsed since that first hearing before the Rules Committee; and that Committee has not held further hearings upon this legislation.

"I do not take the position that the opponents of this legislation should be precluded from a hearing before the Rules Committee, but I do point out, not for the purpose of injecting politics into this legislation, but for the purpose of answering the two articles herein above referred to, that the chairman of that committee is the Dean of this House; that he is an ardent supporter of the administration; that to my knowledge he has never failed to heed a request of the administration to take all steps which it is possible for him to take as chairman of the Rules Committee to expedite hearings upon administration-supported legislation; and to obtain a decision in the Rules Committee upon such legislation at the earliest possible date.

3-31-45

He Rejects Politics

"Therefore, I do not believe that I am now injecting politics into this matter, and I certainly have no desire to drive a wedge between the supporters of this legislation in both political parties by requesting the chairman of the Rules Committee, after the recess to exercise his prerogative as chairman of that committee in such a way as to bring the granting or the refusing of a rule on H. R. 2232 to a head in the Rules Committee at the earliest possible date after the recess.

"I make no prediction as to the outcome in the Rules Committee, I do not attempt to bind any member of my party as to his vote. I have no right to do so, and I do not do so. I only ask that there be a decision of the issue in the Rules Committee at the earliest possible date.

"I urge this for several reasons:

Several Reasons

First, it is my opinion that so long as this legislation pends in the House of Representatives without giving the membership an opportunity to debate it and dispose of it, it constitutes rather a cankerous political sore which is injurious to the national unity at this critical time. Second, that the appropriation for the Temporary Committee is very apt to reach the floor of the House in an Appropriation Bill late in April or early in May, and that it would contribute much to the orderly disposition of that legislation if the basis underlying issues involved in a Permanent FEPC were debated first upon legislation coming from a legislative committee. And, third, there has been some discussion by some members of filing a discharge petition upon this legislation, discharging the Rules Committee from further consideration. I want to point out that only one piece of legislaion has ever become law which came to the floor of the House under a discharge petition. From which it follows that the use of this procedure will be very detrimental to the ultimate passage of this legislation, and that in no event should this procedure be used until the Rules Committee has refused to grant a rule after full hearings and an opportunity to vote upon the question of granting a rule has been afforded the members of the committee.

3-31-45

"For these reasons, I am firmly of the opinion that it is in the best interest of this legislation that hearings be concluded and a vote reached in the Rules Committee upon H. R. 2232 at the earliest possible date and that the responsibility for concluding such hearings and reaching a vote rests squarely upon the chairman of the committee, the Hon. Adolph Sabath of Illinois."

LP Asks Signers For FEPC Petition

P.M. 5-7-45

The New York State delegation of 45 U. S. Representatives was asked today by the Liberal Party to sign the petition which would bring the pending permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission bill out on the floor of the House from the Rules Committee.

A letter signed by Dr. John L. Childs, LP state chairman, and Alex Rose, administrative committee chairman, said:

5-7-45

"We are confident that the Representatives of New York State will help accomplish on a national level what was done on a state level when New York State adopted the Ives-Quinn Bill against discrimination in employment. The people of New York State have indicated in unmistakable terms what they believe in the principles of FEPC."

Filibuster Threat Dims Hope For Permanent F.E.P.C. Bill

Courier Journal
5-18-45

Washington, May 17 (AP)—A group of Southern senators openly served notice today they will filibuster any legislation for a tight federal ban on job discrimination because of race.

Furthermore, Senator Taft of Ohio, chairman of the Republican steering committee, pronounced "absolutely unworkable" a bill sponsored by seven senators for a permanent Fair Employment Practice Commission.

The two developments dimmed the already none-too-bright prospects that Congress will enact any F.E.P.C. legislation this session, although platforms of both major parties contained anti-discrimination planks last year.

In the House, a bill for a permanent F.E.P.C. has been approved by the Labor Committee, but the Rules Committee, where Southern influence is strong, has shown no disposition to let it reach the floor.

5-18-45

The filibuster threat was voiced by Senators Ellender (D., La.) and Johnston (D., S. C.) after a meeting of the Senate Labor Committee, which had scheduled a vote on the F.E.P.C. bill.

Confronted with the Southerners' attitude, the committee decided to postpone action until next Thursday.

Anti-Discrimination

Survey Midmonthly

Among the bills in the Colorado legislative hopper receiving the backing of the State Conference of Social Welfare is a "little FEPC" bill which would make unlawful discrimination against an employee or applicant for employment because of his race, color, creed, national origin, or ancestry. The bill provides for a three-man commission to receive complaints of violations, and empowers the commission to issue cease and desist orders to be enforced by the District Court.

April 1945

Other social measures backed by the conference would codify the child welfare laws, provide a legal basis for the merit system in county welfare departments, establish a more effective state parole and probation system, provide for the reorganization of the State Board of Health and the establishment of a State Department of Health, remove ceilings from aid to dependent children payments.

Truman Asks House Action To Keep FEPC

Montgomery Post

Letter Hits Racial Discrimination; Vote Is Set for Today

By Robert C. Albright

President Truman yesterday called on the House Rules Committee to clear legislation for a permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission, terming racial discrimination "un-American in nature," and sharply rapping a House move to dry up FEPC funds.

Mr. Truman addressed his letter to House Rules Chairman Adolph J. Sabath, (D., Ill.) staunch advocate of a permanent antidiscrimination statute. Sabath has called a meeting of his committee today to vote on the hitherto bottled-up FEPC bill.

6-6-45

Provocation Shown

Showing provocation with Congress for the first time, President Truman cited recent action of the House Appropriations Committee in deleting all appropriations for the FEPC from the recently reported war agencies bill.

"This action will have the effect of abolishing the committee and terminating its work without giving the members of the House of Representatives an opportunity to vote on the question," he wrote Sabath.

The Appropriations Committee had denied funds for OPA as well as FEPC, contending legislative authorizations for both agencies are still pending in Congress and allotment of funds should await "legislative developments."

Protest by Murray

6-6-45

Coincident with the President's letter to Sabath, President Philip Murray of the CIO protested FEPC omission from the war agencies bill in a letter to Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.), of the House Appropriations Committee.

"It is a cruel hoax not only upon the Negro people but upon all the progressive elements of our national community to withhold action on an appropriation for the Fair Employment Practices Committee upon the ground of the pendency of a bill to make that agency permanent," Murray wrote Cannon.

"Indeed, the Appropriations Committee's resort to this justification cannot be viewed as other than a legislative maneuver to insure prompt defeat of the late President Roosevelt's program to remove the shame of race discrimination from American industry."

Move to Floor Sought

6-6-45

A bill to create a permanent antidiscrimination agency, with far wider jurisdiction than the present limited FEPC, has been tied up for weeks in the closely divided Rules Committee. Truman's letter was calculated to help shake it loose.

Already a petition move is under way by Representative Mary T. Norton (D., N. J.), author of the bill, to discharge the committee and force the bill to the floor. Only about 118 members have signed the petitoin, which needs 218 signatures.

Sabath told newsmen he had tried many times to get a vote in his committee, but has never been able to get the necessary full attendance. The 12-man committee is so closely divided that one vote either way may swing the result. Only two Democratic committeemen are committed for the bill—Sabath nad Representative John J. Delaney (D., N. Y.). The four Republican members were reported for it "in principle."

F. E. P. C., Doomed By Congress's Hostility, Won't Be Able To Aid Negro In Postwar Era

Industrial Cutback Will Hit Negro First With No Relief In Sight

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, June 4 (AP)—The Fair Employment Practices Committee (F. E. P. C.) is gasping for breath. It's a dead duck unless Congress pumps some money into it by June 30.

This comes at a time when Negroes, laid off by the thousands in cutback war plants, will find job-getting a lot tougher than during the war against Germany.

The F. E. P. C. was created by executive order of President Roosevelt in 1941. It was designed to prevent war plants, in hiring workers, from discriminating against any one because of race, creed, color or racial origin.

Since July 1, 1943, the F. E. P. C. has received more than 8,000 complaints of discrimination and has disposed of all but 2,500. About 85 per cent of the cases involved complaints of discrimination against Negroes. About 5 per cent charged discriminations against Jews.

SOUTH HATES PLAN

In the south the F. E. P. C. was hated. Southern congressmen have talked against it. Now Congress, or at least the House, seems to have found a way to kill it off.

Each year since its creation the F. E. P. C. had to be kept alive by appropriations from Congress. Last year it got $500,000. This year, or, rather, for the fiscal year starting July 1, it wanted $590,000.

Unless it gets an appropriation by June 30, it automatically goes out of existence. The House Appropriations Committee has found money for other government agencies, but not for F. E. P. C.

The committee ignored it on the grounds that legislation to create a permanent F. E. P. C. is pending in Congress. This permanent agency would be a successor to the present, temporary agency created by Mr. Roosevelt.

True enough. Such legislation is pending, and has been a good while. But it's almost certain the legislation will not reach the floor of Congress for debate and action before June 30, if ever. It's buried in committee.

IT'S NEAT STRATEGY

So, by failing to provide money to keep the temporary F. E. P. C. going until a permanent F. E. P. C. is set up, the House is knocking it on the head. It's a neat way to get rid of it.

It's possible the Senate will insist on Congress providing the money to continue the temporary F. E. P. C. That might involve a wrangle between House and Senate. It's hard to guess what the outcome would be.

As of the moment prospects for the F. E. P. C. continuing are not bright.

The war has given the American Negro his greatest job opportunity. The May issue of the monthly Labor Review, published by the U. S. Department of Labor, says:

"The wartime gains of Negroes in federal employment have been enormous."

ONE-EIGHTH OF EMPLOYEES

By the end of last March almost one-eighth of all employees on the federal payroll were Negroes. Employment for Negroes after the war will be a grim problem.

The F. E. P. C. told Congress last week that 500,000 Negroes had left the south for war production centers in the East, Midwest and Pacific Coast.

But F. E. P. C. Chairman Malcolm Ross said that Negroes have obtained their greatest employment in industries which will be the first to suffer cutbacks on war production.

Because of this, he said, there's a likelihood of many Negroes being jobless.

The war, and the various efforts of the F. E. P. C., has given the whole idea of fair employment practices a big boost. New York State last March put through a fair-employment practices law to prevent job discrimination.

Fair employment practices bills have been introduced in the 1945 Legislature of 17 states.

The Republican Party platform from the 1944 campaign had a plank in it supporting a permanent F. E. P. C. It will be interesting to see what the Republicans do about supporting the legislation to set up a permanent F. E. P. C. now awaiting rescue from a Congressional committee.

A petition to force the measure out of the committee has been circulated among Congressmen for their signature. It is far from having the 218 names required to do the job.

Southern Congressmen can be expected to hit a permanent F. E. P. C. bill on the head. Republicans, however, face this problem: either support the bill or leave themselves open to accusations of deserting the party platform.

If the Democrats beat a permanent F. E. P. C. bill to death, Republicans later will be able to say, if they fight for it in Congress—that they did what they could but were overwhelmed by Democratic numbers.

In this way the F. E. P. C. might disappear but Republicans would have an issue.

FEPC Order Brings Strike

Pittsburgh Courier 6-16-45

HOUSTON, Texas—Shell Oil refinery workers in Dear Park, on Thursday evening voted 803-204 to strike if the FEPC insists on the upgrading of Negroes and Latin-American employees of the company. The vote was taken after a 30-day cooling off period following a partial walkout on April 27 when two Latin-Americans were upgraded.

According to John W. Sanderson, member of the conciliation committee at the plant, the vote was held in compliance with the "cooling off" period agreement, before a strike. In this instance it is not stated that Negroes were upgraded.

Defends FEPC And Negro Before Bilbo In Hearing

Pittsburgh Courier 3-3-45

WASHINGTON—(ANP)—Aubrey Williams may have doomed his chances last week to head the Rural Electrification Administration when he dared to defend the FEPC and the rights of Negro workers during a Senate Agriculture Committee hearing on his fitness to serve in that post. 3-3-45

Grilling by Senator Theodore G. Bilbo, Mississippi's "white supremacy" champion, brought out the fact that Williams favors the FEPC and the rights of Negroes to work on a basis of equality with other American citizens. Bilbo, who opposes Williams' nomination as REA administrator, inquired:

"Do you subscribe to the President's executive order setting up the FEPC, which resulted in the breaking down of color barriers in Government cafeterias, which forced the two races to eat together and which caused whites and blacks to use the same toilets?"

BACKS JOB EQUALITY

"I completely subscribe to the FEPC," Williams replied quietly, realizing the danger of his reply. "I subscribe to the principle that there should be no discrimination in employment because of race, creed or color." 3-3-45

"Do you believe that the United States Government has a right to go into a Mississippi sawmill employing ten men and tell the foreman he must employ Negroes?" Bilbo asked.

Williams, a native of Alabama, replied that "if a Negro applicant has the necessary qualifications and was rejected solely because he was a Negro, the Government has a responsibility to stop that kind of treatment."

FEPC SAYS NEGRO PROBLEM PERSISTS

Washington, June 21 (A. P.).—While reporting that minority groups have been successfully used in war industry and "religious hatred" has been forestalled, FEPC says Negroes and Mexican-Americans constitute a "known economic problem."

In a report to President Truman last night covering the first eighteen months of its existence through December, 1944, the Fair Employment Practice Committee said that the immediate problem is to guard against discrimination in the syphoning of workers from cutback plants into new war work and civilian goods production.

While asserting Nazi hopes to infect this country with religious hatred has been forestalled, the report said:

"The margin of our victory over religious intolerance has been narrow. Hoodlums have attacked Jews in some of our wartime cities. The dangerous undercurrent is there. In war industries and Government service, citizens of the Jewish faith have been denied opportunity to serve their country.

"Yet it may still be said that such cases, however symtomatic, have been relatively few in number."

END OF RACIAL BIAS IN INDUSTRY IS URGED

New York Times 6-27-45

There can be no secure peace in American industry for working men and women, for employers or for the public until "race prejudice is licked," Malcolm Ross, chairman of the Fair Employment Practices Committee, declared last night before a crowd estimated at 20,000 at the third annual Negro Freedom Rally in Madison Square Garden.

Defending the objectives of his committee, now under fire in Congress, Mr. Ross asserted that it had "stuck to its role of seeing to it that the Jew, the Catholic, the Negro and the Mexican-American shall have his opportunity to serve his country in the production of war material." In its efforts to uphold a national policy of equal job opportunity, he added, the FEPC has created powerful enemies. 6-27-45

Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. accused the House of "double-dealing" in its refusal to pass legislation setting up a permanent FEPC. He charged that there had been "double-dealing on both sides of the aisle as regards FEPC."

Entire War Agencies Bill Being Held Up

6-28-45

Mississippian Threatens Talk For Five Months

BY HARY S. McALPIN

WASHINGTON — (NNPA) — Despite an impassioned plea by Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat of Tennessee) that the proponents and opponents of FEPC in the Senate come to a compromise, Senator Theodore Bilbo (Democrat of Mississippi) continued to rave and rant in an anti-Negro speech Wednesday to prevent a vote on suspension of the rules which if passed would permit the Senate to restore the FEPC appropriation to the war agencies bill from which it was omitted by the House.

McKellar pointed out that there are only three more days before the end of the fiscal year and the entire war agencies bill is being held up—threatened with failure to pass in time to continue the war activities of the many agencies provided for therein. He stated that he has proposed a compromise amendment granting the FEPC half the appropriations originally proposed which amount would be allocated to its operations for six months.

NO AGREEMENT

Bilbo however, would not agree to the compromise unless a proviso was inserted in the amendment for the liquidation of FEPC in the six-month period and also an agreement that no bill for a permanent FEPC would be submitted to the Senate. To these provisos Senator Dennis Chavez (Democrat of New Mexico) would not agree.

By a twisted bit of logic, Bilbo reasoned that the proponents of FEPC are holding up the war agencies bill, although it is he who is holding the floor and preventing a vote with a threat to talk for five months against the bill. A two-thirds vote is necessary to suspend the rules and permit the FEPC amendment to be voted on. Friends of the measure claim a slight margin over the necessary votes.

6-28-45

An effort to have a night session in order to exhaust Bilbo failed when Senator Barkley, majority leader in the Senate was called on business to Chicago Wednesday night. He will return Thursday morning. The Senate recessed with Bilbo still on the floor and insisting that he have the floor at the beginning of Thursday's session. He agreed to yield to Senator Tom Connolly (Democrat of Texas) today in order that the returning chairman of the foreign relations committee may make a report on the proceedings at San Francisco where he was an official delegate. After the Senate hears the report on the efforts of the United Nations to make prominent the peace of the world, Bilbo will resume his Un-American ranting against America's largest minority.

FEPC Killed In California

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (FP) — Attempts to set up an FEPC program in California, modeled after that of New York and other states, were defeated through a series of parliamentary maneuvers and delays.

6-23-45

The anti-job discrimination measure, which had the strong support of organized labor, was on the floor of the assembly on the last day the lower house could consider its own bills. By offering amendments and more amendments and through other delaying tactics, opponents succeeded in forestalling a vote on the measure until after midnight, when it was too late.

Assemblyman August Hawkins (D), author of the measure, hopes to get a three-fourths vote of the house to take it up again but his chances of success were considered slight. "The FEPC bill was killed through a silent filibuster," the Assemblyman remarked.

Filibusterer Says Negro Troops Fail

The Courier-Journal, Ky.

Eastland Continues Southerners' Fight Against Retaining F.E.P.C.

6-30-45

Washington, June 29 (AP)—Senator Eastland (D., Miss.) carrying on today the Southern filibuster against the F.E.P.C., said today that Negro troops are "an utter and abysmal failure."

Flailing his arms and jerking his tie askew, the Mississippian declared "high-ranking generals" had told him on a recent European trip that the Negro troops would neither work nor fight.

In Normandy, he shouted, they criminally assaulted members of the families of French farmers.

Political Activity Blamed.

"And we're asked here," he said, "to set up an unfair preference against a white soldier solely because the Negro minority sells its votes to the highest bidder in a political campaign. If it weren't for political considerations, this measure wouldn't get 10 votes in the Senate."

The Fair Employment Practices Committee was set up by executive order of the late President Roosevelt to police industry against discriminations on account of race, creed, color or national origin.

Eastland and other Southerners are fighting a move by Senator Chavez (D., N. M.) to appropriate to F.E.P.C. $446,200 or any part of that amount. They demand an absolute death sentence.

Their filibuster is threatened by a move to limit debate through the parliamentary device of cloture. The decision will come Monday afternoon, unless a compromise is worked out meantime. Two-thirds of the senators present must favor cloture if the talk is to be cut short.

Audience Packs Galleries.

Only half a dozen senators were on the floor as Eastland spoke, but the galleries were filled with visitors who had turned out in a frolicsome mood to see how a filibuster works. As the 40-year-old senator slashed out at Negro soldiers, they shifted uneasily in their seats. Some turned covert glances at the Negro men and women among them.

Eastland opened with the same gambit used yesterday by his colleague, Theodore G. Bilbo. He wasn't filibustering, he said; the whole thing was part of a gigantic plot to Sovietize the United States; the racial purity of the white race must be maintained.

"We must have racial harmony, we must have racial tolerance in the United States," he said.

Then he told his fellow senators what he said he had heard in Europe. All of it, he said, came from "high-ranking generals," one of them in Paris.

Politics In Army Charged.

6-30-45

He said the 92d (Negro) Division had the best training and best equipment; it also had Negro officers whom the generals were "forced to commission" for political reasons.

"That division," he said, "could not be placed in an important position in the line. If all our divisions had been like it, the Germans would have pushed us to the toe of the Italian boot.

"Some of the Negro officers deserted their posts, the whole division without cause, rhyme or reason would quit fighting."

He said it was necessary to disarm "a good many Negro soldiers" in Normandy because they would go to French farmhouses under the pretense of hunting Germans, "call the men out into the yard and hold guns on them while they went in and criminally assaulted members of their family."

Veterans Adopt Color Line.

Eastland quoted American generals as authority for a story that French Negro Senegalese troops locked 5,000 German girls in a subway at Stuttgart for five days, "kept them there and criminally assaulted them."

Eastland said there are color lines in all parts of the country, "but down in Dixie we are a little more open with it than they are in the North." He said he was convinced that veterans from Pennsylvania and New York will return from the wars with the same attitude toward the Negro as that in the South.

Bilbo, of Part of Mississippi

R.M.

THE State of Mississippi has a population of 2,183,276. One unit of this figure represents Theodore G. Bilbo. Theodore G. Bilbo represents the other 2,183,275 in the United States Senate. Theodore G. Bilbo won his seat in 1940 by a vote of 91,334 to his opponent's 62,641. 6-30-45

Such is the election background of the man who is determined to talk the FEPC appropriation to death. He has talked to similar purpose on similar bills, including anti-poll tax measures. He yields the floor only to re-charge his vocal batteries.

It is a truism that a people get the kind of representation they deserve. That doesn't apply to the people of Mississippi, because of the poll-tax. Only 91,334 out of more than 2,000,000 are getting the kind they want in the Senate.

FEPC Compromise OKd, Leaves Agency Shaky

Part of Bill Orders Liquidation, Part Says Never Mind

P.M.

By ELIZABETH DONAHUE
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, July 13.—The hasty compromise on the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee passed both Houses of Congress, but a majority of the members still are shaking their fists at each other and claiming a victory.

7-13-45

Whether the Congressional opponents or supporters of FEPC won a technical victory is still undecided. But it is clear that the wartime agency to outlaw job discrimination suffered a substantial defeat.

The so-called compromise gives FEPC less than half the money it requested for its new budget. The sum finally settled on is $250,000.

In one section of the bill FEPC is ordered to liquidate—a process which would require a large part of its funds. Another section of the bill states that FEPC doesn't need to expend any of its money on liquidation.

What Is Status

Debate on the issue yesterday proved beyond a doubt that neither the House nor the Senate knows which provision will guide the FEPC. Does the agency have to use a large portion of the fund to liquidate or can all of it be spent on processing cases which involve discrimination of employers against workers because of race, color, or religion?

Congress doesn't know the answer.

But Congress will be the first to complain if the executive branch of the Government fails to administer the funds according to the "intent" of Congress.

The final speech on the subject of fair employment, and whether the Government should back the agency, came from Sen. Wayne Morse (R., Ore.).

Compromise

The Morse address to the Senate followed House acceptance of the FEPC compromise. The speech was delivered at the moment when the Senate foes of FEPC felt that the compromise could wi.. Senate approval without any debate.

Instead, Morse in a blistering attack on the GOP and Democratic leadership, made the Senate pause for breath.

"I do not think," Morse declared, "that my party has lived up to its pledge made at the convention or it never would have agreed to this compromise. But the Administration leadership forced this compromise on the Congress and in my opinion it would be better if the FEPC had not a single cent rather than insufficient funds on which to operate."

The House, having rejected an attempt by Southern Democrats to curtail further the spending powers of FEPC, already had accepted the compromise.

But the House, largely because only a half-dozen Republicans supported a roll-call vote, refused to stand up and be counted on the FEPC issue.

Rep. Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.) moved that the House vote separately on FEPC which is hitched to the $800,000,000 War Agency bill.

The Marcantonio motion was defeated and the House stubbornly refused to go on record as to whether they favored or opposed the compromise. It was carried by a voice vote.

Then the War Agencies bill made its way back to the Senate where the House compromise had to be adopted. Quick approval was anticipated.

Voice Vote

Then again, the compromise was approved on a voice vote, but not until after Morse had rebuked both Houses in his hour-long speech.

During the Morse speech, Republicans and Democrats—including leaders from the House—gathered on the Senate floor in small groups seeking a method of cutting off Morse so the Senate could vote.

Morse was finally stilled and the Senate hastily approved the compromise.

The only other amendment of any importance made in the War Agencies Bill by the Senate was the addition of $21,000,000 to the appropriation for the Office of War Information. However, this was ironed out in conference and under the conference agreement the sum was upped from the $18,000,000 passed by the House to $35,000,000.

Today the War Agencies bill, carrying funds for 16 war agencies, will leave Congress and be flown overseas where it must be signed by President Truman.

Call On Congress For Legislation

Chicago Def.

By JOHN LEFLORE
(Defender Staff Correspondent)

MOBILE, Ala.—A petition bearing the names of 464 Alabamians, a majority of whom are white, asking the congress to enact legislation to establish a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee, made its way to Washington last week.

The petition was submitted to Senate Majority Leader Alben Barkley by the Southern Conference of Human Welfare. 7-7-45

This action upon the part of prominent civic, welfare and labor leaders of this state stands in noble contrast to the foul and vulgar procedure of demagogic southern senators and congressmen who are opposing the FEPC and attempting to kill it as one of the means of thwarting the growth of democratic principles in the South.

Among the widely-known white citizens whose signatures graced the plea for a permanent agency to assure equal employment opportunities were: Mrs. Pauline Dobbs, executive secretary of the Birmingham Southern Conference Human Welfare unit; Mrs. Caroline Ballin, also of Birmingham, secretary of the Alabama Committee for Equal Justice for Reecy Taylor; Miss Erma Appleby, of Mobile, Y.W.C.A. secretary; Clyde Ganaway, of Mobile, port agent of the National Martime Union, (CIO) and Dr. H. P. McDonald, also of Mobile, head of the Mobile Council American-Soviet Friendship.

Protest Wage Levels

Other white Mobilians who signed the petition were: Charles Revans, official of the NMU; Mrs. Eunice Brunson, of the Y.M.C.A.; Mrs. Roland Miles, of the USO-YWCA; Mrs. Frances Durham, school public relations director; E. P. Johnson, official of the NMU; Miss Betty Sherwood of the USO-YWCA; Miss Mary Watkins, of the USO-YWCA; the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, CIO, Local 18; Mobile chapter of the Southern Conference of Human Welfare, and the National Martime Union.

The petition charged the South with practicing discrimination in employment and stated that about 25 per cent of the Southern people (colored) were held at low wage levels.

It warned that "Discrimination has no place in American life by its very nature it is fascistic . . . If continued it will weaken our leadership in the council of nations; it will lessen the chances of a durable piece.

"If the average income of the Negro family in the South were raised to that of the white Southern family, it would add a billion and one-quarter dollars to the income of the South. If the income of the average southern family were raised to the national level, it would add over 10 billion dollars to the national income.

The petition also asserted that "the FEPC is an important step forward in translating the American ideal of democracy and brotherhood into working relationships."

Carey E. Haigler, of Birmingham, stated CIO leader, told the Defender by long distance telephone call that while he was not in Alabama at the time the FEPC petition was prepared, he should like for it to be known that his organization is in complete accord with the effort to let the nation know that fair-minded citizens of this state want the Negro to have equal job opportunities.

1-FEPC

INSTEAD OF BEING FAIR FEPC MOST UNFAIR

MUCH time is taken up each year by Congress debating the "Fair Employment Practices Act," which has not yet been enacted. It passed the House but is striking obstacles in the Senate.

This legislation is clearly an effort to place the negro in the saddle down South. It forbids any discrimination as between races, colors, or what have you?; in the matter of employment, and is supposed to affect only relations in plants having federal contracts or engaged in federal business. Of course there is where the trouble will begin.

It is allegedly a "fair practices act," but its proponents seem most "unfair" in their advocacy. Some figures used in debate in Congress indicate the unfair attitudes of the advocates. For instance there is only about one person in ten in the nation whose color would be brought into the adjustments brought about by this act. It would seem, therefore, that such proportion would be proper in the administration of this act. But is it true? The following quotation from a letter to a Charleston newspaper written by Julian Mitchell, a Charleston attorney of ability, will prove otherwise.

Mr. Mitchell wrote:

"I wonder now many employers know of the composition of the committees who would pass on their cases if complaint was filed against them because they refused to promote or hire or discharge an employee because of such employee's race, creed, color, national origin or ancestry

"The committee itself is composed of five whites and five negroes, but the division of field operations, which make the examination of their cases is composed of nine persons, of whom three are white, five are negroes and one is Japanese-American, and the case will then be reviewed by the review and analysis division in Washington, consisting of eight persons, of whom six are negroes, and two are white. What a travesty is the use of the word "fair" in the employment practice bill."

It is obvious to all that such a bill so administered would breed injustice turmoil and strife throughout the nation and would in no way help the cause of those it is alleged to aid.

Wetumpka, Ala. Herald
June 21, 1945

AS A FRIEND OF THE NEGRO

There is no newspaper, no public official, no sociologist, no individual of either race who is more anxious to see an improvement in the relations between the white and colored races than is the Enterprise.

There is none more anxious to see an improvement in the economic status of the negro.

And there have been very few who were quicker to point out and to oppose incidents of injustice to the negro race—incidents which we all know occur more frequently than was once the case.

Our attitude is not based on charity. Rather it is based on the conviction that no country, no section, no community can achieve real prosperity as long as a large proportion of its population is ignorant, poverty-stricken, and the victim of economic discrimination.

Likewise no country, section or community can progress, for unless its progress is based on fair play—fair play upon the part of both the majority and the minority.

It is for these reasons, and speaking as a friend to the negro race, that the Enterprise is unalterably opposed to the bill now before the Congress which is miscalled the Fair Employment Practice Act.

We know of nothing which would do more to cause inter-racial strife, and to retard the progress the negro race has been making for the last 80 years, than this proposed law. Truly it is an abortive brain child, begot by the passionately impractical do-gooders, conceived by politicians avidly seeking the negro vote, and nursed by the totalitarian bureaucrats who never miss an opportunity to increase the power of government over the lives of men.

The effect of this proposed law would be to tell an employer that he must employ a certain number of negroes for whatever type of work the bureaucrats said they were qualified to do, regardless of the situation within the plant or organization, regardless of the attitude of the other workers, regardless of the desires of the management.

Carried to its logical conclusion the passage of this law would mean that a certain percentage—approximately 10 per cent—of the workers in every department of every plant, the conductors on railroad trains, the tellers in banks, the clerks in hotels, the stenographers in offices, the mechanics in garages, and every other type of worker on every other kind of job, would have to be negroes. Just so long as they applied for a job, and the bureaucrats said they were qualified to do the work, the employer would be forced to hire them or close down.

We agree with the statement made by Senator Clyde R. Hoey the other day that this proposed law is contrary to the Constitution which protects the right of an employer to pick the people whom he wants to work for him, just as it protects the worker from being foreced to work where he does not want to work. But there is always the possibility that the courts will interpret the Constitution either way. So let us assume that such a law is passed and is upheld? Then what?

Can you imagine anything which would do more to create strife, strikes, economic chaos, and actual riots?

Can you imagine anything which would do more to retard the advance of the negroes than such strife?

How long will it take us to learn we cannot settle such problems by the mere passing of a law?

We all know that there is a scarcity of certain types of work for negroes. One reason may be racial friction. But a much more important reason is the fact that there is a scarcity of negroes trained for all types of work, a scarcity of negro capital, a scarcity of negro management. And these things take years upon years to work out. First must come education—and we are making great strides in that direction. Second comes the birth of initiative on the part of the rising race—and the negroes are making great strides in that direction. But anyone who has ever read history, anyone who has ever observed his fellowman, should know that this whole racial problem is not to be solved by the mere passing of a law—especially a law which could not be enforced and which would stir up strife throughout the nation. The Detroit riots would be as nothing to what would follow the passage of this bill, in our carefully considered opinion.

We are wholeheartedly in favor of improving the economic status of the American negro. We look forward to the time when capital—far-sighted white capital as well as negro capital—erects plants for colored workers and pays them wages for equal work. We look forward to the time when these plants develop their own management. We look forward to the time when the improved earning power of negroes results in a great increase in negro capital. We look forward to the time when the white and colored races develop an ever-increasing respect for each other—and for each other's rights.

But we will never see such a day as long as the approach to it is attempted by any such fool law as the Fair Employment Practice Act — a law which attempts to increase the opportunity of the minority by depriving members of the majority of their constitutional rights and freedom; a law which would turn the great majority against the 10 per cent minority just at a time when relations were becoming better; a law which would backfire and cause the negroes of America, the greatly outnumbered colored men and women, the greatest setback since they began their wonderful progress upward from slavery, only 80 years ago.—The High Point (N. C.) Enterprise.

GIVE THE NEGRO A CHANCE TO RISE

Many objections have been raised to the fair employment practices move as it affects Negroes, but the most uncalled for attack was by Senator Eastland of Mississippi, who declared last week that the Negro soldier has been "an utter and abysmal failure" in this war.

That statement would be open to contradition no matter who made it, for it is contrary to the experience in other wars. Coming from the gentleman from Mississippi it is particularly flimsy. Millions in the south have lost all sense of proportion on the race question. They have talked so much about the Negro's being a special problem down there that they have come to believe it. Some Negroes are a problem in New York and Chicago and Detroit, too. So are some white folks.

The chief problem of the southern Negro is the fact that it is made all but impossible to improve his status. He can hardly be expected to be a good citizen when he is prevented from voting in national elections unless he can buy the voting privilege with a poll tax. He can't be expected to get up and stay up in the social scale without the housing and educational advantages of the white man. He can't be expected to feel like a self-respecting human being when he is herded into the back end of a street car and told when he offers his life for his country, that he is an "abysmal failure."

FEPC Row Proves Dem Split

Detroit Free

WASHINGTON—The half-a-loaf treatment of the Fair Employment Practice Committee by Congress leaves an aftermath of problems disturbing both to the Democratic Party, as regards its political future, and to the country, as it affects the postwar period.

Filibustering tactics of a southern Democratic minority were responsible for slashing in half funds for this agency which was created by the late President Roosevelt to keep down discriminations in employment on account of race, creed, color or religion.

Congress finally voted FEPC $250,000 for its next fiscal year, after a long, bitter fight, and under such conditions that its future status is doubtful and unsettled. The Budget Bureau had recommended $559,000, which was reduced in a first compromise to $446,000, the amount the agency had last year, and then to $250,000.

The fight put up by the southern wing of the Democratic Party accentuates again the schism within its ranks which widens rather than narrows as time passes. President Truman not only had recommended the full amount approved by the Budget Bureau, but he urged creation by Congress of a permanent Fair Employment Practices Commission to take the place of this war-created agency which has only persuasive powers.

This illustrates the gap between the southerners, on the one hand, and the President and the New Deal and progressive wing of the party, on the other. The increasing political danger to the Democratic Party is that it may find slipping away from it certain necessary components to victory at the polls.

7-16-45

THE SOUTHERN wing of the party has demonstrated that it can operate effectively in Congress to hamstring or block measures, such as FEPC, no matter how loudly the President and New Dealers may shout for them.

In fighting other types of progressive legislation supported by labor and other allies of the Democratic Party, the southerners have been able to draw to their support a substantial number of conservative Republicans.

This is not lost on those progressive forces which went along with the late President Roosevelt, indicated for example by the wait-and-see attitude taken by CIO on President Truman. Words from the top are losing their vitality in view of what happens in Congress.

The stock answer of Democrats when such danger signals are discussed is that labor and other progressive forces which Mr. Roosevelt attracted to the party "have nowhere else to go." This is true if GOP standpatism is predominant in the Republican Party, as it seems to be for the time in Congress.

How persuasive an appeal could be made is shown, for instance, in the eloquent advocacy of FEPC by Senator Wayne Morse (Ore.)

HE IS one of a nucleus which is becoming more potent in Congress and gaining recognition among Republican progressives outside.

In his speech on FEPC, one of the most effective in Congress this session because of its logic, its moderation and its exemplification of the best liberal democratic tradition, Senator Morse pointed to the pitfalls to true democracy in the postwar period.

This, he explained, will require constant watchfulness. He urged the necessity of FEPC to check on the threat to the democratic tradition in discriminations in employment, saying "you cannot have political democracy without economic democracy."

7-16-45

He spoke from his experience on the War Labor Board, where he made a distinguished record. His experience showed prevalence of a double standard of wages in many cases, depending on the color of the skin.

"We are going to lose the war in a very real sense," he said, "if, as an aftermath, we become engulfed in a wave of bigotry, prejudice and hatred which do violence to those great principles of democratic government which differentiate our Government from others."

Senator Eastland's Insult

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Senator Eastland (D-Miss.) insulted the entire Negro race when he denounced the FEPC via Negro troops.

I am not an authority on military tactics, but I disagree with the Senator. I think the Negroes are doing a great job and deserve much credit. Many of the white citizens don't realize just how much the Negro has contributed to this war (in both military and civil capacities), because the white papers, or should I say most of the white papers, fail to carry accounts of Negro victories. Every day you see articles and pictures of the whites who are doing this and that, but never a word about the Negro. Is it because many of the editors have that old traditional prejudice in their hearts?

I wonder if Senator Eastland has taken time from his filibustering to think what his words will do for the morale of the Negro servicemen, and how will the Negro mothers, wives and sweethearts feel whose loved ones have given their arms, legs, eyes and even their lives in this war in which they have been such "an utter and abysmal failure"?

Many thousands of Negroes have been snatched from their homes and families to take part in this war. It must cost the government a large sum of money to feed, clothe and quarter so many men. If these same men are such a failure as Senator Eastland would have us believe they are, then I suggest that he start filibustering to have all Negro troops discharged and returned to their homes and families, where they are loved and appreciated. I am sure they would appreciate this, and it would rid the government of the expense of taking care of these troops.

As for insulting members of French families, I am sure the guilty ones were properly punished, and surely the whites are guilty of many such crimes. Don't judge the entire race by what a few have done. I have many friends who have given their lives in both the PTO and the ETO, and I feel that Senator Eastland's attack on Negro troops has been a grave insult to their memory. I pray to God that there are not a large number that feel as the Senator feels.

7-17-45

I am sure the Japs must love Senator Eastland and all his kind, because I am wondering where on earth they can find a better secret weapon with which to defeat the United States than in a foul American tongue that cuts down cooperation and morale.

As for racial harmony, I suggest that the Negro be given equal opportunities for education, a right to practice any profession for which they are qualified, fair employment and be treated as human beings instead of as something to be cast aside.

I am proud of the Negro troops and the wonderful job they are doing. We are going to continue to fight for the things due us, and with the help of God we are going to win our full rights—yes, Senator Eastland, even in Mississippi.

Marcantonio Piloted FEPC to Victory

Daily Worker

By TRAVIS K. HEDRICK

WASHINGTON, July 16 (FP).—At the helm throughout the perilous voyage of FEPC through the House was one of the most respected and yet most hated and feared members of the House, Rep. Vito Marcantonio (ALP-NY).

MARCANTONIO

Marc, as his friends call him, is the lone member of the American Labor Party in Congress. No newcomer, he is serving his fifth term, and a quick glance at the voting records shows that his votes have been unanimously on the side of labor and progress.

Enemies? Marc has 'em by the dozen. To list them is to name the whole roll of labor baiters in the House—Rankin, Cox, Smith, Colmer to pick the varsity squad, and Gathings, of Arkansas; Rivers, of South Carolina; Hatton Summers and Fritz Lanham, of Texas, who might be regarded as second-stringers.

7-17-45

Rep. William Colmer (D-Miss), in a bitter speech on the floor, made some of the old red-baiting charges against Marcantonio and pointed out that he is "neither Democrat nor Republican," but he has "assumed the leadership of this House and is running the show. If there is any doubt in the mind of any of you about that, then I now point out to you that after the Appropriations Committee brought in its so-called compromise amendment (continuing FEPC with funds to liquidate) that the gentleman from New York (Marcantonio) took the floor and objected to the language of that amendment. Thereupon the Appropriations Committee was immediately called back into session and amended its amendment by including the words 'and until,' which entirely changes the purpose of the amendment from that of liquidation of the FEPC to operation thereof.

"In other words," Colmer told the House, "the whip was cracked again by the distinguished leader from New York, and today the skids are all greased to put the amendment through."

7-17-45

OFFERED AMENDMENT TO LIQUIDATE FEPC

Colmer offered an amendment to provide that FEPC must liquidate, and Rep. E. E. Cox (D-Ga) followed him on the floor, saying "the writing of this language into the resolution was a sorry surrender to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Marcantonio), upon whose single pair of legs stands every extreme leftist in this country feverishly engaged in digging the grave of private enterprise."

Marcantonio? He got up and said: "As for the pseudo-patriots who have sought here to use their pseudo-patriotism to do a subversive job on this American agency, I say to them that we, the proponents of the FEPC, are the real Americans." Marc said the "overwhelming majority of the American people" insist on FEPC. Then he added he could "understand the rage and frustration of the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Cox) and that of the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. Colmer), because for months they have done their utmost to prevent the representatives of the American people from voting on this fundamental American proposition." He said they were enraged because, despite them, the House was voting.

7-17-45

"Who is and what is subversive?" Marc inquired. "To deny equality is not only subversive, but it is practicing Hitlerism in America. Those who here seek to deny equality in employment are not only subversive, but are the adept technicians of the Nazi anti-racial practices."

Soon afterward the House voted down the Colmer amendment and passed the FEPC compromise that went through the Senate a few hours later.

To Marcantonio, more than any other man, must go the credit for saving FEPC.

Senate Moves To Force House Action On FEPC

Chicago Defender 7-14-45

By VENICE T. SPRAGGS
(Defender Washington Bureau)

WASHINGTON—In a last ditch stand to force House action on the Senate-passed War Agencies Bill, which contains $250,000 for the FEPC, the Senate adjourned until Thursday without taking any action on the emasculated bill passed to them by the House last week.

Meanwhile House leaders have quietly warned Southern democrats that continuation of the battle against the FEPC, which has tied up the funds of 18 war agencies, might force the thing they fear most—creation of a permanent agency authorized by Congress.

In an effort to side step this possibility there is talk that the House will offer a token proposal of $200,000 for the temporary committee for the next fiscal year. It is believed that FEPC supporters in the Senate will not accept such a proposal.

7-7-45

House leaders have further warned that all of the fuss and dilly dallying over the FEPC appropriation may spur many other representatives to sign the petition which would give permanent FEPC legislation the right of way to the House floor. Approximately 88 of the required 218 signatures are still needed.

The Senate-passed War Agencies bill was tabled by the House Appropriations committee after the House Rules committee refused to grant a rule which would send the bill to conference where representatives of both houses could iron out the differences.

A new War Agencies bill was written and sent to the House, but made no provisions for financing the FEPC.

The bill came to the floor of the House without a rule, thanks to the activities of Rep. Eugene Cox (D., Ga.) and Company on the Rules committee. The failure to grant a rule limiting debate as was generally expected was designed to place the blame on supporters of FEPC for killing other War Agencies blanketed-in under the bill.

The House passed an emasculated version of the bill designed to provide 800 million dollars for the continuance of 17 war agencies. Ten agencies were knocked out of the bill. These were:

The War Labor Board, Office of Economic Stabilization, Office of War Information, War Shipping Administration, Office of Strategic Services, Petroleum Administration for War, War Production Board, Office of Scientific Research and Development, Office of Inter-American Affairs and the Office of Defense Transportation.

These agencies were deprived of funds by House friends of the FEPC.

Southern reactionary Democrats have opposed FEPC on the grounds that it was not authorized by an act of Congress and existed by virtue of an executive order issued by the President.

The same status held for each of the 10 other agencies lopped off from the bill. Supporters of the FEPC refused to see why they should vote funds for these agencies if no money was to be granted to FEPC also. Either FEPC go in, or all the other agencies similarly constituted go out, they said.

Reps. Vito Marcantonio (ALP, N. Y.), Mary T. Norton (D., N. J.), and Emanuel Cellers (D., N. Y.) took the lead in knocking out all of the other executive order agencies, one by one. This drew the ire of the Southern race-baiters and immediately a verbal battle broke out on the floor.

Marcantonio took the lead in clarifying the issues regarding funds for FEPC and placing the blame where it belonged. His name calling included Reps. John Rankin, (D., Miss.), Eugene Cox, Howard Smith (D. Va.) and William Colmer (D., Miss.), all of whom he accused of voting against the War Agencies bill when it was up for consideration last year. Whereupon Colmer dubbed Marcantonio the "whip-cracker of the House, and a spokesman for the minority group." He then accused Marcantonio of not voting for any war measures until Russia was drawn into the war.

McKellar Proposal Refused

In the Senate Appropriations committee where the new bill now rests, the committee refused to accept a proposal by Committee Chairman Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.) that funds be reinstated for the other 10 agencies and only FEPC omitted.

This proposal was promptly rejected by Senator Dennis Chavez (D., N. M.), vigilant and often lone Democratic fighter for the FEPC appropriation in the Senate. In fact Senator Chavez has held out for the total sum of $449,000 as recommended by the Budget Bureau. Chavez won the full backing of Republican members of the committee.

Democratic leaders such as Senators James Mead and Robert Wagner, both of New York, have been notably silent on the whole FEPC issue leaving Republican Senators Wayne Morse of Oregon and Homer Ferguson of Michigan to support Chavez' fight for the continuance of the agency which would outlaw discrimination in employment.

McKellar confirmed the opinion that it would take a two-thirds vote of the Senate to put back the FEPC or the other 10 agencies knocked out by the House.

The membership of the House has not voted on FEPC yet. This is the reason why the Senate has decided to force the House to taking sides for or against before any further action is taken by them.

This means that the Senate in all possibility will take the new version of the War Agencies bill and demand that the House appoint conferees to act on the original bill.

Both supporters and opponents of the FEPC in the House have declared their intentions to fight "until Christmas" if necessary.

Senate leaders say that if they reinsert the FEPC item for the second time in two weeks, they will only be helping to continue the "merry go round" on which the agency finds itself.

House Plans Numerous

If the House refuses to budge, this is the alternative the Senate may find itself having to take. Over in the House a series of plans are cooking.

One is to go along with the McKellar proposal to grant the 10 other agencies money, but not to approve a single cent for FEPC.

The other would give President Truman a lump sum of money with which to operate the 16 war agencies so long as he shuts off every dollar from the FEPC. It is expected that Senate Republicans would oppose this plan as they have been consistently opposed to Congressional handouts to the President.

Still a third plan would resurrect the defeated House proposal to give the FEPC $125,000, less than one-fourth of the money requested for the next twelve months.

It is understood that House leadership realizes that they are to blame for the holding up of the War Agencies bill, and are showing signs of weakening.

Senate Majority Leader Alben Barkley (D., Ky.) has shown little real effort to get the bill favorable consideration in that body. It is to be recalled that it was Barkley's compromise proposal which shaved the original amount requested by the FEPC down to $250,000.

In the House, Republican Representative Taber of New York accused the supporters of FEPC of conducting a "political racket" and failing to make sincere efforts to get floor consideration for the FEPC.

Taber's accusation is part of the House's strategy in seeking to maneuver FEPC supporters into a corner, while all along the House Republicans except in a few instances are playing hand-in-hand with the FEPC opposition in the House.

NAACP Asks Record Vote

In an effort to stave off any compromise or legislative trickery, NAACP Secretary Walter White and Leslie Perry, administrative assistant in the Washington Bureau, made an all-out effort to muster every possible support for the FEPC appropriation. Cognizant of the fact that many Congressmen friendly to the agency, would be out of the city over the July 4 holiday, wires were sent to each one advising them that an effort would be made for restoration of funds on the floor of the House, and urged them to be present to support every such move.

Because there is no other way for Negro and liberal groups to know definitely who are the friends of FEPC, the NAACP is attempting to get the legislative proponents of the appropriation to move to secure a record vote so that the agency's enemies will be forced to face their constituents.

On another front, the United Federal Workers union (CIO) is making available to FEPC employes loans to tide them over against checkless pay days should the pending appropriation bill not be passed in time to meet payrolls.

Thomas Richardson, executive vice president of UFWA, headed a committee which met with Malcolm Ross, FEPC chairman, on Wednesday when the offer was made. On July 3, the UFW members employed at FEPC met and agreed that the union held a responsibility here.

Sen. Theodore Bilbo, filibustering leader of the Senate opposition, recently took a below-the-belt punch at Rep. Charles La Follette (Rep., Ind.), one of the backers of permanent FEPC.

Bilbo read on the floor of the Senate a letter from Atty. Allen K. Swann, Evansville lawyer, deriding LaFollette for his FEPC support. "I think that it should be known that he does not truly speak for his district," Swann wrote.

Swann, reportedly a former Ku Klux Klan member, added that Negroes in his city have become "impudent and aggressive" because of "action of the government."

Maintaining his progressive stand on FEPC, La Follette answered, "If Swann likes Bilbo and Bilbo likes Swann, I feel complimented and I am satisfied with my own company."

AS ugly a statement as any which any American comparably placed has made in a long time was that of Senator Eastland of Mississippi that high-ranking generals told him on a recent overseas trip that Negro soldiers would neither work nor fight and that they were "an utter and abysmal failure". This was said during the debate on the FEPC, although it was difficult to see any connection between the two things. Negro leaders and newspapers immediately challenged the Eastland criticism, as did many others, and they have been able to cite case after case and comment after comment which do not square with that estimate.

It is easily possible to call names to refute the opinion which the senator attributes to unnamed generals with specific tributes to the ability and courage of Negro soldiers. So far the Mississippi senator has not called names, and if high-ranking generals said anything of the kind we are simply reminded that high-ranking generals, as well as high-ranking legislators, may be so blinded by prejudice that they refuse to look at facts they do not want to see. One might suppose that generals or senators, even if they hold such views, would have refrained from voicing them out of respect to those Negro soldiers who are buried on foreign soil and whose courage and sacrifices are no longer a suitable topic of debate.

We trust the discussion will end with the statement of Under-secretary of War Patterson that the Army is proud of its Negro soldiers and that he knows of no high-ranking general who has condemned their performance. Senator Eastland and others may continue to swear by the still anonymous condemnation, but many who have heard the same line in the past should be influenced by the mass of evidence to the contrary which has been brought out. As objectionable as the Eastland outburst was in itself, it could have served a useful purpose by bringing into the open a charge which can be and has been convincingly demolished.

The Dictators of House and Senate

Courier Journal

We fancy that more than a few Americans are writhing uncomfortably at the evidence that, for all the principles and traditions of their allegiance (". . . One nation, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all"), they may be rendered voiceless at any time by a kind of licensed tyranny, the domination of a minority indulged by long custom and protocol. 6-18-45

We have in mind the power of the Rules Committee of the House of Representatives, which is enabled by technical authority to stifle legislation and prevent a free expression in the lower chamber of Congress on matters which do not suit the notions of its generally reactionary membership; and also an equivalent power of obstruction inherent in the filibusters by which Senators—even a single Senator, at times—are able to frustrate the majority will. One might see something fantastic in the situation, if the evidence of its actual existence were not revealed in last week's news.

When the Rules Committee, by a tie vote which was not without signs of collusion, refused to place on the calendar of the House the bill for a permanent Fair Employment Practices Committee, it took the same stand and for the same reasons of reactionary attitude that it assumed in its refusal to report the anti-poll tax bill for action. The essential tyranny and hostility of this position was revealed when the latter, forced from the committee's hands by a majority of the House membership, was passed by vote of 251 to 105. What goes on in this land when a handful of men, aware that the general will is against them, still stands out in opposition and undertakes to carry its point by arbitrary force?

And now that the House has approved the bill to outlaw the poll tax as a prerequisite for voting in election of Federal officers, the Southern Senators are making ready once again to defeat the legislation by interminable debate, their right to indulge in which is supported by Senate rule.

In asserting again its belief that the Senate should move once and for all to end the frustration which three times has killed this legislation after the House had approved it—to end it by changing the rule to impose cloture, or restriction of debate, in its connection—this newspaper would be inconsistent if it did not deplore at the same time the obstructionist tactics by which the House tyrants have sought to prevent a vote on the F.E.P.C. bill. It is the principle that disturbs us, and the legislation is incidental.

As a matter of fact, this newspaper's objections to the proposal of a permanent F.E.P.C. on the ground of the plan's unworkability, dangers of abuse and tendency to legislate on attitudes, morals and social customs, have been frequently stated. These objections remain unchanged. But the main point which seems to us now to be involved is something else again. It is the right of minorities to be dictators, and poor sports besides. It is the challenge to democratic action, no matter what the issue.

Kentucky acquires something more than an academic interest in the matter in that a Kentuckian, Representative JOE BATES, made possible the bill's pigeonholing. In siding with the five Southern champions of white supremacy on the committee, Mr. BATES created the tie which withheld the bill from consideration by the House. Incidentally, he rejected the fervent personal appeal by FRED M. VINSON, a neighbor and his predecessor as the district's representative, who, speaking for the administration, asked him not for a vote on the merits of the bill but only to make possible a decision by the only authority with the moral and constitutional right to decide this point.

A LETTER FOR BILBO

Editor: Please print these remarks of mine for Bilbo. I am speaking for 13,000,000 Negroes who have been seeking justice that has been due them ever since Crispus Attucks shed his blood on American soil. We are asking no one for sympathy. What we want has never been given to us—equality: an equal chance to live without being harassed by southern hypocracy. We want jobs after this war wherever and whenever we are eligible to meet the requirements.—ELIZABETH SMITH.

FEPC MUST WIN

Editor: Between Eastland, Rankin and Bilbo, the Negro is being trampled in the worst way. This filibustering aganist our boys is entirely uncalled for. We can't permit this talk to continue. The FEPC must win and will win. Our boys fought for us and it is now our turn to keep our end up. Now that the war in Europe is over, it seems as if (according to Eastland) the tan Yanks did nothing to help — unless you call giving their lives absolutely nothing. — ALYCE GASKIN, a teen-ager. 7-14-45

CALLS FOR ACTION 7-14-45

Editor: Echoes from the Freedom Rally at Madison Square Garden have reached below the Mason-Dixon Line. Now we can prepare ourselves for a campaign of vilification and lies. To met this threat, I suggest that the Senators responsible for the attacks on Negro troops be made to prove them or answer a suit up to the hilt. Surely we can raise a pool to fight this vicious offspring of the Nazi regime which had its birth here before Germany knew of such things. It is high time that we started cleaning out these bigots that continually menace progress. — BERTRAM ALDRICH.

NAVY OFFICER SPEAKS

Editor: As a former officer in the Navy who served overseas I wish to definitely register my protest against the cowardly and despicable insults made against the Negro race, especially those men in uniform, by certain crack-pots of the white race. I am a white man and my ancestors were in this country before the revolution and fought under Washington. I am a veteran of bth world wars and I certainly think that the fascist-minded Negro-haters in politics in this country should be either made to speak the truth or shut up. The Negroes whom I saw at the fronts and at liberty in Italy or France weree accepted by everyone as equals without discrimination. — TED COLLINS, former Ensign, U.S. Navy.

A GI ON BILBO

I was really stunned when I picked up your May 19 issue and read about Senator Bilbo's wanting to return Negroes to Africa. Why not just as well send every race back to their respective "old countries" and give America back to the red men? I would like to see the Negroes who agree with Bilbo. They must be awfully dumb or very much in love with him. We aren't going back to Africa. We're going places in America.—CPL. JOHN L. BALLARD, Nurnberg, Germany.

People in the Limelight: Dennis Chavez

Senator Dennis Chavez (D., N.M.) has stayed in the fight for a Fair Employment Practice Committee when no other Senator would undertake the leadership of that cause. As a rule, Chavez is among the quiet members of the upper house, seldom joining in Senate fights. But he is aware of the difficulties confronting minority groups in this country from his intimate knowledge of the Spanish-Americans in his home state. In the past, he has consistently struggled to get a fair deal for the Puerto Ricans. The American Negroes will not soon forget what he is now doing for them.

The chief leaders from both parties in the House and Senate have now joined to devise a strategy for putting through the compromise proposal of a $250,000 appropriation which the Senate has already approved. This compromise has a fair chance of being adopted. Since the FEPC needs about $600,000 annually to do any sort of job, this is a case where five-twelfths of a loaf is not much better than nothing. It does, however, keep the name of the FEPC alive and give us a chance to continue the fight in which Senator Chavez has played such an important part.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Southern Senators who usually get their price for choking a filibuster are today counting their money ahead of time—certain that Administration leaders will abandon their battle to save the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee.
